Comrade Hanford addressed a street meeting at Rome on September 2, and the comrades say it was by far the best meeting we have ever had in that city. After the meeting many gathered around him to ask questions and several promised to join the local.—Rev. A. L. Byron-Curtiss, pastor of St. Joseph's Episcopal Church and member of Local Rome, S. D. P., delivered his fourth annual Labor Day sermon on August 31, which was attended by many of the trade unions in a body; he gave them a true Socialist sermon. On Labor Day he gave a short address at the labor picnic at Utica in company with Comrade Hanford.

Comrade Arland of Corning writes: "The past ten days have been productive of great good at Corning. State Organizer Spring addressed the local on Sunday, August 31, and on Labor Day an open-air meeting was held, at which four hundred people were in attendance. The following evening he addressed a good audience at Painted Post, a suburb of Corning, and formed a local. Twenty-five subscriptions to The Worker were secured in both places. On the evening of September 6, Comrade Hanford addressed a good meeting in the public square, which clinched the effect of the Spring meetings. He also addressed the local the next afternoon. The comrades have had their vigor renewed, several new members have joined the local, and Socialism is a general subject of conversation here now."

The movement in Peekskill goes steadily on. During the past two or three weeks Comrades Heleker, Simmonds, and others have given a large part of their time to assisting the girl strikers from the Baker underwear works, nearly three hundred of whom have been organized into a union. The bosses say they will move their works rather than run a union factory, but this is generally thought to be a bluff, and with few exceptions the girls are hopeful and determined. The strike is having a good educational effect, at any rate.—Comrade Heleker writes that, although Hanford had a good meeting at Peekskill, there will be a bigger one on his second visit next month.

Ben Hanford addressed an audience of over a thousand people on Public Square at Watertown, N. Y., on Wednesday evening, September 3. Comrade Pendergast concluded a very effective fifteen minute talk by introducing our candidate for Governor. Comrade Hanford was at his best and the repeated applause which greeted the speaker throughout his address, which lasted one hour and a half, manifested the approval of the vast audience. An after meeting was held indoors when several new applications for membership were received and much literature disposed of.

At Dexter, Hanford addressed an open-air meeting, at close of which an indoor meeting was held which numerically strengthened Local Dexter. By the way, it is thought that Local Dexter will surprise many of the older locals in the state by the increased vote which will be cast at that place for the candidates of the S. D. P. at the coming election.

New York City.

The Kings County Committee meets at the rooms of the Socialist Club, near Ralph avenue and Fulton street, Saturday, Sept. 13, at 8:15 p. m.

The Social Democratic Party of Brooklyn will hold a grand ratification meeting at the Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby avenue, on Friday evening, September 26. The list of speakers announced includes our candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, Benjamin Hanford and William Thurston Brown; Mother Jones, the woman whom mine-owners hate and miners love and respect; Geo. D. Herron, who is to return to this country about the middle of the month; and H. Gaylord Wilshire, whose enterprise as an editor and publisher has made so much trouble for Censor Madden. Such an array of eloquent and well known speakers should make the Brooklyn ratification meeting a rousing success.

All districts with the exception of the 1st, 3d, and 5th were represented at the last meeting of the West Side Agitation Committee. These organizations should under all circumstances be represented at the next meeting which will be held September 16 at 326 West Thirty-eighth street. Five thousand pamphlets were ordered and other matters of importance disposed of. There is no doubt that the West Side will make a good showing at the next election owing to a great extent to the work of Comrade Fieldman, whose interesting and instructive meetings very often last until after 12 o'clock.

The 16th A. D. is in good working condition. Twelve new members have been admitted within the last two weeks. Comrade Reich has been elected Organizer, with Comrade Panzer as his assistant. Debts were all settled up last week and rent for headquarters paid for three monts in advance, and still $16 remained in the treasury. A large number of the comrades have pledged weekly contributions during the campaign. Business meetings are held on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 8-10 Avenue D. Two outdoor meetings will be held weekly and large quantities of literature distributed.

The 28th A. D. is arranging a mass meeting to be held on Oct. 4, in Ploetz' Hall, 240 E. Eightieth street. Invitations will be sent to all enrolled voters.—The convention to nominate a candidate for Assembly will be held Friday, Sept. 12, at 1407 Avenue A. All readers of The Worker living in the 28th A. D. are invited to attend.

Of the three street meetings on the West Side planned for Friday of last week, two were carried very successfully through, on Eighth avenue at Thirty-seventh street and at Forty-first street. No meeting was held, as intended at Thirty-ninth street. A number of the West Side comrades are working hard and there is a considerable increase of party activity in that part of the city; but there are still many of the comrades who seem to prefer sitting quiet, leaving all the hard work for a few, or expecting the Social Democratic vote to grow without any efforts on their part. The close attention paid by the large crowds that gather around Comrade Fieldman and our other speakers on Eighth avenue proves that a splendid advance can be made, not only in the vote, but in the strength of the party organization in those districts, if each comrade will turn in and do his fair share from now on.

The open-air meetings in Yorkville last Saturday surpassed all expectations. Our speakers were given close attention and hearty applause by large gatherings of workingmen and working women in the 28th, 30th, and 32d Assembly Districts.

At the last meeting of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville a committee of twelve was elected to assist at the party picnic held on September 7. The club voted to have a harvest party in the latter part of November. It was also voted to subscribe for fifteen copies of The Worker per week for one year. Special meeting will be held Thursday, September 11, for the purpose of electing new officers.

Comrade Fieldman's street meetings continue to be attended by large and receptive audiences. The interest he has awakened is shown by the fact that in many cases the same faces are to be seen at several successive meetings, showing that many of his hearers are not content with listening to a single address, but desire to learn more of Socialism by following up his meetings. Especially is this true on the West Side. The sales of literature also bear testimony to the good educational work he is doing. Comrade Fieldman's work is especially strong in his appropriate answers to questions, whether put in good or in bad faith. At a recent meeting a man in the crowd replied to him: "Yes, I admit that the Republican and Democratic parties are utterly corrupt and are tools of the capitalists. But we don't want Socialism in this country. It's a foreign movement. It may be all right in Europe, but we don't want any European ideas over here. We've got to get the American people together and form a new American party of our own." To which Comrade Fieldman replied, to the enthusiastic delight of the crowd: "I wonder you dare to walk in the light of day. Why don't you dig a hole and crawl into it? Don't you know that the sun shines over in Europe? How can you bear to let that European sun shine on your free American head?" At another meeting, last week, in Devery's district, Comrade Gordon joined the audience and bought a dollar's worth of pamphlets. Being invited by Comrade Fieldman to take the platform, he did so and spoke briefly and forcibly on the difference between Socialism and Deverylism. He closed with, "Have one on me!"—and distributed the pamphlets among the listeners, who seemed to accept the "treat" as gladly as if it had been of the orthodox Tammany sort.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn at its mst meeting accepted the invitation of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville and decided to visit the latter in a body on September 25. The Club has donated $10 to the campaign fund and is hustling for subscriptions for The Worker. On November 1 the Club will hold a smoker if a suitable hall can be had. This club bids fair, in the near future, to become a valuable auxiliary to the party movement in Kings County, as the Young People's Club has already become in Yorkville.

Comrade Wm. T. Brown was in the city Thursday of last week on his way to Massachusetts and called on some comrades. He is in good health and spirits. On Sept. 26 he will probably begin his tour of this state, and comrades in all places where he is to speak should make every effort to bring out good crowds.

Comrade Phillips spoke at Stapleton Park, Richmond, last week and had a very good meeting.

A TRUE COMRADE AT REST.

Comrade Joseph Gilliar of Jersey City, who died on September 4, was one of the pioneers in our movement. His genial temperament, his kind spirit, his straightforward character endeared him to his comrades and made him many friends. At his funeral, Comrade W. Ufert, another well known soldier of the revolution, spoke affectingly of his many deeds of sacrifice to the cause he loved so well. Comrade Cole followed with another tribute to his memory. The Socialist Liedertafel, of which Gilliar was an active member, never sang more feelingly, "Ein Sohn des Volkes will ich sein." The funeral cortege, headed by the Socialist Drum and Fife Corps, numbered about five hundred persons, including the children of the Freie Deutsche Schule. It made a decided impression upon strangers. At the crematory, after another touching farewell song by the Liedertafel, Comrade Krafft spoke upon the example of unswerving faith in the cause of our dead comrade, and called upon the assembled multitude to emulate Comrade Gilliar's indefatigable zeal in the interest of humanity.

May the spirit of Gilliar ever lead the comrades of New Jersey.

SOCIALISM IN MITCHELL'S SPEECH

We are glad to observe that the following passage from Mitchell's speech on Labor Day is "tainted with Socialism," and seems to indicate that the leader of the striking coal miners is steadily becoming more progressive and radical:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am one who believes that the time is not far distant when the workingmen will have to solve the labor problem. I am free to say that my own views have been somewhat changed since this strike started. Nearly all well-informed workers know that I have identified myself with every peace movement that I thought would help the workers. I am not prepared to say that they are failures but they are failures so long as employers will not listen to reason and to truth.

"I look forward to the time when all wage-earners will take their proper places in this movement. I look forward to the time when those who build the mansions will not have to live in hovels. I look forward to the time when the men who build the beautiful Pullman palace cars will not have to walk from station to station looking for work. I look forward to the time when those whose labor builds the beautiful edifices, whose spires point heavenward, will not have to walk past them, too ragged to enter.

"I stand for the solidarity of the trade union movement. I hope to see the time when no man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow will be outside the ranks of his trade union. I LOOK FORWARD TO THE TIME WHEN THE WORKERS OF OUR COUNTRY WILL TAKE POSSESSION OF THEIR OWN COUNTRY."

—Maybe that half-grown boy of yours would like to have a watch. It's easy to get one by hustling for subscriptions for The Worker. See offer in this paper.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

SLAYTON OF NEW CASTLE.

A Sketch of the Socialist Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania and the Socialist Movement in the City Where He Now Serves as Councilman.

William Thurston Brown, Social Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of the state of New York, who spoke at New Castle, Pa., on Labor Day, has given us the following account of the movement in that city and of Councilman Slayton, who heads the Socialist ticket in our sister state. The sketch will undoubtedly interest the many thousands of working-class voters in Pennsylvania, who, disgusted alike with the Republican party that put Stone in power and the Democratic party that proposes to put Pattison in his place, are now turning to Socialism as their only hope.

I am just returning from my first visit to New Castle, Pa., where I had been invited by the Labor Day committee to be one of its speakers. I feel sure that readers of The Worker, not only in Pennsylvania, but everywhere else, will be interested to know something about the Socialist movement in that town.

New Castle is a city of thirty thousand people, and enjoys the double distinction of being the best organized trade union city in the United States, and of being one of the first to elect a Socialist to a place in the city government. John W. Slayton, the candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania on the only ticket that represents the interests of the working class, is also a member of the upper or Select Council of New Castle, having been elected to that position on the Socialist ticket last spring.

I arrived in New Castle Saturday night and found a lot of Socialists waiting for me at the station. I need not say that, though I was a total stranger, the welcome I received made me feel at home at once. The walk from the station to the hotel might properly be described as a series of introductions to Socialist comrades. Indeed, that was true of practically every attempt I made to navigate the streets of that city. It is no exaggeration to say that one in my position would naturally be impressed with the idea that there were very few people in that city who were not Socialists.

Sunday afternoon the Socialist local held its meeting, and if the attendance was at all representative of their regular meetings—and I am inclined to think it was no larger than usual—it is no exaggeration to say that New Castle has a stronger Socialist movement, relatively to its size, than any city I have so far seen.

The influential character of the movement there may be understood from the fact that the United Presbyterian Church offered us the use of their beautiful and spacious auditorium for Sunday evening, and at 8 o'clock the writer of this addressed an audience that filled the main auditorium and overflowed into the Sunday School room opening from it. Under the title, "Small Girls Wanted," a sign frequently seen in the windows of factories in all our large cities, the attempt was made to show what the present industrial system means and what a better one might and would mean.

No Compromise and No Factions.

Nowhere in this country, I venture to say, will a healthier or more vital and vigorous Socialist movement be found than in New Castle. And there are some excellent reasons for it. The Socialists of that town have been united and harmonious from the first. There have been no factions. I do not think factional spirit could now gain a footing there.

Moreover, it is Socialism and not some patent-medicine substitute therefor that the New Castle comrades are possessed of. In that city there is the clearest consciousness of the fact that the Socialist movement is and in the nature of things must be A MOVEMENT OF, BY, AND FOR THE WORKING CLASS. There is not a touch of that Utopian malady which so often—and always fatally—fastens upon our movement.

But the movement in New Castle is also fortunate in the possession of so many comrades of the highest type in intellectual grasp and in moral fiber. I cannot undertake to speak of them all. The Worker could not give me sufficient space for that, and I met so many I could not remember half their names. But no description of the Socialist movement there or in the state of Quaysylvania would be just or fair which did not tell of the personality of John W. Slayton.

New Castle's Most Influential Citizen.

The old proverb that "a prophet is without honor in his own country" does not apply here. It is no exaggeration whatever to say that Comrade Slayton is a man of the highest type in common sense, in executive ability, and in character. A stranger to the city would pick out this man as incomparably its most influential citizen, and he would make no mistake. And that phrase "most influential citizen" in this case means vastly more than I can here translate into words. The power that John W. Slayton has in New Castle—a power the possession of which he may not himself be fully conscious of—is in every way as beneficent and wholesome as it is unmistakable.

No one pointed out the mayor to me. If he was in town on Labor Day, no one would have suspected it. The center of attraction everywhere was Slayton. He seemed to know every one, and every one knew him, and from little tots who could hardly walk alone to old veterans you could see that this carpenter-Socialist was held in such respect as was accorded to no other public man. There is no other man in the city government that has a tithe of the moral power that Slayton has.

Socialism is a movement, as everybody knows, whose tendency is to exalt MAN rather than MEN, the whole race rather than special individuals. It affords no room for any such hero-worship as has marked other stages or forms of social organization. But there is always room for respect and regard and even love toward character. Indeed, it cannot be withheld. Character compels respect and affection.

A Standard Bearer of Socialism.

John W. Slayton is the kind of man to symbolize or embody most happily the very principles for which Socialism stands. He is more than the party standard bearer. He is in a still higher and better sense the bearer of the standard of Socialism. Perfectly at one with all his comrades in the ranks of Labor, a member of the Carpenter's Union, his body bearing the unmistakable marks of labor, beloved by the whole rank and file of the working class in New Castle as few men in a generation are, as few men can safely be, this man fills the place of an ideal leader without the smallest self-consciousness—incarnating, indeed, the fraternal spirit of the coming commonwealth.

Physically, Comrade Slayton is fortunate in the possession or a commanding presence. And yet, you forget entirely his towering physique in the sense you get of the man it clothes. There is a native dignity about the man and with it an overflowing and genuine sympathy—a very rare combination, as winsome as it is impressive. As a speaker, he has the same straightforward qualities which impress you everywhere else in him. There is no attempt at oratory or at word-painting. But any audience listening to John Slayton would be impressed with the fact that he knows exactly what he wants, that he is profoundly in earnest, and that what he say is true.

The Socialists of New York state showed surpassing wisdom when they nominated Ben Hanford as their candidate for Governor. No comrade of our state could more fittingly represent the whole spirit of Socialism than he. And the great mining and manufacturing state to the sourn of us has exhibited equally good sense in making John W. Slayton its Socialist standard bearer.

In spite of the sultriness of the day and the meanness of the railroads, it was in point of numbers and finances the most successful celebration that New Castle has ever had, a fact due largely to the personal efforts of Slayton. At 3:30 p. m. Comrade A. M. Dewey spoke for over an hour to a large audience of working people at the park, and was followed briefly by the writer, who also spoke in the evening at the same place and on Tuesday evening to a good crowd on the street. Altogether, the Socialists of New Castle regard their Labor Day celebration as a success.

WILLIAM THURSTON BROWN.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITY IN KENTUCKY.

The Socialists of Louisville, Ky., have nominated F. R. Markert for Congress and J. C. Wells for Railroad Commissioner. The Worker has already made mention of the fact that the Socialist candidate for congress in this (the Sixth) district is George Breiel, of Newport, ex-president of the Shoemakers' Union of Cincinnati, which union has jurisdiction also over Covington and Newport.

The Socialists in Covington and Newport, as well as the nearby towns of Bellevue and Dayton, are holding street meetings nearly every night to large crowds. The workers are evidently getting interested from the questions many of them ask the speakers, who are only too glad to have questions put to them.

Local Covington, Socialist Party, has a six-year lease of a large hall in a populous part of the city and easily accessible to workingmen. This hall they have recently had painted, papered, supplied with modern gas fixtures and otherwise repaired to a cost of fully $200. It has a main hall on the second floor, which will seat 500 people, a hall on the first floor which will seat 200 people, besides reading rooms, committee rooms, and also janitor's residence in the rear. The small hall on the first floor is used for the regular meetings of the local. Lectures will be given in the main hall two or three times a week throughout the year except in warm weather. Locals Newport, Bellevue and Dayton each have a good hall in which lectures are given. Local Covington also has a regular headquarters in another part of the city which is open all day and every evening under the management of Comrade J. H. Dold, who has been a Socialist only about twenty-two years. He dispenses literature as well as good, class-conscious talks, and thus catches them coming and going. Comrade Dold says he used to have to beg the people to read Socialist literature. Now, he says, the people beg him for literature to read, and, like Oliver Twist, they call for more.

Covington and Newport are strong and well organizer trade union towns, and the workingmen, not understanding the movement, held aloof for some time. Now that they realize that the Socialist Party represents the working class, and that class alone, the more intelligent and independent workingmen are becoming deeply interested in the principles of the party. The others will become interested by and by—when they are bumped some more; and don't forget that Rockefeller, Morgan & Co. will have them bumped all right.

JUST TRY IT.

If a copy of "Railroading in the United States," by Benjamin Hanford, were put into the hands of each worker for wages—especially those on the railroads—it would cause a political tidal wave against capitalism. Five cents a copy; five copies for 15 cents; ten for a quarter; postpaid. Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

"THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN McCUE."

We have one thousand copies of this great work. While they last will hand them out at 10 cents each. Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

IOWA CONVENTION.

Socialist Party's Delegates Meet at Davenport and Nominate State Ticket.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Sept. 4.—The state convention of the Socialist Party of Iowa was held in this city on Tuesday, Sept. 2. The assembly was called to order at 10 a. m. by A. W. Ricker of Grand River, and A. B. Wymer of Dubuque was elected temporary chairman, with A. K. Gifford of Davenport as temporary secretary. The committee on credentials consisted of A. W. Ricker of Grand River, Martin Wood of Keb, and J. Wheeler of Mystic.

Nineteen delegates were seated, representing sixteen different locals. The temporary organization was then made permanent. A. W. Ricker, F. A. Lymburner, and F. L. Rice were chosen as a committee on platform and resolutions, and F. J. West, J. M. Work, and S. R. McDowell as a committee on revision of the constitution. The convention decided, however, not to change the constitution.

The following state ticket was nominated: For Secretary of State, W. A. Jacobs of Davenport; for Auditor, T. J. Grant of Muscatine; for Treasurer, S. R. McDowell of Lake City; for Attorney-General, I. S. McCrillis of Des Moines; for Judge of the Supreme Court, A. D. Pugh of Des Moines; for Clerk of the Supreme Court, A. H. Larsen of Waterloo; for Railroad Commissioner, J. S. Lorimer of Winterset. The State Committee was authorized to fill any vacancies that might occur.

J. M. Work was elected National Committeeman.

The secretary-treasurer's report showed that the amount of money received since Sept. 5, 1901, was $417.11; the amount disbursed since Sept. 5, 1901, was $370.41; leaving a balance of $46.70.

The following were elected members of the State Committee: Second District, W. A. Jacobs, Davenport; Third, E. Holtz, Dubuque; Sixth, F. J. West, Avery; Seventh, J. J. Jacobsen, Des Moines; Eighth, A. W. Ricker, Grand River; Tenth, S. R. McDowell, Lake City.

The committee elected W. A. Jacobs to the office of State Secretary-Treasurer for the next year, with headquarters at Davenport. Comrade Jacobs was elected also to act as organizer for the party, and was instructed to engage in active work until the coming election is held.

The branches located in each Congressional district not represented at the convention, are requested to elect a member to act as state committeeman for the district for the next year.

Members of the State Committee, who constitute a quorum according to Article 5 of the constitution, are W. A. Jacobs, E. Holtz, and F. J. West.

The branches are requested to take a vote on each act of the convention and report the result to A. K. Gifford, at 216 E. Sixth street, Davenport, Ia., Assistant State Secretary.

LABOR SECRETARIAT.

F. Larsen presided at the last meeting of the Labor Secretariat.

Credentials were received from Carpenters' Union No. 309 for Alvin Schoenfeld, from Laborers' Union No. 9 for Geo. Franke, and from Butchers' Union No. 3, and all the delegates were accepted.

Painters' Union No. 499 reported progress in gaining members. The Firemen's Union reported the loss of a great many members on account of the friendly action of Sheriff Healy and former delegate of the C. F. U. Carpenters' Union No. 309 complained of not having received the German edition of the monthly reports and the delegate was requested to take same to his organization. Secretary Morris Hillquit reported on the transactions of the Secretariat for the past month. He proposed to instal a card system, thereby to have better control over the business transactions or the Labor Secretariat; also that, instead of the uninteresting monthly reports, quarterly reports should be sent in the English and German languages. Both proposals were accepted and forwarded to the Board of Managers for action.

The Board of Managers reported that the blanks for the statement of the exact number of members of the organizations represented are now ready and should be sent quarterly. The report was concurred in.

Comrade Matzdorf reported that in the case of the Architectural Iron Workers, the committee had requested them to join the ranks or the international body. He also reported that he has addressed Local Union 497 in regard to joining the Labor Secretariat and met with success. Comrade F. Larsen reported that it is useless to ask the barbers to join the Secretariat at present, as a large part of the members are Italians and connot now be made to appreciate its advantages.

Comrade Schratt was requested to address the Retail Grocery Clerks in regard to joining the organization. Delegate H. E. Kintlein was elected Recording Secretary. The delegates are earnestly requested to attend meetings more regularly and promptly. The session begins at 8 p. m. sharp, on the last Saturday of each month.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticize their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

NO COMPROMISE BY SOCIALIST PARTY.

Democratic Leader in Worcester, Mass., Offers Fusion, but Comrade Abbott Turns Him Down.

Our comrade, Thomas P. Abbott of Worcester, Mass., recently received the following letter from William A. Gaston, a Democratic leader in that city:

"Hon. Thomas P. Abbott.

"My Dear Sir:—In the approaching campaign I believe that the Democratic party in this state has unusual chances for success, but to attain this there is need of united work and effort in every district in the state, not only in those districts where the fight is easy, but in those where there may be little prospect for immediate victory. Last year you were a candidate in your district for the legislature. I do not know, of course, whether you wish to be or will be the nominee this fall for that office; but you are in a position to work for the cause in your district and for the benefit of the Democratic party in this state, and undoubtedly you are acquainted with men who will gladly lend their assistance to this end. Will you therefore do what you can to help on to victory this fall, and will you give me your suggestions as to how the best work for the party can be accomplished?

"Sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM A. GASTON."

Much to the surprise of Mr. Gaston, Comrade Abbott was neither flattered by the gratuitous "Honorable" nor by the offer of fusion. He replied in the following terms:

"Wm. A. Gaston.

"Dear Sir:—Yours of August 29 at hand and contents noted. I see that you address me by a title that is not mine, at least in the ordinary acceptation of that term, and I assure you that it does not flatter me in the least. I must differ with you as to the chances of the success of the party you represent, and if there were, I could not compromise myself or the working class to which I belong to by giving hope to the Democratic party. It does not represent the working class as a class in any sense of the word. It stands for and holds out a forlorn hope to the small capitalist or middle class, but a partisan of the capitalists just the same, that are fast becoming extinct through natural economic developments. The great combination of trusts are the natural outcome of competition and must go forward to completion. The Republican party represents the great capitalist class which controls these great combinations and in this are keeping abreast of economical developments. The day of competition is fast disappearing forever and in the words of another, "we as a nation can no more go back to competition than the old hen can go back to the egg that it was hatched from," and this to my mind is the only hope that the party you represent holds out to its adherents. You speak of my candidacy for the legislature last year. Of course I don't know whether I shall be called to stand for any elective office this year. If I am I shall be true to the Socialist Party, as I should not accept a nomination or indorsement from any other, and no true Socialist will coquet or give aid and comfort to any party that represents the present system of doing business for profit, for they fully understand that while the system lasts no legislation can be enacted that can benefit the wage-working class as a class economically, and your correspondent is prepared to maintain this position at all times without fear or favor. You see I have been perfectly frank with you in this matter and hold out no delusive hopes. This you will find to be the case with all true Socialists. Our class interests are diametrically opposed to each other and any other course would be traiterous to our class.

"Very respectfully yours in political conflict,

"THOMAS P. ABBOTT."

It takes the spoils politicians of the old parties a long time to learn that the Socialist Party is proof against corruption by their insidious methods. They cannot understand a party in which the rank and file rule and the leaders are and desire to be only the chosen standardbearers for a principle.

FOR A JEWISH WEEKLY.

Jewish speaking comrades will be interested to know that a movement is on foot to start a Social Democratic weekly party organ in that language on the East Side. A conference was held at the office of Dr. Caspe, 252 E. Broadway last Friday, in response to a call issued by Dr. Ingermann, Henry L. Slobodin, B. Feigenbaum, Dr. Halpern, Dr. Caspe, Dr. Girsdansky, and Philip Kranz.

About thirty well known Jewish comrades attended, and plans were discussed at length and active work begun.

It is the intention that the new paper shall be strictly a party propaganda organ and that it shall be kept free from all personal or factional controversies. There is great need on the East Side and in other centers of the Jewish population of just such a paper and it is hoped that success will attend it from the start. As Comrade Feigenbaum expressed it, "The spirit of The Worker will be the example which the new paper will follow."

Among those who have promised to contribute regularly are Comrades Feigenbaum, Zametkin, Winchevsky, Kranz, Bavanoff, Caspe, Kobrin, Gordin, Edlin, Boudin, Stone, Lessin, Girsdansky, Halpern, and Entin. The paper will adhere strictly to "Marxian" principles, as recognized by the Socialist Party at large. Comrades Caspe, Boudin, Feigenbaum, Girsdansky, and Halpern were chosen as a committee on editorial management.

A committee, consisting of Comrades Levin, Kranz, Ortman, Feigenbaum, and Jaffe, was chosen to prepare estimates, and the sum of $414 was pledged by the comrades present toward the publication fund. It is considered necessary to raise a thousand dollars before starting the paper. A call will soon be issued for another conference.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

FUNNY LABOR DAY SPEECH.

FORT EDWARD, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Forty-one unions of Glens Falls, Sandy Hill, and Fort Edward held their Labor Day demonstration yesterday at the county fair grounds. The leaders—who believe there should be "no politics in the trade unions"—invited Republican Congressman Emerson, a big manufacturer, to make the Labor Day address. Emerson, not being a speaker, sent Republican Congressman Sibley of Pennsylvania, also a manufacturer, to tell the workingmen how they should behave—and he did it.

Among other things he told us that he believed strikes were wrong and illegal. At this moment the trolley employees from Troy to Lake George are on strike and not a car had been run for three days, and our Labor Day orator comes and tells us that the action of these trolley workers is illegal.

Mr. Sibley was given six or seven questions in political economy to answer, questions that would have taken a thoughtful man two hours to discuss honestly and properly. But Mr. Sibley, politician fashion, passed them off with a few light remarks in less than ten minutes, not really answering one of them. But he gave us an hour's talk on religion, with about forty Bible quotations thrown in, and advised the workingmen to go to church. "The trouble is," he said, "that you were not at church last Sunday; you must be there next Sunday." He gave so much of this sort of thing that an avowed Christian friend told me he heard a sermon every Sunday and he didn't want one on Labor Day. The workingmen have learned by experience that praying for bread doesn't bring it, so they have organized unions to improve their chance of getting bread; and now comes Mr. Sibley in a Labor Day oration and tells them that striking is illegal, that he wants them to stop striking for bread and go to church and pray for it.

When Sibley finished someone called twice for a cheer for him, but each time only two voices responded, and a vote of thanks was passed with only forty or fifty votes, out of simple courtesy. Mr. Sibley has certainly succeeded in making a funny exhibition of trade unionism here, but on the other hand he has done a good deal to disgust thinking workingmen with the sort of union policy that toadies to such men as he.

GIRLS WIN THEIR STRIKE.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The strike of the employees of the Baker Underwear Company, numbering over three hundred girls, who formed a union of the Ladies' Garment Workers, has been won by the girls, the Baker Underwear Company conceding all the demands of the union.

Comrade John J. Heleker, Jr., and A. F. Simmonds conducted the strike and advised the girls in all their deliberations. The girls had the hearty co-operation of all the trade unions and workingmen in the way of contributions to the strike fund. The local papers and small business men were almost all against the girls. They were out over two weeks. Miss May Maloney of Newburg organized the girls, and was a great help to them.

LEATHER GOODS WORKERS.

The United Leather Goods Workers of New York and Vicinity is the name of a new labor organization, which held its first public mass meeting at 134 E. Seventh street, Tompkins Park Hall, last week. The meeting was attended by over six hundred men employed in the manufacture of dress suit cases, travelling bags, belts, pocketbooks, and other leather goods, and resulted in the enrollment of over two hundred new members in the union, bringing the total membership up to five hundred. By a unanimous vote it was decided to affiliate with the International Trunk and Bag Makers of America.

MONEY MADE EASY.

"I made $21.50 in two days last week selling watches, etc., to other employees in the factory where I work. I only worked at noon hour. Any intelligent person can do as well as I have done. I used one of your Factory to Pocket catalogues." J. B.

NEW YORK SOCIALISTS, ATTENTION!

At the meeting of the State Committee of the Social Democratic Party of New York on Tuesday evening last they decided that it was absolutely necessary for the comrades in the city of Greater New York to come together and thoroughly discuss the present situation and the campaign in the state of New York. It is high time that all our comrades awake to the situation, as we have the most favorable opportunities this year and every comrade should be present.

Comrade C. F. Quinn, of Wilkes Barre, Pa., who is almost sure to be recorded on November 4 as the first Socialist Congressman in the United States, will speak. Also Comrade Ed. Moore, editor of the Philadelphia "New Era."

Every comrade and every sympathizer in the five boroughs of Greater New York should be present, at the LABOR LYCEUM, 64 E. Fourth street, SUNDAY, Sept. 21, at 8 p. m., sharp.

FOR THE EAST SIDE.

A great mass meeting will be held at Apollo Hall, 120 Clinton street, on Monday evening, Sept. 22, opening at 8 p. m., sharp, for the benefit of the Pennsylvania State Committee propaganda. Besides the Pennsylvania comrades who are in the city, Comrades Zametkin, Winchevsky, and Barondess will speak.

"ACCIDENTS" IN COAL MINES.

Experts Say All Explosions Are Avoidable.

Ventilation Is the One Thing Needful to Prevent Explosions and to Check Disease Among Miners—Owners Neglect Ventilation in Order to Increase Profits—Only One Way to Stop Profitable Murder.

The "Mine Workers' Journal" keeps standing certain authoritative statements as to the causes of firedamp explosions in coal mines, which will be of especial interest to the general reader at this time, when the "operators"—who operate only in Wall Street—are so vigorously protesting against any interference with their right to "manage their own business" and when their leader is claiming authority from Omnipotent God to run the mines as he pleases.

Before quoting the statements referred to, however, let us reproduce the list of the great firedamp explosions in the United States of the last eight months and the number of victims, which the "Mine Workers' Journal" prints under the heading—

The Year's Holocaust.

Lost Creek, Ia.	21
Coal Creek, Tenn.	216
Johnstown, Pa.	130
Park City, Utah	35
Trinidad, Colo.	13

In the same week with the Coal Creek disaster, just outside the territory of the United States, at Fernie, B. C., occurred an explosion which killed nearly two hundred men and boys—no capitalists nor sons of capitalists among them, there or in the other cases.

Among the mangled bodies taken from the Cambria mine at Johnstown was one of a boy only seven years of age—employed there in defiance of the law, to make profits for the magnates of the Steel Trust, who own that mine.

In every one of these cases, the mine-owners expressed deep regret over the sad affair and, with one accord, laid the whole blame upon careless or inexperienced miners.

The Cause of Explosions.

In reply to the bosses who advance this explanation—an explanation on the face of it incredible, because the miner has his own life and the welfare of his wife and children at stake, while the capitalist risks only his illgot wealth—it is sufficient to quote the two expert opinions given by the "Mine Workers' Journal."

The first is from Andrew Roy, the first mine inspector of Ohio. Inspector Roy says:

"Explosions in mines are never caused by the fault of the miners; for if the mining laws of the several mining states were enforced and obeyed THERE COULD NOT BE AN EXPLOSION."

Still more definite and emphatic is the declaration of Lionel Brough, a famous British mine inspector. In one of his reports, Inspector Brough wrote:

"I avail myself of this opportunity to say that, after great explosions, sudden outbursts of gas are too often suggested as the cause of the calamity; again, doors left open, tobacco-smoking, lamps tampered with—anything, in fact, except the true cause, INSUFFICIENT VENTILATION. It matters but little which may be the prevailing danger—firedamp or blackdamp—thorough, searching ventilation, never neglected, will sweep both or either thoroughly and speedily away."

A Still Greater Danger.

But the danger of occasional explosions is not the only one which the mine workers incur through this special manifestation of the avarice of their employers, J. K. Blackwell, a British commissioner of mines, has written:

"There is another class of injuries, resulting from defective ventilation, to which miners are exposed. The circumstances producing these injuries are slow in operation and, as their effects being disease and not sudden and immediate death, their existence has been little considered. A careful examination of the state of mines leads to the conclusion that THE ULTIMATE LOSS OF LIFE IS GREATER FROM THIS CAUSE THAN EVEN FROM EXPLOSIONS."

It is a notorious fact that few coal miners reach the age of forty in good health, even though they have the luck to escape explosions due to bad ventilation or falls of rock due to insufficient timbering; a large proportion of them even in early manhood—having worked in mines as boys—suffer from "miners' asthma," or from consumption or other lung or bronchial diseases, produced by the breathing of air laden with coal-dust and mixed with poisonous or suffocating gases, as well as by the lack of sunshine and of nourishing food to give their bodies normal recuperating power.

What Must Be Done.

In order to save the thousands of lives annually sacrificed in mine "accidents" of all kinds (the 415 victims under "The Year's Holocaust" include only those killed outright in firedamp explosions in less than eight months), it is necessary that mines should at all times be amply ventilated, that plenty of proper supports should be supplied, and that only experienced men should be put in charge of the work.

All these things are required by the laws now on the statute books of the various states. But every one of these measures is habitually violated by a large part of the mine-owners—and such violations of laws are almost never punished, BECAUSE INSPECTORS, CORONERS, SHERIFFS, DISTRICT ATTORNEYS, AND JUDGES HOLD THEIR POSITIONS FROM POLITICAL PARTIES PLEDGED TO THE SUPPORT OF THE PROFIT SYSTEM, PARTIES DEPENDENT UPON THE CAPITALISTS FOR THEIR SUPPORT AND CONTROLLED BY THEM.

In order to prevent the miners from falling victims to asthma, bronchial troubles, and consumption, it is necessary, not only that thorough ventilation be enforced, but that the employment of boys underground be strictly forbidden, that the hours of labor of adult miners be materially reduced and that their pay be so increased as to assure them a plentiful supply of nutritious food—which latter is not the rule in the coal fields to-day.

These things are not provided for by law, nor will they be, so long as the miners continue to elect lawmakers nominated by the mine-owners.

Who Is to Do It?

These safeguards to the life and health of the miners will never be instituted by the mine-owners, nor with their consent. The mine-owners live by profits. Reducing expenses is one way to increase profits. They lose a little money—relatively very little—by coal explosion. But they can afford to take the chance. It ONLY MONEY that they risk, at the worst; and experienced has taught them that they SAVE MORE MONEY by neglecting ventilation than they lose by occasional explosions. So long as the quick killing or slow poisoning of miners pays them good profits, they will cheerfully continue the wholesale slaughter which, they say, "God in His infinite wisdom has decreed."

THE MINE-OWNERS PLAY A GREAT GAME OF CHANCE, WITH PROFITS AS THE STAKE AND MINERS' LIVES AS THE COUNTERS. They find it a winning game and neither they nor their political servants will amend its rules out of any sentimental consideration for the counters.

Effective precautions to protect the miners against the danger of explosions and other "accidents" and against the now certain destruction of health will not be taken until the miners and other workingmen throw off all allegiance to parties controlled and supported by capitalists and unite to put into office tried and true men of their own class, democratically chosen by a working-class party, dependent only upon the working class for political support, and pledged to a platform founded solely on working-class interests.

Can It Be Done?

The capitalists think this never can be done. They suppose that the workers will always continue to divide their votes on capitalist issues between capitalist candidates. They do not think it possible for the wage-workers to unite effectively in a party of their own, and they think they can always corrupt or cajole the leaders, even if it should be attempted. But they are mistaken. A few years ago they would not have believed it possible for a hundred and fifty thousand poor workingmen to stand solidly together for four months, on strike; but it has been done, nevertheless. They used to think that they could always buy or trick the trade union leaders; but they are finding it harder and harder to do that. The splendid progress made in the intelligence and strength of the trade unions only faintly indicates what will be found possible on the political field. The example of solidarity set by the miners in their union struggle both foreshadows and contributes to the coming triumph of the Socialist Party.

It can be done. It must be done. It will be done. Let it, then, be done quickly.

Every vote for the Socialist Party—not in Pennsylvania alone, but all over the land (and in New York under the name of the Social Democratic Party)—is a vote against the system of profitable murder. Every other vote is a vote to support that system.

OLD PARTIES ARE SCARED.

Socialists Expect to Elect Congressman.

Pennsylvania Comrades Are Confident of Sending at Least One Workingman to Washington—Wonderful Change in Two Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—At last night's meeting of the State Committee charters were granted to locals of the Socialist Party at Throop and Taylor in Lackawanna County; Glen Lyon, Brookside, Wanamie, Ashley, Sugar Notch, Miners Mills, Alden, and Pingle Hill in Luzerne; and Middleport in Schuylkill.

In Schuylkill County.

Comrade Barnes presented a report of his visit to the meeting of the Schuylkill County Committee at Mahanoy City last Thursday, accompanied by Comrades Swift and Parker. The county convention was held and candidates nominated on August 16, when there were but six locals or branches in the county. The ticket at that time nominated was complete and was composed wholly of members of the party in the eastern end of the county. It was agreed at that time that these were but temporary nominees and the County Committee was authorized to re-arrange the ticket if desirable, in order to give recognition to new locals that might be formed in other parts of the county. On Sept. 11 there were twenty-seven locals in the county. A re-arrangement of the ticket had been effected by the County Committee to include members of the new locals, thus bringing on the ticket persons that were not members of the party at the time of the first convention and also persons who were recently active in the capitalist political parties. The action of the County Committee resulted in considerable friction and dissatisfaction. They referred the selection of a candidate for State Senator and Assembly in the First District to a referendum to be returned at the meeting last Thursday. After hearing the methods employed the referendum was declared irregular and void. At the suggestion of Comrade Barnes a new referendum directed by the State Committee in conjunction with the County Chairman was unanimously agreed to.

The State Committee endorsed the action of Comrade Barnes, after carefully going over the whole situation with Chairman Dougherty of Schuylkill County, who was present at last night's meeting.

By letter and by report of Comrade Dougherty, we were informed that J. J. Ryan and others of Shenandoah would not agree to a further referendum, which certainly indicates a further misunderstanding, as it was Comrade Ryan that made the motion for the second referendum.

Comrade Dougherty was requested to at once repair to Shenandoah and urge upon the comrades there the advisability of participating in the vote, and he was authorized to certify the nominees in accord with the result of the referendum now being taken.

It is the belief of the State Committee that this course should meet with the approval of all the comrades of Schuylkill County and each can heartily support the ticket thus nominated by the vote of the membership, and if this spirit is manifest we can capture Schuylkill County from capitalism and for Socialism in November.

The Delaware County convention has been held and has nominated the following ticket: For Congress, W. Keevan; for Assembly, Northern District, J. G. Biggins; Western, Aug. Smith; Southern District, W. T. Burns; and a full county ticket, subject to change by the County Committee.

Reports have been received from a large majority of the locals, endorsing the constitution as a whole, and this being the day for the closing of the vote, the constitution with the changing of a few words on the voting sheet was declared adopted. The charter fee will hereafter be 50 instead of 25 cents, and the additional amount will be used to supply the treasury of the new local with a party paper for six months.

Socialist Agitation.

Comrade Louis Goaziou, after two weeks' splendid work in Lackawanna and upper Luzerne, returns to his home in Charlerol, assured that the Legislature of this state will be invaded by men elected from the ranks of the Socialist Party.

One the spot where the massacre took place in Lattimer on Sept. 10, 1897, a rousing Socialist meeting was held on Wednesday afternoon, addressed by Comrade Barkowsky in Polish, Comrade Henri in Italian, and Comrades Parker, Swift, and Barnes in English. All the surrounding towns were represented in the audience. Two years ago the Socialists held a meeting at the near-by schoolhouse, addressed by Chas. Drees, Mother Jones, and Barnes. It was in the evening and the cowed residents hid themselves in the laurel bushes several hundred feet distant from the speakers and sat silent and unresponsive as the Sphynx. The contrast between these two meetings cannot be described. The witnesses alone could feel their class rise and the rapidly approaching doom of capitalism, as they heard cheer on cheer wake the echoes in response to Socialist logic. "Workers of the world, unite!" was never better illustrated than at the close of the meeting, when men from every nation arose and with hands uplifted pledged themselves to avenge the murder of their comrades and answer Sheriff Martin's capitalist bullets with Socialist ballots on Election Day.

Comrades Swift and Parker spoke at McAdoo, Hazleton, Lattimer, Mahanoy City, Lansford, and Mauch Chunk. Comrade Fischer has temporarily left the field. The value of his and Comrade Barkowski's services is attested by the receipt of seven charter applications on one day for Polish locals.

On to Washington!

Comrade Wilshire spoke on Sept. 11 and 12 to immense audiences in Wilkes Barre and Nanticoke. The latter town we have already for Socialism as surely as though the ballots were now in the box. At the old party primaries held in that town within the week the vote cast by them was not 15 per cent. of their usual vote. The only persons that will admit they intend to vote for capitalism are the candidates on that ticket. There are a number of other towns in Luzerne County that are as favorably reported and the County Committee beg the comrades to give them but four speakers till election, and the nation may hear Comrade Quinn speak from the floor of the American Congress while others will be heard in the Legislature.

Lackawanna County is coming rapidly to the fore and we have not a speaker now within her borders.

Republicans Scared.

The straits to which the old parties are put by our agitation is shown by their begging Socialists to vote at their primaries. One paper said: "A primary vote is not governed by the vote a man intends to cast at the next election. Republicans who voted the party ticket last fall and who have affiliated themselves with the Socialist Party cannot be deprived of the right to vote on Saturday." The Socialists stayed away from the polls, just the same, and to-day a Republican cannot be found in that town who will tell how many votes were cast by his party.

Here is a story that was told Governor Stone when interested persons were trying to get him to settle the strike. We quote from the Philadelphia "Inquirer" of Sept. 12: "'In Schuylkill County to-day,' said Mr. Wilhelm, 'the Socialist Party has put a full ticket in the field. When the referendum was submitted to the Socialist organizations on a vote for a candidate for State Senate to succeed Senator Higgins, one candidate received 1,700 votes and the other 1,600, making 3,300 votes they have in their twenty-seven organizations. And if this strike keeps up they will have one hundred and twenty-seven organizations on Election Day. The head of the organization is an intelligent man, a client of mine with a son at Dickinson College, and he is the last man I thought to see lead a band of Socialists.'"

A debate has been arranged for Thursday night in Abbotstown, York County, between a defender of capitalism and Comrade Toole of Baltimore. Comrade Barnes speaks in Media this week.

Comrades Geiger and White have dates in Carbon County till the end of the month and the comrades there are sanguine of electing their candidate for judge, Comrade Heydrick, and a number of others. They continue to call for speakers, insisting that they can carry the whole ticket if they have but four speakers till the close of the campaign. Comrade Heydrick will enter that county about the first of October for a stay of three weeks.

The Question of Funds.

The Special Committee of Philadelphia, composed of Comrades Atkinson, Forbes, and Seltzer, are doing splendid work gathering funds here, and have collected more money for the strike agitation in this city than has come from the rest of the nation. Had it not been for their support there would have been no campaign worthy of the name and this grandest opportunity of the ages would have been entirely lost to Socialism and thoughts of electing our candidates would never have been considered.

Comrades Atkinson, Schloss, and Moore were sent to the General Committee of Local New York to lay the needs of Pennsylvania before them. The comrades there nobly rose to the occasion and by personal subscription raised in the meeting $86 and pledged $500 to follow it later, and that they would supply two speakers.

Contributions will be noted next week. WILL THE NATION AWAKE? Send all money for agitation among the miners to J. Edelmann, 807 West Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

FOR WHOM WILL YOU VOTE?

The Republican party will not nominate a workingman for Governor of New York. Neither will the Democratic party. They will both nominate corporation lawyers or "eminent business men."

Benjamin Hanford, the candidate of the Social Democratic Party, is a printer, has worked at his trade from boyhood, joined the union more than twenty-five years ago, has gone through strikes and lockouts, knows the interests of his class and has always been true to them.

Workingmen of New York, for whom will you vote?

NEW YORK AIDS PENNSYLVANIA.

Benjamin Hanford Will Speak to Striking Miners.

Liberal Contributions from Socialists of this City to Pennsylvania's Agitation Fund — No Local Feeling in Great Crisis.

In response to the appeal of Comrades Atkinson, Moore, and Schloss, a committee from Local Philadelphia who visited New York last week, the comrades of this city are coming to the aid of those in our sister state to carry the light of Socialism to the hundred and fifty thousand striking coal miners.

At Saturday's session of the General Committee the comrades named spoke earnestly and eloquently on the opportunities and needs of the Pennsylvania movement. From personal observation they declared that, if enough speakers and literature were supplied to explain Socialism to the miners, not only would the Socialist Party elect practically all its local candidates in the strike field, but, in all probability, several Socialist workingmen would be elected to the Legislature and from one to three would be sent to speak for the working class in the halls of Congress.

The response was quick and generous. A cash collection among the delegates in the General Committee amounted to $86.10.

Comrades Neppel, Slobodin, Boudin, Paultisch, Korn, Jabliuowski, Hannemann, Halpern, and Butscher were charged with the duty of collecting a fund of $500 in this city within a week to aid in the work.

Nor is this all. At the suggestion of Local New York, the State Committee has voted to send Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor of New York, to speak for a week in the strike field. Those who know Comrade Hanford's striking manhood, his keen mind, and his convincing eloquence, will know that no better service could have been rendered to our brothers in Pennsylvania.

The New York campaign will not be neglected, nor allowed to lag for a minute. The comrades feel that the coal strike is a national question. It touches us in New York as well as the workingmen of Pennsylvania. The way to strike the most telling blow at the Capital Kings, against whom the miners are now so bravely struggling, is to roll up a big Socialist vote in Pennsylvania, in New York, and all over the country. Socialism knows no local boundaries, but only the battle of the working class against its exploiters.

NEW YORK CAMPAIGN.

Meetings Better Than in Any Previous Year — Party Literature Eagerly Sought For.

Comrade Hanford has returned from his tour of the state and reports that he had bigger and better meetings than ever before, and that the workers are more willing than ever before to read Socialist literature—not only willing, now, but eager. This report is confirmed by letters received by the State Committee from outside locals.

At last week's meeting of the Committee, Local Richmond asked for more speakers. Comrade Phillips, who had spoken there, reported good activity.

Rochester stated that Comrade Jonas will have a large audience when he speaks there. The local asked for more lists to solicit campaign funds. Utica wants Jonas for three days.

Albany has a thriving movement. More literature was asked for. Johnstown also called for a new supply of ammunition. Large quantities of literature and supplies have been sent to Locals Kings County, Queens, Rochester, Frankfort, Gloversville, Watertown, Yonkers, Mount Vernon, Johnstown, Catskill, Cold Spring, Corning, Dexter, Fort Edward, Niagara Falls, Utica, Ticonderoga, Sea Cliff, Patchogue, Albany, Highland Falls, Buffalo, Syracuse, Schenectady, Oneida, Newburg, New Rochelle, Peekskill, and to the 13th, 14th, 34th, and 35th Assembly Districts of New York City.

Some 300,000 more pieces of campaign literature were ordered during the week, including from 25,000 to 100,000 each of Hanford's pamphlet, one of Slobodin, three by Spargo, an emblem card, and the Campaign Book. A list will be found elsewhere in this paper, and locals and comrades are urged to see that the literature is put in the hands of the voters promptly.

There never was a greater chance for Socialism and the Social Democratic Party in this city and state than now. The Food Trust and the Fuel Trust—with winter and unemployment in view—have opened the people's minds to our ideas. It only remains for the comrades to see that more meetings are held and more literature distributed than ever before.

JUST TRY IT.

If a copy of "Railroading in the United States," by Benjamin Hanford, were put into the hands of each worker for wages—especially those on the railroads—it would cause a political tidal wave against capitalism. Five cents a copy; five copies for 15 cents; ten for a quarter; postpaid. Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

MAINE'S VOTE.

Socialist Party Has Won Official Standing.

Vote Is More than Doubled in Two Years—Figures Not Yet Complete—Comrade Fox Discuss Situation.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Sept. 11.—The Socialist Party has made surprising gains, and wins official standing. Bath gives us 262 votes; Portland, 313; Skowhegan, 250 (and 336 for legislative ticket); Lewiston, 127; Madison, 117; Thomaston, 54; Camden, 48. These places gave a total of 306 votes two years ago. W. G. H.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—The returns of the vote of the Socialist Party in the state election last week are not yet complete. So far as they go they are most pleasing. In 222 out of the 521 cities, towns, and "plantations," our candidate for Governor, Charles L. Fox, receives 1,479 votes, a gain of about 600 over the vote cast for Debs in the whole state in November, 1900.

Two counties, Cumberland and Somerset, and one city, Bath, by polling 1,036 votes, have obtained enough to cause us to be hereafter an official party in this state. The vote of Bath leaped from eight votes for Governor in 1900 to 262 in 1902, exceeding the Democrats in three wards and doubling the vote of the Prohibitionists. Portland rose from 73 to 313; Somerset County from 236 to 336; Lewiston from four votes to 127.

This increase is most clearly shown by comparing the total of the state in 1900 for Governor with the vote of two counties and two cities. The total vote of the state in the state election of 1900 was 652, while in 1902 in Cumberland and Somerset, and in Bath and Lewiston, it was 1,172, with fourteen counties to be heard from.

Comrade Fox, in an interview in the Portland "Press," rightly says:

"Though the increase is surprisingly large I am convinced by personal investigation in different parts of the state that the ballots cast represent a small portion of those in this state who believe in the principles of Socialism, but who are not yet ready to cast their ballots with us.

"Men are bound by custom, business relations and personal friendship for certain candidates to the parties with which they have associated so long, and this is true when their convictions are with the young and progressive party.

"If the sympathy shown from one end of Maine to the other for the principles of Socialism had crystalized at the polls the state of Maine would have had a shaking up such as she never experienced before, unless possibly at the time of the Greenback movement.

"The action of the trusts is driving home to the people a conviction that something must be done. On almost every occasion the Socialist audiences have been larger than those of the Republicans or Democrats. It has been a campaign of the brass band against the wage question and the brass band has gone to the wall.

"We come out of this fight victorious; with no mistakes to correct, no apologies to make, no obligations to either of the old parties and no compromises to regret.

"We have no debts to pay either political or financial. We have a clean slate and we face the future with perfect confidence." C. H. M.

GOVERNOR STONE HEARD THE NEWS

The growth of the Socialist movement in Pennsylvania is so great that the capitalist papers can no longer ignore it. Even the New York "Times" unwillingly admits the growth of the Socialist Party in its news columns. In the issue of Sept. 12, in a dispatch from Harrisburg reporting the visit of a committee of the People's Alliance to Governor Stone, we read:

"William Wilhelm of Pottsville submitted a copy of a bill which he had drafted prohibiting persons under twenty-one years old from working in and about the mines for more than eight hours a day. The enactment of the bill into a law, he said, would prevent the crowding of the mines with undesirable workmen.

"'There will be an uprising and protest at the next election, if the conditions in the coal region are not improved,' he asserted. 'The Socialist Party has become a great factor in the politics of the region, and its leaders are confident of the election of their local tickets in Schuylkill, Luzerne, and other counties in the region.'

Further on, the dispatch states "the Governor expressed his gratification on hearing the views of the speakers; he made no comment on their remarks." It is safe to say that the information conveyed by Mr. Wilhelm of Pottsville did not contribute much to the Governor's gratification, but that it probably furnished him more food for thought than anything else in the interview.

REMEMBER THIS.

You have an engagement for Saturday evening, Sept. 27. Where? At Cooper Union. You and your friends want to hear Ben Hanford, William Thurston Brown, Mother Jones, and the other Social Democratic speakers who will be there.

—When Mr. Schwab gets sick the doctors prescribe complete rest and a trip to Europe. Suppose some of these stable men working for $9 a week were to get sick, would their charity doctors give them such a prescription?—Chicago Socialist.

MASSACHUSETTS PLATFORM.

Declaration of Principles Adopted by the Convention of the Socialist Party at Boston.

The Socialist Party of Massachusetts, in convention assembled, reaffirms its allegiance to the principles of international Socialism, and declares its adherence to the principles and platform of the Socialist Party as set forth at the convention at Indianapolis.

THE BASIS OF SOCIALISM.

The economic development has revolutionized the methods of production and is separating society into two distinct and antagonistic classes—the capitalists, a comparatively small class, the possesors of all the means of production and distribution (land, mines, machinery, and means of transportation and communication), and the working class, those possessing no property in the means of production.

The tools of production are now social in character. As the method of production has been socialized, the means of production should also become socialized. The method of ownership should be made to correspond with the method of operation. Tools used in common should be owned in common.

The introduction of a new and higher order of society is the historic mission of the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are interested in upholding the system of private ownership in the means of production. The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective power of the capitalist class by constituting themselves into a political party.

THE NECESSITY FOR SOCIALISM.

Each passing day reveals the necessity for the establishment of Socialism. Events are forcing the American people to the acceptance of collective ownership, the only solution of the existing state of industrial disorder and social inequality. The continued organization of national and international trusts concentrate ever more rapidly the ownership of the world's sources of supply into fewer and fewer hands. The increasing army of unemployed resulting therefrom sharpens competition among the workers and constitutes an almost insuperable obstacle to securing better conditions. The people are therefore awakening to the folly and injustice of a system that renders them dependent upon the whim of a decreasing number of individuals for the opportunity to live.

The Coal and Beef trusts exhibit most clearly at the present time the evil effects of trust ownership by capitalists. In each case a prime necessity for the people's sustenance and welfare is monopolized, production is restricted, prices are advanced and the whole people laid subject to the extortion of the trust directors. One hundred and fifty thousand miners in Pennsylvania are compelled to suffer hunger and privation for many weeks in order to preserve the right to organize to redress their grievances while the mine and railroad owners are permitted to conduct their organization at the expense of the social welfare.

CAPITALIST RULE.

The entire governmental powers are employed in the interests of the capitalist class. Laws are either wilfully broken or rendered useless through lack of enforcement. Executives prostitute their prerogatives to defeat the people's will. Judges usurp their powers by issuing injunctions that cripple the organization of labor while organized capital pursues its defiant way untrammeled. Official working class representatives are thrown ninto prison regardless of sex, while the capitalist leaders continue their depredations without molestation. And the Civic Federation, an organization engineered by capitalists, proclaims a policy that would lull the workers into a false security and dangerous contentment and make the trade union movement impotent of accomplishing any measure of good for the working class.

THE OLD PARTIES RESPONSIBLE.

For this state of things the Republican and Democratic parties are alike responsible.

The Republican party is the outspoken and recognized champion of capitalist interests. It is dominated by a few men to promote plunder at home and abroad, and to shape the forces of industrial progress to ignoble ends.

The Democratic party, after proving false to every pledge and every utterance, seeks to save itself from inevitable dissolution by louder and louder professions of friendship for the working class. Pretending to be the especial champion of labor's cause, it has, whenever in power, obstructed the enactment of laws that would benefit the working class, and especially those tending to prevent or lessen child labor.

MISRULE IN MASSACHUSETTS.

In Massachusetts, rich in historic traditions of honorable endeavors on behalf of liberty, justice and humanity, the state government is conducted solely in the interests of the capitalist class. Factory laws are not enforced, and officials are neglectful of or antagonistic to labor's interests. The legal machinery is utilized to intimidate the workers and thwart their efforts to improve their condition. In time of strikes, workmen are denied the right of free speech and orderly assemblage and the state police is used against them.

Immediate illustrations of this are to be found in the recent teamsters' and the present brewery workers' strikes. In one case, through the intercession of the Republican Governor and the Democratic Mayor of Boston, aided by the Civic Federation, certain victory was turned into humiliating defeat. In the other, the courts have again shown their sympathy with the capitalists by granting injunctions that would prevent the brewery workers from effectively carrying on their fight.

RECORDS CONTRASTED.

Legislation demanded by the workers is either openly defeated in the Great and General Court, passed in a purposely defective form, or finally overthrown in the courts. Local self-government is denied the cities and towns, placing them helpless before the concentrated power in the State House. The Republican and Democratic parties act harmoniously in opposition to the demands of labor and brazenly violate every pledge of devotion to the people's welfare. The spectacle is also presented of Massachusetts capitalists, who own factories in the South, opposing the restriction of child labor in that section so that Southern conditions can be cited to prevent the passage of labor measures in this state.

In striking contrast to the records of the Republican and Democratic politicians are those of the two Socialist Representatives, James F. Carey of Haverhill and Frederic O. MacCartney of Rockland. Acting in consistent accordance with the Socialist platform they have represented the best interests of labor at all times. We unequivocally endorse their actions in every particular, considering their records worthy of emulation on the part of all Socialists. Without their superiors in the General Court for ability, honesty and devotion to principle we hold Messrs. Carey and MacCartney fitting examples of the Socialist legislator entitled to election by the working class everywhere.

THE WAY OUT.

The Socialist Party presents the only solution to the trust question—co-operative ownership of the trusts by the people. It offers the only solution of the strike problem—to the workers the full product of their labor. It is the one party presenting a platform which holds out to the working class any hope for the future, and a way out of industrial serfdom.

The establishment of Socialism will bring the workers into their own, abolish capitalist ownership and rule, obliterate dependence and wage slavery, obviate the necessity of strikes and lockouts, make possible liberty of thought and action, establish equality of opportunity for all to gain a livelihood honestly, fairly, and wholesomely, and thus promote fraternity among the people of this land and the races of the earth.

We therefore call upon the workingmen and women of Massachusetts, with their true friends and sympathizers, to express and emphasize their desire for freedom and better conditions by supporting the Socialist Party, the political movement of the working class.

PRACTICAL MEASURES OF RELIEF.

While the fundamental purpose of the Socialist Party is to secure the abolition of the wage system and the establishment of the social ownership of all industry, yet its candidates, if elected, will work for all measures which will improve the condition, provide necessary protection, guarantee greater liberty for the working class, and at the same time tend toward the accomplishment of our final aim.

In view of this we therefore present the following

IMMEDIATE DEMANDS.

1. The reduction of the hours of labor in proportion to the increasing facilities of production.
2. Abolition of child labor.
3. Itaising the school age.
4. State insurance for the workers in case of death, accident, lack of employment or old age.
5. State and municipal assistance in clothing and food.
6. Extension of municipal and town powers to permit the public ownership of all public utilities.
7. The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituencies.
8. Trial by jury in cases of injunctions issued against workingmen and women.
9. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.
10. Abolition of capital punishment.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

A TRICK WHICH WE MUST FOIL.

It is most significant that several of the leading dailies of both old parties in New York City, in Boston, in Rochester, and in Newark, N. J., in reporting various matters concerning the Socialist Party (or, as it is officially designated in New York, the Social Democratic Party), simultaneously and systematically substituted the name of the so-called Socialist Labor Party. It is impossible to believe that this is due to ignorance, for in several cases we are positive that the editorial staff of the papers in question are well acquainted with the distinction between the two parties. It is further to be remembered that the New York "Sun," the inveterate enemy of the labor movement, recently devoted nearly a column to "puffing" the S. L. P., mentioning the Social Democratic Party of this state only to allege that it was composed of "the foreign elements."

There is only one explanation of this systematic misstatement of facts:

The capitalists and their official and editorial tools are alarmed by the growth of Socialism. They hope to check its progress by dividing the Socialist vote, by throwing as much of it as they can to the fake Socialist Labor Party. The Republican and Democratic parties are deliberately aiding the S. L. P., because they know that that organization spends little time in fighting capitalism, that it does not threaten the continuance of capitalist rule, that it devotes its efforts to the work of disruption in the Socialist and trade-union movement, that its continued existence is a stumbling block to the progress of Socialism.

They know that very many thousands of men in this and other states intend to cast their votes for Socialism for the first time this year. By substituting the name of an organization of disruptionists for that of the party which fights for Socialism, they hope to divide the vote and perpetuate the official existence in this state of a party that has no title to life except the service it does to the capitalists.

Comrades, sympathizers, Socialist workingmen—whether party members or not—we must meet this insidious attack. There is but one way of meeting it.

We will not enter into controversies with the disruptionists who are now serving as catspaws for our enemies. We will not fight them except when the fight is forced upon us.

But we must carry on a positive, an affirmative, an aggressive campaign, so vigorous and so universal as to familiarize every accessible voter with the name of our party, the names of our candidates, and the party emblem in states where an emblem is used, so that on November 4 they shall be in no danger of making a mistake in the casting of their votes.

It is not enough to make Socialists. It is necessary to make Socialist voters and to see that their votes are rightly recorded.

Every party speaker must distinctly mention the name of the party and its candidates and warn his hearers against the danger of making a mistake in the voting-booth. And our speakers must be given the chance to address just as many voters as possible. EVERY COMRADE CAN HELP IN THIS.

Moreover, party literature must be circulated—leaflets, cards, pamphlets, and papers—every piece bearing the legal name of the party in the state where it is given out. If literature not already bearing this name is used, it should be stamped with the legal name and emblem before being given out. EVERY SOCIALIST CAN ASSIST IN THE WORK OF DISTRIBUTING THIS LITERATURE.

Remember, it is YOUR duty to help in recording the full Socialist vote. There is no time to be lost. If you are not yet doing all you can, GET TO WORK AT ONCE.

We suppose that Philadelphia preacher thought he was saying a very brave and radical thing when he said that "the operators are responsible for the presence of depraved and ignorant foreigners in our midst." For our part, we think his saying both stupid and false. The "operators" are, as he says, responsible for the presence of the foreign miners, whom they imported in the hope of cutting down wages. But so far in this great strike, the miners, native and foreign alike, have set a singularly high standard of manhood—courage, forbearance, temperance—while the strictly "American" mine-owners have given an exhibition of depravity—greed, cruelty, falsehood, and arrogance—which will not soon be forgotten. Let us have an end of this cheap talk about "depraved and ignorant foreigners." We are all foreigners in this country, either by birth or by pretty recent ancestry. The open or implied denunciation of foreign-born workingmen is evidence either of a pitifully narrow mind, or of a deliberate intent to perpetuate foolish strife. The Reverend Joseph Wilson Cochrane will hardly find anything in the teachings of his Master better worth studying than His complete disregard of national and racial distinctions.

"A FUNCTION OF GOVERNMENT."

"Secretary Shaw Would Ease Money Market." Under this head it was announced, the other day, that "there is a threatened stringency in the money market," that "rates for call money are very high," and that Mr. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, is carefully considering how to "furnish the relief needed" and supply the money necessary for the proper manipulation of the grain crops. To the impartial observer it might seem a little strange that, while we have a cabinet official whose special duty it is to administer relief to the money market whenever Wall Street asks, it is not considered a function of the government to relieve the labor market at the request of the labor organizations. We can imagine such a thing, however—under a Socialist administration. We can imagine city councils and boards of county commissioners in Pennsylvania this summer, for instance, if Socialists controlled them, levying a special tax—which would fall chiefly on the mine-owners, because they own most of the property—and spending it in making roads and parks and building bridges and schoolrooms, in order to give work to the unemployed; yes, or swearing in and paying a few thousand of the strikers as special deputies to protect life and property, maintain public order, and enforce the law against the employment of inexperienced men in the mines. Such measures on the side of Labor would exactly match the Treasury Department's solicitous juggling with bonds and banknotes for the relief of the financiers. But how the capitalists would rave! It would be worth trying, if only for the entertaining way in which it would "stir up the animals."

"There is no indication that the strike has had any effect on Republican political prospects in Pennsylvania," says Republican Congressman Mahon of that state. So far as any switching of Republican votes to the Democratic party is concerned, we should say not. The nomination of Pattison is enough to queer the ticket from top to bottom, even though all the other candidates were "good men." But maybe Mahon doesn't know how many former Republican workingmen are going to vote the Socialist ticket.

"I do not believe the Democracy at large cares a continental who is nominated in 1904," says Democratic Senator Money of Mississippt. Of course not. Why should anyone care? In the first place, one Democratic candidate is as bad as another, and one of them is as bad as any Republican candidate. In the second place, everyone knows that the Democrats will have no more chance of success in 1904 than in 1896 or 1900. The body that is going to whip the Republicans, when the time comes, is the Socialist Party. The Democracy is a back number. Why should anyone care?

Comrade Vaupel of Cincinnati writes: "How would it be to establish an exchange of Socialist campaign literature, especially during 'off year' campaigns? It seems to me we need to practise more co-operation in this respect and we would all be greatly benefited thereby." The idea is certainly a good one. Very often it happens that some local gets out a leaflet or "dodger" that is really excellent and original and that could well be adapted to use in many other places or that would furnish valuable suggestions to other locals. We would suggest that every state or local campaign committee make it a rule to send two or three copies of each original piece of campaign literature issued to the National Secretary, to each of the state secretaries, and to each of the party papers. The best ideas for propaganda developed in each locality would thus be placed at the disposal of the whole party.

"NOTHING TO ARBITRATE."

Devout and truly pious are we men of solid worth.
To whom Almighty God has given the fullness of the earth.
Infinity of wisdom He displayed in doing thus;
And we cannot help loving Him, because He so loved us.
We'll guard the rights and interests of every workingman
And see that he earns all he gets, according to God's plan.
But when the worker proves himself
a thankless, base ingrate,
And goes on strike for higher pay, we will not arbitrate.

The mines of coal and iron by our title deeds are held.
Likewise the boundless forests where the giant trees are felled.
On oil fields and on copper beds we have a sturdy grip;
Of nature's bounties, very few have given us the slip.
We are the chosen people of this highly favored land,
We hold its business interests in the hollow of our hand.
Consumers need our product, while our workmen idly wait—
But we stand on our privilege, and will not arbitrate.

We own the steel laid highways that cross forest, plain and vale;
Don't ask how we acquired them, for that's another tale.
We must confess our methods have been sometimes very warm,
But God moves in mysterious ways,
His wonders to perform.
The farmers on the prairies, who their mortgaged acres till,
The toilers who grind out their lots in city shop and mill,
Pay tribute on our watered stock, and we with pride elate—
Will take and keep all we can get, but will not arbitrate.

We have a cinch in politics, that's worth a mine in gold;
Good comes to those who love God
now, as in the days of old.
Comparing cost and product, we've the cheapest labor known;
Our experts vie with foreign goods in every clime and zone.
The tariff laws enable us to sell our wares at home
For better prices than we get where rivals freely roam.
The people think they'd surely starve
if taxed at lower rate,
If they are pleased to have it so, why need we arbitrate?

The people are dead easy, when you stand on their blind side—
They let us bit and saddle them, and then we mount and ride.
Crouching like Issachar, they between their burdens cower;
But like old Gershom, they will kick
if once they learn their power.
They might claim labor's product as its only just reward;
Our snap seems far too good to last;
increase our faith O Lord.
Remember now thy chosen few, and save us from our fate—
That threatens when the people rise, and will not arbitrate.

—J. K. Rudyard, in Brooklyn Eagle.

A RULE OF LIFE.

Let the past be past, every whit of it that is not still living in us; let the dead bury their dead, but let us turn to the living, and with boundless courage and what hope we may, refuse to let the earth be joyless in the days to come.—Go on living while you may, striving with whatsoever pain and labor needs must be, to build up, little by little, the new day of fellowship and rest and happiness.—William Morris.

THE GOSPEL OF BRUIN THE BAER.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

Whether it is explicitly so stated, as one of the higher secrets in the science of free slavery under the sign of an American democracy, or whether it is an idea that steals of itself into the bones of a man of property, I cannot tell; but it steals into my bones that Baer is not a blasphemer—that he is only an unfortunately honest man, a victim of war, who has been constrained to let out this cherished secret doctrine of his class. For war is hell, and we all know that there are no hypocrites in hell, after the first hour; therefore Baer has only let out unwittingly the gospel of capitalism; which, when it does any thinking at all, most firmly believes in this same blessed blasphemy of Brother Baer.

Capitalism believes that the working class is given to the property class for an inheritance, and that the cause of civilization depends upon how thoroughly capitalism inherits that bequest and sucks all human possibilities out of the life of the working people.

As they hold such a splendid commission for us, in this guardianship of civilization, let us be charitable to our overburdened caretakers and brethren of the capitalist class; remembering that the way appointed to them of keeping the world at work is no other way but to get enormously rich, and that, the greater the civilization, the more each hapless millionaire must swell. Let us try to sympathize with a sincere Christian man, under such trying circumstances, upon whose frail shoulders Omnipotence has laid the unavoidable duty of getting burstingly rich for his country's maintenance, for his people's employment, and for the survival of civilization.

Think of such a man after the day's worries of a coal strike, falling down upon his knees at night and singing, with tears in his eyes, this hymn of duty and resignation:

"A charge to keep I have,
"A purse to magnify,
"An ever-growing wealth to save,
"An everlasting more to crave,
"A laborer to defy."

Let us imagine such a victim, like a poor child shut up in a candy shop, for the support of civilization, and so let us be merciful to Brother Baer.

A radical thinker like President Baer, who has to think, and also to get rich, in order to keep the race poor for the benefit of civilization, undoubtedly feels the excessiveness of this double burden; and so he cries out like Cain of old: "My punishment is more than I can bear. To be wise and to be Cain the capitalist at one time is more than I can accomplish. Behold, every one who sees my mind will laugh at me; and those who learn how many I have slain will kill me."

But no; the Lord reigneth, as dear President Bruin of the Reading Railroad Company says, through railroad property. So there is to be no let-up on the Baer's hugging the miners to death while civilization is ordained to endure this way.

What, then, is the duty of all gentlemen who see things Baerishly? Evidently it is our duty to strengthen the hands of brother Bear. This duty, realized, is the nucleus of the affiliated school of radical thinkers known as the Forceful Strenuizers and also of the Socialists. The former is now ably represented by President Roosevelt at Washington and by his little son Theodotty, the young lion of the tribe of Judah, who is learning to be like Nimrod a mighty hunter before the Lord; and also to worry the Bryanite farmers of Kansas by pursuing something over their fences.

Any bear who knows what a strain it is on the nerves and muscles to squeeze a man into a palatable condition before dining on him, will appreciate the great need there is for a schoool of strenuousness in order to maintain civilization by Baerishness.

And we who are workers—and gentlemen also—must see to it to be "our plain duty," in the light of "our manifest destiny," to be squeezed, that our brethren, whose painful blessedness it is to squeeze us, shall have a good tussle for it in this their training for our benefit. We should see to it that no Christian gentlemanly bear ever completes his thanksgiving without first sweating hard to get his turkey.

Under these circumstances it seems perfectly natural that a second school of radical thinkers should have been formed, in harmony with the divine intentions of property and with a view to a further developing of muscles. It was for this reason that the innate beauties of competition were discovered almost immediately after the messianic era of profit-mongering set in.

Baer and his friends have withdrawn from competition and run away, under the protection of the soldiery of the various states, from that healthy exercise of competition. They have turned their backs upon their dear, tender old nursing-mother, once deemed the very "life of trade," and are escaping from further responsibility of contributing to the old woman's support. They are appealing to the courts for injunctions and to an army of disreputable deputies and cigarette-militiamen for the amount of provocation necessary to produce the amount of riot necessary to produce the amount of military murder necessary to subdue competition; and so, turning their formerly honored parent out of doors as a disreputable person, they begin to TAKE things easy.

Now our gentleman friends are imperiling the whole idea of strenuosity by so attempting to carry out the gospel of subjugation without difficulty. We Socialists cannot, therefore, in the interests of strenuosity itself, allow them to run away thus from time-honored competition. That white man's burden is partly ours, and it must not all be laid down on one end while the other end is on our shoulders. Even though they stigmatize all manfully resisting laborers in America as being of foreign origin, we must not suffer them to place so vile a slander to our credit in history unchallenged. We must, in honor of the President and of all true Americans, be strenuous men.

It is our intention, therefore, to pursue the trust refugees with competition, in honor of a great nation, which ought by this time to be free. It is our duty to press close upon their heels with weapons of organization, to match their own change of tactics from men to corporate capacities, converting our own personal struggle into a class struggle.

They have abandoned private competition and gone into trusts to dodge the old woman who nursed them. We have also abandoned it and gone into unions to keep class competition alive till victory.

They are erasing the lines that once divided their property and their interest from the state, the country, the nation, the government. We, therefore, press them up to that point, and on our side seek also to make the government our own.

They call in Spencer to translate all human order for them into terms of so many very distinctly differentiated property gentleman—named, the Strenuous. We call in Marx to express human history for us in terms of two final classes competing for the mastery—of which they are one and we the other.

Finally, the Baers call in God, and say "He reigneth" in their property dominion; Labor having no interest in His reign except so much as is coming to it in daily wages. We say: "Brother Baer, if you honored God, truly, you would wait until this battle is over; for that Dagon of Capital's temple is surely coming down, shattered and prostrate on his face forever."

Baer says: "God reigneth." "Whatever that means," we say, "it shall not be through Baer."

There are multitudes of us who have not yet bowed the knee to Baer nor any of his heathen ideas, nor to his friends who hold commissions from any heathen gods to civilize Americans by hugging them into bear-steaks.

No, Mr. Baer, nothing reigns here but that conflict between us, which you have provoked and inaugurated, and upon which you will not allow light, reason, nor right to shine until you have settled in your own way. If that means a sham settlement under the auspices of your fellow conspirators of the Republican party, the Socialists, still thinking such a settlement too easy for your divine commission, will keep you strenuously proving that the strike is settled.

SOCIALISTS INDORSED

The Springfield Central Labor Union Sees No Need of Any Other Party.

Under the headlines which appear above, the Springfield (Mass.) "Union" gives the following report of a session of the local central body.

"A practical indorsement of the Socialist Party was given at the meeting of the Central Labor Union yesterday afternoon by the adoption of the report of the special committee, consisting of W. H. Grady, M. J. Markley, and George E. Vincens, appointed to act upon the communication of the Federated Trades Council of Milwaukee and vicinity relative to the proposed formation of an independent labor party. The communication was received at the August meeting, and the committee's report, which was adopted by the central body, is to the effect that there is no need of an independent labor party, as the Socialist platform covers the needs of the workingman thoroughly. The report follows:

"'To the Federated Trades Council of Milwaukee and vicinity:

"'Greeting—The Springfield Central Labor Union has received your communication proposing a convention for the inauguration of a "concerted and class-conscious war of political extermination against the hosts of capitalism and to be conducted in such a manner as to help and not retard unionism and the interests of the American Federation of Labor." After a careful investigation, we believe that if such action is desirable, the proposed convention is unnecessary as the field is already occupied, the Socialist Party, as shown by its constitution, being entirely in accord with the purposes set forth in your communication. We find that the party is well organized and growing and that its attitude is one of helpful sympathy with organized labor, as demonstrated particularly in its recent generous financial assistance of the striking mine workers, in co-operation with officials of the American Federation of Labor. We also find that the record of the party's two representatives in the Massachusetts Legislature has been one of consistent and effective endeavor in the interests of the working classes against the forces of capitalism.'

"Henry Sterling, chairman and treasurer of the Boston Central Labor Union committee on direct legislation, was present and addressed the meeting on the object of his committee, which is to agitate a bill granting the right of 50,000 voters to petition for amendments to the state constitution. Such a bill lacked seventeen votes of a majority in the legislature last session, and the committee hopes to make the agitation strong enough this coming session to pass it. Mr. Sterling asked that the union indorse the measure and if it saw fit to contribute to the support of the cause. Action was deferred to the next meeting.

"'George E. Vincens and William H. Grady were appointed delegates to the convention of the state branch of the American Federation of Labor in Boston next month.'"

It might be added that it was one of the Socialist members, Frederick O. MacCartney of Rockland, ably seconded by his colleague, James F. Carey of Haverhill, who made the greatest fight for direct legislation in the last session of the Legislature.

—The circulation of The Worker is growing faster now than ever before. And yet we are not satisfied. Hustle in the subs, comrades. Readers of The Worker become Socialist voters.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

With its September number "The Comrade" closes its first volume and begins its second year, accompanied by the well wishes of all who are interested in the development of Socialist art and literature. "The Search for an Ideal," by James N. Wood, and a sketch entitled "Who," from the Jewish of Z. Libin deserve special mention among the contents of the present number, which includes an interview with Paul Singer, Frederic O. MacCartney's contribution to the "How I Became a Socialist" series, an account of the Cranbrook press by the editor and the usual number of poems, reviews, portraits and illustrations. A little cartoon character study of J. A. Wayland by Ryan Walker suggests the idea that a series of such friendly and humorous studies of various prominent Socialists would prove interesting, as the cartoon is often more true to life than the most faithful photograph. Father Thomas J. Hagerty answers some objections to Socialism by portraying the objectors in a manner most laughable and effective.

The September number of "Wilshire's Magazine" contains an interesting editorial on present economic conditions and one on "The True Joy of Life," in which the editor maintains that "the true course of the temperance reformer is to make this world so little like hell and so near like heaven that no man will dare to get drunk for fear of missing part of the show." John S. Pyle contributes a very good article on "Socialism and Its Program," and Hyndman writes an interesting letter from London at the close of which he expresses dissatisfaction with the management of the International Socialist Bureau, which he declares has "apparently fallen into the hands of a local and quite incompetent clique at Brussels." In an article entitled "Socialism's Economic Inevitability," W. H. Stuart criticizes what Wilshire is pleased to call "his theory" of the coming collapse of capitalism through over-production, as follows:

"Mr. Wilshire divides the incomes of the capitalists into what they "spend," and what they "save." What they use for necessities or luxuries is what they "spend," what they 'save" is that part of their income expended in the production of new machinery. Assuming that no further machinery is necessary, Mr. Wilshire's contention is that it will be impossible for him to "spend" the total amount, and that in consequence half of his income must remain idle, and the labor it formerly employed remain idle also. I would suggest to Mr. Wilshire to drop a note to Mr. Carnegie and ask him how he expects to be able to "spend" his millions before he dies? Will Wilshire contend that if Carnegie's and Rockefeller's machinery should last forever that the amount thus "saved" could not be employed in other ways of employing labor, building and equipping libraries, founding and endowing universities, etc.? Aside from philanthropy, suppose it were "up to" the millionaires to find employment for the displaced workers not needed in making new machinery, by employing them in building roads, laying out parks, building sanitariums, founding libraries and universities, ect., or to be dispossessed of their capital and denied the power and pleasure in acquiring and using it, would they hesitate for a moment? Capitalists are "spending" hundreds of millions voluntarily now; why would they not do it if the alternative were universal starvation or their own expropriation?"

To which Wilshire replies:

"Mr. Stuart says that if the capitalists find they cannot employ labor in building useful machinery, they may give employment to labor in building universities, etc., for the simple purpose of giving employment. In the first place, I cannot conceive of any concerted action of all the capitalists agreeing to waste their money simply to preserve the existing competitive system. It needs be concerted, for if part build art galleries and the other part do not, then the second part will keep their capital intact and the first part will soon stop trying to save society for the benefit of the second part, who do nothing. Then the absurdity of thinking that the mere building of libraries and art galleries and universities would for very long afford employment for labor. It would not be a drop in the bucket, and the world would soon be filled to repletion with art galleries without pictures, and libraries without readers."

In replying to Mr. Stuart, Wilshire states that he came to the Socialist position without having read any Socialist work.

THE NEXT MERGER.

Announcement is made to the effect that Sells Bros., Forepaugh, and Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, have "merged" with the Barnum & Bailey circus, thus practically combining all the great traveling exhibitions of this kind under one head and management. Such is the inexorable economic tendency of modern capitalism that even these popular institutions cannot escape it. The next "merger" in this line will consist of a combination of those two political circuses, the Republican and Democratic parties, with their monster aggregation of freaks, clowns, acrobats, and lightning change artists, driven thereto by a similar inexorable necessity. They will then be in shape to give what will prove to be "positively their last appearance" before a growing Socialist audience, after which the show will permanently disband.—Chicago Socialist.

—Mr. Roosevelt is reported as saying that the trusts are not so bad as they are painted, but they "need watching." That is what the trusts want the people to do—just "watch" them.—Central Farmer.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Social Democratic Herald.

Emboldened by the "success" of the Civic Federation—success in mussing up certain labor leaders and weakening the confidence of the organized workers in them, the believers in capitalism are now planning a still more daring game and will hold a "National Convention of Employers and Employees'" at Minneapolis, September 22-26. Teddy Roosevelt will be there, Prof. Ely, Carroll D. Wright and others. Of course, the meeting will study ways to "soften the frictions" between the exploiters and the exploited, to keep back, if possible, the light of his exact economic plight from the American workingman. Anything that will divert the workers' attention from the bad business bargain their class is forced to make in selling the commodity of labor to the capitalists is well worth the pains and expense incident to such "labor" talk-fests as that now planned. The American worker can never be quieted till he gets justice, and he can only get justice through the abolition of the capitalist and the profit system.

The Pilgrim.

The notable incidents of the great strike of the anthracite miners during the past month were an outbreak of rioting at Shenandoah, Pa., and the most extreme injunctions against the ordinary methods of conducting a strike which have yet proceeded from any federal court in the progressive development of the system of government by injunction. Outbreaks alike of excited strikers and of excitable judges have come to be the regular accompaniments of every great strike. The former are always suppressed, swiftly and by due process of law, as at Shenandoah, which Governor Stone promptly turned into a great camp of Pennsylvania troops. Every riot which has attended a strike has added to the volume of evidence proving the hopelessness of attempting to win a labor quarrel by violent means. It alienates from the workmen many of their real friends, and furnishes those who have been only ostensibly friendly a plausible excuse for open hostility. But there is a general tendency to overestimate the value of public sentiment in a case of this sort. Public sentiment never yet won a strike against a well organized trust or corporation. Public sentiment in this strike of underpaid miners against an oppressive trust was on the strikers' side, and perhaps still is, but it has done them no iota of good, and if it veers because of their rioting it will do them little harm. A strike, after all, is war of a sort, and just as the friendship of the whole American people was of absolutely no service to the Boers, because their foe was protected by a mass of international law and precedent built up to protect robber nations, so it will be of no value to miners because their opponents are sheltered behind a breastwork of law built up by corporation agents in legislatures and courts. But the way to overcome this heavy handicap is not to be wholly indifferent to public sentiment, but rather to remove the causes that make it impotent, by attacking, through orderly political methods, the privileges which corporations, particularly public service corporations, have gradually acquired by their control of the government.

Des Moines Daily News.

"There is no danger of the people freezing to death," said E. H. Ashley, secretary of the Pittmans & Dean Co. "They can burn soft coal."

A sovereign of France could see no reason why the populace should starve. He said: "Let the people eat grass."

Now, the people could possibly live on "greens" for a time and they can burn soft coal instead of anthracite. But that isn't the question at issue.

The question is, has any man or combination of men any natural right to grab all the fuel of a certain kind, put into the ground by the Almighty for all his children, and, not content with an ordinary profit of 400 per cent, take advantage of necessity to rob a nation?

No one doubts the coal barons have a legal right, under our present system, to do this thing. And evidently these men believe they have a natural right, a divine right.

There is President Baer of the Philadelphia & Reading road, who indicts the impious sentiment that "God, in his infinite wisdom, has given the control of the property interests of the country" into hands like his.

To say nothing of the blasphemy of such a claim, the doctrine is a revival of the divine right of kings and overseers, a doctrine our forefathers shot to death, as they thought, over a hundred years ago.

True, the people can burn soft coal. They can throw away the base burners designed for anthracite and buy others. They can change their furnaces at large expense.

But the people of France soon got tired of eating grass and the people of this country are getting tired of being told what coal they must use, or submit to be robbed.

The coal barons are simply hastening the day when the people—the government—shall own and operate the mines.

Appeal to Reason.

Why has the threatened scarcity of coal not produced a philosopher equal to the occasion to show the people that they will be better off without so much coal anyhow? When the price of beef went soaring the vegetarian was on hand with a trust buster and life preserver in the form of an anti-beef-eating scheme. Why don't some wise man now rise up to show the deluded people the unsanitary extravagance of over-heated dwellings and enlarge upon the value of sun-baths without the interference of artificial heat? Is it not unnatural to toast one's shins? What animal in a state of nature uses either fire or fire-water for keeping warm? When you feel too chilly just get up and hustle and your employer will smile at your industry, a bushel of coal will last indefinitely and the venders of coal will have only the rich to supply, thereby decreasing the demand and crippling the coal barons. The knowledge of how to do without things is the highway to health, wealth and happiness.

Outwest Magazine, San Francisco.

Socialism is one of the livest topics of the hour. It is by no means a local question. It is not merely a national affair. It is a world movement. And it foreshadows a great intellectual and economic uplift of the race. It is bounded by no distinctions of class. The first intelligent Socialism I ever heard talked came to me in the elegant precincts of a down town club where a thousand men of New York—probably the leading thousand men of that great city—meet each noon at lunch. I was amazed to find that the very men against whom the Socialist argument is chiefly directed—the men of Wall Street—were discussing this idea as the ultimate and inevitable goal of economic development. I know another club in San Francisco composed of the most prominent citizens of California who meet once a month for a quiet dinner and, behind closed doors, express their true convictions under pledge of secrecy. Not even the name of their club is known to the newspapers. The advanced ideas which are discussed behind closed doors would be a startling revelation to the public. I do not mean to imply that these ideas are Socialism, pure and simple. But in their general character they walk far in advance of the procession. The point is that most intelligent men have two opinions about current affairs—their public opinion and their private opinion. That the private opinion of the great common intelligence which rules the world is preparing for "a new birth of institutions," in some future day, near or remote, there can be no doubt whatever in the minds of those who think.

Williamsport Labor Review.

President Roosevelt is out for the workingmen's votes.

He says that the government should control the trusts.

He is enthusiastic over the development of the country under the present system.

He contrasts the good with the evil, and counts out why the voters should complete the remedy, but suggests that much of the complaint against combinations is unwarranted.

President Roosevelt's declarations are buncombe of the plainest variety. He is after votes, and he throws this sort of sop to the workers—the men who make presidents of this great republic.

STATE CAPITALISM.

If, on the one side, the crises reveal the incapacity of the capitalist class any longer to direct the modern powers of production, the transformation of the large establishments of production and of communication and transportation into stock companies or state property proves, on the other, the superfluousness of that class. All social functions of the capitalist class are now filled by hired employees. The capitalist no longer exercises any social activity except the pocketing of revenues, punching of coupons, and speculating in stocks—an operation by which the several capitalists mutually take away one another's capital. After first displacing workmen, the capitalist mode of production subsequently displaces capitalists themselves, and throws them, the same as it did with the workmen, into the superfluous portion of the population, although not immediately into industrial reserve army.

But neither conversion into stock companies nor state ownership removes the quality of capital from the powers of production. With the stock companies, this fact remains obvious. On the other hand, the modern state is but the organization which capitalist society gives itself in order to maintain the external conditions of capitalist production against the attacks both of the workmen and of individual capitalists. The modern state, whatever its form, is essentially a capitalist machine; it is the state of the capitalist; the ideal total capitalist. The more numerous the productive powers are which it takes in hand, the nearer it is to that ideal total capitalist; all the more citizens does it exploit. The workmen remain wage-workers, proletarians. The capitalistic quality remains in force; it is even carried up higher. But at the top, it topples over. State ownership of the powers of production is not the solution of the conflict; nevertheless, it carries within it the technical means, the handle to the solution.—Frederick Engels, in "Socialism, Utopian and Scientific."

THE SEAMSTRESS.

Sitting, lonely, in the twilight,
Looking upward thro' the skylight,
Wond'ring if the God above,
With infinitude of love,
Sees this wretched being here,
Sees upon her cheek the tear,
Sees within the heart the fear,
Sees the grief, and shame, and blight
Turn her hair into grey,
While the daylight fades away
Into night.

Now the candle ray is flushing
Pale face now with fever blushing;
Hope and daylight fade away
While the hand and needle play
Like the shuttle in the loom;
Like the shadows in the gloom
Flitting up and down the room,
Flitting up and down the wall;
Shapes that come and then depart
Like the hopes which rise and fall
In her heart.

Now the wearied head is stooping,
Head and heart with pain are drooping
Fainting, fading with the dip,
While the wav'ring shadows slip
Into dismal quietude.
Presto! God above is good ——
All the scene with light imbued:
Joyful hearts come to her aid,
And willing hands, until it seems
The world a paradise is made ——
In her dreams.

—F. W. Wilber, in the Workers' Call.

PARTY NOTES.

The Miners' Strike Fund of the Socialist Party passed the $3,000 mark last week and is still growing. Remittances aggregating $3,043 have been made to W. B. Wilson, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, by the National Committee.

Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary of the Socialist Party, reports the receipt of $1,679.32 since August 28 for the strike of the United Mine Workers. The total contributed to the Mine Workers through the national organization of the Socialist Party now reaches $3,214.11. The list for these two weeks includes contributions from over a hundred locals of the party in every part of the country, as well as from several trade unions and other labor organizations permeated with Socialist ideas, from many individual comrades, and collections made by the Chicago "Socialist" and The Worker.

A Socialist paper, "The Pilot," has been established at Auckland, New Zealand. The New Zealand Socialist Party is making steady progress.

The movement is very active in New Hampshire.—Socialists of Strafford County held convention recently and nominated full county ticket.—Origin A. Downing, foreman in John Swenson's Granite Works, Concord, N. H., has been nominated for Mayor. There will be three full ward tickets up in that city.—Geo. A. Two years ago, with twenty-one Socialist votes, the city clerk, Republican, said he would see to it there wasn't as many polled next time. This year there are no less than twenty-one candidates up on the Socialist ticket, all good clean men, and the local vote will be well up in the hundreds. Two Socialist candidates for state senators have been nominated in the Nashua districts. —The Franklin, N. H., Socialists had a propaganda wagon in Labor Day parade and distributed much literature. They will run a candidate for the legislature from Ward One, which is their strongest ward.—The long strike of the Needleworker's Union has caused the establishment of a union shop at Contoocook and several good Franklin Socialists will thus be transplanted to that fertile field.—Michael F. O'Neil, Sumner F. Claflin, and George A. Little spoke from the same dry goods box in front of City Hall, Manchester, N. H., Sept. 6, to a good crowd.—M. F. O'Neil, candidate for Governor, spoke to a good audience at Milford, N. H., the evening of Sept. 5. He has been speaking nearly every night for several weeks.

The 30th A. D. met at the Eighty-sixth street Clubhouse on Wednesday of last week and perfect plans for the campaign. At the district convention, held the same evening, Algernon Lee was nominated for Assemblyman. Comrade Lee briefly addressed the district and also the Socialist Liedertafel, which was meeting in the hall below. Captains were chosen for all the election district and arrangements made to cover the field with party literature. A ratification meeting will be held on Oct. 11, at which Comrade Hanford will be one of the speakers. Numerous street meetings will be held, and the members of the Young People's Club living in the district are expected to give valuable assistance in the campaign work.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville held a well attended meeting last Thursday. Election of officers was on the order of business, but other matters occupied so much of the time that this was postponed. The history, purposes, achievements, and prospects of the Club were discussed at length and in a lively fashion. Comrade Ortland appeared for the Yorkville Agitation Committee with campaign work for club members to do, which was undertaken. On Thursday, Sept. 25, the Club will receive a visit from the Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn. A full attendance is expected.

Local charters have been granted to Lynchburg, Va., Hagerstown, Md., Lead, S. Dak., and Clark, S. Dak.

South Dakota has effected state organization and applied for charter. Eight locals were formed in this state within six weeks.

California paid national dues on 1,027 members for the month of August, beating all state records in this respect.

The National Secretary requests delinquent locals to please take notice that date (September 5) set for return of subscription lists for the Miners' Strike Fund has expired.

State Organizer White of Connecticut addressed open-air meetings the past week in Thompsonville and Stafford Springs. He also spoke before the striking velvet weavers union in South Manchester.—Chas. H. Vail has been obliged to cancel his dates in Connecticut.—The open-air meetings in Hartford and New Haven Saturday, Sept. 13, were postponed because of rain. Comrade L. D. Mayes will speak on New Haven Green, Saturday, Sept. 20; Eugene Toomey and W. E. White in Bridgeport and Broad Brook on the same date.

Connecticut comrades should take notice that applications to be made a voter must be made to the registrar of voters in writing on the blank provided by the registrar, on or before Monday, October 13, 1902. Applications may be signed either by the applicant or by a voter of the town in which application is made. The first meeting of Board of Selectmen to make voters will be held on October 17 and adjourned meetings will be held during the following week. The last day on which voters can be made is Friday, October 24. The Selectmen will then be in session from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., after which time no one can be made a voter unless he comes of age between that date and election day, when he may be made so the day before election. Election day is Tuesday, November 4.

The Socialists of Harrison, N. J., will hold a mass meeting to express sympathy with the striking miners, at Stover's Hall on Harrison avenue, Saturday evening, Sept. 20. Comrade Neben will speak.

Local Elizabeth, N. J., holds a mass meeting to discuss the coal strike, Sunday, Sept. 21, 3 p. m., at 605 Elizabeth avenue. Comrade Neben will be the speaker. It is intended to organize an American branch of the party, and all readers of The Worker in Elizabeth should be present.

The Socialists of the 13th Congressional District of Ohio in conference at Fostoria on Sept. 14, selected Comrade A. A. Floom to act as secretary of congressional committee, in place of E. I. Comrade Caldwell spent a week in successful work at Dayton, O. A number of new party members, new subscriptions for The Worker, and literature sold indicate good work. Caldwell says Dayton comrades are working well.

New York State.

The Social Democratic convention of Jefferson County was held at Watertown last week. Sidney Landon and O. Curtis presided. Forty-one delegates were present from Watertown, Hounsfield, Brownville, and Tylerville. Raymond Bull of Rutland was nominated for Congress in the Twenty-eighth District. The other candidates are as follows: For State Senator, Thomas Pendergast; County Treasurer, Levi P. Carpenter, Jr.; Sheriff, Joseph McKeown; members of Assembly, First District, Howard D. Roseboom; Second District, James A. McCarthy. The committee to fill vacancies consists of O. Curtis, Sidney Landon, and William Kaley. The campign will be vigorously conducted, both in the city and in the rural districts. Comrade Brown is to speak in Watertown next month.

The Social Democrats of Johnstown are making things lively there. Hanford's meeting last Saturday is said by the local "Labor News" to have been "the largest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held by the party in Johnstown." Ward tickets have been nominated as follows: First Ward—for Alderman, John Lockmeyer of the Leather Workers' Union; for Water Commissioner, F. J. Bevington of the Table Cutters; Second—for Alderman, Wm. D. Chandler of the Block Cutters; Third—for Alderman, T. McGuire of the Beam Hands; for Water Commissioner, Wm. Canfield of the Table Cutters; Fourth—for Alderman, John Russell of the Table Cutters. Local Johnstown has sent $23.20 to the miners' strike fund.

Organizer Spring, accompanied by Comrade Nolan, attended the meeting of the Woodworkers' Union in Herkimer, N. Y., and addressed the meeting for about an hour. He was tendered a vote of thanks and a standing invitation to call on the union whenever in Herkimer. Comrade Nolan writes: The next time he comes we will have an open-air meeting and put him before one thousand men."

Socialist leaflets are being distributed among the striking custom tailors of Buffalo and there is a great demand for more. Comrade Hanford was in Buffalo on the 9th and 10th of this month; on the 9th a banquet was given in his honor at International Hall, when the comrades drank to the health of the S. D. P. and its gubernatorial candidate, and on the 10th, he and Comrade Kirsh, of Niagara Falls, and Spean, of Buffalo, spoke to a fair sized audience in the same hall. The comrades are getting ready for the campaign and intend to nominate a full city ticket. The Polish comrades are also becoming active; they meet in Comrade Froncik's house and have organized themselves into a Polish Socialist Alliance and have decided to give their allegiance and support to the Social Democratic Party. They took up a collection of $2.30 for the striking coal miners and have also contributed $1.10 to the local campaign fund, as a start. The Polish comrades intend to do good work for Socialism among their countrymen, as there are over 50,000 Polish workingmen in Buffalo. Their secretary is Comrade M. Pronsik, a very enthusiastic Socialist worker. The next meeting will take place at 1275 Broadway on Monday, Sept. 22, at 8 p. m. The American Branch of the S. D. P. will hold its regular business meeting at 431 William street and the City Central Committee will hold its regular business meeting on Tuesday at the same place. The comrades should make it their business to attend without fail.

The new headquarters of the Social Democratic Club of Buffalo at 431 William street, will be open every evening and all day Sunday. Socialist papers will be kept on file and lectures held every Sunday afternoon.

Comrade Hanford's meeting at Rochester last week was one of the most successful ever held in that city. Comrade Van Auken presided and Charles Bach, Social Democratic candidate for Congress, also spoke. Comrade Bach is spoken of as one of the "coming men." He will make a strong campaign, and would fitly represent the workingmen of Rochester in Congress.

New York City.

The 6th and 10th A. D. at its last meeting collected $5 to be sent to the Pennsylvania State Committee for agitation among the miners. The district is working steadily in the campaign, distributing literature, and pushing the circulation of The Worker. From now on the district will meet every Friday evening in the Labor Lyceum, and meetings will be called to order promptly at eight o'clock.

Comrade Flick of the 22d A. D. reports that the open-air meeting at Forty-seventh street and First avenue last week was unexpectedly successful. Close attention and hearty applause were given to Miss Dahme by a numerous audience. There were many, especially women, who were surprised to hear a woman speaking in a street meeting, and when she had finished many came up to shake hands and congratulate her and ask her to speak in the district again. Comrades Mayes and Reichenthal were also well received. "This was a good street," adds Comrade Flick, "and we can be satisfied. It is only a pity that we have not about twenty-five more like Miss Dahme."

Socialists living in the upper part of the 19th A. D. are requested to attend a meeting to be held Thursday evening, Sept. 18, in F. Meyerer's Hall, 271 Devoe street, corner of Olive, for the purpose of organizing a branch there.

The last meeting of the Mills' Class in Social Economy will be held Thursday evening, September 25, at the rooms of the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, near Fiftieth street, when examination papers will be handed in and resolutions will be offered. It is hoped that all members of the class will attend this meeting. It has been suggested that Comrade Herron, one of the examining board, be asked to preside at a Sunday evening lecture at Colonial Hall, and award the diplomas to those who are successful in passing examination.

The 34th A. D. has nominated Comrade Weidekaff for Assemblyman, and turned in List 154 of Bronx Borough Campaign Fund: J. Simons, $1; H. Nolting, $1; E. Matzner, 50 cents; J. Neher, 50 cents; B. Thierfelder, $1; total, $6.

The Socialist Educational League, formerly situated at 215 E. Fifty-ninth street, has removed to new and spacious headquarters at 953 Second avenue, near Fiftieth street. The object of the organization is to further the moral, intellectual and material interests of labor. It seeks to disseminate knowledge by the holding of lectures and debates, and the distribution of literature. At the regular meeting of the club on Sept. 10 three new members were admitted and the following officers were elected: Recording Secretary, Comrade Smalsbock; Treasurer, Comrade Flick; Librarian, Comrade Sackin, and Corresponding Secretary, Comrade Roewer. The dues of the club are twenty cents a month. Those members holding cards are requested to attend the business meetings that are held every Wednesday evening. As the club has always been very active in the past in propagating the great principles of Socialism, it shall continue to do the same in the future and we call upon those who live in the near vicinity to come and join hands with us in the great work.

Branch 91 of the Kranken Kasse was visited last Sunday by a committee from the Socialists of Philadelphia on behalf of the striking miners. The branch appropriated $25 for the strike fund and $25 for agitation in the strike field.

At the Brooklyn Social Democratic ratification meeting on Friday, Sept. 26, in the Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby avenue, Comrades Hanford, Wilshire, MacCartney, and Mother Jones will probably be the speakers. The two first named have already been secured.

At the last regular meeting of the Kings County Committee Comrades Hopkins and Well were elected chairman and vice-chairman respectively. Most districts have begun active work in connection with the campaign. The Sixteenth will have a lawn party at the rear of the Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue on September 20. The Twelfth collected $8.40 for the striking miners. The three branches of the Twenty-first collected $35 for the same purpose. Branch 3 has purchased a stereopticon for the used during the campaign. The Nineteenth is trying to organize another branch. The Thirteenth and Fourteenth will have a mass meeting on September 29, at which Ben Hanford is to speak. A transparency has been ordered to be placed in front of the Socialist Club. Comrade Gerber, Campaign Secretary, reports primaries held and reports received from all except two districts. He was elected as a committee to recommend names for members of assembly in unorganized districts. His notary certificate having expired, the county committee pays for its renewal. The organizer makes a pressing call for speakers and for present speakers to volunteer to speak more frequently. He has sent fifty letters to trade unions and has received calls for speakers from a few of them. The ratification meeting is to be held in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum on September 26, at which Comrades MacCartney, Wilshire, Hanford, Brown, and Mother Jones are expected to speak. Comrades Well, Ward, Rixon, Gerber, and Heuer have been appointed a committee to take charge of the meeting, the printing of 500 posters and 10,000 throwaway cards, and also to entertain the speakers. The organizer has been instructed to send a communication to the Young Men's Social Democratic Club asking them to assist in distributing literature during the campaign. He has also been instructed to have a notice inserted in The Worker and "Volkszeitung" calling upon party members out of work to give some of their time to the distribution of literature.

At the last meeting of the Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn the secretary was instructed to notify the Young People's Club of Yorkville that the date set for visiting them was to be changed to Sept. 18, and Comrade Koenen was instructed to secure a date for the smoker by the next meeting on Monday. All members of the club are required to wear the party button and acquaint non-Socialists with the emblem on every possible occasion. One thousand campaign cards are to be ordered. All members who can do so are requested to join in the visit of the club to the Young People's Club of Yorkville, and to attend the anniversary meeting of the Brooklyn Socialist Club on Sept. 20. The 19th is trying to organize another branch. The 13th and 14th will have a mass meeting, with Hanford as speaker on Sept. 29.

ORGANIZER SPRING'S WORK IN NEW YORK.

Social Democratic Activity Throughout the State—Blacklisting Only Propagates the Movement.

State Organizer Spring's weekly reports show that the Social Democratic Party is making steady progress in New York. The work is being carried into new fields, and in old centers of activity it is being taken up with new vigor.

Comrade Spring visited Seneca Falls and Auburn and, although unable to organize, found a few good Socialists in each place who undertook to distribute party literature.

On Monday, Sept. 8, he spoke at a meeting of Local Syracuse. The local situation was fully discussed and plans made for the campaign. Spring will give one week in October to propaganda work in Syracuse.

The situation at Oneida, where Comrade Spring spoke on Wednesday, is an interesting one. There was formerly a strong though small party organization in Oneida. Most of the Socialists were cigarmakers and, of course, were active members of the union. Last winter the union was forced to strike by the aggressions of the bosses; the local union was not properly supported by the national officers and, after a long and brave fight, the strike was virtually lost. The result was that most of the local Socialists, having been "perniciously active" in the strike, were blacklisted and driven out of town. The bosses thought they had crippled the union and killed the S. D. P. local. But, as usual in such cases, they reckoned without their host. The strikers who remained in town, educated by the hard experience, kept quietly at work, rebuilding their industrial and political organizations. Local Oneida of the S. D. P. is now reorganized, with twelve hard-working and intelligent comrades, whose efforts will show results in November. But this is not all of the story. As is generally known, the S. D. P. has never had an effective organization in Albany until this year. Some of the blacklisted men from Oneida found work in Albany. The result is that Local Albany is now strong and aggressive. Thus the Oneida bosses, in trying to crush the movement by a blacklist, have only strengthened the determination of the local comrades and sent out active missionaries for Socialism to other places.

On Thursday, Comrade Spring visited Local Frankfort and made arrangements for a meeting for Ben Hanford. That evening he addressed the Woodworkers' Union, where he was well received and invited to return. He will do so on October 1. A local of the party will be organized. Hanford's leaflet and The Worker were liberally distributed at Frankfort.

Friday evening was devoted to an open-air meeting on Franklin Square at Utica, with good results. Three hundred people showed the greatest interest in Spring's speech, a large quantity of party literature was eagerly taken, and several subscriptions for The Worker were secured. The Utica comrades, Spring reports, are working well and have every reason for enthusiasm in the assurance of an increased vote.

On Saturday, Comrade Spring spoke in the street at Johnstown. The following days were given to Amsterdam, Catskill, Hudson, and Kingston. On Friday, Sept. 19, he returns to the city, where he willl remain for a few days. He is meeting with good success in arranging dates for Comrade Brown, our candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, in October, as well as for Hanford's second tour.

Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 25,000 members and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $3.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $2.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

IN THE FAR WEST.

National Organizer Chase Is Enthusiastic.

Socialist Ideas Find a Warm Welcome in Montana and Idaho — Western Workers Will Resist Capitalist Aggression.

National Organizer John C. Chase reports as follows to National Secretary Greenbaum on his recent work in Montana and Idaho:

"Many and varied have been my experiences since my last report, and it is with difficulty that I find time now to write. Railroading in Montana and Idaho keeps one guessing. Trains are all very late, owing largely to the Union Pacific strike, and I have been unable to make one or two locals where I was billed to speak. I have to ride at all times of day and night and lie over at all kinds of places for hours, in order to make train connections. I mention these difficulties that I encounter so that the comrades who were disappointed at my non-appearance may understand when they read this report the reason why I did not show up.

Montana Awake.

"My meetings during the past three weeks in Montana and Idaho have been exceedingly good, with few exceptions. The Montana meetings have been especially encouraging. There is no state in which I have spoken so far that seems so far advanced in Socialism, so far as sentiment goes, as Montana. It is weak on organization as yet, but coming along all right. Socialism seems to have taken hold in the minds of all classses of people. I find it among the ranchers and herders as well as among the miners and other wage workers.

"With her small population and the worker so far outnumbering the corporation and capitalist element, Montana is most favorably situated to take the lead in the movement for the emancipation of the workers from wage slavery. If organization is carried on as it should be in the next year or two, Montana will take the lead.

Idaho Well Organized.

Idaho is situated nearly the same, but has a better organization. Idaho is forging ahead in organization, and has some very fine, active, class-conscious workers who are doing much work and making many sacrifices for the cause. Idaho is destined to play an important part in the coming struggle in the political arena. On Labor Day I spoke in Boise for the Trades Assembly celebration, and a fine showing was made by the unions and a splendid audience greeted me at the park. Boise has but recently become a union town; twenty-two unions were in line in the parade and only two of them were in existence a year ago. Owing to the fact that unionism is of but recent origin, there is considerable conservatism and a little fear of Socialism or political action; but Boise will fall into line with the rest of the state.

"My next place was Silver City on September 3 and 4. I spoke on the former day for the miners' unions, who held their Labor Day celebration on that day so that I could get to them from Boise. Everything went off in fine shape there, and the population turned out en masse to celebrate. The following night I spoke on Socialism, and notwithstanding the fact that everyone was tired out over the celebration of the day and a ball at night, which lasted until five o'clock in the morning, the hall was crowded and very enthusiastic over Socialism. I organized a local of twenty-four members here, all of whom are very bright men and women—there were three women among them—who will be a good acquisition to the party in Idaho. There are other camps near by, which will soon be organized by the Silver comrades, and thus do much toward bringing the miners into line for Socialism.

"At other points I had fairly good meetings, Nampa, Idaho Falls, and Rigby were points where I spoke last.

"At this writing my train is five hours late, and it is doubtful if I will reach Emmett, where I am billed to speak to-night. I have made arrangements, however, for a substitute in case I don't reach them, in the person of J. A. Davis, Socialist candidate for Congress. To get to Silver City I was obliged to ride by team fifty miles over the low plains and mountains through sage brush and jack-rabbits, and it was the most sandy and dusty ride that I ever experienced; but it is a part of the life of an agitator and has to be met with a cheerful smile.

Condition of Women Workers.

"Labor conditions are undoubtedly better by far in Montana and Idaho than anywhere else in the country—at least, better than in any state east of here. There is no poverty or destitution here and everyone is sure of something to eat, and yet they want Socialism.

"The population of these two states is made up of social rebels who have come from all parts of the country to the West in search for freedom from the oppression of capitalism in the East or in quest of fortune in the gold fields. They are therefore made up of freedom-loving, whole-souled people, who are not tied down by bigotry and ignorance nor made cowardly by fear of losing a six-dollar-a-week job. They are more free than the workers of the East, and they see that the condition under which the Eastern mill and factory hands and mine-workers labor is liable to overtake them, and they are ready to fight it. The West will furnish the great impetus to the Socialist movement—and this in the near future. The Western wealth producer will not allow himself to be subjected to the degrading and humiliating servitude of the Eastern wage-slave. He will strike a blow with the ballot that will not only prevent his enslavement, but will strike the shackles from the limbs of his Eastern brethren. The East may well thank the powers that be, that there is a West."

SOCIALISTS RULE THE DAY.

"Conciliation" Meeting in Boston Has Unexpected Outcome.

Workingmen Are So Imbued with Socialist Ideas that Old Parties Have No Chance at Labor Meeting.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—Events are moving so rapidly in Massachusetts that it is difficult to chronicle them fast enough. For nearly a week Socialism has occupied a prominent place in the daily press—not always in a very pleasant manner, either, but other happenings have served to make amends for this. The injection of the "free-love" and religious questions into the club convention was, of course, wholly unwarranted, but the action of the party convention next day in anonuncing the party's true position on these matters doubtless had a wholesome effect and helped to offset the bad one of the day before.

It is customary to hold rallies after nominationg conventions which serve as campaign openers, but this year the Massachusetts comrades had not made preparations for this. This was more than made up for, however, by the developments arising from a meeting arranged by the "Traveller" of this city as a protest against the coal barons and in favor of "mediation, arbitration and concession." It turned out that these three very desirable things (from the middle class standpoint) were altogether too tame for the crowd that packed old Faneuil Hall on the night of Sept. 8. The historic "cradle of liberty" cermmly rocked to good purpose that night.

Many of the delegates to the state convention stayed over for the meeting, as it was understood that Carey and MacCartney were going to accept invitations to speak. The meeting was advertised as a non-partizan one and all shades of political beliefs were to be represented. When the affair was over it was pretty generally acknowledged that Socialism was the only belief with any following of consequence in the hall.

From the moment when Carey and MacCartney appeared on the platform there was no doubt of the sentiment of the meeting. When Carey, as first speaker, declared: "I am a Socialist," the keynote was struck and socialism, much to the astonishment of those who arranged the meeting, had the floor for the evening. For two hours things went with a whirl. Mr. Bryan's name was cheered in a pitifully weak manner. Mr. Hamlin, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and Democratic Senator Fitzgerald found their rounded periods fall flat upon unsympathetic ears, while the Rev. Mr. Plumb received jeers and ridicule for his criticism of the miners and John Mitchell. And Harry Lloyd, once one of the most prominent trade unionists in America, received an ovation when he declared that he was done with the Democratic party forever, and he was going to support the Socialist Party hereafter. Lloyd has been contemplating this step for some time, but this was his first public declaration for Socialism.

When, at last, Mr. Wardner of the "Traveller" was about to introduce resolutions calling for arbitration, Comrade David Taylor arose in the gallery and offered a resolution demanding government ownership of the mines. The crowd was for Taylor's resolution, but graciously allowed Mr. Wardner's to be voted on first. Taylor's were then adopted amid great enthusiasm.

The next day the press unanimously conceded that the meeting was a Socialist one; and considering that the Socialists made no preconceived arrangements to "capture" it, we are justified in recording the meeting as a spontaneous tribute to the growth of Socialism in Boston and all the more, therefore, a splendid opening rally for the Socialist Party campaign.

The demonstration held last Sunday in Apollo Garden, Roxbury, was a genuine success in every particular—which is becoming the regular thing with all the affairs arranged by the Boston Central Committee, for every undertaking of the past year has been successful. The crowd last Sunday was estimated at nearly two thousand and it was as enthusiastic as it was large.

Geo. G. Cutting acted as chairman and the speakers were Wm. Mailly, James F. Carey, Frank. Sieverman, and Frederic O. MacCartney. A large number of trade unionists were present and coincided heartily with the remarks of the speakers. At the close of the meeting a committee was appointed to raise funds for the miners throughout the city. The collection amounted to $137.90, and after all expenses were paid, $109.72 was forwarded to the miners through National Secretary Greenbaum. The use of the Garden was generously contributed free by the proprietors, who are in sympathy with the workers, and who also announced their willingness to give the garedn free to the labor movement for meetings on any Sunday afternoons it was not otherwise engaged.

Father McGrady has four Massachusetts dates this week—in East Boston, Salem, North Abington, and Ware. His meeting in East Boston last Monday night was the largest ever held in the hall, which is the largest in the vicinity. Similar meetings are expected at the other places.

William Thurston Brown of Rochester is also in Massachusetts this week and part of next. His Springfield, Worcester, and Fitchburg meetings were successful, especially the latter one, where he received a great reception. He will be in New Hampshire on Sept. 19 and 20, in Lynn on Sunday, Sept. 21, and in Brockton on Monday.

Frank Sieverman of Rochester, one of the old guard, is at present in Massachusetts acting as organizer for the National Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. He will also speak for the Socialist Party in his spare time. He addressed meetings in Brockton and Haverhill this week and he will do good work. His talk last Sunday at the Roxbury meeting showed that.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

It is reported from all over the city and state of New York that the working people are more ready to read Socialist literature than ever before. The Food Trust and the Coal Trust have set them to thinking.

Comrades and friends of the Social Democratic Party should not spare any effort in taking advantage of this state of the public mind. Literature explaining the purposes of the party and calling attention to our ticket and emblem should be distributed everywhere—from house to house, in the shops and factories, at meetings in the streets or in public halls, wherever the workers can be reached.

The State Committee has the following literature on hand. It is the duty of the comrades to see that it is used at once.

IN ENGLISH.

"What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," a leaflet by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor. Having named the author, it is not necessary to add that this leaflet is terse, clear, interesting, and convincing. Prices, postpaid: Two thousand, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

An effective throwaway card, bearing the party name and emblem, the ticket, with portraits of Hanford, Brown, Abbott, and a cartoon of "the man who will never be a Socialist." Price, postpaid, $1 a thousand; smaller quantities in proportion.

"Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," by Algernon Lee; second edition. Especially good to use among trade unionists who have begun to understand the necessity for independent political action. Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies, 20 cents; fifty, 85 cents; one hundred, $1.50.

"The Tragedy of the Vote," a splendid leaflet by John Spargo. Postpaid, 60 cents a thousand.

"Beef and Coal Prices," a clear and timely little leaflet by Henry Slobodin. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"What Socialism Is," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"Unionism, Wise and Otherwise," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

The Campaign Book is out this week. It is a 32-page booklet, containing the ticket and platform, portraits of the candidates, carfoons, several timely articles, and a variety of valuable information. It will be supplied at the rate of $5.50 a thousand, postpaid.

Posters, bearing the party name, emblem, and ticket, are now ready, and will be sent free to all who will attend to displaying them.

IN JEWISH.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?"—a 32-page pamphlet by B. Feigenbaum. An excellent thing for propaganda among Jewish-speaking workingmen. Price, postpaid: Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.25.

IN GERMAN.

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas," a strong appeal to the minds of thinking workingmen. Single copy, 5 cents; ten or more, at 2½ cents each.

"Die Mission der Arbeiterden Klasse.," by Charles H. Vail. One of our best short pamphlets, by a well known Socialist writer and lecturer. Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.

"Municipale Forderungen der Social Demokratie." Although written especially for use in city campaigns, it is useful at all times, because it shows the attitude of the Social Democratic Party on what are called "practical" questions, in harmony with the party's basic principles. Single copy, 5 cents; ten copies, 25 cents; fifty, $1; one hundred, $1.50.

Experience shows that wherever there is an active organization, these cheap leaflets can readily be sold at meetings. It is well, also, for every comrade to carry a few in his pocket to give or lend to fellow workingmen with whom he may fall into conversation about Socialism. The leaflets and cards should be scattered broadcast.

Isolated readers of The Worker, who do not belong to the party organization, can help in the work. If you cannot use a thousand leaflets or cards, send for a quarter's worth and distribute them in your neighborhood.

For all campaign literature, send orders, with cash, to H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, Literature Agent of the State Committee.

—It is not generally known whether General Gobin issued his famous Shoot-to-kill order before or after he left the company's office at Lansford.—Tamaqua Recorder.

—Second edition of Algernon Lee's "Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," revised, corrected, and enlarged. Ten copies for a quarter. Circulate it.

—One hundred copies of Lee's "Labor Politics and Socialist Politics" will cost you $1.50. Every local should take at least that many.

—Uncle Sam is now to be Cuba's "Uncle" in a strictly business rather than sentimental sense.—The Richmond Times.

—The Socialist Party is officially known in the states of New York and Minnesota as the Social Democratic Party. Bear this in mind.

NEW JERSEY AWAKE.

Reports to State Committee Show Great Activity of the Party.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 15.—The State Committee of the Socialist Party met at 124 Market street yesterday, W. L. Osgood presiding.

Official notice was received from Local Hudson County of the death of Comrade Gilliar, State Treasurer.

A letter was received from Comrade Vail, placing himself at the disposal of the State Committee from Oct. 8 until Election Day. It was turned over to the Organization Committee having charge and authority to arrange dates and places for lectures.

Comrade Pohle of Trenton reported the reorganization of a healthy militant local there with thirty-eight charter members, since increased to forty-nine, and with excellent hopes for the future. Trenton's representative on the State Committee is Comrade Dumas, who will doubtless prove a valuable member.

W. H. Smith of Massachusetts tendered his services to the Committee for campaign purposes, and his proposition contained so many good features and was accompanied by such favorable conditions that the Committee, after some discussion, directed the Organization Committee to employ him up to Election Day.

Chas. Ufert's reply to the request of the Organization Committee to state terms on which he would put himself at the command of the Committee as Organizer was read and fully discussed, with the result that the motion accepting Comrade Smith's offer was amended to include the employment of Comrade Ufert for such time as Essex County might not require his services.

The Organization Committee made an exhaustive report of its work, which was most encouraging in that it showed great activity in all sections of the state and a healthy and steady spread of a sense of the need of political organization.

New branches were reported in Point Pleasant, Perth Amboy, Newton, and Vineland, with bright prospects for the early organization of Bridgeton, Millville, Phillipsburg, Manesquan, and Salem.

Every organized county was fully and ably reported and encouraging reports on the work now in progress were presented.

The Auditing Committee reported, with a recommendation that a separate account be kept of dues. The report and recommendation were accepted.

Comrade Vail's tour of the state will begin with a mass meeting in Jersey City on October 8. H. R. K.

IN ESSEX COUNTY.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Sept. 15.—The opening of the Labor Lyceum here on Saturday was a grand demonstration for Socialism. Despite the inclement weather, the place was crowded, and the crowd was full of enthusiasm. The labor organizations of Essex, Hudson, and Passaic counties were well represented.

Comrade Neben, president of the Association, in calling the meeting to order, made a strong plea for union of the working class in the shop and at the ballot-box against its oppressors, and for education and organization to that end. This Labor Lyceum, he said, would be the center of a growing activity till the victory is won.

Miss Dahme of New York was the next speaker, and her ringing address went to the hearts of her hearers.

After the Passaic Falls Mannerchor had sung the Marseillaise with great spirit, H. Gaylord Wilshire, who had just returned from the strike field, was introduced. The attention with which his remarks were followed showed the deep interest felt in a Socialist view of the great strike.

It is rumored that some local Republican politicians will try to make trouble for the Socialists and that they are already trying to use some members of a neighboring church to forward their plans. But the Labor Lyceum is an assured success and all their schemes will come to naught.

PLUTO READS HIS PAPER.

"A Miner Was Killed in a Shaft Last Night"—
(But a miner is not a man.)
"He was dug out this morning—a horrible sight"—
(I will weep if I can.)
"He left an old mother—a widow—they say"—
(And a pauper, I fear.)
"Who is getting quite old—" (Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-aye—
It is time for a tear.)

"A Carpenter Fell From a Scaffold This Morn,"
(A mere workingman.)
I wonder the reason some fellows are born?—
(John, bring me that fan!)
And I see that the carpenter "left a young wife,"
(And some children as well,)
But, then, it was only a carpenter's life,
So it's good that he fell.

"A Brakeman Got Hit by An Engine To-Day"
(And lost both his legs!)
I suppose he'll still flourish by begging his way
On a couple of pegs.
But it's really surprising what "scare heads" they give
At the top of the page!
For why should we care if they perish or live
In this frolicksome age?

"A Pauper Got Hungry and Blew Out His Brains," (Now, just listen to that!)
"He left seven children"—(besides his remains,
And a punctured straw hat!)
Tra la la, Tra la la, Whoop-la, tra, la, la, day,
(John, brush up my clothes.)
Another fool pauper is out of the way,
But there's more, I suppose.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

IN KINGS COUNTY.

To Party Members and Sympathizers in Kings County.

Comrades:—For conducting agitation meetings in Brooklyn it is necessary to have the asisstance of many to provide platforms, banners, and light, in distributing literature, answering questions, and securing the addresses of interested persons, and in otherwise supporting the speakers.

We are compelled to put forth an organized effort to restrain the insane greed of the capitalist class, comrades, and at last overthrow a business system by which our lives are consumed in their profits. Better, far better, can we afford to give freely to this of our time and money than, withholding it, to give under compulsion by hard labor at low wages many times as much to the service of the capitalist class.

For this reason we are not backward about urging you to serve for this work. Those who wish to do so are respectfully asked to inform the Organizer how often they will go out and at what times they will be subject to call for this work. Address Warren Atkinson, Organizer, 122 Fort Green Place.

Open-air meetings will be held as follows by the Social Democrats of Brooklyn:

Thursday, Sept. 18, in Concordia Hall, 271 and 273 Devoe street. Comrades Weil and Atkinson will speak.

At DeKalb avenue and Fulton street. Speakers: Droste and Lackenmacher.

At the noon hour Comrade Alex Fraser will speak in front of the Erie Basin Dry Dock.

Friday, Sept. 19, at Bedford and Myrtle avenue. Speakers: Heuer, Dooley, and Globus.

Saturday, Sept. 20, at Hamburg avenue and Harmon street. Speakers: Held, Weil, and Dooley.

At Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue. Speakers: Struempfler, Droste, and Atkinson.

Monday, Sept. 22, at Broadway and Ellery street. Speakers: Fraser and Heuer.

Tuesday, Sept. 23, at N. Second street and Graham avenue. Speakers: Droste, Held, and Struempfler.

At Bedfod avenue and Fulton street. Speakers: Goldstein, Lackenmacher, and Passage.

Saturday, Sept. 27, at Thirty-ninth street and Fort Hamilton avenue. Speakers: Miss Dahme, Cassidy, Cavanaugh, Ward, and Lackenmacher.

Chairmen of all these meetings previous to Sept. 26 are advised to announce several times during each meeting the Ratification Meeting to be held on that day at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, as advertised. To speakers it is also suggested that they give some discussion to the facts of the present coal strike and the causes leading up thereto and to the prevailing high price of coal.

By order of the Kings County Committee,

WARREN ATKINSON,
Organizer.

HOW ARE YOU GOING TO VOTE?

A vote for the Socialist Party is a vote in favor of using the power of government on the workers' side in strikes and lockouts. A vote against the Socialist Party is a vote in favor of leaving that power in the hands of the capitalists.

A vote for the Socialist Party is a vote against the use of police and militia and injunctions to break strikes. A vote against the Socialist Party is a vote to endorse such judges as Jackson and Kellar, Freedman and Bookstaver, to sanction the crimes of Homestead, Pullman, Lattimer, and the Bull Pen.

In New York State the Socialist Party is known as the SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY, its emblem is the Arm and Torch, and BENJAMIN HANFORD heads its ticket.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and, want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

Any such nomination papers that have not yet been sent to the Secretary of the Commonwealth must be mailed at once, addressed to Charles Heydrick, GeneralDelivery, Harrisburg, Pa.

Every candidate of the Socialist Party in Pensylvania is required to fill out and sign the following form of resignation (date blank) and place it in the hands of the party, to be used in case, after election, he should fail to act in accordance with Socialist principles.

No candidate of the Socialist Party is qualified unless this requirement is complied with.

The Strike Field

The campign goes vigorously on, especially in the strike field. Benjamin Hanford, Socialist (Social Democratic) candidate for Governor of New York, has, by courtesy of the New York State Committee, been secured for five days, September 21 to 25,, speaking in Wilkes Barre, Pittston, Carbondale, Hazleton and Lansford.

J. W. Slayton, our candidate for Governor of Pensylvania, will enter the coal field about Oct. 6, beginning in Carbon County.

Charles Heydrick will begin his personal canvass of Carbon County on Thursday, Oct. 2. Unless all indications fail, he will be the next judge in that county.

C. F. Quinn, our candidate for Congress, will start the campaign in the lower end of Luzerne County, speaking at Hazelton next Monday.

H. Gaylord Wilshire is expected to put in two weeks in the coal field toward the close of the campaign. John Collins has returned to Pennsylvania. He will remain in Erie till Sunday Sept 28 and will then fill the following dates en route to the strike district: Monday, Sept. 29, Coudersport; Tuesday, Cross Forks; Wednesday, Oct. 1, Galeton; Thursday, Austin (all in Potter County) Friday and Saturday, Williamsport; Sunday, Oct. 5, Montgomery. Howard H. Caldwell, now in Ohio, will cover the same route a week or ten days later.

Morrison I. Swift will take a week's rest, after which he will go to Lackawanna County.

C. P. Deyoe of Ramsay, N. J., begins a week's trip at his own expense next Monday at Carbondale.

L. D. Mayes, Social Democratic candidate for Attorney-General of New York will report to County Chairman Smoyer at Lehighton on Oct. 1 for a ten days' trip.

Comrades Geiger and White are now doing splendid work in Carbon County. They will report to County Chairman Roth of Luzerne about Oct. 4.

Urgent business in connection with the publication of the Polish paper "Robotnik" makes it necessary for Comrade Barkowsky to return to Chicago about Oct. 4, but Comrade Fischer reports again for duty to-morrow, and will probably stay till the close of the campaign.

Next Monday, Comrade Mikolainis, a Lithuanian speaker of Plymouth, will start a two weeks' tour of Luzerne County. All comrades are urged to render him all possible assistance.

In Other Fields.

The debate of Abbottstown, York County, in which Comrades Toole and Kelly advocated Socialism against two school teachers, before an audience of about four hundred, resulted in a popular verdict for Socialism. The county is being covered by Socialist meetings addressed by Comrade Toole and local Socialists.

The Socialists of Potter County have taken charge of the "Cross Forks News." Comrade Oliver W. Grimme, candidate for Assembly, has been placed in editorial charge and the capitalist papers find themselves already on the defensive. The Socialist ticket heads the editorial column.

The Philadelphia "Tageblatt," a Socialist paper printed in the German language will send a copy daily to each German comrade in Pensylvania gratis till election, if supplied with the names and addresses.

Excellent literature is being got out in large quantities by many locals, and the general movement throughout the state is most gratifying.

The strike district remains the critical point and the measure of progress there and the possibilities are beyond description. We positively require twenty speakers and tons of literature for this field. While doing our utmost, we are also looking with anxiety upon the Socialists of the whole country, and women if they will permit this opportunity of the ages to slip by.

At the request of the New York Socialists, Comrades Moore, Swift, and Quinn were sent there for meetings on Saturday and Sunday. Wm. M. Atkinson and Innes Forbes, as a special committee of Local Philadelphia, are to visit Brooklyn on Friday, Saturday and Sunday on the miners' agitation fund matter at the request of Brooklyn candidate. Comrade Atkinson is authorized to visit Trenton, Jersey City, Hoboken, Newark, Paterson, and other points in New Jersey on the same matter. It is hoped that the comrades in these cities will arrange meetings for him soon and will notify the Pensylvania State Committee.

The fund for agitation in the strike field now stands as follows: Previously acknowledged, $1023.35; Philadelphia Special Committee (two weeks), $207.40 Local New York (by Special Committee), $79; L. S. Bullard, Sunbury, Pa., $2; Loyal York, Pa., $10; Henry Peters, Alleghany, collected, $17.30; A. Schoenberg, New York 50 cents; Leibenthal Bros. & Co., New York, $10; John Collins, Chicago, collected $19.50; Local Aberdeen, S. D., $5; C. LITERATURE FOR STRIKERS.

Every reader of The Worker in the Pennsylvania coal fields who is willing to undertake a careful distribution of copies of Algernon Lee's pamphlet, "Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," is requested to send his address, with a statement of the number of copies he can use, to the office of The Worker. Comrade Galvin of Boston has paid for five thousand copies for free distribution, preferably in the strike field. Seven hundred copies were sent out last week on this offer.

AN ISSUE HERE, TOO.

New York Workers Know What Coal Strike Means.

Meetings in Past Week Show the Interest Felt and Show That Workingmen Realize that the Fight Must Be Carried to the Polls.

That the coal strike is considered an issue by the workingmen in New York as well as in Pennsylvania was abundantly proven by the great mass meeting in Madison Square Saturday night, by the party meeting in the Labor Lyceum on Sunday, and by the meeting at Apollo Hall Monday, called by the party.

Saturday's meeting was arranged by the Central Federated Union as a demonstration of sympathy with the miners, and a splendid demonstration it was, not in point of numbers alone, but in enthusiasm and in the radical spirit shown by the crowd. The organized workingmen of the city turned out in force, stayed to the end, and applauded to the echo the repeated declaration that the miners' battle was the battle of the working class, that they are fighting for much less than their rights, that they are entitled to demand, not lying wages, but the full product of their labor.

Morris Brown of the Cigar Makers' Union presided at the principal stand. In his brief opening speech, he laid down the Socialist position, and to the end the spirit of the meeting was that of a Socialist party demonstration.

John Mitchell was received with tumultuous applause. President Mitchell is as cautious as he is strong of purpose, and, as was to be expected, he confined himself to speaking of the strike as a strike, avoiding its political aspect. He appealed for help for the miners for their own sake and for the sake of all workers, since a defeat for one is an injury to all, and his words made a profound impression.

Samuel Gompers was the next speaker and he also spoke on purely trade-union lines.

Cheers for Hanford.

When Chairman Brown announced, "The next speaker is Benjamin Hanford," there rose a tremendous cheer for the Social Democratic candidate for Governor of New York. "The miners' cause is our cause; when they win, we win, we win a victory over the whole capitalist class." This was the keynote of his speech, and he went on, with all that combination of hard logic and fiery eloquence that makes Hanford a truly great proletarian orator, to show that the real and decisive victory must be won, not in the strike, but at the ballot-box.

The cheers and applause that interrupted and that followed Hanford's speech showed that the people are ready to hear the truth, that the day of prejudice against Socialism is rapidly passing away.

Comrades Furman, Pankin, Adams, Spargo, and others spoke in the same strain and were given a similar reception. Other speakers were James Archibald, John S. Crosby, and Henry George, Jr. Crosby's declaration that "This is war and in war we cannot use the methods of peace" and that "A union without politics is like a church without religion," were quite in harmony with the spirit of the occasion.

After Hanford's address, a resolution was read, pledging support to the miners and further declaring that only by public ownership of the means of production could industrial peace be established. It was carried with great enthusiasm.

Sunday's Party Meeting.

The meeting of members and active sympathizers of the Social Democratic Party of New York on Sunday night was far the best of the sort that has been held for full three years. The large hall and ante-rooms of the Labor Lyceum were packed, but the comrades sat in the sweltering heat till a late hour, listening to speeches by Comrades Quinn, Swift, and Moore of Pennsylvania and Hillquit, Spring, and Lee of New York, who discussed questions of the campaign in both states.

A cash collection of over $130 was taken and about $40 more were pledged, and one-fourth of the whole was voted to the Pennsylvania agitation fund.

The significance of the meeting, however, was not in the amount of money raised, but in the evidence given that the New York Social Democrats are wide awake and in earnest and that a great advance is to be registered here in November, as well as in other states.

At Apollo Hall.

On Monday evening Apollo Hall was filled with East Side workingmen and working women, who listened with sympathetic attention to addresses by Comrades Swift, Quinn, Moore, Barondess, and Winchevsky, and who showed their sympathy by raising $107 for the miners' strike fund.

FULL RETURNS FROM MAINE.

Vote Grows in Two Years from 652 to 1,966.

Election Results in Oregon and Maine Considered as a Political Barometer—Indicate an Unparalleled Increase of Socialist Vote Throughout the Country.

WOODFORDS, Me., Sept. 19.—Official returns from the Secretary of State for the state election held on Sept. 8 give the Socialist Party a total of 1,966 votes.

This is a clear gain of 1,314 votes over our record in the state election of September, 1900, and a gain of 1,088 over the vote we polled in the national election of November, 1900.

The largest percentage of gain was made at Bath, where we jumped from eight votes to 263.

We have won a place on the official ballot and feel greatly elated. The heartiest congratulations are due to the comrades whose self-sacrificing efforts made possible these gratifying results. Socialists here feel that the time is not far off when Maine will take a place beside her sister commonwealth of Massachusetts, by putting Socialist representatives in the legislative body. F. E. I.

A Political Barometer.

Oregon and Maine are always watched with interest by the old-party politicians, as their state and congressional elections are held in June and in September, and are regarded as indicating the results that may be expected in the other states in November. Their vote is deemed a safe political barometer. The results in these two states this year may therefore be considered as forecasting an unparalleled increase in the Socialist vote throughout the country.

In November, 1900, Oregon gave 1,466 votes for Debs and Harriman, our candidates for President and Vice-President. Maine, at the same time, gave 878 votes.

In the state election held in Oregon last June, we polled 3,532 straight votes, while most of our candidates received from 5,200 to 5,500. In Maine's state election this month, as shown above, we polled 1,966 Socialist votes.

What May We Expect?

Taking the two states together, our straight increase over the vote of November, 1900, is no less than 135 per cent. Considering that neither Oregon nor Maine is an industrial state; that the active comrades in each state are comparatively few in numbers and unable to carry on an adequate campaign, and that in Oregon the "liberal" Democrats got all the semi-socialistic votes, leaving us none but the thoroughly class-conscious Socialists, it is evident that the increase of our vote in the country at large may run far beyond the ratio shown in these two states.

The Worker never attempts to predict the results of a campaign; but in the election figures of Oregon and Maine, as well as in the campaign news from Colorado, from Pennsylvania, and, indeed, from every other state, it finds every reason for the highest hope and the most vigorous activity.

JONAS TO TOUR NEW YORK STATE.

Alexander Jonas begins next week a tour of the state of New York for the Social Democratic Party, speaking in German. His dates so far arranged are as follows: Oct. 1, Troy; Oct. 2, Johnstown; Oct. 3, Gloversville; Oct. 4 and 5, Utica; Oct. 7, Syracuse; Oct. 8, Rochester; Oct. 9, Batavia; Oct. 10, Auburn; Oct. 11 and 12, Buffalo.

Comrade Jonas will also visit Albany, Elmira, and Binghamton, the dates to be announced later.

Comrade Jonas is well known as a powerful and convincing speaker in the German language, and no effort should be spared to bring out the German workingmen to hear him.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS.

Mine Owners Take Revenge on Strikers.

Fifteen Hundred Families Evicted by "Operators" in West Virginia—"Free America Eclipses Ireland," Writes Mother Jones.

Mother Jones, "the friend of the miners," writes from Montgomery, W. Va., that the utmost suffering prevails there, in consequence of the harsh measures taken by the "Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of this country."

"We have fifteen hundred families of coal miners thrown out of their homes by the capitalist cannibals, and now camping on the highways," she writes. "We should not talk so much about evictions in Ireland. Free America eclipses Ireland."

The "homes" from which six or seven thousand people—men, women, and children—have thus been driven by the power of the law at the bidding of the capitalists, are, at the best, wretched shanties; but they afford some protection from the weather, and the bosses are determined to reduce the miners to utter misery, to punish them for daring to strike.

The shanties were built by workingmen on land legally owned by the "operators," but made valuable by the labor of the miners. There are few other houses available, for the companies mostly insist on their employees living in the "company houses" and paying back a large share of their wages in rent. Eviction from the company houses, therefore, means that the women and babies as well as men, are thrust out from all shelter and exposed to fearful hardships.

The capitalists say that Socialism "would destroy the home." This is how they protect the home—the workingman's home.

THE EIGHT HOUR LAW IN DANGER.

Question of Its Constitutionality Will Be Passed on in November by Judges Who Overthrew the Prevailing Rate of Wages Law.

A case on appeal has been filed with the clerk of the New York Court of Appeals which will bring before the court for the first time in a direct way the question of the constitutionality of the Eight-Hour Law. The case is that of the people against the Orange County Road Contsurction Company, appellant, and the court will probably hear arguments on the case in November.

Heretofore in the two cases decided by the highest court in which the eight-hour law was an issue, its constitutionality has not been directly involved. In the present case the Orange County Road Construction Company had a contract with the state and the Orange County Board of Supervisors in July, 1901, to build the road through the town of New Windsor in accordance with the state good roads law.

It is asserted that the company employed its laborers for ten hours, contrary to the law. The company was indicted for a misdemeanor in working the men more than eight hours, in violation of the Penal Code, which declares such action to be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000 for each offense.

The attorney for the company demurrred to the indictment, and the County Court of Orange County gave judgment sustaining the demurrer, agreeing with counsel that that section of the Penal Code was unconstitutional and void.

This first judgment in favor of the company was reversed on appeal by the Appelate Division, Second Department, and the present appeal was then taken to the highest court.

The Court of Appeals twice distinguished itself last year, by declaring unconstitutional and invalid the Prevailing Rate of Wages Law and the Dressed Stone Law. It remains to be seen whether the Eight-Hour Law is to share the same fate. The composition of the court is virtually the same now as when these two decisions were made.

PREMIUM NOTICE.

It should be noted that, in order to take advantage of the premium offer made by The Worker, the six or ten yearly subscriptions required for a premium must be sent at one time and accompanied by cash, as it is impossible for the office to undertake to keep a separate account for the premium offer.

MacCARTNEY IN YORKVILLE.

Frederick O. MacCartney, Socialist member of the Massachusetts Legislature, will speak in the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street, New City, on Sunday, Sept. 28, beginning at 8 p. m. All readers of The Worker are invited to come and bring their friends.

CLASS RULE IN NEW YORK.

Exemplified in Hudson River Valley Strike.

Militia and Injunction Used Against Strikers, but Company Allowed to Violate Laws.

The men on the lines of the Hudson Valley Railway Company, embracing a large territory near Troy, have been on a strike for the past two weeks.

Sometime ago this road was organized under a separate charter from the Amalgamated Association. The officials of the road by threats, bribes and other nefarious means succeeded in disrupting the organization. One branch of the road uses the tracks of the United Traction Co. of Troy. The members of Division 132, taught the necessity of organization by their bitter experience during the strike in Albany, succeeded in organizing them a second time and took them into their own division.

In August a motorman was discharged because his reversal of power to avert a collision, necessitated by defective brakes, blew out a fuse. The company refused to recognize the committee which asked for an investigation, thus violating its agreement with the union.

The strike folowed and to its demand for the reinstatement of the motorman the union added a demand for an increase of wages, asserting that the men worked twelve and thirteen hours for $2 per day.

The militia was ordered to the scene without any provocation, as there had been no violence. It should be noted that the company forfeited its franchise under the law by failing to operate its cars, and that like all the other trolley companies it is constantly violating the ten-hour law. The state government, which the workingmen have voted into the hands of the political agents of the capitalist class, is ever ready to send the militia to break strikes, but always, and everywhere fails to enforce the law against the capitalists who control it. If the Hudson Valley workmen learn the lesson of their strike they will carry it to the ballot-box and register a vote for their own class under the emblem of the Social Democratic Party.

Angered by the jeers and hisses, which greeted the scabs, deputies, and Pinkerton thugs who manned the cars a deputy fired into the crowd, wounding a boy. A deputy and a non-union men were arrested for the crime and the scab afterwards admitted that he was one of the gang hired by the Street Railway Employers' Association to go from place to place to break strikes.

A sweeping injunction has now been issued against the strikers which forbids picketing, and the workers have another object lesson to show them that the judes of the old parties hold their positions to serve Capital and crush Labor. A Socialist judge would turn his injunctions and decisions against the law-breaking officials of the company and a Socialist governor would send the militia to seize the road for forfeiture of its franchise and have it operated by union men at the highest wages.

The inexperience of the non-union men has been responsible for numerous wrecks which the capitalist papers have charged to the strikers. Local public opinion is almost universally against the company, the soldiers are ostracized, and the feeling that workingmen should not join the militia is growing, and indicates that the workers are becoming conscious of their class interests and awakening to the fact that the powers of government are in the hands of their capitalist masters and must be wrested from them.

LUZERNE'S TICKET AND DEMANDS.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 21.—The candidates of the Socialist Party in this county are as follows: For Congress, Charles F. Quinn; for County Treasurer, Nym Seward; for Register of Wills, I. N. Cathrall; for County Commissioners, Frank Mlenavic and Charles Jacquot; for Legislature—First District, Charles Lavin; Second, Peter McGovern; Third, John T. Jenkins; Fourth, Alex. Dwyer; Fifth, M. J. Dooley; Sixth, A. Chickanowsky.

Six of the candidates are miners; of the others, one is a carpenter, one a painter, one a tailor, and two are salesmen.

The party has formulated the following "immediate legislative demands," to which the candidates are pledged:

1. The passage of a law making it obligatory upon all coal companies to weigh coal taken from the mines and pay the miners according to the weight produced.

2. The fixing of the legal workday, for all kinds of wage-labor, so that the daily period of labor shall be no more than eight hours.

3. A new ballot act doing away with the possibility of corruption and trickery now so commonly practised at the polls.

4. The establishment of a system of initiative and referendum by which all laws affecting the interests of labor shall be submitted to the voters for their approval.

CARPENTERS' UNION NO. 476.

A special meeting of Local 476, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, will be held at Bohemian Hall on Tuesday evening, Oct. 7.

AN OPPORTUNITY NOT TO BE LOST.

Every Socialist Vote, Wherever Cast, Helps the Miners—Strike at the Coal Trust!

The situation in the coal strike field is one that demands the attention of every Socialist in the land. One hundred and fifty thousand workingmen are in the mood to accept our principles and have the leisure to listen to our speakers and the bitter experience of the last four months to clinch those speakers' arguments.

The strike field is red-hot for Socialism. The local papers admit it, and the old-party politicians are scared. It is common talk there that there is every probability of the Socialist Party electing from one to three Congressmen, from six to twenty Legislators, and numerous local officers, if the campaign is kept up.

In the face of such a danger, Republican Boss Quay and the Democratic machine will work hand-in-hand, with all the tremendous forces at their disposal, by misrepresentation, by corruption, by cajolery, by intimidation, to protect the mine-owners' interests at the ballot-box. They are already beginning this campaign against us.

To meet this formidable power, this violent sally of the beleaguered forces of reaction, we must keep up, from now till Election Day, a campaign for Socialism still more vigorous than that which has been waged so far.

This is no local matter. The opportunity presented in the coal field is a national opportunity. It must be realized as such by every Socialist throughout the land.

The comrades in New York City have responded splendidly to the call. In ten days they have added several hundred dollars to the generous contributions which they had already made to Pennsylvania's fund. And more will follow.

It is for locals and comrades all the way from Maine to California to join in the work. Do not SUBTRACT from your local campaign funds to aid Pennsylvania. ADD to your local funds a good contribution for Pennsylvania. Give liberally and give NOW.

Send all moneys to the Treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Committee, J. Edelman, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

Comrades of New York City, the size and spirit of Sunday's meeting prove that you are awake and are going to do things.

The coal strike is an issue, not in Pennsylvania only, but all over the land. Every comrade who has been at a street meeting in Greater New York knows that. The workingmen everywhere know that the miners' fight is the fight of the whole working class; and the soaring up of coal prices, with winter at hand, shows the Coal Trust as the enemy of the whole working class.

Moreover, the workingmen everywhere are coming to realize that unionism alone will not settle the question. Mr. Crosby, last Saturday, only voiced the growing sentiment of the working class when he said that "a union without politics is like a church without religion." And the only politics that harmonize with unionism is the politics of Socialism—in New York, of the Social Democratic Party.

Every vote for Socialism, WHEREVER CAST, is a vote against the Coal Kings. A VOTE FOR HANFORD IN NEW YORK WILL HIT THEM AS HARD AS A VOTE FOR SLAYTON IN PENNSYLVANIA. And in New York as well as in Pennsylvania, we can get the votes if we do the work.

WE HAVE THE POLITICIANS SCARED HERE AS WELL AS THERE—as witness the concerted suppression or misstatement of our party name by nearly every newspaper, of both old parties, in this city and state.

Comrades who missed their chance to contribute at Sunday's meeting have still an opportunity. Money is needed to send out speakers and literature TO COUNTERACT OLD-PARTY TRICKERY. Send it quickly to the Treasurer of the New York State Committee, Jas. N. Wood, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

Give MORE to the New York campaign fund than you did last year. ADD TO THAT whatever you can spare for Pennsylvania.

ONWARD IN OHIO.

The Thirteenth Congressional District Moving.

Charles R. Martin, a Tried and Tireless Worker in Labor's Cause, Is the Candidate of the Socialist Party.

Socialists of the Thirteenth Congressional District met in Fostoria, July 20, and unanimously nominated Chas. R. Martin for Congress. Delegates were present from Bucyrus, Fostoria, Tiffin, Bellevue, Bloomville, Sycamore, and one or two other places. The working people of the Thirteenth are now misrepresented in Congress by "Doc" Norton, of Tiffin, a man who has little use for Labor. That Charley Martin will make a splendid race is undoubted, and the old crowds are none too pleased that he has entered the field. Eight years ago he was secretary of the joint Labor Populist convention in Columbus, and was nominated for Secretary of State, polling nearly 50,000 votes. As manager of a congressional campaign in the Thirteenth district he brought out within a few of 3,000 votes for the Labor candidate, Amos Keller. He is well and favorably known among the workers, having been blacklisted by the class who support Norton because of his activity in building up labor organizations, and even his most bitter capitalistic enemies concede that Charley Martin is a man without a blemish on his character. But few men have suffered as he has for the cause of Labor. To a man the labor people of the Thirteenth ought to rally to his banner and send him to Congress to succeed the demagogical Norton. He is assured of a good vote among the farm laborers; now let the workers of the cities and towns do their duty.—Cleveland Citizen, July 26 (owned and published by the United Trades and Labor Council.)

Letter of Acceptance.

Mr. A. A. Floom, Secretary, Tiffin, O.

Comrade:—This is to formally accept the nomination as a candidate for congress in the Thirteenth District, urged upon me at the Fostoria convention of July 20.

As you and the other comrades know, I did not want to assume the position, circumstanced as I am, but some one must stand if we are to register our protest against the wrongs of the capitalist system.

I deem it a n honor to stand as the first candidate of the Socialist Party in this congressional district, and, no matter what may be the vote, it will be the beginning of what is sure to triumph, as the logic of events compels the acceptance of the Socialist solution of pressing problems.

I shall insist on a strict adherence to sections 7 and 8 of Article XIII of our party's state constitution, and no matter what reports may be sent out, I shall remain in the fight to the close of the polls on November 4, 1902.

In compliance with section 1, Article XVIII of constitution, I have placed my resignation, with blank date, in the hands of the local here.

Fraternally,
CHAS. R. MARTIN.
Tiffin, O., July 27, 1902.

Address to the Voters.

To the Voters of the Thirteenth Congressional District of Ohio, which includes the counties of Crawford, Erie, Marion, Sandusky, Seneca, and Wyandot:

Members of the Socialist Party of Ohio met in state convention at Columbus on May 30 and nominated a full state ticket, and on July 20 members of the party in the Thirteenth Congressional District met at Fostoria and nominated Charles R. Martin of Tiffin as a candidate for Congress and we appeal to all voters who have thought enough to understand the causes that have created the trusts and industrial despotism to vote for the candidates of the Socialist Party—not for the men, but for what they stand for.

Socialism is the hope of the future for the workers of the world. In every country of the civilized world it is developing great strength. Over seven million votes were cast for its principles at the last general elections in those countries having the elective franchise, and at the present moment the doctrines of Socialism are being advocated by more than thirty million men and women living in almost every country of the globe. The movement has millions of volumes in nearly every known language, and the weekly and monthly periodical press makes many millions more. Read, investigate, and if you are not an exploiter you will be with us.

The Socialist Party differs from any previous political organization in this country, as a reading of the platform and constitution will show. As an example, the sections of constitution mentioned in the letter of acceptance printed above, read as follows:

"Sec. 7. Locals or members thereof shall not co-operate with, nor fuse in any manner with any other political party.

"Sec. 8. No member of the party shall accept any nomination or position within the gift of any other political party.

"Sec. 1. Any member accepting a nomination at the hands of the party shall at once place in the hands of the secretary of his local his resignation dated blank of the office for which he is nominated, and authorizing the local to have it filed with the proper authorities should he be elected and fail to adhere to and practise the precepts and principles of the party."

The comrades in the district have contributed a fund to send several thousand copies of this issue of The Worker over the district for distribution. If you are willing to assist in building up this party of the producing classes; or want to know more about it, send your name and address to A. A. Floom, Tiffin, O. We would like to have the name and address of every friend in the district. Will you aid us?

If you are satisfied with existing conditions, vote for either of the capitalistic parties and their candidates. If not, vote for the Socialist Party and its candidates, and don't be fooled by any other ticket that may be placed on the ballot containing the word "Socialist" for the purpose of creating confusion. Our ticket will be headed simply, Socialist Party.

H. R. SOURBRINE,
SAM. L. SMITE
A. A. FLOOM,

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

IF THERE IS VIOLENCE WHOM SHALL WE BLAME?

The Republican and Democratic papers all over the country—including even those which editorially profess sympathy with the miners, while supporting the capitalist system under which the miners suffer—are printing thrilling stories every day of assault, arson, and murder alleged to be committed by the Pennsylvania strikers. Similar stories are printed against the striking trolley employees in this state.

Such reports are always published in time of strike. They come so quick and pat when the capitalists want them, they have been repeated so often and are growing so familiar that they cease to have much effect.

To judge of the proportion of truth to falsehood in these reports, we have only to turn back to the same papers of a month or two months ago and read the circumstantial stories they then printed about dissension in the miners' ranks and the general break that was always going to come "within a few days." Those lies have been exposed and their purpose foiled, so now a new set is called into service.

Doubtless there is some disorder and some violence in the strike field. So there is in New York City every hour of the day—and the capitalists commit ten times their proportional share of it—both of the legalized and the illegal sorts.

But if there is riot, what then? What ought men to expect? Ought we not rather to wonder that the hundred and fifty thousand miners have not used the overwhelming force of their numbers to make wild havoc with their masters' property and their masters' hired thugs?

No man has spoken truer of the French Reign of Terror than Dickens, when he thus places the responsibility on the old masters of France:

"Along the Paris streets the death-carts rumble, hollow and harsh. Six tumbrils carry the day's wine to La Guillotine. All the devouring and insatiate Monsters imagined since imagination could record itself are fused in the one realization, Guillotine. And yet there is not in France a blade, a leaf, a root, a sprig, a peppercorn, which will grow to maturity under conditions more certain than those that have produced this horror. Crush humanity out of shape once more, under similar horrors, and it will twist itself into the same tortured forms. Sow the same seed of rapacious license and oppression over again, and it will surely yield the same fruit according to its kind."

Though the strikers had done all that they are charged with, to our masters and their hireling editorial spokesmen we would say: You have no case before History's high court of equity, for you do not come with clean hands. You who have said, "The people be damned!" you who have asked, "What's the constitution, between friends?" you who have characterized your Declaration of Independence as "a seditious document," you who have called your Ten Commandments "an iridescent dream," you who have laughingly computed "plain duty" at so much per cent., you who, pursuing "manifest destiny" beyond the sea have given the order, "Burn and kill! Make Samar a howling wilderness! Kill all over ten!" you who have joked about "the rifle diet for strikers," you who, invoking the name of Omnipotent God, have given in Pennsylvania the command, "Shoot to kill! Shoot them in the head or in the heart!"—you capitalists and defenders of capitalism can lodge no valid accusation even against riotous strikers, for your own lawlessness, your own treachery, your own blood-guiltiness passes all reckoning. The blood of unarmed strikers shot, the blood of workmen slain for your profit in mine and factory and railroad "accidents," the tears of countless children in profitable mills, the bitter tears of widows evicted from the homes you did not build—these cry against you and deny you utterance.

The workers have no apology to make. Robbed of the freedom of childhood, robbed of the joy of womanhood, robbed of the pride of manhood, robbed of the due honor of old age, robbed by and for the capitalist class—they come no longer with humble pleading, but with protest, with accusation, and with resolute demand.

The working class, may it ever be right! But, right or wrong, the working class!" This saying of Benjamin Hanford's is the slogan of the Socialist movement, and it will ring ever higher and louder till, as the cry of the working class victory, it sounds the downfall of class rule, the ending of class strife.

If "bluff" be, as some say, peculiarly an American art, then is the Roosevelt Administration truly American. First we had, through Attorney-General Knox, the bluff of suits against the Northern Securities railway combine and against the Meat Trust. Then we had, through Senators Quay and Platt, the bluff of "settling" the coal strike. Now we have, from the President himself, a strenuously wordy bluff against the trusts in general. And on top of all, we have Secretary Hay's world-resounding bluff against the persecution of the Jews in Roumania. No one knew better than Hay that his diplomatic note would not take a straw's weight from the burden of the Roumanian Jews. Never mind. If it will catch a few thousand Jewish voters here, the nations may laugh, but the Administration will count that note a stroke of high policy.

THE SLAVEDRIVER'S MIND.

In a letter to the "Manufacturers' Record," Mr. John W. Fries of Winston-Salem, N. C., writes:

"I have been very much pleased with your editorial on the condition of department store girls and girls and children in Southern cotton mills. Personally, I feel a good deal of interest in the question of child labor, and have always tried to keep them out of the mill. I would like to see every child have the best possible opportunity for improvement; but, as is the case in all crusades, these latter-day philanthropists talk a good deal of nonsense. If they could devise some means to keep the children off the streets and out of mischief they would be philanthropists indeed. The weakest point of their argument is that under the best conditions which they demand the ordinary child would be under supervision in school not more than five hours per day for five days in a week, and during perhaps five months in a year. They make no provision for the balance of the time."

No one could better picture the working of the slavedriver's mind than it is photographed here by one of themselves. This manufacturer—one of those "Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country," as President Baer expresses it—really cannot conceive of a state of society in which there should be no slavedrivers and no slaves. No doubt he sincerely believes—we would not question the sincerity of his belief, but would rather insist upon it as showing the folly of expecting any help from his class—sincerely believes that there is an inherent and eternal and radical difference between people of his sort and those of the common herd, who must forever "be under supervision," for the eternal profit of the elect.

This slavedriver's conception of "the best conditions which the opponents of child labor demand" is very inadequate. Could he once realize what it is that the Socialists demand, he would hardly be able to protest; he would gasp in speechless horror and surprise.

A world in which children did not work in factories, but divided their time between the home, the schoolroom, and the playground; in which women did not work in factories, but could give all their time to the care of their homes and to the living of a free and full human life; in which the aged did not go to the poorhouse, but enjoyed a well-earned and honored rest and owed only the benefit of their kindly counsels to the young; in which the men in the days of their vigor did all the hard work of the world and received for themselves and their families the full fruit of their toil and in which science and inventive genius were devoted to shortening the hours of labor and making it more easy and pleasant; in which, finally, no able-bodied men—"Christian" or otherwise—were granted the right of living without work, such a world as that it is quite beyond the mental powers of an industrial slavedriver to imagine.

We Socialists do not only dream of such a system. We know it is near at hand. We are working for it and calling to our fellow wage-slaves to help us in the task. We know that it is only the greedy arrogance of the slavedrivers and the ignorance in which they have kept the workers that stand between us and that happy day. And we know that the clouds of ignorance are breaking and that, for the slavedrivers' arrogance—"pride goeth before a fall."

Secretary Shaw, of the Treasury Department, is reported as saying that, in his opinion, the stringency of money is "more or less a matter of talk." The troubles of the workingmen in the coal fields are very real and urgent. Yet, as we pointed out last week, the Administration can find plenty of time to consider mere "matters of talk" that are disturbing the peace of mind of Wall Street, but sees no opportunity to do anything to help the miners.

HOW TO UPHOLD THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Commenting on the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the famous Puerto Rican tariff cases, Mr. Dooley, the philosopher of Archey Road, said: "The case proves wan thing. Whether the constitution follows the flag or not, the Supreme Coort follows th' election rayturns."

There is profound political philosophy in that remark. It is a popular and carefully cherished superstition that the courts decide all cases strictly on their merits according to the facts presented and the letter of the law. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The history of every great court proves this. Again and again the Supreme Court of the United States has formally or virtually reversed its own decisions on great constitutional questions, not because the law had been changed nor because new facts had come to light, but because the pressure of political influence on one side or the other—the influence of the lobby or that of public opinion—had become too strong for the judges to withstand.

This is as it should be. Judges are but mortals, with limited wisdom and with human weaknesses. If they were beyond the reach of any influences but the cold letter of the law and the musty precedents set by dead and buried judges, the powers intrusted to them would be so dangerous a clog upon progress as to far outweigh any useful purposes they serve. Every great forward step in the modification of the common law and constitutional theory has come about through the yielding of the courts to the force of public opinion expressed at the ballot box.

We repeat, this is as it should be, but we add, it is necessary that the voters should recognize this fact, should realize their power.

The occasion for these remarks is the fact that the New York Court of Appeals will, shortly after Election Day, pass upon the constitutionality of the Eight Hour Law. There is serious danger that the judges who, less than two years ago, wiped the Prevailing Rate of Wages Law off the books will follow up that decision by overthrowing a statute still more valuable to the workers of the state. The majority of the judges have shown themselves prejudiced against labor legislation. If they act in accordance with the principles laid down in the Prevailing Rate decision they will decide the present case in the contractors' favor.

But every workingman in the state will have a chance on November 4 to present to the court an effective argument in favor of sustaining the law. "The court watches the election returns." If the workingmen tamely vote for the two old parties whose judges have repeatedly abrogated labor laws and issued injunctions against strikers, then the judges of the Court of Appeals will feel quite safe in abrogating one more labor law. But if the workingmen double or treble the vote of the Social Democratic Party, showing an increasing determination to enforce respect for their rights, the judges will throw precedent and consistency to the winds and sustain the law—lest a worse thing befall.

Civilization is evidently soon going to make another forward step in China. The press dispatches predict another Boxer outbreak. The "vanguard of civilization" always know how to manufacture an "outbreak" when they want a pretext for another invasion and new concessions of territory, commercial privileges, and cash "indemnity."

OUR GERMAN COMRADES' HOPES.

Reports from all the electoral districts in the German Empire received at the annual national convention of the Social Democratic Party in Munich last week give good ground for believing that the party will poll 3,000,000 votes in the general parliamentary election next May and will win a hundred seats in the Reichstag. At the last general election held in 1898 we polled 2,190,000 votes; and the present Socialist representatives in the Reichstag number fifty-eight.

The time is evidently not far off when the Socialist movement will register a complete victory in Germany. Yet there are some of us who believe that the day of the victory will come first in the United States, simply because the development of capitalism, more rapid in this country and less complicated by survivals of feudal institutions, is preparing the conditions for a more sudden and complete transformation of the social system here than can be expected in any country of the Old World.

It is constantly alleged by capitalist writers—and the statement is echoed by certain impotent disruptionists masked under a Socialist name in this country—that German Socialism is little if at all more radical than was the Western Populist movement of the nineties. Such statements are grotesquely false. The Socialist movement is essentially revolutionary, in Germany in the United States, and all over the world, and its progress in any country is but a part of the general advance to the international emancipation of the working class.

Yet there is this element of truth in the statement—that the political conditions of the United States, past and present, as well as its economic development, enable us to disregard many minor questions which necessarily absorb much of the attention of our European comrades and to concentrate our efforts more clearly upon our final aim.

For this reason, although our strength at the polls is as yet comparatively small, the comrades in Germany will watch for the news of the Socialist vote in this country in November with fully as much interest as we shall feel in the tidings from Germany next May.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Worker defers, till after Election Day, all detailed comment upon the semi-annual report of the National Committee, published in another column. The comrades are too busy and the space of the party papers is too much crowded with campaign matters, just now, to allow adequate discussion.

For the present, it will suffice to say that, while The Worker, as is well known, desires to give its hearty support to the National Committee, and while we recognize the importance of the matters presented in the report and agree, in general, with the position taken by the National Committee, we think that body has taken rather too gloomy a view of the situation and would counsel the comrades to give it serious attention, indeed, as soon as time will allow, but not to be carried away with excitement on the one side or the other.

MR. DOOLEY ON LABOR.

Hunger, Hinnissy, is about the same thing in a raypublic as in a despotism. There's not much choice iv unhappiness between a hungry slave an' a hungry freeman. Ye can't cook or wear freedom. Ye can't make freedom into a stew an' ye can't cut a pair iv pants out iv it. It won't bile, fry, bake or fricassee. Ye can't take two pounds iv fresh creamery freedom, a pound of north wind, a heapin' taycupful iv national aspirations an' a sprinklin' iv bars fr'm the naytional atr, mix well, cook over a hot fire, an' sarve sthraight fr'm the shtove; ye can't make a dish out iv that would nourish a tired freeman whin he comes home afther a hard day's wurruk lookin' f'r a job.

If 'tis fun to wurruk, why do some not wurruk? If 'tis shpoort to run an autymobil, why not run a locymotive? If dhriving a horse in a cart is a game, why not dhrive a delivery wagon an' carry things around? Shure, I s'pose the raison a rich man can't undhershtand why wages should go higher, is because th' rich can't see why anybody shud be paid f'r annything so amusin' as wurruk. Me idee iv settin' things sthraight is to have the rich who wurruk because they like it, do the wurruk f'r the poor man who wud rather rest.

THE LORDS, THE LADIES, THE GENTLEMEN, AND THOSE IN WAITING.

BY HORACE TRAUBEL.

The lords, the ladies, the gentlemen and those in waiting are coming home from their vacations. In summer we hear this catchphrase: "Everybody is out of town." Yes, everybody. Everybody but the millions. Everybody but those who do the work of the world. And now this everybody is back. This everybody saunters cityward again. This everybody with sun in its cheeks. And still the pale crowd works. The same crowd that was working when everybody left. Well. Everybody, did you have a good time? And did you now and then stop afield or astream to ask yourself how you happened to be where you were? It was quite odd that while you were off there indulging yourself your unsuspecting masters trod their rut without cessation. Suppose they had stopped just five minutes to think? I often wonder what would happen if the people stopped to think. They work too much. They think too little. You probably have yourself never done any real thinking. But if the crowd had not stayed you could not have gone. If the crowd had revolted you would have had to work or starve. And why should not the crowd revolt? This crowd that you despise. This crowd through whose slavery you derive your luxury and swill your appetites. You have always had a notion somehow that this crowd owed something to you. But the truth looked the other way. You owed everything to this crowd. This dirty and greasy crowd whose hands you would not shake. This ignorant and irrelegant crowd whose English you ridicule and mimic. Here they stayed and toiled. And there you went and loafed. And neither in going nor coming have you given it a thought. Except, perhaps, that you have heard of the coal strike and said unkind things about the impudence of the rebels. Now you think I am blaming you for something. But I am not. I am only trying to escape the general ignorance. For when the workingman knows a little more he will step from under and let you drop. And when you know a little more you will refuse to accept the privileges that you to-day regard as your divine right. And I am not afraid either of the workingman or of you. But I see the grievance of the worker. And that grievance is not of 10 per cent. up or down in wage or of one hour more or less in work, but of fundamental ownership, which to-day is violated in all the letters of its alphabet. And perhaps you think I grudge you your pleasures. Not at all. But I would not have you enjoy pleasures at the expense of those who need them as much as if not more than you do. And, neither would you have so indulged if you knew from what dire conditions the preferences resulted. I would not deny you fresh air and the open sea and games and enough of the right things to eat. But I would give all hands the same freedom and provender. I do not why those who make vacations possible should not themselves enjoy a portion of the leisure they provide. I do not think all the sun was meant for you. I do not think the best of the harvest was meant alone for you. I do not see why the child of the palace should have all the chances which the child of the tenement is denied. I do not see why there should be palaces or tenements. I do not see why there should be any rich child or any poor child. When we are civilized we will look in vain for rich and poor. I should think that when you arrive in town from your hibernations you would feel guilty every time you saw a pale face. What right have you to your noble complexion? Think of it. The very color in your cheeks is robbed. The blood in your veins represents a felony. I never hit a vein of good luck but I feel like one who cheaply enjoys a forced lien. I can never be sure until all are sure. And I shall never realize the ecstacy of the social inheritance until all have opportunity enough and to spare to celebrate a similar benefaction. I am getting tired of the winters and summers. They all accuse me. The summer with its stolen vacation. The winter with its stolen coat. I will never be comfortable until all are comfortable. Why have the people their horrors of seasons? Because they cannot rightly prepare to meet them.

Dear brother thieves, let us thresh this out. We have to refresh this pale cheeked world. There is enough world for the mass unless the class appropriate it all. We love our victims much. But we love ourselves more. And from pure self-love we will remove the inequities. They make us feel so uncomfortable. We are so much burdened by the sad faces that no matter where we go or hide crowd the porches of the heart.

The lords, the ladies, the gentlemen and those in waiting are coming home from their vacations.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

The Campaign Booklet of the Social Democratic Party of New York is now ready, and a good one it is. It is a 32-page booklet of pocket or envelope size, bound in red transparent paper. The front page displays the party emblem, the Arm and Torch, and on the second page is the full state ticket. Following this are portraits and biographical sketches of Hanford and Brown, the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, with brief and telling quotations from their speeches or writings, showing in few words what they stand for. The state platform of the S. D. P. follows, together with three excellent articles—"The Tragedy of the Vote," by John Spargo, and "Capitalist Public Ownership and Socialist Public Ownership" and "Beef and Coal Prices," both by Henry Slobodin. Charlotte Perkins Stetson's stirring lines, "Believe and Dare and Do," a table showing the Socialist vote in the United States and the world, and four cartoons from the pages of the "Comrade" complete the contents of the booklet, which is one of the best pieces of campaign and propaganda literature ever issued by the party—combining calm and logical explanation of the Socialist platform, clinched by illustration from current events, with an appeal to sentiment and enthusiasm and with explicit instructions for registering Socialist thought and feeling at the polls.

This pamphlet should be circulated in every street meeting; comrades belonging to trade unions should see that every fellow member receives a copy; comrades working in shops and factories should quietly pass it around among their fellow workers; local organizations should see that it is distributed from house to house in their territory. Fifty thousand copies have been printed, but the next four weeks should see five hundred thousand copies actually in the hands of the voters of the state. It will make Social Democratic votes, and it will ensure the casting of those votes for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party.

The Campaign Booklet will be sent, postpaid, at the rate of $5.50 a thousand. Orders should be sent, with cash, to the Literature Agent of the State Committee, H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City.

By the authorization of the New York State Committee, the Comrade Publishing Company has issued a special edition of John Spargo's "Child Slaves in 'Free' America," designed for use in this state. The text is the same as that of the regular edition, the difference being that the back cover-page displays the name, ticket, and emblem of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York and the portraits of Benjamin Hanford and William Thurston Brown, and that the second cover-page also bears matter specially referring to the campaign in this state. The pamphlet is supplied at very low rates for cash: Ten copies for 15 cents; twenty-five for 25 cents; fifty for 40 cents; one hundred for 75 cents; five hundred for $3; one thousand for $5. Address the Comrade Publishing Company, 11 Cooper Square, New York City.

SEMI-ANNUAL REPORT

Of the National Committee of the Socialist Party to the Membership.

To the Members of the Socialist Party.

Comrades:—Your National Committee, in submitting its semi-annual report, deems it wise to confine itself to a statement of the difficulties confronting the party in order that the membership, being possessed of the facts, may take appropriate action.

While Socialist sentiment has increased throughout the country with marked rapidity, and while many very gratifying changes have taken place in our movement, we must in all candor say that the party organization has not been equal to the opportunities presented thereby. Since the last national convention the movement has been divided into as many parties as there are states, each directed by a state committee proceeding in its own weak fashion and according to its own conception of principles and tactics, with the result that the Socialist Party to-day is no stronger than the strongest state organization affiliated. Instead of being a united party, we are fast becoming a mere "federation of Socialist parties," each of these parties having its territorial limits and jealously guarding against any encroachment upon its domain.

Such a condition has led to endless confusion and needless waste of energy and funds.

Each state committee is bearing the burden of nursing an infant Socialist party, and thus doing in each state what the party did on a national scale many years ago. Consequently, regardless of their good intentions, they are unable to properly meet their obligations to the national organization.

In matters of organization and propaganda the desire of most state committees to till their own fields makes us appear as an army of truck farmers instead of the "bonanza" farmers we might be were our operations conducted on a national scale. The most serious danger lies in questions of principles and tactics. The practical independence of the state organizations from the party as a whole makes it possible for young and inexperienced state committees to place the party in many painful and contradictory situations.

We recommend a careful study of the situation by all comrades and set forth below some of the facts which lead us to the opinions herein expressed.

FINANCIAL.

At this time Illinois, Oklahoma, and Wisconsin are in arrears for July and August; Nebraska and New York for June, July, and August; and Kansas and North Dakota since March. The national constitution makes it mandatory upon state committees to pay national dues monthly, but the National Committee has no power to enforce this provision, which the state committees for the most part have not lived up to.

In Kansas the dues system having been abolished, the State Committee collects no dues from the comrades and pays no dues to the national organization.

Thus, although its fixed expenses are increasing in proportion to the growth of the movement, the fluctuating revenues of the national organization cause serious embarrassment at all times.

METHODS OF STATE COMMITTEES.

The national constitution requires the state committees to make semi-annual reports, but the National Committee has no power to enforce this provision, which is not being observed. The absence of reports from state committees leaves the National Committee in the dark about conditions in the states.

In remitting national dues, the state committees, as a rule, do not state what locals have paid, nor on what month the dues apply, nor the number of members paid for by each local.

As a consequence the National Secretary is unable to determine whether the states are forwarding their full quota of national dues.

It has been impossible since the Unity Convention to determine the number of locals and membership of the party in the United States, in the absence of reports by the state committees. This condition or affairs is attended with many dangers. Should a state secretary for any reason be absent from his post, it is possible that neither the state or national organizations would know the names and locations of locals in the state. One instance of this kind occurred recently in Nebraska. The State Committee of Wisconsin has refused a list of its locals up to the present time. Were this example generally followed we could not reach the membership in any national emergency.

PROPAGANDA.

In order to meet the requirements of the movement for widespread propaganda, the National Committee started the Labor Lecture Bureau. That it is the most economic and far-reaching system of propaganda ever inaugurated in the Socialist movement is proven by requests for speakers from trade unions and party organizations in every state and territory, but the operations of this Lecture Bureau cannot be extended under existing conditions. National dues being diverted or withheld by state committees, the National Committee is helpless to furnish a national system of agitation. The locals being thrown on their own resources are obliged to pay extravagantly for individual propaganda. The amount of money spent in planless propaganda, in one month, by state committees and locals, would enable the National Committee to maintain a corps of clear and able speakers for one year, under the systematic and economic method of the Labor Bureau, with the added advantage of reaching into the trade union movement.

Agitation as at present conducted is sectional, being confined to the territory which can pay high prices for speakers.

A proper Socialist agitation is one that reaches into every section of the country, and regulates the cost with consideration for the scant funds of the proletarian organizations.

PARTY ORGANZATION.

The national constitution gives the state committees sole control of all matters pertaining to organization within the respective states, and as a result a division of energy has been created, depriving the national organization of the national co-operation necessary to send organizers into unorganized states.

The work of organization as conducted exclusively by state committees has in some instances been totally neglected, in others it languishes or is being conducted spasmodically, while in no instance have the results reached the degree of efficiency and stability that will in the end only be achieved by national co-operative effort.

The whole work of organization is segregated, sectional and at cross purposes.

Under the present system the state committees cannot insure permanency of employment, to comrades, most highly qualified as organizers, to induce them to undertake the work of the party.

TACTICS AND PRINCIPLES.

The separation of the party into state organizations, each being supreme in its own state, holds forth a prospect of political advantage, very tempting to certain men. As a result, there have been factional fights in five states. Under the operation of the national constitution, the National Committee cannot interfere to prevent or settle such troubles before they reach a serious stage, but must wait until there is a split in the state.

Such a struggle is now in progress in Nebraska. The fact that organizations in new states consist of elements inexperienced in the philosophy and tactics of the international Socialist movement, naturally leads to political expressions, platforms and party tactics which conflict with Socialist principles and practises and which are essentially middle class.

The factional fight in Utah was largely caused by such conditions, and the National Committee could not interfere until there was a split and rival state committees to deal with.

The independent tendencies of the state organizations find expression in different tactics by different states on questions of national policy, so that while the national committee may be attempting to rally the comrades of the country on a certain line of action, conflicting policies may be urged by one or more state committees. This confusion in organization and in tactics is well illustrated at this time by many of our comrades who seem to think that Socialist principles are justification for applauding a division on Socialist lines between the economic organizations of the working class.

While the Socialist Party in national convention has solemnly pledged itself to the unification of the trade unions, yet a contrary policy has been set up in the West by comrades acting in a dual capacity as organizers of the American Labor Union and the Socialist Party, thus misrepresenting the attitude of our party and compromising it in their attempts to build up a rival organization to the American Federation of Labor.

CONCLUSION.

The expense of holding the National Committee meeting in January last amounted to almost $700. As there are now twice as many organized states as were then represented, the next meeting would cost about $1,500.

The national organization has not a cent toward meeting this expense, and if same is deducted as before by the states represented from funds due the National Committee, it will cause a recurrence of existing embarrassment, which not alone deprives the National Committee of sufficient funds for current expenses, but subjects us to the mortification of pleading constant bankruptcy to creditors of former national committees and humiliating your Local Quorum, which must henceforth decline to endure this condition. Furthermore, we do not believe that a meeting of the National Committee would suffice to thoroughly and decisively solve the problems herein presented; it would not bring about the general degree of understanding required between the comrades upon party policy and tactics.

The indefinite continuance of the present laxity of organization and confusion in methods so threatens the stability of our party that no other means being sufficient to meet the emergency we suggest to the consideration of the comrades, such constitutional steps as may be necessary for holding a national convention of the Socialist Party.

Meanwhile the conditions at present existing can be partially alleviated if the comrades in the delinquent states will hold their respective state committees accountable in their dealings with the national organization.

SELECTION FROM A POEM BY ERNEST CROSBY.

Up to the State-House wend their way
Some scores of thieves elect;
For one great recompense they pray;
"May we grow rich from day to day,
Although the State be wrecked."

Up to the State-House climbs with stealth
Another pilgrim band—
The thieves who have acquired their wealth
And, careless of their country's health,
Now bleed their native land.

And soon the yearly sale is made
Of privilege and law;
The poor thieves by the rich are paid
Across the counter, and a trade
More brisk you never saw.

* * * * *

At last the worthless set adjourn;
We sigh with deep relief.
Then from the statute-book we learn
The record of each theft in turn,
The bills of every thief.

Now at a shameful scene pray look;
For we who cursed and swore,
Before this base-born statute book,
Whose poisoned source we ne'er mistook,
Both worship and adore.

"For law is law," we loud assert,
And think ourselves astute;
Yet quite forgetful, to our hurt,
That fraud is fraud and dirt is dirt
And like must be their fruit.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

PARTY NOTES.

In Missouri the party will appear on the official ballot as the Working Class Party, the courts having denied us the use of the name of Socialist Party in that state. The old party politicians are eager to seize the opportunity to confuse voters which is offered them by the moribund S. L. P.

Jos. Spero of 346 Saratoga street, East Boston, is Literature Agent for that city and takes subscriptions for all Socialist papers and magazines. He is a steady worker.

Charles Ufert of New Jersey is giving three weeks to party work in Connecticut. Last Friday he addressed a large open-air meeting at Danbury, securing one new party member and several subscribers for party papers and selling fifty pamphlets. On Saturday a successful meeting was held in Milford, a hundred copies of The Worker and many leaflets being distributed, and a local will soon be formed here.—State Organizer White addressed meetings last week at Sourrington, Meriden, and Broad Brook, with good crowds at all places and especially at Broad Brook, where the local band, composed of Socialists, turned out to help in the work. Several subscriptions were taken.—L. D. Mayes of New York spoke on New Haven Green on Saturday. Saturday evening meetings will be held in the various wards till Election Day.—William Thurston Brown will speak in New Haven on Sept. 30; in Rockville, Oct. 2; and in Waterbury, Oct. 3.—The American Branch, New Haven, meets Saturday evening, Sept. 27, at 746 Chapel street.

Frederick Strickland will organize and teach a series of lessons in the Mills school in and about Cincinnati.—Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard of Denver and John Spargo of New York, both of whom conducted very successful classes in these lessons last winter, are outdoing each other in the prospects for the work in these cities for this year's work. Mrs. Maynard will have two classes under her charge this year and expects more than one hundred members, while New York expects "a dozen classes" and is talking of engaging some one who can give his whole attention to the teaching.—Seattle sent more comrades to the San Francisco Training School term than any other outside city. The present State Organizer, Latimer, the Chairman of the State Committee, Scott, and the Secretary of Local Seattle, Peters, were among the San Francisco students and all are enthusiastic over the school work. And Seattle is beginning to get in its work again.—Wm. Thurston Brown, John Spargo, Carl D. Thompson, and Frederick Strickland are planning to visit the next term of the Training School and spend a few days, contributing to the value of the school work. It is hoped that during this term a large number of the most effective workers in the movement will be able to visit the school and help the students in learning "how to do it."

Comrades and sympathizers in the Fourth Ward of New Haven, Conn., are requested to attend a meeting of the Fourth Ward Club at 84½ DeWitt street, Wednesday evening, Oct. 1.

On Monday evening, October 6, a Socialist public meeting will be held in Galaida's Hall, Keasby, N. J., to be addressed by E. T. Neben in English, and by S. Lissauer in Hungarian. All workingmen in the vicinity are invited to attend.

Our faithful comrade J. J. Quanz, of Richmond, Va., has written a pamphlet entitled, "Monarchy or Democracy, Which?" dedicated to the working people of Virginia and dealing among other things, with the high-handed acts of the late constitutional convention of that state. We would advise all comrades in the country who take an active part in the propaganda of Socialism to send for a copy; or better we advise every Literature Agent to buy a quantity and sell them at meetings.

The price for single copies is 5 cents, in lots of fifty or more, 4 cents a copy. Address, J. J. Quanz, Richmond, Va.

Huron City, Mich., held its Socialist convention at Bad Axe on Saturday. Comrades Walter and Lamb, candidates for Governor and for Congress in the Seventh District speak this week at Pigeon, Elkton, Cassville, Bay Port, and Bad Axe.

Comrade Dugan of Cleveland has a good article on "The Basis of Trade Unionism" in a recent number of the "Carriage and Wagon Workers' Journal," showing the harmony between unionism and Socialist politics.

Organization is going on rapidly in Colorado. Eleven speakers are in the field and all are meeting with great success.

Comrade Jesse Cox of Chicago died on September 10. Comrade Cox was a prominent member of the old Social Democratic Party, serving as chairman of its national executive board.

New York State.

A Social Democratic leaflet written by Comrade Jonas can be had of H. Reich, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, at the rate of $1.50 a thousand.

Comrade Max B. Schroeber of Local Newburgh writes that at the last meeting of the local four new members were admitted. The Orange County convention takes place in Highland Falls this week. Money for the campaign fund is being collected on subscription lists. The local branch of the W. S. & D. B. F. decided to invite Comrade Jonas to speak on September 28.

Comrade Vitalius writes from Troy: "We occupy large rooms at 315 River street. Comrades Vail, Spring and Bigelow spoke there and we will hold Comrade Jonas' meeting in the same place. We have a large transparency, with our emblem and the names of our candidates displayed in the principal thoroughfare of the city. It is illuminated by two electric lights and seen by thousands. It is hard on us to keep it up, paying the rent, but we must and will keep it up."

At the last meeting of Local Johnstown, S. D. P., a resolution was passed urging upon all Socialists in this city the duty of joining the party organization, as there is great need of systematic work for the cause. "In union is strength." The new active comrades wish the advice and need the aid of all sympathizers. The Local meets every Tuesday at 11 W. Main street.

The Orange County Social Democrats held their convention at Highland Falls last Saturday. The convention was called to order by J. G. Lindboe and Robert Paine of Balnesville was chosen as chairman with F. M. Dennis as secretary. Beaumont Sykes of Cornwall was nominated for Congress in the Twentieth District. The other candidates named are: For State Senator, Robert Paine; Assembly, First District, Frederick Dannmeyer of West Point; Second, Max B. Schreiber of Newburgh; School Commissioner, First District, Frederic M. Dennis; Second, Fred. Gruber. John Steige, Prosper Weiss, and Fritz Greisinger were elected as a committee to fill possible vacancies.

Comrade Gottschalk of Cosackie is a steady worker and his efforts are beginning to bear fruit there.

New locals are formed at Batavia and Kingston, N. Y. More are coming.

Comrade Doll of Castkill writes: "The past week has been a busy one in this vicinity and has produced better results from the energy expended, I venture to say, than in any other part of the state." He expresses the utmost satisfaction with Organizer Spring's work at Hudson, Coxsackie, Kingston, and Saugerties, and says, that, if it is properly followed up, a strong movement can be established in that region. The convention at Catskill last Saturday nominated Andrew C. Fancher for Congress in the Twenty-first District. James Jarman of Kingston was nominated for Senator, and the Greene County ticket chosen consists of Geo. H. Warner for Assembly, Simon Hoch for School Commissioner in the First District, and Louis Gottschalk in the Second, and Jacob R. Cole for Coroner.

Schenectady is known as one of the strongest union cities in the state and a number of its most prominent unionists are active in the Social Democratic movement. Henry V. Jackson, President of the Trades Assembly, is our candidate for Assembly; John A. MacKinnon, Jr., of the Screw Makers' Union, for School Coumissioner; L. A. Welch of the Plumbers, for Sheriff; Enos Madigan, Organizer of the Machinists, for Superintendent of the Poor; A. D. Rector, of the Electrical Workers, for Assessor. J. Crane Schermerhorn is our candidate for Police Commissioner, E. H. Grupe for Alderman in the Fourth Ward, J. H. McGuire in the Fifth, Chas. H. Shaw in the Seventh, and J. W. Furnside in the Eighth.

New York City.

H. Gaylord Wilshire has accepted the Social Democratic nomination for Congress in the Tenth District of New York. This means that things will be lively in that part of the city.

A lively Social Democratic campaign is on in the 16th A. D. Four outdoor meetings were held last week, several applications for membership received, many pamphlets sold, and a large quantity of literature distributed. Contributions to the amount of $7 a week have been secured for the district campaign, in addition to dues. "Die Fackel," a Jewish Socialist society, has promised to supply Jewish speakers for three meetings. On Monday, Sept. 29, Comrades Cohn, Reich, and Goldstein will speak at Attorney and Stanton streets; on Tuesday, Goldstein and E. T. Neben at Avenue C and Fifth street; on Friday, Lee, Goldstein, Reich, Cohn, and Kardol at Avenue C and Third street and at Avenue B and Fifth street.

All Assembly District Organizers in New York City have been appointed on the committee for the Ratification Meeting in Cooper Union on Saturday, Sept. 27, and are expected to report at the office of the Organizer of Local New York in the Labor Lyceum at 7 o'clock sharp.

Organizer Wood wishes to know the present address of John Assel and Edward Loewenthal. It is important that this information be given him this week.

FOR PRESS AND SCHOOL FUNDS.

The Social Democratic Women's Society of the Bronx will hold a grand entertainment and ball on Saturday evening, Sept. 27, at Ebling's Casino, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and St. Anne's avenue, half the proceeds of which are to go to the fund for establishing the Socialist daily newspaper, and the other half to the support of the Free German School of North New York. A good program will be presented by members of the Actors' National Protective Union. Tickets cost 15 cents. Comrades and readers of The Worker, especially those living in the Bronx, are requested to aid in making the affair successful.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

STATE COMMITTEE.

The meeting of the New York State Committee on Sept. 16 was well attended, Slobodin acting as chairman. A large number of letters were read from locals in all parts of the state and their general tenor was of an increasing activity and growing confidence in a record-breaking vote for this fall. Watervliet has put up a transparency bearing the party name, emblem and part of ticket, the whole brilliantly illuminated by electric lights. It can be seen a long distance and attracts great attention. This is a good example for others to follow. It is very important to familiarize the voters with our party name and emblem and the names of our candidates, to avoid mistakes at the polls.

Financial reports were read from Watertown and Cold Spring, Rome and Oneida applied for stamps and supplies.

In the matter of literature, 300,000 leaflets of different kinds were ordered printed.

It was decided to call a general party meeting for Sept. 21 in order to arouse the comrades to the necessity of a strong campaign if we are to accomplish what lies in our power now to do. To assist the striking miners the Committee determined to send Hanford to Pennsylvania to remain from Sept. 21-25, inclusive.

Committees were elected as follows: To visit all labor organizations—Ortland, Bowerman, Phillips, Lissauer, Butscher; and on the East Side, Edlin, Pankin, Josephson, Harry Cohn, Weinstein. Butscher is to act as chairman and secretary of the latter committee.

The special New York state edition of "Child Slaves in 'Free' America," by John Spargo, which was authorized by the State Committee of the Social Democratic Party has been issued. It contains, besides this exposé of the extent to which the lives of small children are turned into profit and dividends by the capitalist class, the party emblem, portraits of candidates and state ticket. It may be obtained from the Comrade Publishing Company, 11 Cooper Square, New York, at 25 copies for 25 cents, 100 for 75 cents; and 1,000 for $5.

ORGANIZER SPRING'S WORK.

State Organizer Spring returned to the city last Saturday from a tour of the state occupying about seven weeks. He comes back well satisfied with the condition of the party in the state and confident of a large increase in the Social Democratic vote this fall.

On Saturday, Sept. 13, Comrade Spring held an excellent meeting in Johnstown, speaking from the bandstand. The local here is strong and active. Good meetings will be held for Brown, Jonas, and Hanford.

On Monday, at Amsterdam, the Organizer found a number of men in sympathy with the movement, who undertook to distribute party literature through the campaign.

At Hudson, the next day, a good open-air meeting was held and a number of active workers were enlisted. A local will soon be organized.

Cosackie was the next stop and here a splendid outdoor meeting was held, a number of subscriptions for The Worker taken, and a large quantity of literature distributed. A party local will be formed here, also, in the near future.

At Kingston, Comrade Spring had an interested audience of over three hundred people and organized a local with nine charter members. The comrades are enthusiastic and active.

On Friday Comrade Spring addressed the first Socialist meeting ever held in Saugerties, with over two hundred hearers. Several men gave their names and promised to distribute literature, and a good start was made.

Comrade Spring will remain in the city and vicinity until the end of the month. On Oct. 1 he will go to Herkimer, where a local will be organized. After this a week will be spent in Watertown, one in Syracuse, one in Rochester, and one in Buffalo. Each of these four locals has pledged $20 toward the organizing fund, and will also raise money for the general campaign fund.

Four locals have been organized through Comrade Spring's efforts—at Painted Post, Ithaca, Batavia, and Kingston, besides an English branch at Rochester and a Polish branch at Buffalo, and about ninety subscriptions were taken for The Worker.

FROM LOCAL BUFFALO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The Social Democrats of this city nominated a full ticket on Monday night, as follows:

For Congress, Thirty-fifth District—Theodore F. Schorr; Thirty-sixth—Thomas Fitton.

For State Senate, Forty-seventh District—Edward C. Fliege; Forty-eighth—E. Manle; Forty-ninth — Robert Steiner.

For Assembly: W. E. Winkelman, B. Schaeffer, B. Abelson, M. Abelson, L. Slotkin, Jacob Klemm, J. Klein, Henry Moses.

For Sheriff—William F. Miller.

For District Attorney—August Winkelman.

For School Commissioners: Dr. Schroeter, William Billica, and Henry C. Bengert.

The Jewish Branch here is good and lively, and the American, German, and Polish comrades are waking up, too, and getting down to harmonious work.

A large store, 50x130 feet, on the ground floor, at 431 William street, has been rented, as headquarters of the Central Committee and the two branches mentioned. The Central Committee meets here every Tuesday evening, the American Branch every Monday evening, and the Jewish Branch every Sunday at 3 p. m. It is intended that public speeches and lectures will be given on at least two nights each week. We shall try to keep this going all winter.

On Wednesday, Sept. 10, we had Ben Hanford here and on Friday we tendered him a banquet in International Hall. There was a splendid gathering of the American, Jewish, German, and Polish Socialists, with enthusiastic addresses by Comrades Hanford, Billica, Winkelman, Slotkin, Schaeffer, Fliege, Moses, and Organizer J. Harry Spears. Hanford's meeting on Wednesday was a great success, although the papers gave poor reports. Comrade Kirsch of Niagara Falls and Organizer Spears also spoke. At the close of the meeting a number of printers came forward to greet our gubernatorial candidate.

On Tuesday of this week we had a public meeting addressed by Charles H. Vail, who was introduced by Organizer Spears. There was a fair-sized audience and the speakers had close attention, growing to enthusiasm at the close of Comrade Vail's address. Several questions were asked and answered. Two new members were gained for the party.

FOR WHOM WILL YOU VOTE?

The Republican party will not nominate a workingman for Governor of New York. Neither will the Democratic party. They will both nominate corporation lawyers or "eminent business men."

Benjamin Hanford, the candidate of the Social Democratic Party, is a printer, has worked at his trade from boyhood, joined the union more than twenty-five years ago, has gone through strikes and lockouts, knows the interests of his class and has always been true to them.

Workingmen of New York, for whom will you vote?

—If you have a friend who is wavering between his old affiliation and the Socialist Party, spend a quarter and have The Worker sent to him for six months.

—He is a wise workingman who can tell which of the two quarreling factions of the privileged class cares the most for the producing or working class. Quay won't offend President Baer, and Baer is going to vote for Pattison. Isn't it a case, so far as workingmen are concerned, of heads capitalists win, tails labor loses?—The New Era.

R·I·PANS

I commenced taking Ripans Tabules last summer, but only the when I felt bad. I got no good results from it, so I took no more, thinking the Tabules could do me no good. I had been troubled with dyspepsia, heartburn and waterbrash for years. Feeling very bad and having the Tabules on hand, I thought I would give them a fair trial. I commenced with one after each meal, and soon began to feel as good as I ever did in my life. I claim the Tabules have cured me.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength at present composed of 120 branches with 28,000 males and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

"NOT YET IS FREEDOM."

Not yet is freedom: only now a name
In which a wanton age would hide its shame—
An age without a soul, without a faith;
An age that bears but what the liar saith,
That makes a glory of its perfidy
Toward every trust and truth of liberty;
An age abandoned to the ruthless strong,
Who know in creed or practice but one wrong—
Resistance to the hunger of their might,
Or question of its predatory right;
An age whose greatness is the drunk of wine,
And labor is the press and grape and vine.
—From George D. Herron's poem, "Not Yet is Freedom."

IN NEW JERSEY.

Hudson and Essex Counties at Work—News from Watsessing, Harrison, and Arlington.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 22.—Frederick O. MacCartney of Massachusetts will address a mass meeting of workingmen at Welker's Hall, corner of Springfield and Fairmount avenue, in this city, on Monday evening, Sept. 29. Readers of The Worker should spread this news. D. R.

ARLINGTON, N. J., Sept. 22.—A Socialist mass meeting was held in Stover's Hall, Harrison, last Saturday, which was by far the best in point of attendance and enthusiasm. The hall was filled before the meeting began and before Chairman Headley had finished his opening address it was packed. State Secretary Kearns followed with a brief speech urging class-conscious political action and generous support for the striking miners. After a collection, which netted $6 for the miners, Comrade Neben took the floor and with a vivid and fiery description of the life of the miners, the brick makers, and the child workers in the mills, carried the audience off their feet. A significant feature of the meeting was the large proportion of young men, all attentive listeners. The Worker was supplied to all comers by the liberality of one of the comrades. After the meeting nine members were enrolled in an English branch of the Socialist Party. Comrade Headley will act as organizer till the branch is put on a firm footing.

The committee elected by the branch of western Hudson County to arrange a meeting for Representative MacCartney of Massachusetts on Sept. 30 have secured Jacobs' Hall on Harrison avenue, which will seat a thousand people, and are busy advertising the meeting. Hudson County is wide awake.

Arlington Branch will hold its fourth annual reunion at the home of our comrade, Mrs. Scrimshaw, 36 Rutherford Place, on Saturday evening, Sept. 27. John Spargo and Peter E. Burrowes will speak. There will also be vocal and instrumental music, and a feature of the evening will be the opening of the "talent" envelopes given out by Mrs. Kearns last spring. It is earnestly hoped that the talents—bright new pennies—will have greatly increased, to the advantage of the building fund for the West Hudson County Socialist clubhouse.

H. R. K.

WATSESSING, N. J., Sept. 22.—On Saturday evening, Sept. 27, a smoker will be held at the new Labor Lyceum, 90 Myrtle street. The Miners' Band from the strike field, in full force, will supply music, and good Socialist speakers will give addresses. There will be an excellent program of music, fancy dancing, and other entertainment, and a good time is assured. Tickets cost 25 cents.

The Labor Lyceum is an assured success and the movement in this region is advancing rapidly.

PIANO WORKERS' STRIKE

Most New York Firms Concede Demands—Fifteen Hundred Men Compelled to Strike.

The Piano Workers' International Union of New York and Vicinity has inaugurated a movement for the introduction of the nine-hour day, an increase of wages, and the abolition of the contract system in all organized shops. The Joint Executive Board notified the manufacturers of the demands on Wednesday, Sept. 17, and the shop committees visited them on the following day, giving them until Saturday to decide.

The employers held a stormy meeting on Friday afternoon, lasting four hours, and resulting, by a vote of twenty-four to one, in a decision to grant the nine-hour day, leaving the wage question to be settled in the various shops. As a result, on Friday evening, the following shops had granted a 10 per cent. increase and averted trouble: Lindemann & Sons, Davenport & Tracy, Cameron, Steck, Haines Bros., Kohler & Campbell, Behr Bros., Verdi Piano Co., Mehlin, Strich & Zeidler, Byrnes, Horace Walters, and Krakauer Bros. On Saturday the employees of Winter & Co., Bailey, Hazleton, Schmer & Co., A. S. Howard, Bothner, Schmid & Co., Behning Piano Co., Steinway & Sons, Kroeger Piano Co., and Hardman, Peck & Co. reported victory. By Monday morning two more firms had given in—Ludwig & Co. and Frank Connor.

At a meeting held Monday evening at the Union's headquarters in Faulhaber's Hall, 1551 Second avenue, it was stated that about fifteen hundred piano makers had gone on strike during the day in the following shops: Wessel, Nickel & Gross, Abbott, in Fort Lee; Jacob, Mathusnek, Weber, Pease, Staib and Wasley's. The workmen of Kranich & Bach and Bogart gave their firms until Tuesday noon to concede the demands. The meeting strongly denounced the contract system, characterizing the contractors as bloodsuckers.

During the course of a hot debate it was charged that certain members and even officers of the Piano Workers' Union were themselves contractors. The charges will be investigated by the Executive Board and it is to be hoped that they will be found baseless.

REMEMBER THIS.

You have an engagement for Saturday evening, Sept. 27. Where? At Cooper Union. You and your friends want to hear Ben Hanford, William Thurston Brown, Mother Jones, and the other Social Democratic speakers who will be there.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

It is reported from all over the city and state of New York that the working people are more ready to read Socialist literature than ever before. The Food Trust and the Coal Trust have set them to thinking.

Comrades and friends of the Social Democratic Party should not spare any effort in taking advantage of this state of the public mind. Literature explaining the purposes of the party and calling attention to our ticket and emblem should be distributed everywhere—from house to house, in the shops and factories, at meetings in the streets or in public halls, wherever the workers can be reached.

The State Committee has the following literature on hand. It is the duty of the comrades to see that it is used at once.

IN ENGLISH.

"What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," a leaflet by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor. Having named the author, it is not necessary to add that this leaflet is terse, clear, interesting, and convincing. Prices, postpaid: Two thousand, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

An effective throwaway card, bearing the party name and emblem, the ticket, with portraits of Hanford, Brown, Abbott, and a cartoon of "the man who will never be a Socialist." Price, postpaid, $1 a thousand; smaller quantities in proportion.

"Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," by Algernon Lee; second edition. Especially good to use among trade unionists who have begun to understand the necessity for independent political action. Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies, 20 cents; fifty, 85 cents; one hundred, $1.50.

"The Tragedy of the Vote," a splendid leaflet by John Spargo. Postpaid, 60 cents a thousand.

"Beef and Coal Prices," a clear and timely little leaflet by Henry Slobodin. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"What Socialism Is," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"Unionism, Wise and Otherwise," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

The Campaign Book is out this week. It is a 32-page booklet, containing the ticket and platform, portraits of the candidates, cartoons, several timely articles, and a variety of valuable information. It will be supplied at the rate of $3.50 a thousand, postpaid.

Posters, bearing the party name, emblem, and ticket, are now ready, and will be sent free to all who will attend to displaying them.

IN JEWISH.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?"—a 32-page pamphlet by B. Feigenbaum. An excellent thing for propaganda among Jewish-speaking workingmen. Price, postpaid: Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.25.

IN GERMAN.

A good leaflet by Alexander Jonas, including also the state platform, ticket, and emblem. Price, $1.50 a thousand.

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas," a strong appeal to the minds of thinking workingmen. Single copy, 5 cents; ten or more, at 2½ cents each.

"Die Mission der Arbeiterden Klasse," by Charles H. Vail. One of our best short pamphlets, by a well known Socialist writer and lecturer. Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.

"Municipale Forderungen der Social Demokratie." Although written especially for use in city campaigns, it is useful at all times, because it shows the attitude of the Social Democratic Party on want are called "practical" questions, in harmony with the party's basic principles. Single copy, 5 cents; ten copies, 25 cents; fifty, $1; one hundred, $1.50.

Experience shows that wherever there is an active organization, these cheap leaflets can readily be sold at meetings. It is well, also, for every comrade to carry a few in his pocket to give or lend to fellow workingmen with whom he may fall into conversation about Socialism. The leaflets and cards should be scattered broadcast.

Isolated readers of The Worker, who do not belong to the party organization, can help in the work. If you cannot use a thousand leaflets or cards, send for a quarter's worth and distribute them in your neighborhood.

For all campaign literature, send orders, with cash, to H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, Literature Agent of the State Committee.

A SAVIOR OF MEN.

If I were Christ, and to me was given
The power on earth, as 'tis in heaven,
I should never rest till the world was free
From crime, and famine, and misery.

I vow by all that is grand and good,
By the tie divine of Brotherhood,
That I could not sit upon Heaven's throne
While men were starving on earth alone.

When the bells rang out on my natal day,
And the world seemed blythe, and glad, and gay,
I should fancy I heard beneath their tones,
The echo of famished millions' groans.

I should mark the contrast so clearly seen,
The homes of rich and poor between,
Weigh well the sorrow, weigh well the mirth,
And see if indeed 'twas "joy on earth."

And then—well, then I would right the wrong,
Avenge the weak, and confound the strong,
And the system no longer should endure,
Which exalts the rich, and degrades the poor.

I would do it, I swear, if I lost my crown,
My place in Heaven, and won God's frown,
And count it well, for I surely then
Would be in truth a Savior of men.
—Fred. E. Irish.

THE CARPENTERS IN CONVENTION.

Vote $10,000 to Help Miners — New York Districts Consolidated — McGuire Case under Discussion.

Three hundred and sixty-nine delegates presented their credentials at the opening of the twelfth biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners in Atlanta, Ga., on Sept. 15. Of these, fifty were from Greater New York. On Sept. 24, as The Worker goes to press, the convention is still in session, after eight busy days.

The first day was taken up with an impressive parade, the addresses of welcome by C. C. Houston, Secretary of the Georgia State Federation of Labor, and Mayor Mims, responses by General President Huber, General Secretary Duffy, Vice-President Guerin, and others, while the credentials committee was at work.

One of the first acts of the convention, after the delegates had been seated, was to express its hearty sympathythy with the striking miners and to give a practical demonstration of its feeling by voting $10,000 for their strike fund. A thousand dollars was also voted to the Scranton carpenters, to help them in their long fight with the bosses.

Secretary-Treasurer Duffy's report showed the Brotherhood to be a strong and growing organization. During the last two years 58 locals have lapsed, but 370 new ones were organized; the membership increased from 87,148 to 122,568 and the balance in the treasury from $57,800 to $113,358.25. The Brotherhood has spent $26,355 on strikes and lockouts during this period. Its label is now registered in thirteen states. Another sign of its growth is the enlargement of the monthly journal from sixteen to thirty-two pages. The report was received with great satisfaction.

Applications for charters were presented from two organizations in Puerto Rico and one in Hawaii. The latter was accepted, but the majority of the delegates held that the time had not come to try to extend the Brotherhood to Spanish-speaking workers.

Among the important changes in the constitution decided upon was one separating the office of Treasurer from that of Secretary and fixing the number of members of the General Executive Board at seven. No less important was that raising the monthly dues for the national organization from 20 to 25 cents, which was carried by a two-thirds vote.

A number of Canadian locals asked that a French-speaking assistant secretary be provided for, as well as an organizer and one board member speaking French. The Executive Board was instructed to comply with the request so far as practicable. Especial efforts are to be made to organize in Canada and in the South.

Of especial interest to New York carpenters is the decision to bring all the locals in Greater New York under a single District Council, instead of five, as now.

The amendments to the constitution, as well as a resolution adopted to remove the headquarters from Philadelphia to Indianapolis, will be submitted to general vote.

The McGuire case, of course, has occupied a great deal of time. The Finance Committee reported on this case Monday, stating that an examination by experts of McGuire's books as Secretary-Treasurer from July 1, 1900, to his suspension on July 24, 1901, showed a deficit of $10,014.90. The experts' report was read in full on Tuesday, occupying two hours of the convention's time. Exhaustive debate followed, which was still going on at our latest information. Some delegates blamed the members of the Executive Board, alleging that it was due to neglect of duty that McGuire's bond was found worthless.

HOW ARE YOU GOING TO VOTE?

A vote for the Socialist Party is a vote in favor of using the power of government on the workers' side in strikes and lockouts. A vote against the Socialist Party is a vote in favor of leaving that power in the hands of the capitalists.

A vote for the Socialist Party is a vote against the use of police and militia and injunctions to break strikes. A vote against the Socialist Party is a vote to endorse such judges as Jackson and Kellar, Freedman and Bookstaver, to sanction the crimes of Homestead, Pullman, Lattimer, and the Bull Pen.

In New York State the Socialist Party is known as the SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY, its emblem is the Arm and Torch, and BENJAMIN HANFORD heads its ticket.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK.

Ratification Meeting in Cooper Union Breaks All Records.

Brooklyn's Meeting Also a Great Success—Crowds Applaud Hanford and Other Social Democratic Speakers and Collections Prove Earnestness of Applause—The Campaign in the State—Party Literature in Great Demand.

It was an inspiring sight that greeted the speakers at the ratification meeting of the Social Democratic Party of New York City last Saturday in Cooper Union when, promptly at eight o'clock, as the stirring notes of the "Marseillaise" died away, Organizer Wood called the assembly to order and introduced Dr. C. L. Furman of Brooklyn as chairman of the evening. From the rear of the platform to the outer walls and doors was a great sea of attentive faces—faces of comrades grown old in the fight, now brightened with the prospect of speedy fruition of their toil; faces of young comrades, just enlisted in the battle and full of energy for the final effort in the long battle against capitalist rule; faces of strangers, workingmen and working women, beginning to think for themselves, beginning to break away from the influence of old-party politicians and subsidized teachers, and eager to hear what the Social Democratic Party had to offer toward their emancipation.

Though packed to the doors, the great hall could not hold all who came to hear the Social Democratic speakers, and two good overflow meetings were held on the adjacent street-corners, where the principles of Socialism were explained and ringing cheers greeted the mention of our emblem, the Arm and Torch, and of Ben Hanford, our standard bearer in this state campaign.

Hanford on the Coal Strike.

Hanford was the first speaker. In spite of the hard work that he has been doing for the last six weeks in the state campaign, and in the strike field, his voice rang clear to every corner of the hall; and never did ever he speak with greater effect. His clear statement of the essential facts in the labor question and the incisive logic with which he marshalled them against all forms of capitalist politics roused the great audience to repeated cheering and applause.

Having just returned from the coal fields, he took the miners' strike as a text. He declared that not one English daily in the country had told the truth about conditions in Pennsylvania; without exception they had lied, deliberately and maliciously.

Among their stock of lies was the oft-repeated story that the strikers were quarreling among themselves and that they were about to return to work. The purpose of this lie was to make other workingmen think the strike was lost and so deter them from giving further aid to the strikers. From personal observation the speaker declared that the strike could not be more solid than it now is; there was no dissension and no talk of surrender; the strikers were going to "fight it out on this line, if it took all winter"—and the workingmen of all trades were going to help them.

Another useful lie was the old and ever new story of drunkenness, rioting, assault, arson, and murder committed by the strikers. Hanford said he had seen just three drunken men during his stay in the strike field; they all wore the uniform of the National Guard and two of them wore the uniform and swords of officers. That was enough to show who did the rioting.

Capitalist Lies and Tricks.

He went on to show the difficulties under which the union was carrying on the strike and the dirty tricks used by the mine-owners' agents to defeat it. The miners are of many nationalities and political and religious affiliations—American, Irish, Polish, Lithuanian, Slavic, Italian, etc., some Protestants and others Catholics, some formerly Republicans and others Democrats—though very few would call themselves Republicans or Democrats now.

The capitalist agents take advantage of this diversity and try to create dissension. They tell the Poles at one place that the Irishmen at another place are going to go to work to-morrow, tell the Italians that the Lithuanians are on the point of deserting the union, tell the Protestants that the Catholics are preparing to scab or vice versa. But, in spite of all this, the miners refuse to quarrel and refuse to scab and refuse to riot.

With the slightest foundation or with none at all, the capitalist hirelings publish lurid stories of violence. They want the men to commit violence and, at all events, they want the rest of the people to believe that the miners are rioting. Why? In order to furnish a pretext for declaring martial law—to suspend all civil and political rights, to arrest the union officials, and to prohibit the holding of meetings—for under martial law every gathering of three or more men may be treated as seditious assemblage and broken up with bayonet or bullet.

"The reason I talk of the Pennsylvania coal strike at a political meeting in New York," continued Hanford, "is that the question which confronts the Pennsylvania miners is the same question that confronts workingmen here and everywhere else, and it is a question that must be settled at the polls. You printers, cigarmakers, machinists, carpenters, workingmen of every trade have the same interest in that strike as the miners have. It is not the battle only of miners against mine-owners; it is the battle of the producers of wealth against the takers of profits, the workers against the capitalists.

The Capitalists' "Work."

"The 'operators' have been working harder this summer than they ever worked before in their lives. The miners have not worked at all. Although the mine-owners are working so hard, there is no coal. There will be no coal, no matter how hard the 'operators' work, until the miners go to work. That shows you how much the capitalist class contributes to the production of wealth.

Property and Law.

"And the 'work' of the capitalists did not make the mines nor contribute anything to making them. It was the workingmen who sunk the shafts and ran the galleries, and made the machinery and created all the means of production by the use of which workingmen dig coal.

"But Mr. Baer says God gave him the mines. You may look at the title-deeds to all those mines and hunt up all the records, back to the original land-grants, and you can't find God's signature anywhere. You will find the signature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or of the king of England. It was not Almighty God, but human law, that gave that property to the capitalists. The right of property—property in mines or railroads or land or mills and factories or anything else—is given by law; and when it becomes an instrument of tyranny and robbery—as the right of private property in the means of production has become—the law must take it away.

"And where does the law come from? From the ballot-box. From you, the majority of the voters. You will be responsible for the wrongs that prevails, if you do not use your power at the ballot-box to right those wrongs.

"The miners in Pennsylvania are learning this rapidly. They will do their part. They are going to vote for Socialism—for their emancipation and yours. But they cannot accomplish it alone; they need your help here in New York. Every vote for the Social Democratic Party in New York, like every vote for Socialism in Pennsylvania or any other state, is a vote to put the power of government in the hands of the producers of wealth, to be used for their protection, and against class-rule by those who take wealth that you produce."

Great Enthusiasm.

Every word was followed with the closest interest by the great audience, and every step in the statement of facts and the development of the argument brought out emphatic applause. As Hanford took his seat the audience gave three cheers for the S. D. P. and three more for its candidate that seemed to shake the hall.

Through the succeeding speeches by H. Gaylord Wilshire, our candidate in the Tenth Congressional District, State Organizer Spring, Representative MacCartney of Massachusetts, and John Spargo, editor of the "Comrade," the interest and enthusiasm continued unabated.

Spring spoke on the necessity of financial support for the Social Democratic campaign, since our party depends wholly on its rank and file for the money with which to carry on its work of education. The response was a collection of $204.00, far the largest ever taken at a Socialist meeting in Cooper Union. Besides this, some two hundred three-month subscription cards for "Wilshire's Magazine" were sold at 10 cents each, the whole proceeds being devoted, at Comrade Wilshire's request, to the campaign fund.

Resolutions.

Comrade Spargo spoke briefly but eloquently and closed by reading the following resolutions which were carried with tremendous applause and followed by three more rousing cheers:

"We, the Socialists of New York, in mass meeting in Cooper Union assembled, send our fraternal cheer to the miners of Pennsylvania and West Virginia in their indomitable struggle for a freer life and a living wage.

"We declare that the only final and lasting solution of the war waged between the rapacious corporations on one side and the millions of producers on the other is for the people to take possession and operate all the natural resources and all other means of production for the equal benefit of every man, woman, and child.

"We call upon the workingmen of New York and other honest citizens to rescue this Empire state from the clutches of the Republican and Democratic parties, which are both faithful servants of the organized exploiters of labor and both alike reek with rottenness and corruption.

"Voters of New York, the workingmen murdered for daring to protest against exploitation, the starving miners in the coal fields, your own helpless condition in the hands of the coal and beef trust, call upon you to rally under the banner of the Social Democratic Party, which alone of all parties stands for the rights of the working class and offers a definite remedy for existing evils."

If anything can be inferred from the formal opening meeting of the campaign, the result is going to be an increase of the Social Democratic vote such as New York has never seen. Every comrade went away more than satisfied and inspired for redoubled work in the days to come.

Brooklyn's Ratification.

That the Social Democrats of Brooklyn are alive and at work and that they are commanding the attention of the people of that borough was abundantly proven last Friday night. All through the day and evening there fell a cold and dismal rain. If it had not rained, it would probably have been necessary to call out the reserves to clear the streets around the Labor Lyceum at 949 Willoughby avenue; for, notwithstanding the inclement weather, the large hall was filled to the doors with an audience that showed its Socialist enthusiasm, not by vociferous applause and cheers alone, but by the very practical demonstration of an unprecedentedly large collection for the campaign fund.

Dr. C. L. Furman presided. Before introducing Frederick O. MacCartney as the first speaker of the evening, he read a message from Benjamin Hanford expressing his deep regret at not being able to attend; during the six preceding days Comrade Hanford had addressed seven monster meetings in connection with the coal strike, and he was compelled to take a day of rest. Mother Jones also sent word that her duties in the strike field made it impossible to be present, but that she would speak for the party in this city and state in October. The names of both comrades were greeted with loud applause and the audience, while regretting their absence, readily understood that it was well justified.

Comrade MacCartney brought to the Social Democrats of Brooklyn the fraternal greetings of their comrades in Massachusetts, who are marching steadily on to victory in the same battle for the emancipation of Labor in which Benjamin Hanford is the standard bearer for this state.

He spoke at length, and with telling force and clearness, on Socialism as a philosophy, as an economic and political system, as a humanitarian movement, and as a battle—a battle against class-rule, which must be fought out primarily by and for the working class, but by which the whole human race will benefit.

He closed with a powerful appeal, direct to the heart and brain of every workingman in the hall. "I have spoken of your rights," he said. "Rights and liberties are sacred. If I did not believe in the rights of the working class, if I did not believe in bending every effort to demanding and enforcing those rights, I would not be in the Socialist movement. But there is one word more sacred, more fundamental, than 'right.' That word is 'duty.' You have a duty to perform, every one of you. Each one of you can do something; can do much between now and Election Day, to spread a knowledge of our principles, to enlighten the minds of your fellow workers, to organize and direct their growing discontent, to rally the forces of the working class for a united effort at the ballot-box against the system that now oppresses labor and degrades humanity. This is the one great, paramount duty that you owe to your own manhood, to your wives and children who cannot speak for themselves at the polls, to your comrades and brothers in toil, to your nation irrespective of class, to your class irrespective of all national divisions, to the whole human race."

The eloquent address of our Massachusetts comrade, whose experience in the Legislature has at once armed him with facts and developed his militant spirit, was received with great enthusiasm and unquestionably made a deep impression.

H. Gaylord Wilshire was the next speaker. He began with a reference to Baer's famous "divine right" letter and analyzed the position of the mine "operators" and the operatives—the one class mining no coal, but assuming the right to forbid others to mine coal, no matter how the people might need it, unless they, the alleged deputies of Omnipotent God, could make the profit they demanded on every stroke of the miner's pick. President Roosevelt's frantic anti-trust campaign speeches and his utter failure to use his official power or even to propose any solution for the problem were exposed as the natural methods of a politician directly representing the interests of the class that owns the mines and other capital. "It will do no good to talk of revising the constitution," said Wilshire. "The constitution will not stand in the way of public officials who really mean to put an end to this industrial tyranny by divine right. All we have to do is to put the power of government into the hands of representatives of the working class, pledged, not to an amendment of the constitution or a tinkering of the tariff, but to the confiscation of the mines and other means of production by which the trusts rob the people. It rests entirely with the workers to say whether or not Baer's assumption shall be maintained."

Comrades Haywood and Atkinson of Philadelphia spoke forcibly on the subject of the strike and the rapid growth of Socialism in the coal fields, and State Organizer Spring briefly but emphatically urged the necessity of using every effort to record the votes of the workingmen in this state against the Coal Trust, for the miners, and for the Social Democratic Party.

The collection amounted to $83.80, the largest ever taken at a party meeting in this hall. Half of this was afterward given by the County Committee for agitation in Pennsylvania.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

State Campaign Is Now Red Hot.

Eight New Locals Formed—Slayton the Only Gubernatorial Candidate to Enter the Strike Field.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—At tonight's meeting of the State Committee charters were granted to new locals of the Socialist Party at Highland, Jeansville, Dupont, Inkermann, and Parsons, Luzerne County; Girardville (Lithuanian), Schuylkill County; Pottstown, Montgomery County; and Welter, Northumberland County.

Comrade Heydrick reported from Harrisburg on his work in regard to the filing of nominations, which is going on well. After finishing this work he will speak at York on Oct. 2 and at Spring Forge, Lancaster, and Reading the three following days. On Oct. 6 he will speak at Tamsford and will remain in Carbondale County through the campaign.

Comrade Dwyer of Hazleton, candidate for the Assembly, has issued a challenge to debate with the candidates of the other party. Comrade Wm. C. Hoover of Barnes, Warren County, in a debate with H. A. Pinney, the Prohibition candidate, before a large audience proved to their evident satisfaction that the workers' duty at the present time is to vote the Socialist ticket.

It is the desire of the State Committee to send speakers in reply to requests from many locals, but it is simply impossible, by reason of the calls coming from the strike district. Many of our locals, therefore, will not be supplied with a speaker during the campaign.

Nail the Lie.

It is come to the knowledge of the State Committee that a man by the name of Barnes is a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket in one of the Pennsylvania districts. Some of the little S. L. P. capitalist agents are busy spreading the rumor that this above Barnes and our Socialist Party candidate for Lieutenant-Governor are one and the same. Readers will see to it that this lie is nailed wherever it is repeated.

Socialist candidates who have not yet filed with the State Committee their signed resignation blanks, as instructed last week, are requested to do so at once.

In the Strike Field.

John W. Slayton, our candidate for Governor, has just been elected delegate to the A. F. of L. by the Carpenters' convention at Atlanta, Ga. He will speak early next week in Coudersport, Austin, and Williamsport, and will then enter the coal fields, being the first candidate for Governor that has entered the district this campaign. Pennypacker and Pattison show discretion in staying away.

Comrade Quinn will visit Hazleton and vicinity, beginning Monday. C. P. DeYoe of New Jersey is in the Lackawanna district with Comrade Barkowski. Comrade Fischer, now in Luzerne County, but will soon go to Lackawanna and later to Schuylkill. Comrade Collins, after speaking at Montgomery on Oct. 6, will speak at Welter and Shamokin, Northumberland County then at Ashland, Shenandoah, and other points in Schuylkill.

L. D. Mayes of New York will spend a week in Carbon County, beginning Oct. 1. Comrades Geiger and White, now in Carbon County, will go to Luzerne the latter part of the week.

F. P. O'Hare and Kate O'Hare of Missouri offered their services free to the State Committee; the Missouri State Committee, we understand, will pay their transportation. Comrade O'Hare is a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court of his state. He will report to Comrade Evans at Hazleton about Oct 10.

Benjamin Hanford of New York spent five days in the coal field last week, speaking at six places in three different counties, and was greeted with audiences averaging more than two thousand persons. Such is the field that we have been asking and now ask the comrades everywhere to assist us in cultivating for Socialism.

Agitation Funds.

Contributions have been received as follows: Previously acknowledged, $1,400.30; Altmen, Alderton, Pa., $10; Chula Vista, $3; Wm. Musk, Brooklyn, $1; H. C., Mass., $1; Hartbootie, $1; Special Committee, $280.06; total, $1,706.36. Of the amount credited to the Special Committee, $282.01 came from New York City.

Send all contributions to J. Edelman, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

SOCIALIST MACHINISTS.

District 15, I. A. of M., Endorses Party Platform.

After Two Months' Discussion, General Vote Declares for Socialism—Party Speakers Invited to Address Lodges.

In the issue of July 20 The Worker reported the action of the District Council of District 15, International Association of Machinists, which submitted the national platform of the Socialist Party (in New York, the Social Democratic Party) to the members of all affiliated lodges for discussion and called for a general vote on the question of endorsing this platform.

We have now to announce that by the general vote of the District the party platform has been endorsed and Social Democratic speakers have been invited to address all the lodges before Election Day.

Comrade W. H. Morton of Kearney, N. J., came to the party headquarters in the Labor Lyceum as a committee from the District to get speakers. Comrade Fred Schaefer will address Lodge No. 313 at 69 St. Marks Place on Thursday, Oct. 2, and Organizer Wood will speak to Manhattan Lodge No. 402 on Friday evening.

District 15 embraces all of Greater New York, Westchester County, up to Tarrytown, and the neighboring part of New Jersey as far as Paterson, and includes about six thousand members.

"CONVERTS WERE MANY"

So Wilkes Barre Reports of Hanford's Meetings—Work of Barkowski, Fischer, Mikolainis, White, and Geiger.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 28.—Comrades Ben Hanford of New York and A. Barkowski of Chicago addressed three rousing meetings in this valley Sunday evening, Sept. 21, on the River Front in Wilkes Barre, with an attendance of two thousand; Monday afternoon at Plymouth, with an attendance of five thousand; and Monday evening at Pittston, with twelve hundred hearers. All considered it a rare treat to hear Hanford's logic and eloquence and his converts were many; and the way Barkowski was received by the Poles was simply immense.

Comrade F. Fischer is spending the whole of this week addressing meetings twice a day among the Poles of the upper end of Luzerne County. On Monday, October 6, he will go to Hazleton and will report to Comrade Wm. M. Evans.

Comrade Mikolainis began a two weeks' tour of Luzerne County on Monday, Sept. 29. He is from Plymouth and speaks Lithuanian. Comrades Geiger and White will enter the city on Friday, October 3. Both will speak at White Haven on that day and at Penobscott and Mountain Top on Saturday.

The following dates have been arranged for them for next week:

For Comrade White: Monday, Oct. 6, 2 p. m., Georgetown; 7 p. m., Lee Park; Tuesday, Oct. 7, 7 p. m., Oliver's Mills; Wednesday, Oct. 8, 7 p. m., Warrior Run; Thursday, Oct. 9, 2 p. m., Ashley; 7 p. m., Sugar Notch; Friday, Oct. 10, 7 p. m., Nescopeck.

For Comrade Geiger: Monday, Oct. 6, 2 p. m., corner Academy street and Carey avenue, Wilkes Barre; 7 p. m., S. Main and Hanover streets, South Wilkes Barre; Oct. 7, 7 p. m., Washington and Hazel streets, Wilkes Barre; Oct. 8, 7 p. m., Hazel and Blackman streets; Oct. 9, 2 p. m., E. Market and Hillside streets; 7 p. m., Scott and Laurel streets; Oct. 10, 7 p. m., North Main street and Hollenback avenue.

On Saturday, Oct. 11, at 7:30 p. m., both White and Geiger will address a mass meeting on the River Front, opposite Jackson street, in this city.

CAREY IN NATICK.

NATICK, Mass., Sept. 29.—Representative Carey addressed a good meeting in Concert Hall last Monday. The local paper, reporting the meeting, says:

"He convinced beyond a question the workingmen of Natick that they must vote for self-interest and not affiliate themselves as in the past with the Democratic or Republican party, who were all promises prior to election and after it had no use for them. He defined clearly the principles of the Socialist Party and its final accomplishments when the fruits of labor should go to the producers. He scored both old parties in round terms and held the audience attentively until the close. He simply laid the bare facts before the workingmen of Natick, citing them their true condition, also of the individual storekeeper whose place of business would soon be supplemented by a department store and they in turn must look to the masters for labor. His arguments from start to close were those of deep thought and sincerity and made a marked impression upon the listeners."

Comrade Galvin of Boston and Comrade Winslow, our local candidate for the Legislature, also spoke and were well received. S. P. Annis made an excellent chairman.

Natick is fast becoming a Socialist town. We shall hold several more rallies before election and will make a big increase in the vote.

AMONG THE STRIKERS.

A Statement of Facts by One Who Has Carefully Observed Them.

Having returned from a two weeks' agitation tour in the anthracite region, I think it will not be out of place to give your readers—who, I am sure, are all interested in the situation there—not the details of my agitation work, for that would take too much time and space, but a brief statement of my own conclusions from actual facts.

1. The strikers in general are well behaved, satisfied with the management of the strike, and confident of an early victory. They feel that to lose this strike would be equal to a sentence to the penitentiary. They are fighting for some approach to justice and freedom and are determined to win at any cost.

2. The traitors in the ranks are very few and far between. The continual statements in the papers concerning this colliery or that starting and the production of coal being large are pure fabrications. The machinery is going and making some noise in many places, but very little coal is being dug.

3. The relief fund, while not by any means what it ought to be, is in better shape than has ever been the case during any other miners' strike on this continent and proves that the spirit of solidarity is growing. It keeps the wolf from the door. A pleasant fact is that nearly all those who can do without it leave their share to their brothers in worse circumstances. Let the good work of collecting aid go on until the Baers and other capitalistic beasts of prey are forced to capitulate. Let no man fail to do his duty in this struggle. After the strike is won, funds will still be needed, for the men cannot be expected to go to work with an empty dinner pail—and the Republican full dinner pail is not to be found in that region, not even with a search-light.

The funds are handled in a business-like way. Checks are sent from headquarters to all locals and also order books. The checks are deposited in a bank. The relief committee issues orders on any store the recipient wishes to patronize. Every other Saturday the merchants call at local headquarters and in exchange for the orders in their possession receive a bank check. Not a cent of money goes through the hands of the relief committee. This work is very tedious and unpleasant. Frauds of all kinds try to impose on the committee. Even scabs will come to seek relief. A scab will cheat, lie, steal, and try to create all kinds of trouble.

4. Socialism is discussed as much as, if not more than, the strike. Socialist speakers are well received everywhere and shown many courtesies by local, district, and national officials of the miners. A large number of them could be kept very busy where there is none now.

5. A distribution of bread could not be received with more eagerness than a distribution of Socialist literature. There is never enough. All the Socialist publishers should, to their utmost ability, help to supply the demand.

6. The Socialist editor that has been discouraging the sending of speakers and literature in the strike field should go there and learn from actual facts that in saying "it was money worse than wasted" he has done a great wrong to the cause of Socialism for the following reasons:

a) To neglect a field so ripe for a change is to play in the hands of the Quays, Stones, and other politicians who are always on the lookout to make capital out of labor troubles. Remember 1900.

To use the words of a district official: "The miners are dissatisfied. They are on the move. It's to be hoped that honest and able workingmen will take a firm hold of the situation. Otherwise they will again be the victims of unscrupulous politicians."

b) Well informed, class-conscious Socialists are not made in a day or a week. Sympathy with Socialism is not sufficient. To develop sympathy and turn it into its right channel, to give a clear Socialism education to new party members and prevent them from being stampeded by politicians, more party papers, more speakers, more active agitation are needed there now than ever.

c) Alleged "workingmen's candidates," hunting Republican or Democratic endorsements, caring nothing for principle but most anxious to sit at the political pie-counter, are springing up here and there to confuse the miners and take advantage of Socialist agitation. The young but fast developing Socialist movement in the anthracite field must be protected from its enemies for some time yet. Otherwise it may in the future give rise to many unpleasant complications.

It is "up to" the Socialists of the whole country to maintain the necessary good work for a good while to come in the strike field, where prospects for a fine Socialist harvest are most encouraging.

Margaret—No, I don't. One of the members had the audacity to speak to me on the street the other day.—New York Evening Journal.

THE CAPITALIST TWINS.

Workingmen, read this statement of President Mitchell—a statement of plain fact, based on official statistics of the "accidents" caused by the mine-owners' criminal economy—and consider whether we put it too strongly when we say that the labor question, of which this coal strike is but a single incident, is a question of life and death.

"Had the mines been in operation for the last four and a half months there would have been 150 dead miners now. Six men have lost their lives since the strike, but had there been no strike there would have been two and a half men killed every day in the mines. There are more men killed annually in the anthracite coal mines than lost their lives on the American side in the Spanish-American war. There are eight times as many. For every American who lost his life in Cuba there are eight men killed yearly in the Pennsylvania coal mines."

Read this further statement by President Mitchell of the issues involved in the strike:

"Involved in this fight are questions weightier than any questions of dollars and cents. The present miner has had his day; he has been oppressed and ground down, but there is another generation coming up—a generation of little children, prematurely doomed to the whirl of the mill and the noise and blackness of the breakers. It is for these little children we are fighting. We have not underestimated the strength of our opponents; we have not overestimated our own power of resistance. Accustomed always to live upon a little, a little less is no unendurable hardship. It was with a quaking of hearts that we asked for our last pay envelopes; but in the grim and bruised hand of the miner was the little white hand of a child, a child like the children of the rich, and in the heart of the miner was the soul-rooted determination to starve to the last crust of bread and fight out the long, dreary battle, to win a life for the child and secure for it a place in the world in keeping with advancing civilization."

Then read this little extract from a speech delivered in this city last week by District Attorney Jerome:

"Put to a fair vote, do you mean to tell me that workingmen will take the stand that I shall not work if I want to because I do not belong to the union? It is cowardly, brutal, un-American. It is taking the bread out of my mouth and exposing me to violence, and is unworthy of the name of labor.

"Laboring men think they rule in this country. They don't. You are unorganized and can accomplish nothing because you can't trust your leaders. Nobody can."

And Jerome is a "reformer," mind you, a respectable gentleman, and a supporter of Roosevelt and Odell.

Then remember the attack Abram S. Hewitt of this city made upon President Mitchell and the United Mine Workers a few weeks ago. Remember how he said that the strike was an attack upon the liberties of the people, that victory for the strikers would give Mitchell power to dictate presidents for the United States, and so forth.

And Hewitt is a respectable gentleman, a philanthropist—only of the other wing of the capitalist party—a supporter of the Democratic party.

The Republican party has nominated a lot of respectable gentlemen for office in this state—not a workingman among them. The Republican party professes to love the workingman and to hate the trusts—before election. But if you want to know what is the real mind of the Republican party on these questions, you should listen to Jerome when he gets excited and forgets himself.

The Democratic party is nominating its state ticket as The Worker goes to press. It will nominate a lot of respectable gentlemen, too—no workingmen. It also professes to love the workingmen and hate the trusts—before election. But if you want to know the real mind of the Democratic party (especially of the respectable, deodorized Democracy now before us), you should listen to such a Democrat as Hewitt, who has grown careless in his old days and speaks from his capitalistic heart.

Or, if you want to know the real mind of the Democratic party on such questions, you need only remember that David B. Hill is at its head.

Workingmen of New York, if you are going to vote right on that question of life and death, you can make no choice between those two old parties.

They both profess love for you and both have repeatedly knifed you after election. Both profess to hate the trusts; and both are ruled by trust magnates.

But you can rebuke Jerome, you can rebuke Hewitt, you can rebuke Platt and Hill, you can help yourselves and your wives and children and help the miners in their struggle at the same time, by a vote for a workingman nominated by and for workingmen, for Benjamin Hanford under the Arm and Torch.

IS NOMINATED WHILE IN JAIL.

Victim of Anti-Union Injunction on Socialist Ticket in Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, Mass.—The Socialist Party here has nominated the following ticket: For Congress, Dr. Howard A. Gibbs, Worcester; County Commissioner, Thomas Laney, Fitchburg; Councillor, John J. Kelley, Warren; Senator, First Worcester District, James Cronin, Worcester; Second, Thomas P. Abbott.

Thomas Laney is now serving a term of four months in jail for contempt of court. He is President of the Woolen Workers' Union, composed of employees of the Fitchburg Woolen Mills. He was sentenced for disregarding the injunction of the court directed against the union in connection with the strike of employees of the American Woolen Company of Fitchburg.

TO NEW YORK SOCIALISTS.

Comrades:—The campaign has opened in earnest. From the date of the great Ratification Meeting in Cooper Union to the Fourth of November duty demands from us a struggle greater than New York has ever witnessed. The people are stirred to such a depth of feeling by the events of the present that they respond eagerly to the call of our propagandists. Everything indicates an opportunity such as has never before presented itself. A supreme effort—a masterful appeal, will not only increase the coming vote, it commands the possibility of at last sending some of our candidates to Albany. The long night breaks into the first rays of morning; the working class feels the thrill of a powerful appeal for action. Let us also recognize this awakening spirit and seize the opportunity that capitalistic tyranny has made. Each and all united in resolute endeavor can break down forever the barriers which, through successive campaigns, have seemed insurmountable.

I call upon all speakers, therefore, without exception, to come forward and pour all their energies into the conflict. The time for excuses is past; the hour for action has come. In every street, in every district, let the gospel of militant labor resound.

Send at once name and dates when the Organizer may depend on you.

UNION FOR SOCIALISM.

Central Labor Body of Omaha, Neb., Endorses the Socialist Party.

By an overwhelming vote the Central Labor Union of Omaha, Neb., has adopted the Socialist Party as a basis for the independent political action decided upon at a previous meeting. The subject was introduced by the Meat Cutters' Union in a report stating that it had taken this action by an almost unanimous vote, and as the Carpenters' Union and several other unions had acted likewise, a motion to concur had very little opposition. The meeting was one of the largest of the season.—Workers' Gazette.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

THE STRIKE, THE TRUSTS, AND THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

President Roosevelt is really thinking about the strike. So the Administration papers assure us. But they add that "the best sources of information furnish no verification of the belief that the President will take any immediate action."

The strenuous President held a conference with his cabinet officers Tuesday. They talked of the matter for three whole hours. Think of it, three hours! About a little matter like the coal strike, directly involving only a few hundred thousand and indirectly a few million workingmen—three whole hours! Also they took luncheon on it.

As a result of all this sacrifice of their valuable time, we are told:

"The President and his advisers exchanged views thoroughly, and it may be accepted as the most trustworthy version of the matter that they came to the conclusion that under the constitutional limitations of the general government, he was absolutely powerless to afford any relief, or to bring about any shifting of events so that the miners on the one hand, or the coal operators on the other, could come together in any reasonable agreement."

Not even the presence of Steel Trust Attorney-General Knox, the Trust Killer, could help them to any other conclusion.

Speaking of Knox, the news of the last few weeks, or even of the last few days, has thrown a great deal of light on the Administration's loudly heralded anti-trust policy.

The Meat Trust, without paying the slightest heed to the suits brought by the Administration last spring some of which have not been called for trial or seem likely to be called, until the time comes for issuing them, after election, or to the injunctions granted on the application of the government, forbidding the packers to combine "in restraint of trade," has gone on and perfected its organization. What we have now is not a mere loose alliance of great independent packing and stock-yard companies, such as we had when the price of meat was first raised, but a single corporation, into which nearly all of those great companies have been merged.

Meanwhile, if, temporarily, on account of the large corn and grass crops, the wholesale price of meat has been slightly reduced, this has hardly at all affected the retail price; and the prices of eggs and other kinds of food have gone up in sympathy with that of meat.

Again, the Administration brought suit and got injunctions to restrain the several northwestern railway companies from uniting into a single corporation on the model of the Steel Trust. The suits are still pending, with every prospect of continuing indefinitely in that interesting condition. They are serving as campaign argument for Republican politicians. But, not at all deterred by these suits, Messrs. Hill, Harriman, and Morgan have formed their Northern Securities Company and, according to last week's dispatches, have absorbed every line in the state of Washington and are almost daily extending their power to some new field.

Moreover, in parallel columns with reports of Roosevelt's speeches against the trusts, comes the news of plans soon to be consummated for the formation of a Transcontinental Securities Company, to combine some twelve great railroads of the Gould and the Rockefeller systems, again on the same solid basis as the United States Steel Corporation.

Still more: The minority stockholders' suit to restrain the Steel Trust from carrying out its "stock-conversion plan" has been decided in favor of the Trust. While this has no direct interest to workingmen, it is of general interest from the Socialist point of view, as confirming the power of the few great capitalists, in a combine of this type, to loot the smaller stockholders—the middle-class capitalists—at their pleasure.

And what does it all prove? It proves that, if the Republican Administration is sincere in its professed desire to restrain the trusts, it is, for some unexplained reason, absolutely powerless to deal with them.

A more reasonable conclusion is that the Administration has not the slightest desire to oppose the trusts in any of their schemes of spoliation, whether against the workers who create their wealth or the purchasers of their products.

Whichever horn of the dilemma the Republicans may choose, there can be but one conclusion.

If the workers are not satisfied with a Steel Trust that closes its union mills and compels its employees to accept lower wages in order that it may get more foreign trade; if they are not contented with the prospect of a Railroad Trust controlling the whole transportation system of the country; if they are not pleased with the rapid development of the Meat Trust into a Food Trust, with power to take from them in prices whatever they may, through their unions, gain in wages; if they object to a Coal Trust which, with winter approaching, can say to a hundred and fifty thousand miners, "You shall not work unless you will work for $7.05 a week" and to millions of other workingmen, "You shall have no coal unless you can pay us a cent a pound for it"—if they are not satisfied with all this, they must overthrow the Republican party, whether for its insincerity or its incapacity it matters not.

Of the Democratic party we shall have something to say next week.

The press dispatches, reporting the Cabinet conference on the coal strike, state that "it is understood that the visit of Secretary Root to New York was for the purpose of consulting eminent business men on the subject." It should also be remembered that a few weeks ago Governor Crane came to the offices of the United Steel Corporation in New York City to plead with the capitalists and that His Highness Pierpont I. did not deign to give him audience, but turned him over to some of the lesser "captains of industry." So completely is government controlled by the great capitalists that they do not even have to go to our highest public officials to demand what they want, but governors and Cabinet officers run to them for orders.

THE CONSPIRACY OF SILENCE.

All the New York dailies had reporters at Saturday's great ratification meeting in Cooper Union. Yet only one of them—the "Times"—gave a report, two others giving a bare paragraph. If Bishop Potter or William Travers Jerome had addressed an audience of one-tenth the size, his speech would have been printed in full. What does this mean? It means that the Social Democrats of this city and state must not expect the slightest measure of fairness from the old-party press, even in the matter of printing the news, that we must depend entirely upon our own efforts to inform the voters of our principles, our party name, our candidates, and our emblem. It means that every comrade or sympathizer must take a hand in distributing party literature. Thus and thus only will we defeat the capitalist conspiracy of silence.

District Attorney Jerome bewails the fact that there are more gambling hells in operation in this city now than when he began his campaign. Since Mr. Jerome has made such a failure of his war on the gamblers, we suggest that he attack a more dangerous set of law-breakers and one more easy to convict. Let him start a crusade against the trolley and elevated railway companies, which daily violate the Ten Hour Law. There would be no difficulty in getting evidence there. Even Jerome could not fail to get convictions, if he turned his attention against this species of profitable lawlessness—and that is just why he does not do it. He might hurt his own friends and political backers.

The New York "Evening Post," most respectable and conservative of newspapers, in its special correspondence from London, admits that "the best governed city in Great Britain is Glasgow, where municipal socialism has found its best exposition, while the worst governed city is London, which from time immemorial, until a year or two ago, enjoyed the fullest privileges of an administration of the most pronounced anti-socialistic type." While The Worker takes but little stock in "municipal socialism"—which is really not Socialism at all, but only capitalist public ownership—yet the almost undisputed fact which the "Post" thus states is a complete answer to those who are afraid that an extension of the functions of government would increase corruption. On the contrary, corruption in public office arises almost entirely from the influence of private capitalist interests, and the extension of public functions naturally increases the active interest of the citizens in public affairs and puts a check upon corruption.

A Minneapolis dispatch says: "The railroad officials recently indicted as a result of the rate investigation by the Inter-State Commerce Commission will not be tried at this term of the Federal Court. United States District Attorney C. C. Houpt says that the Attorney General's office reports that it is not ready." Of course not. There is no intention on the part of the Administration to convict these capitalist violators of law. It would never do to have them tried and acquitted before election, for the prosecutions were brought, like the Beef Trust and Railway Trust suits, for campaign purposes. After election, the cases can be called and quietly disposed of. The Attorney General is a very busy man—busy making bluffs and avoiding the danger of being "called." He's just the right Attorney-General for President Roosevelt, chief of bluffers.

Prof. E. Benjamin Andrews' assertion that the state of celibacy promotes crime seems to be confirmed by the figures found in the semi-annual volume of statistics compiled for Chicago by Hugo S. Grosser, municipal librarian and statistician, says the Chicago "Tribune." The "Tribune" does not, of course, proceed to explain that the system of capitalism and wage-slavery, which it supports, increases celibacy, with its natural concomitants—prostitution, drunkenness, and a tendency to crime—by making the livelihood of the mass of the people insecure and so deterring working people from marriage. And yet the apologists of capitalism say that Socialism would destroy the home and the family!

It is well to remember that those boodle aldermen in St. Louis were all "respectable citizens"—other business men, lawyers, or professional politicians. There were no workingmen among them. They were "practical men," too, and staunch Republicans and Democrats; they abhorred Socialism, because it violates the eternal and sacred rights of private property.

THE OLD LABORER.

His four-score years have bent a back of oak,
His earth-brown cheeks are full of hollow pits;
His gnarled hands wander idly as he sits
Bending above the hearthstone's feeble smoke.
Three-score and ten slow years he tilled the land;
He wrung his bread from out the stubborn soil;
He saw his rosiers flourish through his toil;
He held their substance in his horny hand.
Now he is old—he asks for daily bread;
He who has sowed the bread he may not taste
Begs for the crumbs—he would do no man wrong.
The Parish Guardians, when his case is read,
Will grant him (yet with no unseemly haste)
Just seventeen pence to starve on, seven days long.
—Arthur Symons, in "Silhouettes."

SOME OBJECTIONS TO THE INTRODUCTION OF CAPITALISM.

A. M. Simons, In The Appeal to Reason.

I should certainly be opposed to the adoption of a form of society where all mines, machinery, factories, and other things with which wealth is produced and distributed should be private property. Why, it would be positively unbearable for all these things which are so necessary to life to be the private property of a few individuals. It would be sure to cause endless trouble. Every one knows that we must all use these things and yet they are so large and complex and so few of them are really needed that it is impossible for every person to own and operate one himself. If they were made private property, then there would soon be a large portion of the people with no tools whatever with which to work.

No Divide Up.

I am against any scheme that proposes to divide up what the industry of the working people produces among a lot of lazy, worthless, good-for-nothings. Any plan of society that permitted a few people to own the essentials of social life would certainly do this. If such a scheme were put in operation the fellows who are too lazy to work would have steam yachts, automobiles, and palaces by the sea shore, while the hard workers would have to give up so much of their product that they would scarcely be able to live at all. The homes of the idlers would be on the boulevards, and as they would have no useful work to do, and plenty of money and time to spend there would be constant temptation for them to plunge into a riotous debauchery undreamed of in a previous age.

You Can't Change Human Nature.

Such a scheme would never work unless you change human nature. If all men were angels a society might last where every one's life depended upon fighting every one else. But if common, every-day mortals, no matter how good they naturally might be, were forced to struggle constantly against one another, it would tend to turn them into fiends; they would learn to lie, cheat, adulterate, steal and even murder and would need to be locked up to protect society from their attacks. In the end the shrewder and more unscrupulous rascals who were able to keep out of jail would prey upon their fellow men and gobble everything in sight, until decent people would be forced to either steal, starve, beg or become the slaves of the rascals.

Destroy Individuality.

Then what would become of all individuality? Once the wealth of the country was in the hands of the sharpers the rest of the population would have no rights. Nobody could work without using the property which these shrewd rascals had monopolized and naturally those in possession would dictate the manner of use. This would tend to level everybody down to the condition of suppliants for a chance to use these very valuable tools. Where all were beggars for a chance to live there would be little opportunity for the cultivation of individual tastes. It would soon get so that the great body of workers would live in houses all just alike, wear just about the same kind of clothes, eat about the same kind of food (and not have very good houses, clothes, nor food either.) Indeed I see no reason why, if it were more convenient for the masters, that the men should not be simply known by numbers like convicts in a penitentiary. Such a society could have none of that diversity which is the basis of beauty, and its centres of population must soon degenerate into hideous rows of ugly dwellings. The whole tendency would be to crush personality and make impossible any deviation, no matter how desirable, from the established type.

No Incentive to Progress.

I do not see how any such society could ever hope to advance. There would certainly be no incentive to improve things. If a man invented a machine he would not own a factory in which to use it and, therefore, would have to sell his invention to those who did own factories. The people who owned the factories, not having to work, would soon forget how. They would know nothing about machinery and hence would be incapable of inventing anything.

Inventors would thus have no incentive to work and industry would thus rapidly degenerate. Not only would there be no incentive to geniuses and inventors, but there would be very little incentive to work at all. When the workers were compelled to give up all they produced beyond a mere subsistence to the lazy rascals who did nothing useful, and they came to see that their reward was in no way proportionate to the exertion, they would be very strange persons if they did not decide that the less work they did the better. This lesson would be enforced by the fact, which every one could see, that those who worked the least received the richest reward, while those who toiled the hardest lived the poorest. It seems to me if such a scheme were put in operation that it would not be long before the whole population would degenerate into a lot of lazy loafers, and all progress would cease.

It Would Destroy the Home

When the laborers became so completely dependent on the idlers there would be nothing to keep the latter from moving them here and there as they happened to feel like moving their industrial plant. The laborers would have to follow these plants round in order to get a chance to live. Such a tyrannical moving of the population here and there would certainly tend to destroy the family and break up the home. There is no telling to what length such a society might go in this direction.

It might even be possible, that, if only men were wanted in such a locality that existing families might be torn up and parents separated from their children until it would be impossible for a large portion of the population to ever have any home life, and thus destroy the very foundation of all our social institutions. As a defender of law and order I could never subscribe to any society where such things could be possible.

The Coming Slavery.

It is very plain that capitalism would lead to a terrible governmental tyranny. Those who had money could control the newspapers and public speakers and fool the laborers into voting any way the master would choose. In this way the government would soon act only in their interest. Before long conditions would reach such a pass that the government would be nothing more than an instrument to enforce the will of the capitalist class. They would own the legislatures and the courts and would use the government to crush any objection by the laborers to their enslavement. Of course it might be said by the defenders of capitalism that it would be impossible to fool the laborers this way forever. But the other alternative is just as bad, for if they ever became intelligent enough to vote for themselves, the whole thing would go to pieces, and so the whole scheme would, by this fact, be shown to be impracticable.

It Would Not Work.

Right in this connection I think it is foolish to discuss any such proposition at all so long as nobody has ever yet studied out all the details of the scheme so as to tell us exactly how such a system would run. I would like to know, for example, how competition could be kept alive if it should happen that the big fellows began to eat up the little ones? How are the unemployed to be kept from starving, or becoming so desperate that they would destroy the whole thing? How are they going to always continue to fool the laborers into voting for slavery? How can anyone tell when enough wealth has been produced if everybody produces just as much as he can without paying attention to what anyone else is doing? How could people be kept from producing more than could be sold? Who would buy all the products, anyhow, if the laborers were only to get such a small portion of what they produced? Such a ridiculous society would be sure to get its productive system all mixed up so that every once in a while more would be produced than the workers could buy back with their miserable wages. Then, what would they do? As I understand this whole system depends on profit for its motive power, the mills would stop when profits stop. When they shut down the people would be thrown out of work and be forced to go through a long period of suffering before anything whatever could be done. I do not believe that such a society would work at all. I am satisfied first, if it were once established the laborers would get discouraged, would combine with one another to upset the whole business and get control of the mines and factories that their wealth had produced, and would then keep all that their labor had created. I do not believe it is worth trying anyhow.

A LETTER THAT PLEASES US.

Here is one of many letters coming to this office that make the editors feel good. Comrade Ryan of North Adams, Mass., writes:

"A copy of your paper of Sept. 21 was given me, and after reading over its valuable contents I forward you my subscription for a year. Now, what seems strange to me is that such a paper should not be in the hands of every workingman in our city, which has a population of twenty-five thousand. It seems to me that this city would be a good field in which to carry on the work which your paper advocates, and I believe that if some of your organizers were sent here a local could easily be formed with from seventy-five to a hundred members, to help you in the good work. I am going to see if I cannot get some of the boys to get a local started here soon. Please inform me how to organize."

The Worker has supplied the information asked for and will do all in its power to push the work. It is the quiet, steady efforts of the rank and file that count in our movement, far more than the widely heralded services of leaders; and The Worker, realizing this, is more pleased with such letters as that quoted than with the occasional conversion of some famous man to our principles. And we may add, too, that for whatever is good in The Worker, quite as much credit is due to the rank and file of its readers as to the editors.

THE FOOLISH LITTLE BOY.

That little boy I know downtown
Don't never get no time to play.
He has to keep a huntin' room'
For sticks an' scraps o' wood all day.

He says his father says that coal
Has got so high that ev'ry one
Must pretty near trade off his soul
To get a quarter of a ton.

An' so he's kept a workin' at
The job o' gath'rin' firewood,
An' says he gets so tired that
He'd skip the country if he could.

I think he's got no sense at all
To work as hard as that, don't you?
A gath'rin' wood to last the Fall
An' all the hull long Winter through.

His father ought to move away
From that there cold an' dirty street,
An' come some place 'round here to stay,
Where radiators make the heat.

An' then that boy could play with me,
An' get so strong an' happy, for
He always could be warm, you see,
An' never has' to work no more.

A STRAIGHT TIP FOR INVESTORS.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

The times have long been ripe for the formation of a popular international trust company which shall have for its primary object the bankrupting of all the politically associated plunderers now dominating the governments and labor of the world; and who conceal their usurpation and despotism under the genteel terms of commerce and finance. These men, to whose unmery Omnipotence, in an unwary moment, committed the rest of mankind, have deposed their deity and the rights of man, substituting their own private interests in the place of these and of everything else on earth, and establishing, as the foundation and buttress for their evil dominion in all time to come a system of wage-slavery in hungry competition with itself, in mediæval ignorance, so mentally ordered, that it keeps at the bottom of everything by the dead weight of its own unmanly content.

But this vastly criminal success has succeeded too much and is gone beyond the ability of its promoters to keep down to it. The people of America have, in fact, too unexpectedly and prematurely become oriental in their passive submission and thank-yous; so, that now the ruling capitalists are at a loss to know what to do with the democratic institutions of the country and how to keep the people from gliding altogether too soon into that coming nirvana of the United States, the dreamless, sonorous snore of a patriotic, unpropertied mob waiting to be rung up to work.

Had the man of America only made a little fight for it, the conquerors would not feel so wary and fearful in treading the imperial streets. The besieged who so suddenly abandon their city without an effort at resistance or the forms of capitulation always leave a silent terror behind them lest there may be dynamite under foot. So, while capitalism yet shudders in fearful amaze at the facility with which all things have been surrendered, while yet it hesitates before our capitols and our city halls, to turn them into Bastiles for the further morganization of man, there is a chance for us to rally the affrighted and fleeing civilization of labor; to form a great organization versus morganization and promote the universal bankruptcy of the capitalist class.

It is the most magnificent opportunity; it is the enterprise of the age; and while the air is yet lurid with the arrogant eruptions of our newly born volcanic millionaires, who know not what to do with the super social sulphur and brimstone thrust into their little lives by the dice boxes of trade, let us extinguish them, knowing that when labor unites to control the government their fires shall go out in a day; let us unite with this for our alternative program, the bankruptcy of all who live by trade, or the transformation of all private trading in and employing of labor to the public business of the state.

Every one wants the international labor trust, because the millionaire, who flares up in a night, is more than the mental balance of the human race can much longer endure.

The international labor trust, with the great ulcers of aristocracy and plutocracy cut off from industry, guarantees to every man investing his labor just 100 per cent. on what he puts in. In this industrial commonwealth there shall be no rakeoffers; no private banks, nor vaults, nor Fifth avenues, in which to conceal the stolen goods of the community; no leakages, no risky corners, no special laws for the benefit of thieves, no golden Gibraltars for future parasites.

Now there is but one thing required in advance of all this; and that thing must be produced before proceeding to the organization of man's permanent deliverance, from the riotous robbers who now own the mines and mills, the fields, the roads, the ships and monies of mankind, and that one thing is the subject of this straight tip to investors, viz.: the production of the Socialist mind. Without this we must remain as we are forever, the pauper heirs of what each unknown day may bring forth, ready only for a pound less or a lash less to our yielding backs.

Henceforth it is everywhere the best patriotism to form a Socialist mind; such as shall find satisfaction only in the bankruptcy of capitalism as the sine qua non clearance to begin with for the decencies and freedom of the future. To run the economic opponent of free democracy out of business is the business of our new trust; because he is the essentially alien, foreign and hostile element in every country; the anti-all-men is he, whose hopes, purposes and success are all incompatible with national manhood, whose mind and money are everywhere at war with the majority of life; he is foe by nature to that good, loyal, loving workmanship which is the abiding and necessary normal element of civilization.

Our international association for the promotion of bankruptcy knows exactly what it is about: it knows that the moral, humane, intellectual, and spiritual bankruptcy of the human race can only be averted by the financial bankruptcy of the capitalist class and the formation of a Socialist mind. Such a mind as sees profit mongering to be the antithesis of honest living, decent remuneration, good government and true patriotism.

To be sure it is plain speaking, but it is a speech that is bound to prevail before righteousness and man get out of prison.

About many things we may, and can afford to, differ, but here all members of the new trust company are one.

We begin, like the old-time preacher, to build the new on a perfect disgust with the old. He made the candidates for saintship to be first of all convinced of sin, dissatisfied with an imaginary state of things inside of themselves; we make our students disgusted with a real state of things outside. He taught his penitents to locate all of their sins geographically about the garden of an expelled Adam; we teach them to locate all wrong within the private property radius of roguish, wall-climbing Adam, clothed in fine linen and farting sumptuously every day by marketing the fruit of the tree of knowledge. The old sinners only saw sin with their mind's eye under their respective waistcoats; we lay our hands upon the physical facts, in their case the cure, like the disease, was a matter of faith-fancy; with us it is a matter of weights and measures, a matter of property and of government.

The process of profound unsatisfaction was all right, though the subject and terminus were all wrong. They tried hard and failed, but ours is a much more verifiable mode of attack and cure and shall succeed. That moral sickness and disease of theirs under the ribs we know now was but a symptom of the sick man outside, called society, and there shall we treat the patient. We never propose to drop any one pill into a sick man's bowels before considering whether it is not the national digestion that has gone out of order. Our cathartics are to be, mainly social; we shall put them first into the sewers and ventilators, into the political closets, caucuses and conventions; and we shall run them through congresses; we shall purge through the ballot boxes, until at last the diseases of persons shall be studied and treated almost entirely from outside. We shall catch his microbes in their nests abroad. And the poor sick eyes, heretofore turned inside on the old, innocent, worried heart that it could not see, shall look outside on the hand that it can see, on the great robber hand of the capitalist class.

If you have man enough in your hat to be unsatisfied with economic conditions you can take a share and become a stockholder in this, the most magnificent enterprise of our age, for the production of a Socialist mind by an external and environmental diagnosis of all private maladies, and for promoting such a famishing unsatisfaction, such a fierce hungering and thirsting after rightness that never rests until the whole of the industrial power of the nation shall be added unto you. Do you want a reduction of your hours of labor, better protection in your factories, immunity of childhood from daily toil? Go for it politically. Diagnose your malady on the largest possible circle. Seek ye first the kingdom of rightness, or the republic of rightness, at the ballot box, and all these things will be added unto you. Grow largely unsatisfied, become great in your discontent, let your complaints be national, and so shall you at last bid farewell to private wrongs and private sins by becoming possessed of the class-conscious, unsatisfied mood which is preliminary of the Socialist mind.

SONG OF THE WHITE SLAVE.

"Chained by the hand of greed,
In dire distress and need,
Sad is the life I lead,
In misery.
Toiling my life away,
To grief my heart a prey,
Long is the dreary day,
Of slavery.

"Condemned to care and woe,
Onward through life I go;
Bitter's the fate I know,
Devoid of gain.
All slaves were freed, you cry—
Nay, that's the rich man's lie!
Oh, see the white slaves die
In shops of pain.

"Oh, hear the piteous wail
Of little children frail,
Upon their deathbeds pale
From toil and need.
Oh, hear their plaintive cries,
Their dying groans and sighs;
Such is the sacrifice
To grasping greed.

"Oh, many souls have sped,
Oh, many hearts have bled,
Within this sweatshop dread,
In anguish deep.
Oft falls the burning tear,
Within the walls so drear,
Oh, why is gold so dear
And life so cheap?

"Oppressed and scorned for aye:
Oh, welcome happy day,
When 'neath the silent clay
I rest from wrong."
There, in the evening fair;
There, in that shop of care,
With pathos of despair,
He sang this song.
—Frank J. Hayes, in Mine Workers' Journal.

FOR THE STRIKE FUND.

National Secretary reports $618.72 received at his office for the strike fund of the United Mine Workers between Sept. 18 and Sept. 27, bringing the total up to $4,446.64. Of the receipts for the nine days in question, $256.50 was collected and forwarded by The Worker and the "Volkszeitung," and the rest was contributed by state committees, locals, and Socialist clubs all over the country. Boston Socialists sent $109.72 in one instalment.

Contributions for the strike fund may be sent directly to Leon Greenbaum, Emilie Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., or to this office to be forwarded to him. Secretary Greenbaum makes remittances weekly or oftener to the United Mine Workers.

The following sums have been received at the office of The Worker and "Volkszeitung" for the miners' strike fund and have been forwarded to National Secretary Greenbaum for transmission to the Union:

Previously acknowledged, $533.50; Wm. Weidemuller, $1; H. F., 25 cents; Surgical Instrument Makers' Union, $3; Branch Harrison, N. J., Socialist Party, collection, $8.30; Butchers' Union, No. 3, Brooklyn, $50; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, collected in organized cabinet shops, $200; Newark Branch of Sick Benefit Society of German Machinists, $20; X. Y. Z., $2.50; Geo. Voss, Newark, N. J., $1; Mrs. Emilie Muster, Paterson, N. J., $2; German American Circle, San Francisco, Cal., $5; A. L., $5; United Engineers, No. 1, New York City, $25; H. Goldecke, $1; J. Wellings, Brooklyn, $1; Gerhard Kühne, $5; E. Berger, Bronx, 50 cents; Success, 50 cents; Samuel Josloff, $1; Cecilia Josloff, $1; Morris Schuchat, 50 cents; Frank Brewing Company's employees, Brooklyn, $25; D. Hinz, Bloomfield, N. J., $1; Robert Blass, $10; total, $903.15.

NO FUSION.

Persons first entering the Socialist Party, or becoming interested therein are often surprised to find what they think a narrow policy cropping up occasionally or perhaps frequently.

It is well to understand what underlies this "bigotry." There has been in the past too much of this and may easily be again, but many policies will appear narrow which are necessary to final success.

We need to understand what it is that underlies this strange tendency among people with no theological training in heresy hunting.

The secret is this: Socialists have a policy radically distinct from any other party that is now or has been.

They propose a revolution in industry and the character of the government.

All other parties propose changes in details—Socialists intend to alter the foundations of the system.

This is revolution.

Previously revolutions came with no party back of them.

There was no ballot to appeal to, so brute force had to reign.

Conditions now are different. The battle must be fought at the ballot box. The war is already on. The troops, however, are unorganized. The forces that must do the fighting do not all know that there is any war.

The capitalists know that there is a struggle and are conscious of their interests at every point. Labor, however, is only partly conscious of itself and of the war. Indeed, great troops of laborers think, perhaps, their interests are the same as that of capital.

It is hard to fight a battle if your soldiers think they are in partnership with the other side.

Socialism is the organized army in this battle. Its purpose is to train for the battle—to train in the knowledge that there is a war to be waged. The main obstacle has always been that workers were so slow to realize that they were wage slaves with interest opposed to their masters.

The trade unions are slow to awake to this in spite of the many proofs of the fact they receive. They could not go on in the old way if they realized the class struggle. When they wake up to the fact that a war is on they will do as the western unions did this spring, namely, line up for battle with the Socialists.

Now, you find that wherever Socialists appear narrow there is something involved which they think is mixing them up with the enemy.

Socialists know that they would win to-morrow if every wage slave, i. e., every one who depends on some one else for a chance to work, knew he was a slave and that his freedom must be won from the capitalists and their capitalistic government.

The capitalist knows and feels his own interests. He is class conscious himself, but his tactics are to keep the laborers from seeing that they as a class have interests utterly opposed to his own. They deceive labor into fighting the capitalistic battles and mix up the issues all they can.

Is it strange, then, that Socialists are afraid of anything which tends to blur the lines and make people forget this class struggle or fancy that anything can be gained by old compromise methods?

This week a person who thought he was a Socialist said to another: "I do not expect Socialism will ever win as a party; I expect its principles to be absorbed and some of the old parties carry them out a little at a time."

Now, if the majority of Socialists knew no more than this the party might as well break up.

Socialism win through capitalist parties? As well expect France to win in a war with Germany by letting the Germans fight the closing battles for her.

A war is on. Never run the risk of putting on the firing line men or women who do not know which side they are on or even whether there is a fight or not.

Now because this is so important Socialists often have to seem ungracious. Instead of welcoming everybody who can vote, with open arms, they act sometimes one away. This for a party which works as if for dear life all the year around to make converts seems queer until one understands.

It is like the Methodists who turn the world upside down to make converts and then sift their new members by a six months' probation.

Sometimes Socialists turn necessary caution into unnecessary suspicion and foolish fear. This should be quickly checked. One party or Socialists lost its usefulness by carrying the principle of battle into a method of petty inquisition.

This our party must avoid.

But never forget the principle back of the party which every member must accept when he joins. There is a class struggle and Socialism can only win as a victory of the laboring class as against the forces of capital. To join the Socialists is to enlist for this battle.—R. A. Maynard, in the Colorado Chronicle.

A SOCIALIST CLUB IN UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.

The Socialist students in the University of Wisconsin have organized a club for the study and propaganda of Socialist principles. It is requested that Socialist students in other universities and colleges will correspond with the Secretary, Daniel W. Hoan, 521 State street, Madison, Wis.

INDIANS TO DISPLACE WHITES.

The Northwestern Railroad Company in Nebraska is making the experiment of employing Sioux Indians to displace white laborers, who demanded higher wages. The officers say they believe the innovation will prove successful. Never mind. The Indian is no fool, though he hasn't had the educational advantages of civilization. Let the capitalists train the Indians into wage-workers and we will train them into strikers.

—A vote for Odell is a vote to endorse the sending of troops to break the strike of the Hudson River Valley trolley workers. Remember that.

PARTY NOTES.

Comrade Evans of Hazleton, Pa., writes: "I saw a copy of your valuable paper to-day at Freeland and I take the liberty of asking you to send us a few if you can spare them. We have no money now, therefore we cannot buy them. Our movement is making good progress in Luzerne, Carbon, and Schuylkill Counties." A bundle will be sent to Comrade Evans weekly till after Election Day, for distribution. The Worker realizes that the toilers in the strike field have no money to spare now, and is glad to supply all the literature it can, gratis, to those who will undertake to distribute it.

Comrade Harris of Edwardsdale, Luzerne County writes encouragingly of the situation there and takes occasion to thank The Worker and Comrade Sirobell of Newark, N. J., for literature sent free for distribution. He says Comrade Jenkins has good prospects of going to the Legislature.

Comrade James of Mahanoy City, Pa., has distributed five hundred copies of "Labor Politics and Socialist Politics" among the workingmen of that place. This is a good pamphlet to put into the hands of trade unionists, as it makes clear the reasons for independent political action of the working class and shows the difference between the uncompromising tactics of Socialism and the vacillating and futile policy of the other labor parties which rise and disappear from time to time in various localities. Any comrade in the strike field who is willing to distribute copies of the pamphlet should write at once to this office. Comrade Galvin of Boston has paid for five thousand to be given out freely in that region. Write at once, before the supply is exhausted.

The secretary of one of the local unions of the U. M. W. of A. in the strike fields, to whom a weekly bundle of The Worker is being sent, writes: "I am very glad to receive your excellent paper. It is read with much interest by the members of our local. If you will kindly continue sending copies, I will gladly receive and distribute them and work for the interest of Labor and Socialism." We shall certainly continue sending. We do not expect to get subscriptions in the coal field while the strike lasts. What we do expect is to get votes for Slayton and the whole ticket of the Socialist Party—and such a number of them as will scare the pants out of Baer and his accomplices.

Comrade Ellis of Olympia, Wash., writes: "In traveling about the country in search of work I occasionally come across a copy of The Worker, which I regard as a straight Socialist paper. It hews to the line and calls things by their correct names. * * * A man by the name of E. Martin, by earnest efforts in distributing literature has been trying to interest people here in the Socialist movement. He finds it slow work, but keeps pegging away, goes from place to place, not caring for his own comfort, his only thought and object being to do something for Socialism. * * * Last night at the Opera House in this city, J. Stitt Wilson delivered an able address on 'The Coming Social Revolution.' He is a man of pronounced individuality, a thorough scholar, and a forcible speaker. * * * He found that we need missionary work, now and here. If someone of his ability could come here and remain a week, possibly the dry bones might be waked up."—Never fear, Comrade Ellis, it's coming, in Olympia and everywhere else. Such faithful workers as the one you tell of, whose only thought is to advance the movement, are sowing seed which is sure to take root, though it may take some time for it to germinate, and whose fruit will be reaped in the emancipation of the whole working class.

Local charters were issued by the National Committee last week to Central City and Deadwood, S. D.; Van Buren, Ark.; and Barre, Vt. South Dakota was also granted a state charter.

The tour of John C. Chase has been abruptly ended by his nomination for Governor of Massachusetts, and his decision to return to the state for the campaign. Dates arranged in the West have been necessarily cancelled by the National Secretary.

The next regular meeting of the County Committee of the Socialist Party of Luzerne County, Pa., will be held at the new headquarters, Room 78, Simon Long Building, Wilkes Barre, on Tuesday, October 7, at 7:30 o'clock. This will be the last regular meeting before Election Day and very important. All candidates are expected to be present. Under the new constitution each city, borough, and township is entitled to one delegate.

"Mother" Jones will pay a special visit to Massachusetts during the third week of October, and the following dates have been arranged by the Executive Committee of Socialist Party Clubs: Sunday, Oct. 19, Boston, 20, Haverhill; 21, Lynn; 22, Brockton; 23, Quincy; 24, Rockland; 25, Worcester; 26, Holyoke. At the Boston meeting, John C. Chase, candidate for Governor and Representative Carey will also speak from the same platform. This meeting promises to be one of the largest ever held in Boston. One of the largest theaters will be engaged, and the entire proceeds will go to the striking miners. Comrades of Boston are called upon to make this meeting the great success of the season.

Comrade Thomas of Ticonderoga writes: "Socialism is not exactly popular here, but is becoming more so. We have no local speakers, but are distributing party literature and papers." The Social Democratic candidate for Congress in the Twenty-sixth District is Lansing B. Curtis and for Senator, Thirty-first District, Isaac Peyser. The Essex County ticket stands: For Assembly, Frank Stickney; School Commissioner, First District, Edgar A. Goodspeed; Second, Wm. M. A. Cowen; County Judge, Daniel Lee; County Clerk, Geo. L. Washburn; Treasurer, Wm. Goodspeed; Superintendent of the Poor, Emory L. Whitney; Coroner, John Acome.

Alive to the situation the comrades of Local Philadelphia are bestirring themselves to gather funds for the Socialist propaganda among the miners of the anthracite coal fields. In order to swell the fund a grand concert and ball will be held at the Labor Lyceum, Sixth and Brown streets, on the evening of Monday, October 13. Each comrade is called upon to do his or her share to make the undertaking a marked success in every respect. J. De Bruyn is secretary of the committee in charge.

State Organizer Mailly says that the Massachusetts state organization cannot begin to fill the demands made for Socialist speakers in all parts of the state. He is doing the best he can to send speakers to the points where they will do the most good, and expects an unparalleled increase in the vote.

The Socialist Party of Toledo has issued an excellent campaign book of ninety-six pages containing a number of addresses delivered by Comrade John S. Pyle, the Socialist candidate for Congress in the Ninth Congressional District of Ohio and a large amount of other interesting matter.

The smoker held by the Workingmen's Educational Association at the Bloomfield Labor Lyceum, 90 Myrtle street, last week was a great success; forty-two new members were enrolled. The applause given to the speeches of Comrades Neben and Billings and the number of party buttons sold indicated that the young workingmen who filled the hall were very favorably inclined toward Socialism.—On Saturday, Oct. 4, the Socialist Party of Bloomfield will hold the first dance of the season at the Labor Lyceum.

Local Hartford, Conn., has decided to secure the services of Comrade Ufert for a week in that city, beginning Oct. 5. The next meeting of the local will be on Oct. 9, at 284 Asylum street.

The comrades of Cambridge and Sommerville, Mass., have organized a Socialist Orchestra for the purpose of assisting at public meetings or entertainments of the Socialist Party in Boston and vicinity. They will give their services gratis to any Socialist club or society desiring their co-operation. Communications should be addressed to S. Beaumant, Orchestra Secretary, 782 Main street, Cambridge, Mass.

New York State.

Every Socialist in the state of New York should carry always in his pocket a few copies of the campaign booklet issued by the State Committee, ready to hand out to anyone he may meet who wants information about the party. If your local or district has not yet ordered a supply, see that it is done at once.

The Social Democratic primaries and city convention have been held in the city of Yonkers and the following ticket nominated: For Justice of the Peace, Geo. C. Chedeayne, a carpenter; for Aldermen: First Ward, Herman Bohs, a machinist; Second, Andrew Fitzpatrick, a painter; Third, James Wilson, a bricklayer; Fourth, Robert Jacobson, a drug clerk; Fifth, Fred. Cassiens, a cabinetmaker; Sixth, Edward Lee, a machinist. No nomination was made in the Seventh, but the committee was authorized to fill the place. Godfrey Lehner, candidate for Assembly in the First District of Westchester County, is a machinist and an active worker for Socialism and trade unionism. "On our whole county, legislative, and city ticket," writes a comrade, "there is not a man who is not a wage-worker, except the candidate for Coroner; but as we expect this official to sit on the dead body of capitalism, to decide that it came to death 'through natural causes,' we selected a physician well known throughout the town as an active and aggressive Socialist. Our prospects are bright. Literature is being distributed freely and three-month subscriptions to The Worker are being sent to every man who wants it and to some who do not."

Comrade Robert Paine of Balmville, Social Democratic candidate in the Twenty-third Senatorial District, held a street meeting at Highland Falls last Saturday evening, in which much interest was manifested. Comrade Paine presented convincing arguments. He is doing good work for the cause. Comrade G. J. Lindhoe followed and made some stirring remarks. More interest was shown than at any previous meeting. Comrade Brown spoke at Highland Falls on Oct. 11.

During the past week Comrade Reich, Literature Agent of the State Committee, has sent out party literature to locals or individuals in the following places: Binghamton, Cohoes, Coxsackie, Elmira, Fort Edward, Fulton, Hudson, Herkimer, Ithaca, Kingston, Mt. Vernon, Newark, Niagara, Olean, Pearl River, Port Jarvis, Poughkeepsie, Painted Post, Rochester, Rome, Redman, Springville, Sparkill, Union Springs, Schuylerville, Utica, Wellsville, West Town, White Plains, Watervliet, and Watertown. At the beginning of the present week, although 400,000 pieces of literature had been printed for the State Committee, less than 4,000 pieces were left in the headquarters. More is being printed—and going out as fast as it comes in.

William Thurston Brown speaks at Yonkers on Oct. 8 and Frederick Krafft on Oct. 10.

State Secretary Slobodin has received official notice from the Secretary of State at Albany that the ticket of the Social Democratic Party has been duly filed there.

New York City.

Algernon Lee lectured on "The Lessons of the Coal Strike" in the headquarters of the Voice of Labor, 247 Henry street, last Sunday evening. Comrade Katz lectures this Friday, Oct. 3.

Every assembly district organization of the Social Democratic Party in this city and every educational or propaganda club in sympathy with the party should at once put out in front of its headquarters a banner, a transparency, or, at least, a large and attractive sign, showing the party name and emblem, and the state and district candidates. It is of the utmost importance to bring these things to the attention of the people, so that Socialist votes will not be cast in the wrong column.

The 15th and 17th A. D. has changed its meeting place to 413 W. Fiftieth street, where meetings will be held on the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of each month.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 4, the 21st A. D., S. D. P., will hold a high-class vaudeville entertainment and reception in Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue. The proceeds will go to pay campaign expenses. The Twenty-first is doing splendid work this year and deserves support. Tickets are 25 cents.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville had a well attended meeting last Thursday in spite of the bad weather, Miss Lillian Holt presiding. An interesting discussion of Socialist principles was held, the majority of the members present taking part. The Club made a second appropriation of $10 for the campaign fund, and also undertook the addressing of twelve or fifteen hundred envelopes for the sending out of party literature in the Yorkville districts. All young people who are interested in Socialism are invited to join the Club, which meets every Thursday evening, in the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 East Eighty-sixth street. The dues are only 10 cents a month and the object of the Club is to combine Socialist education, work for the Social Democratic Party, and social pleasure for the members.

The Russian Socialist Club has opened headquraters at 135 Henry street, with a free reading room, where Socialist and other periodicals in various languages may be found.

James N. Wood will lecture at Colonial Hall, Sunday evening, Oct. 5, on "The Coming Crisis." This lecture of Comrade Wood's is well worth hearing, and all readers of The Worker are invited to come and bring their friends.

The General Committee of Local New York will meet Saturday, Oct. 4, at 8 p. m. Very important business will be transacted, and all delegates should attend.

The 7th A. D., Brooklyn, held a very encouraging open-air meeting at the corner of Fort Hamilton avenue and Thirty-ninth street last Saturday. The speakers were Comrade Miss Dahme, Ward, Cuno, Cassidy, and Lackemacher. The literature committee sold forty-six pamphlets and distributed much other literature. The speakers held the audience for two hours and a half and were frequently applauded. After the meeting the speakers were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Ward at their home on Forty-fifth street. Any Socialist living in the 7th A. D. is urged to send his name and address to C. W. Cavanaugh, Secretary, 1524 Fifty-ninth street, Brooklyn.

"What a magnificent meeting! An epoch maker, I am sure. Everything so strong and clear and manly—no bullying or mud-slinging or anything of the kind. I am prouder than ever of being a Socialist." So writes Comrade Owen R. Lovejoy of Mt. Vernon, in regard to last Saturday's meeting in Cooper Union. And so say we, all of us.

The 16th A. D. holds an open-air meeting Friday evening, Oct. 3, at Avenue C and Third street, with Phillips, Reich, and Weinstein as speakers; and on Monday there will be two such meetings—at Avenue C and Sixth street, with Lee, Goldstein, and Reich, and at Stanton and Attorney streets, where Henry Cohn and Berthold Korn will speak in Jewish, Comrade Fieldman acting as chairman. At one meeting last week a hundred copies of Feigenbaum's pamphlet were sold.

By order of the County Committee, Local Kings County will employ by the day in agitation work comrades who are out of employment if such comrades will communicate with the Organizer, Warren Atkinson, 122 Fort Green Place. Call after 6 p. m.

At the last regular meeting of Local Richmond one new member was admitted and two more proposed. Comrade LeGrand and Max Thalmer, reporting on the party meeting in the New York Labor Lyceum, appealed for aid for the strike agitation fund. A collection of $7.70 was taken; the Local then made an appropriation to bring the sum up to $10 and divided it equally between the strike fund of the Miners' Union and the agitation fund of the Pennsylvania State Committee; the Local had already made one donation of $5 for the latter fund. Six thousand pamphlets and leaflets were ordered for distribution and a committee was chosen to arrange for a ratification meeting. Comrade Ward turned in $3 for the Daily Fund, from his "punch card." Dues to the amount of $5.40 were paid. Open-air meetings were also arranged for.

At last week's meeting of the Bronx Agitation Committee Organizer Spranger asked to be relieved of a part of the excessive work now required of him and Comrade Eipes was accordingly elected Recording Secretary and Comrade Bürgerald, Literature Agent. Considerable business was transacted. It was reported that Carpenters' Unions Nos. 56 and 464 had accepted lists for the campaign fund; also that a transparency showing the ticket and emblem would soon be put up in front of the Clubhouse at 3390 Third avenue. On the Organizer's recommendation it was decided that The Worker be sent to every registered voter of the S. L. P. until election and that literature be mailed to all S. D. P. voters who are not party members. The Committee ordered ten thousand each of the leaflets, "Beef and Coal Prices," and "What Is Socialism?" Ten thousand throwaway cards, and a thousand copies of the Campaign Booklet. The Financial Secretary reported receipts, $160.39; expenses, $159.51; balance, 88 cents. Comrades who have campaign fund lists are requested to turn in moneys at once, and any comrade who has no list should attend his branch and get one. Work is going well, but more money is needed.

Sunday afternoon lectures have been begun in the Clubhouse, 3390 Third avenue, beginning at 2:30 p. m. All workingmen in the Bronx are invited to attend.

The 14th A. D. will have a banner-raising before the headquarters at 238 E. Tenth street on Saturday evening, Oct. 4. James N. Wood, the Social Democratic candidate for Assembly in this district, L. Phillips, and others will speak. Socialists in the district should see that their friends come and hear our speakers. After the speaking there will be an entertainment with good musical and dramatic talent.

Die Fackel and the Voice of Labor are giving good assistance in the campaign on the lower East Side. A large number of meetings are being held in English and in Jewish, in the 4th, 8th, and 12th A. D. On Friday, Oct. 3, there will be a grand rally of the 12th A. D. at Attorney and Grand, Attorney and Broome, Attorney and Delancey, Broome and Clinton, and Broome and Ridge streets. William Edlin, candidate for Assembly, and numerous others will speak.

FOR THE DAILY.

The conference for the Daily Globe will meet Thursday, Oct. 9, 8 P. M. at the Labor Lyceum (4 E. Fourth sire t. Every Delegate should be present.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on, when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

SCANDINAVIAN SOCIALISTS ORGANIZE FOR S. D. P.

The Swedish Socialists of New York City, many of the most active of whom continued to adhere to the S. L. P. for some time after the split in 1899, until convinced by further experience of the falseness of its policy, are now getting together to work actively for Socialism under the emblem of the Arm and Torch.

A well attended meeting was held last Sunday at 216 E. Forty-first street to discuss the question, "Shall we let Socialist agitation among the Scandinavians die out?"

After eight or ten speakers had shown how the spying system and humbug-politics of DeLeonism had disorganized the once strong and aggressive Scandinavian Socialist clubs in this city and had dismissed the different methods of the S. L. P. and the Social Democratic Party, it was resolved to re-establish a Scandinavian Socialist Club and to do active work in support of the Social Democratic Party and its class-conscious ticket.

The business organization of the Swedish Socialist paper, "Arbetaren," was such that a few men, mostly in Boston, were able to get control of it and to disregard the will of the majority of the Scandinavian comrades. For the last three years this paper has done little but echo DeLeon's erratic denunciations of the Social Democratic Party in this country and of the whole Socialist movement of Europe except one faction in France and the Anarchists in Spain. So far as this city is concerned, the result is that "Arbetaren" has lost most of its readers here, that it is run at a heavy deficit, that Scandinavian Branch No. 7 of Newark and the Scandinavian Socialist Club of Northern New York are now dead, and that two once flourishing clubs in New York and Brooklyn have now not more than twenty members in good standing, taken together.

An announcement will soon be made in The Worker for another meeting of the new club and all Scandinavian Socialists who are opposed to ring-rule are invited to join. E. N.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

It is reported from all over the city and state of New York that the working people are more ready to read Socialist literature than ever before. The Food Trust and the Coal Trust have set them to thinking.

Comrades and friends of the Social Democratic Party should not spare any effort in taking advantage of this state of the public mind. Literature explaining the purposes of the party and calling attention to our ticket and emblem should be distributed everywhere—from house to house, in the shops and factories, at meetings in the streets or in public halls, wherever the workers can be reached.

The State Committee has the following literature on hand. It is the duty of the comrades to see that it is used at once.

IN ENGLISH.

"What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," a leaflet by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor. Having named the author, it is not necessary to add that this leaflet is terse, clear, interesting, and convincing. Prices, postpaid: Two thousand, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

An effective throwaway card, bearing the party name and emblem, the ticket, with portraits of Hanford, Brown, Abbott, and a cartoon of "the man who will never be a Socialist." Price, postpaid, $1 a thousand; smaller quantities in proportion.

"Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," by Algernon Lee; second edition. Especially good to use among trade unionists who have begun to understand the necessity for independent political action. Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies, 20 cents; fifty, 85 cents; one hundred, $1.50.

"The Tragedy of the Vote," a splendid leaflet by John Spargo. Postpaid, 60 cents a thousand.

"Beef and Coal Prices," a clear and timely little leaflet by Henry Slobodin. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"What Socialism Is," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"Unionism, Wise and Otherwise," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

The Campaign Book is out this week. It is a 32-page booklet, containing the ticket and platform, portraits of the candidates, cartoons, several timely articles, and a variety of valuable information. It will be supplied at the rate of $5.50 a thousand, postpaid.

Posters, bearing the party name, emblem, and ticket, are now ready, and will be sent free to all who will attend to displaying them.

IN JEWISH.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?"—a 32-page pamphlet by B. Feigenbaum. An excellent thing for propaganda among Jewish-speaking workingmen. Price, postpaid: Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.25.

IN GERMAN.

A good leaflet by Alexander Jonas, including also the state platform, ticket, and emblem. Price, $1.50 a thousand.

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas," a strong appeal to the minds of thinking workingmen. Single copy, 5 cents; ten or more, at 2½ cents each.

"Die Mission der Arbeiterden Klasse," by Charles H. Vail. One of our best short pamphlets, by a well known Socialist writer and lecturer. Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.

"Municipale Forderungen der Social Demokratie." Although written especially for use in city campaigns, it is useful at all times, because it shows the attitude of the Social Democratic Party on what are called "practical" questions, in harmony with the party's basic principles. Single copy, 5 cents; ten copies, 25 cents; fifty, $1; one hundred, $1.50.

Isolated readers of The Worker, who do not belong to the party organization, can help in the work. If you cannot use a thousand leaflets or cards, send for a quarter's worth and distribute them in your neighborhood.

For all campaign literature, send orders, with cash, to H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, Literature Agent of the State Committee.

R-I-P-A-N-S
I had been troubled with my stomach for the past 16 or 17 years, and, as I have been acting as a drug clerk for the past 13 years, I have had a good chance to try all remedies in the market, but never found anything, until we got in a supply of Ripans Tabules, that did me any good. They have entirely cured me. At times I could hold nothing on my stomach, and I had a sour stomach most all the time; in fact, I was miserable, and life was hardly worth living. I was called cross and crabbed by my friends, but now they all notice the change in me.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength at present consists of 190 local branches with 20,000 male and 4,000 female members, a rapidly increasing membership who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $2.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuously or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $3.00 and $1.50 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

——If you get six yearly subs. for The Worker, you will surely make five Socialists. This is certainly reward enough; but besides that, you get a good watch for your trouble.

——Now is a good time to get Hanford's "Railroading in the United States" into the hands of "L" employees in New York City. Ten copies, 25 cents.

——Always carry a few leaflets and cards bearing the party ticket and emblem in your pocket. Leave one in every street-car you ride on, in the saloon, in the cigar store, in the barber shop, in the restaurant. They will do their work.

STATE COMMITTEE.

At the meeting of the State Committee, held in the Labor Lyceum, September 24, Secretary Slobodin reported that tours through the state are being arranged for Alexander Jonas, who will speak in German, and for William Thurston Brown. Mother Jones also expects to be in the state during October.

Charters were granted to new locals organized by Comrade Spring in Batavia, Wells, and Kingston.

Correspondence was received from Buffalo reporting that there are now four branches in that city, and that a central committee has been organized.

Organizer Warren Atkinson of Brooklyn wrote regarding propaganda in Kings County, stating that street meetings were being held regularly and that several hall meetings were being organized. A course of Sunday evening lectures will be held at 315 Washington street.

Rochester reported an excellent meeting, addressed by Hanford and Bach, and asks for Brown at the Rochester Labor Lyceum some Sunday during October. Charles H. Vail also spoke to good meetings in Rochester.

Wells and Highland Falls reported nomination of county tickets.

Pearl River, Greenpoint, and Astoria wrote asking for speakers. Action was taken to send speakers to these places.

Locals Gloversville, Schenectady, and Onondaga County sent for stamps, and financial reports were received from Newburgh, Gloversville, and Onondaga County.

One hundred and fifty thousand pieces of campaign literature were ordered printed.

John Spargo, Morris Hillquit, and A. F. Schorr, of Buffalo, wrote accepting their nominations for National Committeeman, to succeed Job Harriman.

State Organizer F. J. Spring reported to the State Committee the result of his eight weeks' tour through the state. He organized six new locals, besides new branches in Rochester and Buffalo. He visited Elmira, Binghamton, Warsaw, Amsterdam, Hudson, Saugerties, Lockport, Tonawanda, and several other places which have hitherto been outside of Socialist influence. He obtained one hundred three-month subscriptions to The Worker and eight yearlies.

It was decided that Spring should visit New York trade unions until October 1. After that he will spend one week each in Watertown, Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo. He expects to return to California November 1.

Comrade Spring strongly recommended that after his departure a permanent state organizer be employed, and declared that, in his opinion, regular lecture circuits would prove the best means for maintaining interest and activity in isolated centers.

Vail at Peekskill.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Charles H. Vail, who was last year the Socialist candidate for Governor of New Jersey, spoke in this place Monday night under the auspices of the Social Democratic Party. The "Daily Republican," in reporting the meeting, is compelled to admit that "the enthusiastic crowd which gathered at the corner of Park and Division streets to hear Mr. Vail plainly manifested that there is considerable interest taken this year in the Social Democratic ticket."

Comrade Vail's speech was calm and logical and, at the same time, powerful and convincing. He held the close attention of the crowd from start to finish. He exposed both old parties, showing that their foundation principles are opposed to the interest of the working class and that their history forms one long record of subserviency to the capitalists and outrages upon the workers.

On the other hand, he showed that the Social Democratic Party, demanding public ownership and democratic control of the means of production, strikes at the root of the system by which the workers are kept in poverty, and that this party, depending solely upon the working class for both moral and financial support, can alone be depended on to represent the workers' interests in politics.

It is perfectly practicable, he said, for the working class to take the political power into their own hands. They are the most numerous class, they have the votes and they can elect the whole Social Democratic ticket and sweep the country for Socialism, whenever they choose to stand together and cease depending upon business men and politicians to do their thinking for them. But even though the Social Democratic Party should not so much as elect a single official in this whole state, yet every vote added to its total will be for the benefit of the toilers. Supposing we poll a hundred thousand votes in this state of New York this fall, with the prospect of doubling the number next year—even though we did not elect one of our candidates—the old-party politicians would see that the working class meant to use their power, and they would hasten to ask what the workingmen wanted and to grant their demands.

John J. Helcker presided over the meeting, which has decidedly strengthened the Social Democratic movement in Peekskill. Hard work is being done here and the results will show in November.

FOR WHOM WILL YOU VOTE?

The Republican party will not nominate a workingman for Governor of New York. Neither will the Democratic party. They will both nominate corporation lawyers or "eminent business men."

Benjamin Hanford, the candidate of the Social Democratic Party, is a printer, has worked at his trade from boyhood, joined the union more than twenty-five years ago, has gone through strikes and lockouts, knows the interests of his class and has always been true to them.

Workingmen of New York, for whom will you vote?

KINGS COUNTY.

At the regular meeting of the Kings County Committee the first matter of importance was the appeal of Comrades Miss Innes Forbes, W. F. Haywood, and Wm. W. Atkinson of Pennsylvania for funds to carry on the work among the miners. It was decided to give them $43 which, together with some since added, constituted half of the money collected at the Brooklyn ratification meeting.

The committee in charge of the ratification meeting reported that it was most successful and that the amount collected was larger than at any meeting of the party ever before held in the Labor Lyceum.

It is the intention of the County Committee to hold another mass meeting some time before election and the matter has been left in charge of the committee who were in charge of the ratification meeting—Comrades Atkinson, Weil, Ward, Rixon, Gerber, and Heuer.

A communication was received from the State Committee calling attention to the necessity of at once making a liberal response to the appeal for funds. It was stated that the reason the Brooklyn returns had not come in sooner was that there had been some delay in obtaining the subscription lists. The Organizer was instructed to write an appeal to the progressive unions and sympathizing societies for subscriptions to the campaign fund.

The following sums have been collected on campaign funds lists, so far:

List 497, M. Kissel, 20th A. D., Br. 2	$9.00
List 500, Chas. Meyer, do	5.10
List 411, P. Larsen, 1st, 2, and 3d A. D.	.85
List 468, B. Weppler, do	1.00
List 416, F. T. Heineman, do	5.00
List 602, T. Karwelles, 20th A. D., Br. 1	7.75
List 564, B. Kaufman, 19th A. D.	1.00
List 556, J. Mueller, do	2.00
List 569, G. Apitzsch, do	2.50
Total	$34.80

The Organizer was instructed to obtain 15,000 more of the Hanford leaflet, 2,500 of "Child Labor," and 2,500 of the Campaign Booklet. Comrade Rixon, who is in charge of the literature, was empowered to duplicate the order as soon as this supply is exhausted. Fifteen dollars was appropriated for the more expensive and standard literature, to which Comrade Atkinson added $5.

The Organizer makes another and pressing appeal for more speakers and asks each assembly district to see that the speakers are met at the appointed places.

Comrades who are out of work are called on to help in distributing literature in unorganized districts, for which work they will be paid by the County Committee.

Five applicants were admitted to membership.

The amount collected for the support of the miners up to date is $61.50, of which the 13th and 14th A. D. collected $0.25. The Campaign Secretary reports that nominations have been made in all Congressional and Senatorial districts. In the 2d, 4th, and 8th A. D. no nominations were made.

Delegates are requested to take notice that the meetings of the County Committee are to be held on the second and fourth Sundays of the month, beginning at two o'clock p. m. from now till election.

THE HAVERHILL CAMPAIGN.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 27.—The Socialist Party now has all its candidates in the field here and is certain greatly to increase its vote.

Rev. George E. Littlefield is our candidate in the Sixth Congressional District. Comrade Littlefield is well and favorably known in the district. A committee, of which Chas. M. Watson is chairman and Geo. A. Kane is secretary, will undertake to organize every place in the district, which includes Salem, Newburyport, Amesbury, Georgetown, Beverly, and other cities and towns to the number of twenty-six. It is believed that the Socialist Party will take second place in the district, at least, when the votes are counted.

Emerson G. Gordon of Beverly is the candidate for Councillor, with Eucharist Bellefeuille of Haverhill for Senator from the Fourth Essex District. Fred E. Weed of Lynn heads the county ticket as candidate for County Commissioner.

An active campaign is going on in Haverhill. A rally is held every Saturday evening on Washington Square. On Oct. 4 Comrade White of Saco, Me., will be the speaker and on the following Saturday William Mally will speak. Frank A. Sieverman of Rochester and Representative Carey addressed the meeting of Sept. 20 and had a splendid audience. Next Thursday, Oct. 7, Carey will speak again on Lafayette Square.

William Thurston Brown had a good reception here. He spoke in the City Hall, with Comrade Littlefield, and had an audience of over a thousand people. The City Hall has been secured for Thursday, Oct. 23, when Father McGrady and Comrades Littlefield and Carey will speak to what promises to be one of the biggest meetings in the history of the Socialist movement here. On the following Thursday, John C. Chase, our candidate for Governor, will speak, along with Representative MacCartney and Rev. John Ellis.

THE CARPENTERS IN CONVENTION.

Two Weeks Does Not Suffice for Their Work—McGuire Case Disposed of, at Last.

The convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters at Atlanta, Ga., which began its sessions on Sept. 15, is expected to adjourn Wednesday night, Oct. 1, as The Worker goes to press.

On Monday of this week the six delegates were chosen to report the Brotherhood in the next two conventions of the American Federation of Labor. The vote resulted in the election of General Secretary Frank Duffy, Wheeler of California, Slayton of Pennsylvania, G. F. Duffy of Chicago, Bohnen of New York, and Grimes of Texas. Slayton is the Socialist candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Five new members of the General Executive Board were also chosen—Ogletree of Alabama, Workman of Ohio, Meyer of California, Wellman of Kansas City, and Ainery of Montreal—the last named without opposition.

The election of officers was held last Friday, Wm. D. Huber of Philadelphia was re-elected to the presidency on the third ballot. On the second ballot, Guerin of Troy was chosen as First Vice-President and Connelly as Second Vice-President. Frank Duffy was re-elected as General Secretary by a unanimous and hearty vote. Thomas Nash of Chicago is the choice of the convention for Treasurer, if the general vote confirms the amendment creating that separate office.

The McGuire case has taken up a great deal of the convention's time, as the delegates required information on all the details, which involved the reading at length, not only of the reports of the investigation, but of the minutes of many sessions of the G. E. B. The reports showed that McGuire had, during a long period, and in many different ways been defrauding the union of large sums of money.

McGuire was given the floor to reply, but he added nothing to what was stated in the circular which has been before the union for several months.

A motion to adopt the minority report of the investigating committee, providing for criminal proceedings against McGuire, was defeated, and by a vote of 118 to 136 the majority report was adopted, providing that a second payment of $1,000 should be accepted as settling the affair, and criminal proceedings dropped.

Steps were taken by which it is hoped to bring about an amicable union with the Amalgamated Carpenters, to avoid dual organization with the conflicts over jurisdiction and various sources of friction which it involves. The details were left to the G. E. B. to arrange.

——One of our county organizers found one workingman satisfied with his condition. He didn't want to hear anything about Socialism. He lived in a shack and was doing his wife's washing.—Seattle Socialist.

TO ALL WORKINGMEN IN NEW YORK.

A vote for Hanford and Brown is a vote for the enforcement of labor laws now on the statute books, but now violated with impunity.

It is a vote for a general eight-hour law, which would put more men to work.

It is a vote against the contract system and for union labor on all public work.

It is a vote against the employment of women and children, and for more and better schools.

It is a vote against the use of injunctions and militia to break strikes.

It is a vote in favor of using the power of the state to help workers in improving their condition.

These are some of the IMMEDIATE advantages for which you will vote when you put a cross under the name of the SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY and the emblem of the ARM AND TORCH.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

CAMPAIGN IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Chase, Candidate for Governor, Is on the Field.

Carey, MacCartney, Gibbs, Littlefield Mailly, and other Bay State Speakers, Are Kept Busy—Mother Jones, Sieverman, McGrady, and Hagerty to Help—Prospects Are Bright.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—The campaign of Massachusetts may be said to have fairly opened last night when our candidate for Governor, John C. Chase, began his tour of the state at North Adams. Chase returned from the Pacific Coast on Sunday in response to the call of the party in Massachusetts for his services during the campaign. There can be no doubt that his selection as the Socialist candidate for Governor was a wise one. The events of the past few weeks have shown that he was the very man to head the ticket at this time.

All New England is stirred up over the prospect for the coming winter. Here, more than in any other part of the country, will the threatened coal famine, resulting from the strike, be felt. The people of the Eastern states are completely cut off from any other supply of coal for fuel except that which may be brought from England, and the quantity in that case would be too small to afford any great relief. In every city and town mass meetings are being held in protest against the Coal Barons, and relief committees are being appointed to provide means to tide over the coming emergency.

The politicians are entirely at sea, and, though they are trying to present remedies, none of their utterances receive serious attention. It is a condition, not a theory, that confronts the people, and the absurdity and irrationality of the present system of private ownership of industry is being brought home to them with greater force than ever before. Perhaps none are more outspoken in their opinions upon the present situation than the preachers; from nearly every pulpit the mine owners are being denounced for their attitude towards the miners. We know, of course, that this is simply because the material interests of every person in New England has been acutely affected. Were it not for this, there would be little feeling evinced for the miners in their magnificent struggle. Confronted by a New England winter, with no fuel in sight, the people are beginning to think and talk Socialism, and we may expect a large number of them to vote for Socialism in November.

The Socialists' Work.

Government ownership of the coal mines is becoming a popular cry, and the only thing for the Socialist Party to do now is to point out that the workers themselves must own the government, as government ownership with capitalists still in control of the government will give us little better than we have to-day.

It is fortunate, therefore, that the Socialist Party in Massachusetts can present as its candidate for Governor a man who not only can state the Socialist position clearly, but whose record entitles him to respect and consideration. We shall have a campaign this year such as we have never had before. The tours of our principal speakers are now arranged almost up to Election Day. There will be no confusion and a great deal of work will be done.

When Comrade Chase arrived in Boston Sunday morning he was greeted by about a hundred of the most active party workers in Boston and vicinity, gathered together on very short notice. The reception given him was an enthusiastic and spontaneous one. In fact, as he said, it "rattled" him for the time. From the depot the crowd marched to 724 Washington street, where an impromptu meeting was held and speeches made by Comrades Chase, Coulter, and Carey. It was an auspicious opening for the campaign, and gave inspiration to all present.

Chase's Dates.

As The Worker goes to press, Chase has spoken at North Adams and Pittsfield. His future dates, as now arranged, are: Oct. 9, Springfield; Oct. 10, Warren; Oct. 11, Ware; Oct. 13, Webster; Oct. 14, Natick; Oct. 15, Milford; Oct. 16, Clinton; Oct. 17, Waltham; Oct. 19, Boston; Oct. 21, Lynn; Oct. 22, Brockton; Oct. 28, Rockland; Oct. 29, Quincy; Oct. 30, Haverhill; Oct. 31, East Boston; Nov. 1, Brighton; Nov. 2, Worcester.

Carey and MacCartney have been working hard, as usual, speaking almost every night and sometimes twice a day. Carey's dates are filled until Election Day except for Nov. 2. In addition to the party meetings, he will be one of the principal speakers at a demonstration on behalf of the miners to be held by the Brockton Central Labor Union, Thursday, Oct. 9. On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 11, he will speak at a similar demonstration arranged by a joint committee of the Lynn C. L. U. and the Socialist Party. The party dates arranged are: Friday, Oct. 10, Lawrence; Oct. 11, Clinton; Oct. 12, Worcester; Oct. 13, Fitchburg; Oct. 14, Leominster; Oct. 15, Marlboro; Oct. 16, Chicopee Falls; Oct. 17, Springfield; Oct. 18, Holyoke; Oct. 19, Boston; Oct. 20, Haverhill; Oct. 21, South Boston; Oct. 22 to 24, Haverhill; Oct. 25, Gloucester; Oct. 26, Lowell; Oct. 27, Haverhill; Oct. 28 to 30, Rockland; Oct. 31, Brockton; Nov. 1 and 3, Haverhill.

MacCartney's dates, beginning Friday, are as follows: Oct. 10, Franklin; Oct. 11, Walpole; Oct. 12, Norwood; Oct. 13, Roxbury; Oct. 15, Somerville; Oct. 16, Lawrence; Oct. 17, Hanson; Oct. 20, Charlestown; Oct. 21, South Hanover; Oct. 22, Brighton; Oct. 23, Centre Hanover; Oct. 24, Rockland; Oct. 25, Quincy; Oct. 26, South Braintree; Oct. 27, Hanover; Oct. 28, Rockland; Oct. 29, South Hanson; Oct. 30, Haverhill; Oct. 31, East Boston; Nov. 3, Brockton. On Oct. 9 he will speak with William Mailly at a demonstration for the miners by the Waltham C. L. U.

Comrade Gibbs of Worcester is candidate for Congress in his district and, along with the local comrades, is putting up a warm contest. Nevertheless he is speaking in other parts of the state when he can, and the following dates are made: Oct. 10, Cambridge; Oct. 16, Everett; Oct. 17, Saugus; Nov. 3, Rockland. Comrade Gibbs is willing to give two dates weekly until the last week of the campaign, when he will try to give more. Geo. E. Littlefield of Haverhill is also conducting his campaign for Congress in the Sixth District, and has given the following dates outside: Oct. 17, Brighton; Oct. 24, Brockton; Oct. 30, Somerville.

Frank Sieverman of Rochester, N. Y., has given his services to the party for three days a week, and the following dates are fixed: Oct. 11, Holbrook; Oct. 13, Beverly; Oct. 15, South Braintree; Oct. 18, Haverhill; Oct. 22, Somerville.

Mother Jones' tour has been fully arranged, and the comrades in the following places are preparing to give her a great reception: Sunday, Oct. 19, 3 p. m., Apollo Garden, Roxbury; Oct. 20, Haverhill; Oct. 21, Lynn; Oct. 22, Brockton; Oct. 23, Quincy; Oct. 24, Rockland; Oct. 25, Worcester; Oct. 26, Holyoke. At the Roxbury meeting, Chase and Carey will also speak, and ten cents admission will be charged, the proceeds going to the miners. Carey will also speak with Mother Jones at Haverhill, Chase at Lynn and Brockton, and MacCarthey at Rockland.

During the third week in October Father McGrady will fill four dates, three of them being: Adams, Oct. 20; Springfield, Oct. 21; and Haverhill, Oct. 23. Father Hagerty will speak at the following places: Oct. 26, Leominster; Oct. 27, Clinton; Oct. 28, Chelsea; Oct. 29, Brockton; Oct. 30, Brighton; Nov. 2, Lynn; Nov. 3, Rockland. There is every indication that these meetings will be thoroughly successful.

William Mailly speaks at Waltham, Oct. 9; at Haverhill, Oct. 11; at Newburyport, before a church society, discussing the miners' strike, Oct. 12; Fitchburg, Oct. 13; Milford, Oct. 15; Ward Seventeen, Boston, Oct. 20; Lynn, Oct. 21; Reading, Oct. 22; Roxbury, Oct. 27; Everett, Oct. 30; before the Cigar Makers' Union, Boston, Nov. 3.

Dates have also been arranged for David Taylor, Levi H. Turner, Geo. G. Cutting, Patrick Mahoney, W. J. Coyne, Joseph Spero, Squire E. Putney, Mrs. L. H. Merrifield, L. B. Talbot, and others. The comrades everywhere are working hard and local speakers are being developed.

Election Prospects.

The outlook for an increased representation in the State House is growing brighter. From several points come reports indicating good prospects for the election of Socialist representatives. At Brockton the comrades in the Ninth Plymouth district say there is a good chance of the election of Ramsden, who would make a good representative. At Quincy, Levi Turner is making a warm campaign, and the comrades there are confident; at Natick it is believed that Comrade Anis stands a fighting chance. In the Brighton district of Boston, Comrade Coyne is making an exceptionally strong fight, and there appears to be good ground for hoping for his election.

But the reports are the same from nearly every part of the state, and the only thing that hampers the work is the lack of the wherewithal to make the campaign effective, and to take advantage of the unparalleled opportunities open to us.

The Executive Committee of the clubs is getting out literature as fast as possible. It is intended that two men shall take the field at once to work in the unorganized towns, and by distributing literature and holding meetings, to advertise our ticket and principles. One will work in the western part, the other in the eastern part of the state, and both will be good men. This will cost money. An office for the use of the State Secretary at the address given below has been rented, the growing amount of work making it necessary. Comrades throughout the state should see that their dues are paid and that returns from their subscription lists are sent in immediately. We need all the money we can get, and we need it NOW.

The return of Carey and MacCartney to the Legislature is pretty certain, although the capitalist politicians will make a harder fight than ever against them. However, the standing of the Socialist representatives becomes stronger as time passes, and it is safe to predict that they cannot be defeated.

During the past two weeks, clubs have been organized at Campello, Newton Upper Falls, and North Adams, and new ones are expected at Holbrook, Wakefield, and several other places next week.

Mitchell at Boston.

Next Sunday John Mitchell is expected in Boston to address a big demonstration to be held at the Huntington Avenue Ball Grounds. He is coming at the request of the relief committee, composed of trade unionists, citizens, and several Socialists. The proceeds of the demonstration will go to the strike fund. Tickets are fifty cents each. It may be added that this committee had its origin at the Socialist Party demonstration given by the Boston Central Committee at Apollo Garden on Sept. 24, and while there are a number of Socialists on the committee, yet recognition was afterwards refused the Socialist Party on the ground that the relief work was "not a political movement." It may also be added that the principal ones to take this stand are members of the Socialist Party, so the relief committee is not to be blamed if it decided not to recognise the party, under the circumstances. It is hoped that the Socialists will try to make the affair a success for the miners' sake and give John Mitchell a worthy welcome to Boston.

Space forbids a complete review of the Massachusetts campaign. I can only hope to sketch in outline the work the comrades in this state are doing to bring Socialism as quick as we can get it.

THESE ARE COLER'S POLITICAL FRIENDS.

Summary of the Personnel of the Democratic State Ticket in Colorado.

The "Colorado Chronicle" of Oct. 5 gives an exhaustive writeup of the candidates on the Democratic ticket in that state, a summary of which will be of interest to readers of The Worker.

Chas. S. Thomas is the present Democratic boss in Colorado. In 1880, Mr. Thomas was instrumental in imprisoning union miners at Leadville, without jury trial, by martial law, in order to break a strike. In 1894 he publicly denounced the union miners as "anarchists" because they struck for the eight-hour day. He was then retained as counsel for the Mine Owners' Association and tried to get federal troops sent into the state to shoot miners when Governor Waite refused to put the militia at the service of the capitalists. In 1898, as Governor of the state, Thomas sent troops to break a strike at Lake City, and had union men arrested by wholesale, some of whom were strung up by the thumbs to punish them for being true to their class. This is the man who has named the Democratic state ticket and who, if that ticket is elected, will be the power behind the throne.

E. C. Stinson is the candidate for Governor. It is enough to say that he was chosen for that place by Charles S. Thomas and that prominent mine owners are openly giving him moral and financial support.

Harry E. Insley, Democratic candidate for Auditor, made himself notorious eight years ago as captain of a company of deputies illegally raised by the mine owners in El Paso county to do their murderous work at Bull Hill—a gang of thugs, to check whose outrages Governor Waite had to call out the militia.

Henry M. Teller, Democratic candidate for another term in the United States Senate had, for years before he entered that body, been a well known corporation lawyer and is still connected with the Union Pacific. As Secretary of the Interior, Teller assisted in gigantic land steals for the benefit of the Union Pacific. Neither in Cabinet nor in Senate has he ever done the smallest service to the wage-workers.

Alva Adams, Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-large, is a banker, broker, and mine owner. As Governor, some years ago, he offered to "mediate" in a miners' strike, promised the miners his support on a certain basis of settlement, and then, when the bosses refused to accept the terms, broke his promise, sided with the capitalists, and put the militia at their disposal to break the strike.

John Bell and John Shafroth, Democratic candidates for re-election to Congress in the two districts of the state, are both lawyers and neither of them has, in his past service at Washington, done anything to advance the interests of the working class.

This is the sort of ticket that the Democratic party—the "party of the common people"—has put up in Colorado, where it thinks it is sure to win and dare show its true colors.

Now that the Democratic party in New York is trying so hard to catch workingmen's votes, it is timely to note what that same party does in other states. Pattison of Pennsylvania, Steunenberg of Idaho, Clark of Montana, and Thomas of Colorado, are the political associates of Coler of New York. Can workingmen afford to vote for the party that supports such men?

Meanwhile, the campaign of the Socialist Party in Colorado goes bravely on—as it does in Idaho, in Montana, in Pennsylvania, and in New York.

THE TROLLEY STSIKE.

Comrade Danahy, formerly active in Rutland, Vt., who is now in Glens Falls, N. Y., writes of the strike on the trolley lines of the Hudson River Valley Railroad Company. He says the strikers are still standing solidly together. The cars are being run by Pinkerton thugs and the Governor and judges have done all in their power to help the bosses and intimidate the strikers by the issuance of injunctions, prosecutions for "conspiracy," and the sending in of militia. But the cars are run without passengers, for the sympathy of the people is entirely with the strikers. The latter are running a "bus line, which is well patronized. The company has forfeited its charters, but of course the state government takes no notice of this fact. The workingmen of that district are ripe for Socialism, Comrade Danahy adds.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

"Capitalist Politicians Are Simply Dumbfounded."

Seven New Locals Formed Last Week—A Number of Socialist Speakers in the Strike Field, but More Needed.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—At yesterday's meeting of the State Committee charters were granted to seven locals—Minersville, Ashland, and Mahanoy Plane, Schuylkill County; Scranton and Priceburg, Lackawanna County; Breslau, Luzerne County; and Avonmore, Westmoreland County—with a total membership of 200.

Comrades at Work.

J. W. Slayton, our candidate for Governor, will speak at Austin, Coudersport, and Williamsport, and will then go to the coal fields. Howard H. Caldwell will probably speak at New Brighton, Butler, and New Castle, Oct. 14 to 16, and will then follow Slayton's course. Louis Goazion will speak between now and election, at West Newton, Collinsville, Avonmore, Black Lick, Cokeville, Brownville, East Pittsburg, and Springchurch.

Charles Heydrick had splendid meetings at York, Spring Forge, Lancaster, Reading, and Lansford. He is now in Carbon County and will stay there till Election Day.

John Collins reports increased enthusiasm in the northwestern part of the state, where he has been holding successful meetings. This week he returns to the strike field, beginning Oct. 7 at Shamokin.

Comrades Geiger and White have left Carbon County, confident that the whole Socialist county ticket will be elected. They are now working in Luzerne County. S. Lavin is at Hazleton, and C. P. DeYoe in Lackawanna County, and Raphael Buck reports to Chairman Smoyer this week for ten days' work in Carbon County; from Oct. 18 till election he will work in Luzerne.

Socialist Ticket.

Comrades throughout the state deserve credit for their careful attention to details in the matter of nomination papers. Only three candidates failed to get on the ballot by reason of technical errors in the papers. This is very good, considering there are fifteen counties with full Socialist tickets in the field. We have eleven candidates for Congress, seven for the State Senate, forty for the General Assembly, and one for judge. The names will be published next week.

The "Tageblatt" will be sent gratis until Election Day to any Germans desiring it. Address "Tageblatt," 613 Callowhill street, Philadelphia.

The Topic of the Day.

Comrade Fischer writes from Luzerne County:

"I believe that this is at present the most important battle ground for Socialism in the United States. If we could but place here half a dozen English and two Polish speakers for the month, we would carry the entire ticket. The more I study the attitude of the masses toward the Socialist Party in Luzerne, the more I am convinced that the striking miners of all nationalities will come out in a compact body for Socialism. In Nanticoke, Plymouth, Edwardsville, Luzerne, and Maltby, nothing else but Socialism is the topic of the day. The capitalist politicians are simply dumbfounded."

The State Committee has spent about $400 in the last two weeks and has received about $150 in contribution. We have been compelled by our financial position to refuse the offers of services, for expenses only, of half a dozen comrades in as many states. All these comrades, and three times their number, should keep company with the strikers and the full force of the Pennsylvania militia in the coal fields of the state. If an opportunity was ever offered, if a time was ever propitious, it is here and now. The State Committee desires to thank comrades in Missouri and Kansas for sending Frank P. and Kate O'Hare, who start their tour at Hazleton, Oct. 9.

Send all contributions for the Miners' Strike Fund to J. Edelman, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

This week's contributions will be noted next week.

CONNECTICUT.

Every branch in Connecticut which wishes to have a full ticket in its locality should hold a meeting at once to make nominations and report to the State Committee not later than Oct. 14.

The nominations required to complete the general or state ballot are County Sheriff, Judge of Probate and Senator.

Nominations for the Assembly go on another ballot. Branches wishing to have this ticket should each nominate two candidates. This ballot will not be furnished by the State Committee.

A leaflet bearing the names of the candidates on the state ticket is provided free by the State Committee. Every branch should notify the Secretary how many of this leaflet and also how many ballots it will require.

A large supply of Wilshire's "Why Workingmen Should be Socialists" has been ordered and will be furnished to branches for $1.25 a thousand prepaid.

W. E. WHITE, Secretary.

THE CAPITALIST FAMILY.

"I suppose those rich Giltedgers made a great display of grief when that millionaire uncle of theirs suddenly died?"

"Grief! They haven't any time for grief. All their time is taken up with galloping around in search of the will.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"DIVIDING UP."

The Miners' Wages and the Mine Owners' Profits.

Authoritative Figures Showing Wretched Conditions Against Which Mine Workers Struck and Enormous Profits of "Operators" Who Do Not Operate.

The New York "Times" of Oct. 5 prints a Wilkes Barre "special" giving the estimated losses caused by the coal strike to the completion of the twenty-first week, as follows:

To operators in price of coal	$50,000,000
To strikers in wages	27,500,000
To other employees made idle	6,100,000
To railroads in earnings	12,000,000
To business in coal region	15,400,000
To business outside of coal region	9,300,000
Maintaining coal police	2,000,000
Maintaining non-union men	590,000
Maintaining troops	490,000
Damage to mines and machinery	6,500,000
Total	$129,880,000

There is a good deal of hocus-pocus in this table, but the first items deserve some comment.

The Miners' Wages.

There are 150,000 mine workers on strike. The "Times," whose figures may be taken as favorable to the case of the "operators" rather than of the miners, states their loss in wages for twenty-one weeks at $27,500,00 That means that the wages which the average mine worker would have earned in the twenty-one weeks if they had been at work all the time is $183.33, or $8.73 a week, full time. This average includes the greater part of the highly paid men—engineers and firemen, pump-runnners, etc.—and the average of the miners and helpers would be considerably less.

It is shown by the statistics published by the state of Pennsylvania that the average working time of the mine workers is only 194 days a year, or a little over thirty-two weeks of six days each. The men would like to work more steadily, but they have no opportunity. One object of their eight-hour demand is to make employment more steady.

$5.43 a Week the Year Round.

Working thirty-two and one-third weeks at $8.73 a week, the average yearly wages of the mine workers would be $282.27. There are 52 weeks in a year. According to the wage figures given by the "Times," therefore, the average mine worker has to maintain himself and his family, the year round, on an average of $5.43 a week.

These figures are a little more emphatic as to the underpayment of the miners than those given by President Baer. According to his statement, the men get an average of $1.80 a day when they have work, which makes an average wage, the year round, of $7.05 a week. Baer's figures are bad enough, but as the "Times" is, in general, a very reliable newspaper, with no bias in favor of the workingmen, and as Baer is a more directly interested party in the question, the figures given by the "Times" are probably nearer the truth.

Even These Figures Too High.

It must be remembered, moreover, that these figures represent nominal wages and that there are several details of the situation which make the real wages considerably less. Chief among these are the facts: First, that many of the men are virtually required to live in "company houses," for which they pay rents much above what would be charged for similar shanties elsewhere; second, that a large part of them are, in the same way virtually required to buy their groceries, clothing, and household goods at the "company store," and are charged prices much above those prevailing in other stores.

Of course, the men are never told, in so many words, that they must live in the company houses and trade at the company store. The bosses profess that there is no coercion in the matter, and even claim that they maintain these houses and stores at a positive loss, simply for the accommodation of their employees. But the employees observe that, in the places where these philanthropic institutions are in vogue, a man who does not patronize them is sure to get into trouble, to be "docked" on all sorts of flimsy pretexts, to be laid off when more docile men are given work, and so forth. The compulsion is all the more galling because it is indirect and hypocritical.

Owners' Profits.

Another feature of the "Times" statement is suggestive.

The losses of the strikers and other employees made idle by the strike are put at $53,000,000. The losses of the capitalists, as mine owners and as railroad owners, are put at $62,000,000.

The losses of the men represent the wages they would have received, had they been at work. The losses of the capitalists represent the profits they would have made on their employees' labor, had the latter been at work.

It appears, therefore, that while the workers concerned get $33,000,000 in wages for twenty-one weeks' full work, the capitalists concerned get $62,000,000 in profits on that amount of work.

In other words, for every dollar that the workers get in wages for digging and carrying coal, the owners of the mines and railroads get $1.85 in profits for allowing them to dig and carry coal.

"Dividing Up."

In still other words, out of every dollar of value created by the labor of the men who dig and carry the coal, 35 cents goes to the men who do the work and 65 cents to the men who allow them to work. This is the sort of "dividing up" which Socialism will abolish.

From these figures it will readily be seen that, if the useless mine owners and railroad owners were eliminated, the hours of labor of the workers could be reduced 10 per cent., their wages could be doubled, and still the coalcoal could be supplied to the public at a price somewhat below that which prevailed before the strike.

This is the price that mine workers and other workers pay for maintaining capitalism, for not having voted for Socialism in the past. It takes hard experience to teach us, but we do learn, and Socialism is coming.

BIG SIX ON THE MINERS' STRIKE.

Declares for Public Ownership and Levies Assessment to Help Miners.

At last Sunday's meeting of New York Typographical Union No. 6 the following resolutions were adopted by an overwhelming vote:

"Whereas, The arrogant position assumed by the Coal Trust will shortly result in widespread suffering; and

"Whereas, The power to prevent such suffering is in the hands of the officials of the government; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we demand that the right of eminent domain be exercised by the government, the mines seized, and worked by the authorities of the government for the benefit of the whole people.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the press, and the officers of the Union authorized to work with any committee of citizens to the furtherance of relief for the citizens of this country."

The Union levied a 2 per cent. assessment upon all earnings of its members for the benefit of the mine workers, and it is estimated that this will yield between $6,000 and $7,000 a month. The president of No. 6 was also instructed to telegraph President Mitchell informing him of this action and congratulating him on the stand taken by him in Washington on Friday last.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THE COAL FAMINE?

The public officials and politicians of both old parties, the capitalist press, the greater party of the clergy, and nearly all the philanthropists and "eminent citizens" are joining in an attempt to obscure the issue of the coal strike by harping on the coal famine. They cry with one voice, "End the strike!" and they treat it as a matter of indifference whether the strike is to be ended by victory for the workers or by victory for the profit-takers.

They make this demand in the name of the toiling poor. It is a noteworthy fact that the toiling poor are not joining in the cry. The workers are demanding that the strike be settled, indeed, but that it be settled by the victory of the miners—and they are cheerfully making sacrifices to effect such a settlement.

In view, however, of this concerted and insidious attempt to obscure the issues of the strike, it is timely to ask, Who is to blame for the coal famine?

The mine workers struck five months ago against degrading and intolerable conditions. The workingmen of other trades who are now suffering for lack of coal have been in the past and will in the future be compelled to strike against like oppression. Let no one forget that.

Before quitting work, the miners offered to submit all their demands to arbitration. The mine owners refused.

That offer has been open all these five months. The mine owners have ignored it.

At Washington, last week, President Mitchell, speaking for the hundred and fifty thousand miners who know and trust him, feeling his responsibility both to them and to the people who need coal, replied to President Roosevelt's plea, that the miners would go back to work at once and submit all their demands to aribtration if the mine owners would consent. Again, the mine owners refused.

Who is to blame if coal is scarce and dear, if workingmen and their wives and babies suffer from cold?

Morgan and Baer and Truesdale and Markel and Hewitt and the Vanderbilts and the rest of the mine owners are to blame.

The whole capitalist class to which they belong is to blame.

The Republican officials of Pennsylvania who have helped them openly against the miners and the Republican national officers who are indirectly trying to break the strike—they are to blame.

The journalistic hirelings of both old parties, who have misrepresented the facts in their news and editorial columns—they are to blame.

THESE CAPITALISTS AND CAPITALIST AGENTS ARE ALONE TO BLAME FOR THE COAL FAMINE.

We also want the strike settled—and settled quick. But we want it SETTLED RIGHT—by the victory of the miners. We call upon all workingmen to continue and to redouble their efforts in support of the miners who are not to blame, the miners who are FIGHTING THE BATTLE OF THE WHOLE WORKING CLASS.

We call upon all workingmen to unite at the ballot-box to PUNISH AND DETHRONE THE CAPITALISTS WHO ARE TO BLAME, the capitalists who would let the miners starve and other workers freeze rather than give up any share of their unearned profits and their tyrannous power. Punish and dethrone them by voting for Socialism—for public ownership and operation of the means of production, under a working-class administration, for the benefit of all the people.

LAUGHING IS A CRIME.

Two Miners in Jail for Laughing at Militia and Scabs—Republican Authorities Rival Late Democratic Administration of New York in Asininity.

Two miners of Hazleton, Pa., George Sundra and John Gross, have been arrested and are held in jail for trial, charged with "inciting to riot," because they laughed at the spectacle of drunk and disorderly militia escorting incompetent scabs to the mines. We are not joking or romancing; we take the news from the local press, from papers not in sympathy with the strikers, but favorable to capitalist "law and order." To laugh when the boss wants you to weep is a crime in Pennsylvania; it is an "incitement to riot" and an insult to the peace and dignity of Republican Governor Stone.

The prosecution is not without precedent, however—and good Democratic precedent. In July of 1900, during the great strike and lockout of cigarmakers in this city of New York, under Democratic Mayor Van Wyck, a young cigarmaker, a boy of seventeen, Phillip Jacobs by name, was arrested for having "made faces" at some scabs, and was dragged before a Democratic magistrate, who punished him with a tedious lecture and a fine of five dollars.

This is the workingman's "individual liberty," which the Republican and Democratic hirelings of Capital are so anxious to protect against the assaults of the wicked Socialists.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

Workingmen do not choose business men as officers of their trade unions, nor even admit them to membership. Why should they choose business men as state officials. Of the candidates for Governor of New York, Odell is a former business man and present professional politician; Coler is one of the "honest men of Wall Street," to use his own phrase; Hanford is a wage-worker and a trade unionist. That ought to be sufficient to decide the workingmen's votes.

Bird S. Coler received the news of his nomination for Governor of New York on the Democratic Bust-the-Trusts ticket over the stock ticker at the banking and brokerage house of W. N. Coler & Co., 32 Nassau street, of which he is a member.

The day before he was nominated on the Democratic Bust-the-Trusts ticket Bird S. Coler attended a meeting of the board of directors of the Guardian Trust Company, of which he is president.

CAN THE WORKERS RULE THEMSELVES?

John Mitchell seems to have been the only one of the various presidents at the Washington conference who behaved as a brave and conscientious gentleman. That was natural, for he had right on his side. His behavior, in fact, was that of a statesman as well as a gentleman. The class in which he was born and which he now serves need have no fear that it will be unable to provide great men when it takes public affairs into its own hands.

And after all, Mitchell's splendid conduct throughout this strike is only in line with the splendid conduct of his whole organization. When, in some coming century, the impartial history of this age is written, the coal strike of 1902 will be cited as evidence which ought, by itself, to have been quite sufficient to convince all men of the ability of the working class to govern itself, industrially as well as politically, to choose wise and honest men as administrators of its affairs, to work harmoniously under their direction so long as they direct matters well, and, in an orderly manner, to replace them with others when they cease to do their duty. This strike alone gives abundant proof of the practicability as well as of the necessity of carrying the Socialist program into effect at an early day.

The working class, as an organized and self-governing body, is but in its infancy; yet, both in its rank and file and in its chosen leaders, it already displays a degree of administrative ability and social efficiency such as neither the feudal nor the capitalist class, with centuries of training, has been able to surpass—perhaps not to equal. The years to come, when real democracy has been put into practise, will produce a peaceful history more inspiring in its display of public wisdom and of individual greatness, than that of all the empires and republics of the past. We who now work for it will live to see only the dawning of that glorious day; but we shall see enough to repay us for all our toil.

Every Socialist, whether a party member or not, should wear the party button up to Election Day, at least. A good showing of badges will do much to encourage the faint-hearted, as well as to advertise the party.

WHY WE DO NOT CONCEAL OUR INTERNAL TROUBLES.

Some readers of The Worker express their surprise that we print so much matter dealing with the internal affairs of the party, sometimes with internal troubles or differences. It may be well briefly to explain this matter.

The Socialist Party differs from the capitalist political organizations, in that it is founded upon a principle and is held together by devotion to that principle, not by the desire of office and boodle; and also, in that its affairs are conducted in the most democratic manner, by the rank and file of the party, not by secret cabals of bosses or leaders.

Differences of opinion frequently arise among us over minor questions of theory or of practise. In either of the old parties these differences would be settled by the secret conference of the great party leaders in whatever way would, in their judgment, best "catch" the votes of the people and best safeguard the interests of the capitalists who supply the campaign funds and the politicians who handle those funds. In our party, such differences of opinion must be decided by the rank and file, in order that they may be decided intelligently, they must be discussed in the party press.

Again, individual comrades or whole locals or committees of our party may sometimes go wrong—often ignorance of facts or error of judgment, sometimes through weakness or dishonesty—for Socialists make no claim to be saints or angels. In the old parties, all the details of such cases would be hushed up until the members of the ruling ring had had time to decide upon the action to be taken, and judgment would then be given and discipline enforced from above. If we should follow this plan in our party, we should have to trust all to the honesty and the wisdom of the leaders, but we know that, in the long run, the few are not so wise nor so true as the many; we therefore do not hesitate to give out to the rank and file full information, even of troubles that involve a question of the good faith of this or that party member or organization.

Though some temporary harm may be done—some comrades discouraged for a time or somes few votes lost—by the public discussion of internal party questions, we believe that, in order to secure the speediest and wisest decision of such questions and of a decision which will convey weight as being really the decision of the rank and file, in order to keep our party pure and active and to develop among us the habit of self-government by democratic methods, and in order to deserve and to win the respect of intelligent workingmen now outside our ranks, it is best to be perfectly frank and open.

Leadership, ring-rule, and secrecy are naturally the appropriate characteristics of the Republican and Democratic parties, which seek to get the votes of the workers in order to serve the interest of the capitalists. The very opposite of those methods is appropriate to us, who appeal to the workingmen to join and support and vote for our party on the ground that it truly represents the interests of the working class. The appearance of harmony is essential to the success of the old parties. But the Socialist Party, in this as in other countries, because it is right, is bound to grow in spite of or even by means of its occasional unpleasant discussions.

HOW TO TREAT DISRUPTIONISTS.

Some of our comrades in this city make the mistake of arguing with the S. L. P. disturbers at and after our public meetings or elsewhere, and thus give them a sort of recognition that they do not deserve. The time is past for this sort of thing. One should argue only with persons whom he believes to be honestly mistaken and capable of being convinced. With unthinking fanatics or with malevolent rowdies it is worse than useless to carry on a discussion.

The S. L. P. is rapidly enough digging its own grave. It is, unfortunately holding but few public meetings—unfortunately for us, for their slanderous and abusive attacks upon the trade unions and the Social Democratic Party do nothing but harm to them and proportionate good to the genuine Socialist movement as the difference between our tactics becomes better known. It is both right and politic for us to ignore them absolutely, so long as they behave themselves. Why they undertake to disturb our meetings, as still occasionally happens, they should be treated as they deserve—not given the recognition and the opportunities for discussion which we gladly extend to honest opponents and questioners, but denounced as traitors to the working class and capitalist agents seeking to disrupt the labor movement.

If it becomes really necessary to recognize these fellows, if an S. L. P. man is not content to go his own way, to keep quiet at our meetings as we do in regard to theirs, if he forces himself and the existence of his faction on the attention of the audience, let the speaker promptly and emphatically expose that organization for what it is—an organization which under the name of Socialism and Labor, directs all its efforts, not against capitalism, but solely against other Socialists and against the trade unions; an organization which has repeatedly organized scabs to break strikes; an organization which is favorably noticed by the New York "Sun," the inveterate enemy of the workers and which is advertised by the other capitalist papers that systematically ignore or misrepresent the Social Democratic Party. Note the fact that the S. L. P. has just suspended its Rhode Island and Pennsylvania state organization en masse, and has, within a year, driven out of its own ranks its last two candidates for Mayor, Sanial and Keinard, the manager of its paper, Pierce, its late state secretary, Vogt, and such recently prominent and trusted members as Fiebiger, Forker, and Dalton, and scores of others, branding them as "traitors and fakirs." Ask what we shall think of a party whose leader, De Leon, trains so many "fakirs." What can we think of it but that it has become a fake party, a party that is trying to do just what would best serve the interests of the Coal Kings and all the Capital Kings, to keep the labor movement divided and weak? This can be summed up in ten minutes, and when it is done, the crowd will have no further patience with the disturber, even, if he has not already sneaked away.

The Social Democratic Party of this state, the Socialist Party of the country at large, has nothing to be ashamed of, nothing to apologize for or defend. Our speakers should be always on the aggressive—against capitalism everywhere and, when necessary, against the contemptible tools of capitalism who disgrace the once honorable name of the Socialist Labor Party.

FOR THE STRIKE FUND.

National Secretary Greenbaum reports $690.54 received by him for the strike relief fund from Sept. 27 to Oct. 4, bringing the total up to $4,836.10. Of the week's receipts, $369.65 was collected through The Worker and "Volkszeitung," $33.70 through the "Chicago Socialist," and $65 through "Robotnik." The rest came from individuals, locals, clubs, and unions in all parts of the country.

This brings the total received at this office and sent to Secretary Greenbaum, to be forwarded to the miners to $1,202.95.

A MEDITATION UPON ELEPHANTS.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

If nature ever made a full grown elephant she would order his agility according to his tonnage and she would naturally trim his propensities to match his dimensions; thus she would kindly save himself and his environments from the effects of unsteadiness on too large a scale. She would load his levity down to earth, she would forbid him the use of the wine cup as well as dancing, and she would teach him to be very cautious when passing over planks of political platforms.

It seems to me that we tailorised bipeds, having passed through the jungle and into the menagerie stage of our evolution, have forgotten something, have left some of those good old animal senses behind us called instincts and have not yet found their social successors, the common senses. I have been reading about the ark and am still wondering. Next greater to the miracle of all the animals going into that ark was the miracle of them coming out of it, to an eye of the twentieth century. With a commercial animal training no ark would have been possible.

None of the world's sealed volumes hides so pretty a history as that sealed book of the ark, from the hour when the publicans and sinners of antediluvian began to open their umbrellas, up to the day the saloons began to open again and Noah went forth.

I assume of course, for the matter of my wonder, that the inmates were not tied in stalls. I assume that, having come so far to get into the ark it was not necessary to tie them in it. The picture therefore which presents itself to this meditative eye of mine as it peers through the shutters of that good old animal safe is one of startling propinqqities and threatening propensities so like our modern civilization that it marvels me to think of how much wisdom the majority of those brutes must have acquired in order to continue to enjoy each other's society outside of each other for forty days, and bring themselves outside the ark itself and down the slopes of Arrarat in their own originally differentiated forms.

Mr. and Mrs. Denton, of psychometric fame, were wont to pick up a bit of old times in the form of a stone or a bone or a shall, and by just placing it on the forehead they beheld through its experience great panoramas of contemporary life and scenery, so they said.

What a splendid contribution to the needed sociology of our times the Dentons missed by not giving us a view of the saloon and promenade life of those prudent passengers during their trip through the deluge. But though we cannot see what they did, the mind fortunately enables us, from subsequential data, to get very definitely at what they did not, that is, provided they were there as described.

Now let us see what they did not. Well, they did not consume each other. That is the comprehensive and the all instructive fact to which the present meditator desires to confine this lesson in anmo-arkian sociology.

To get the full juice of wisdom out of that ark we have only to imagine it to be New York City, and the animals, with all their diverse antecedents, powers, and objects in life to be merely men like ourselves; and we begin at once to roll off instruction by contrast and conjecture as easily and continuously as thread rolls off from a bobbin.

Without a constitution or a constitutional amendment, without any previous introduction to each other, without having been informed by any authoritative national document of our right as Americans to the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness, just imagine ourselves, with all the vast diversities of our acquired economic zoology, dumped together for forty days on the pavements of Gotham during the flood. With no Travers Jerome to warn us against being crushed by millionaire mastodons, how could we, poor laboring ants, who swarm upon the pavements, hope to escape the bloody soles of Baer and Morgan. We would, in our ignorance, press capital and be crushed to fertilizers.

To be there and yet to be out of the way, that is the question! To live as wage earners by being devoured, and yet not to be devoured, but to get out with our lives, that is the problem of this transitional voyage through the perils of competitive murder to Socialism; and the flood gates are open. We have acquired an almost infinite wisdom in dodging our dangers; it is only the width of the city streets that straightens its exercise. The big trust feet of the sons of Anak are now as wide as the horse road, and our whole world is on the street. Our numbers are so great that we cover the pavement where such giant passengers travel and all live! Evidently no wisdom can avail us but that which teaches us to break down the walls to make room for retreat. But then this would not be living IN the ark for forty days. Thus, my fellow inmate of this menagerie, it follows that the anmo-arkian sociology consisted of an old type of virtue that has passed out of the world since the commercial man grew king. There was no other way for the preservation of the animal kingdom but for the elephants and mastodons to sit down, and for all the strong carnivora to keep the seven weeks of Lent.

Such forbearance may have adorned the moral interior of Noah's ark, but alas! several generations of economic experience under competitive individualism seem to have entirely unfitted our financial successes for it. The only thoughts to limit the superior honor due to the arkian prototypes of the capitalists for sitting still in the ark to let the others live, is the unfortunate circumstance that our economic sausage making does not admit of any small things living while the large sit still. Ours is a system that lives by coffin making, together with the filling and burying thereof, and so our way would have left nothing on Arrarat but an empty box.

The animals in that ark had gradually become acquainted with their relative weights while they were in the jungles. No mastodon ever sprung up there from being a grasshopper in a day, as the capitalist animal springs in our economic menagerie; no kittens ever grew into elephants while yet playing with that mouse of a workman, as our capitalists grow. And so, as it becomes us, we learn to draw a lesson of mercy, even though it be somewhat strained, for that immeasurably and ridiculously misbalanced mortal—the modern Pluto.

This unfortunate success, who, without ever being guilty enough to have such powers cast upon him for punishment, or wise enough to see the absurdity to which his income reduces him, or good enough to be able to use a hundredth part of it, would never have been called into the ark, which means that he is outside the pale of mercy. Therefore, a Socialist may venture to set forth a few pitiful circumstances of the multi-millionaire's misery without the least fear of doing him any good.

What a fearfully overweighted atom of human flesh he is this man of fifty millions per annum. Think of it. A man five feet feet seven inches twenty years ago, who has in the meantime acquired the weight and density of a billionaire, with the same sized hat still, and with everything else pertaining to his personality remaining in a statu quo ante expension condition, he epitomizes, in his own experience, all the horrors of an imperfectly digested revolution. Locomotally speaking, he is just the same. He takes her, the object of his choice, out for a waltz, he treads upon her foot; and behold, because of the many unconscious tons which have been added to his unguided limbs, there remains of that young lady's pedestal, upon the surface of this mundane sphere, no more than one small stain, too little to wipe up; her foot, in fact, has been squelched and has passed into the pores of the well polished floor, so ponderous has become the tread of a man economically weighing fifty millions per annum.

Let me indulge, as punishment of my own sins, in the horrid daydream that I am that man. I see a little sweet-faced child approaching me, timorously, inquiring if I have found her doll. I am seized with a sweet inwardness to bless the darling. I therefore gently lay a fatherly hand upon her curly head, all knotted with blue ribbons, when—grruizgulkhrunkich!—the child falls into a pulp at my feet. I am a fearfully and dangerously overweighted creature and I am getting afraid of moving myself lest the world give way. My own son and heir unguardedly lifted by me upwards to the paternal bosom, has his two arms broken. My wife, good soul, hastening to the door of my fourteen palaces to salute her returning lord with a kiss has her face gashed in. Do I laugh? The mirrors all re-echo my satisfaction in thousands of fragments on the floor. Do I sigh! A draft, as if from a thousand sympathetic express trains passing through one tunnel, blows out every lamp within a mile of me, and compresses the heartbroken darkness all around me into an impervious block of black marble which nothing short of a municipal gas franchise can evermore penetrate with light. Loving my country I tremble even to walk upon its verdant meads lest my foot go right through to the Antipodes and so admit the foul air of another hemisphere to this sweet America of mine.

I join by turns the Republican party and the Democratic party in those states which have the required amount of steel and iron in their platforms to protect my friends from being crushed by the ponderous weight of my possible fall.

I dare not dine with my beloved president, knowing that after one "shake" from me that great right hand of his could sign no more expansions. I lie down to sleep, but am afraid to turn lest I should roll on a bank or a non-union workman while he is out of employment, for I have grown in cubic feet as well as in deadly gravity. I would be the nation itself, but for all the proud and dead flesh on my carcass. And now I begin to foresee that that is my doom. I am too great to be less. I must either dwindle back to one natural little life or become the whole nation. Sometimes that strikes me as the only relief possible to me and to everybody else. If I were that I could roll as I list, for there would be no one outside of me to get hurt. I could keep all I have and get all I could with the revolutionary experience following—that everybody else would have what I get and enjoy what I keep. Oh that the Socialists would swell their votes and help me out of my misery.

STATISTICS OF MINES.

The following figures are reported by the United States Geological Survey covering coal mining in eighteen states and territories:

Lives lost in 1901, 1,467.
Men injured, 3,643.
Number of tons of coal mined for each life lost, varies:
In Maryland, 426,094.
In Indian Territory, 49,426.
Average number, 188,068.
Total men employed, 485,544.
Number of days at work, 216.

Divided into the anthracite and bituminous fields the figures are as follows:

Men employed, anthracite, 145,309.
Days at work, 196.
Men employed, bituminous, 340,235.
Days at work, 223.

And the miners are supposed to get $2 a day for every day they work; that means $398 a year for the anthracite miner and $470 a year for the bituminous miners.

And yet President Baer says they are well paid. Wonder if he could live on it?

What do you think of such a condition, workingmen? Don't you think government ownership of the mines under Socialism would remedy the evil? If you do vote for it this fall.—St. Louis Labor.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

In the September number of the "International Socialist Review," H. M. Hyndman discusses "The International Situation and the International Socialist Bureau," taking the position that the Bureau should meet more frequently, have a more clearly defined International policy and take steps to prevent the growth of national and race feelings among the workers. In an article entitled "The Revolutionary Method," Enrico Ferri compares the revolutionary and opportunist tendencies in the Socialist movement of Italy and elsewhere. Under the head of "Terrorism in Russia," Henry L. Slobodin gives translations from the Russian Social Democratic press deprecating the terrorist method and pointing to thorough working class organization and public demonstrations in mass as the most effective way to carry on the fight for political liberty.

Kautsky's article on "Agitation Among Farmers in America" called forth by Simon's book, "The American Farmer," is translated from "Neue Zeit" and will be read with great interest by American Socialists. The views of the great German Socialist on this important question may be summed up in the following extracts from his article: "To agitate among farmers when the mass of the city workers are still strangers to Socialism is equivalent to bringing rocky soil under cultivation at great expense and leaving fertile soil untouched from lack of labor power. * * * The success of our propaganda among them will depend above all on the end for which we are striving. If we should aim to draw them into our movement in masses, I am afraid we should not accomplish much good. * * * It is the class struggle of the present which forms parties and keeps them together. But in this struggle the farmers have different interests than the industrial laborers. * * * A comrade who thought he knew how to handle the farmers once ridiculed our city agitators who were foolish enough to speak to the farmers of the eight-hour day and similar matters. That, he said, was the way to deter them. That was correct, yet that comrade was not making a point against the 'foolish' agitators, but against his pet idea of winning the farmers for our party. True, the farmer has no sympathy for the eight-hour day and labor protection. He does not only assume an attitude of indifference, but of hostility toward them. He is obliged to work from early down to the dark of night, sometimes sixteen to eighteen hours, and the city workers would only render eight hours of much lighter labor. And how is he going to hold on to his men, if wages rise in the city and the hours of labor are shortened? * * * A new attempt to unite large farmers and proletarians in the same party would end the same way as the Greenback and the Populist movement, or, what is more likely, will fall in the outset. * * * But though different interests may divide the proletariat and the farmers which make it impossible to unite them in the same party forever, still they have many points of agreement as against other classes that make a temporary alliance not only possible, but also desirable. And a great many antagonisms are really founded on prejudice and may be overcome by enlightenment. Not party membership, but a better understanding of our aims and a temporary alliance, that may be gained by our agitation among farmers. Indeed, situations may arise, in which it will be very valuable to have them as our allies. Agitation among farmers in this sense, wherever conditions seem favorable, is not only worth considering, but very desirable, providing it is not carried on at the expense of the industrial and rural wage-workers. * * * An agitation which merely aims to win the good will of the farmers and to induce them to regard us as the lesser evil as compared with the capitalist parties, may count on good results. But I should certainly regard it as a dangerous mistake to repeat the short-lived experiments of the Greenbackers, Single-Taxers, and Populists, to weld farmers and wage-workers into one party, and to modify our program and tactics accordingly. However useful the first method may be, the second is certainly injurious."

Ernest Untermann's translation of Frederick Engel's great work, "The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State," is published by C. H. Kerr & Co. An English translation of this great Socialist classic has long been needed and many Socialists will now for the first time have an opportunity to read and profit by it. It is also announced that the translation of Kampffmeyer's "History of the German Social Democracy" is proceeding rapidly, and that the work of translation will soon begin on Karl Kautsky's latest work, "The Social Revolution," one of the most important works of the great German Socialist. Kerr & Co. also announce the early publication of a book on "The Career and Conversation of John Swinton," by Robert Waters.

IT POINTS A MORAL.

As a gentle hint to correspondents—and as a good story, in the bargain—we reprint the following from the New York "Evening Post:"

A beginner in newspaper work in a southern town who occasionally "sent stuff" to one of the New York dailies picked up last summer what seemed to him a "big story." Hurrying to the telegraph office he "queried" the telegraph editor: "Column story so and so. Shall send?" The reply was brief and prompt, but to the enthusiast unsatisfactory. "Send 600 words" was all it said. "Can't be told in less than 1,200," he wired back. Before long the reply came: "Story of creation of world told in 600. Try it."

MORGAN.

By Horace Traubel.

Morgan has never tantalized me. He never excites my wrath. I do not avoid him. I am not afraid of him. I do not doubt his usefulness. I do not question but that his part is as divine a part as any. But Morgan is the passing moment. He is to-day's ignorance struggling for escape. He is the temporal. All injustice is temporal. Only justice is eternal. Morgan is not a catastrophe. He is a law. He does not come in place of something better. He comes to prepare the way for something better. Morgan is not a man with a wen on his nose and an account in bank. He is the you, the me, the many, the all, caught in the meshes of an industrial travesty. And yet that travesty is as necessary as the truth that is to succeed it—yes, is a part of that truth.

I know that lots of you feel bitter about Morgan. When his name is mentioned it is hissed. You interpret him maligaly. But no democrat hates Morgan. No democrat can hate anyone. And to consistently hate Morgan I would have to begin by hating myself. Do you suppose that you can shoulder all your sins off on Morgan? Do you imagine that the industrial snarl is an effect for which you are in no way responsible? I could not let you off so easy. I hold you down to your principle. I stand by my sins. And I expect you to stand by yours. And the industrial sin is your sin and mine. It is not a conscious dereliction. It is the half ripe fruit. It is the rough of something in the making.

Morgan may constitute a cruel lesson. But the lesson is needed. If the lesson is too easily learned it is too easily forgotten. Morgan stands in the line of the prophets and seers and poets. Certain causes made a divine appointment. And Morgan is the result. It is cowardly in you to set him apart in a pillory. The first culprit for that pillory is yourself. Until you have served your time there you have no call on Morgan.

Morgan is proceeding in a brutal and masterful way to bring the continents together. I do not assume to know his motives. I do not know whether he beats his wife or starves his mother. But I see his hands busy in the performance of a great task. When Morgan is done the world will be ready for you to take in charge.

Some of you think the lords god have sent saviors to the earth. And I think they have. But the saviors are not all recognized and fashionable. What would you think of Morgan as a savior? All the work of the universe is being done by mercy. There is no malignity anywhere to shift an atom of material from the integrity of its design. We are going to say to Morgan: "Go right on with your work. Finish it. Soon we will take it up where it falls from your hands. Your time is nearly past. Ours is about to arrive. We have spit on our palms and are eager to take up the tools."

What an incredible creature is the Morgan of the hater! But the Morgan of the lover is a toiler in the vineyard. That Morgan who is myself. Is not Morgan just another name for you or me? What is there in the one name which the others will not contain? Now I hear somebody remarking: "Here's Traubel making a case for Morgan. Why should Traubel sell out to Morgan?" But I am making no case for Morgan. I am making a case for myself. Yes, and for you, too, my doubting accuser. For in my commonwealth there are neither pedestals nor pillories. I could have little use for a commonwealth that had no use for Morgan. But in my commonwealth all equations will be shifted. Morgan will not be able to use the commonwealth. But the commonwealth will use Morgan.

Dear comrades, do not let us pass any wakeless days or sleepless nights calling names. All the names come back to us with more hurt than they impart. We are to discover how we belong together, not how we belong apart. We are not to prove Morgan a thief, but to prove ourselves honest. Every night I go to bed with Morgan. And in the morning I am up with Morgan again. And Morgan it is who sits at meals with me and shares my daily routine. I can only get rid of Morgan by getting rid of a certain part of myself. I once thought Morgan was somebody in New York who oppressed the poor. But I have discovered that that Morgan does not exist. Another Morgan much more real exists. That other Morgan is myself, and when I have learned who Morgan really is and that it is my business to get that Morgan out of the road of my fellowmen, the Morgan over there in New York will do no further harm. It is up to you and to me to get life squared with the new equities. And when life is recreated we will find all hands—no one longer pauper, no one longer millionaire—benevolently included within its square.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticize their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Topeka Capital.

In years past the Socialist party in Kansas has been a good deal of a joke, but it threatens this year to assume quite an important place in the political firmament. Those who claim to be well posted on the situation assert that the party will poll at least 10,000 votes at the next election and that is a number which must be regarded with some degree of respect by the larger parties on account of the effect on majorities.

The reason for the new lease of life in the Socialist party is the fact that those who believe in its tenets have started out quietly and earnestly to build it up. They have not adopted brass band methods, but have simply gone from one county to another, effecting local organizations, and arranging for Congressional conventions. The intention is to have a candidate for Congress in every district in the state and county tickets in as many counties as possible. The state ticket was nominated on July 4 at Emporia.

New York Times.

Whoever chooses to reflect a little on the maxim, 'a man may do what he will with his own," is sure, if he has hitherto labored under the delusion that this maxim has some foundation in law or reason, to find himself enjoying—or suffering—the sensations of extreme astonishment. For, as a matter of unquestionable fact, the cases when a man may do what he will with his own are vastly less numerous than the cases in which his doing so is preemptorily restricted by his fellows. This is so under every government that ever existed, and though the restrictions are not quite so many under the governments called free as under those which are irresponsible and arbitrary, yet they are ever present, and to ignore them invites immediate punishment, often very severe. As an extreme example, the man who buys a revolver may be instanced. He buys it with honestly earned money; it is as much his own as anything can be, and yet he must search far to find a place where he can even carry it about in his pocket and as for firing it off, though the bullet be aimed at nothing more sacred than an empty bottle or an old tin can, why, almost anywhere he can be, and is very likely to be, fined for doing that. And can a man sell his real estate without the consent of his wife? Can he make a will tying up his property for an endless period after his death, or dividing the property in ways contrary to what public opinion deems right? Can he plant himself on his land and say to the nation: "You shall not built a fort here," or to the state, "No railway shall pass through this field?" Can he select at will the side of the highway on which to drive his own horse? Can he sound a steam fog horn as long as he likes in his own flat, provided he can show a receipted bill for the instrument? These questions might be extended into an endless list, and the answer to every one of them would be "No!" It would hardly be an exaggeration to declare that a man may not do what he likes with his own because there is nothing to which he holds an absolute title, and that ownership, such as it is, is always a matter of degree.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS HONOR EMILE ZOLA.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 5.—The Zola memorial meeting arranged by Local Buffalo of the Social Democratic Party and held at the headquarters, 439 William street, Friday evening, made a great impression. An hour before the time announced for the opening of the meeting the spacious hall was filled to the doors, with an eager audience of Americans, Jews, and Germans.

J. Miller opened the meeting with a few well chosen words and introduced Robert Steiner as the first speaker in German. He spoke of Zola as a literary artist, whose aim was to portray life in its true colors instead of distorting it to suit a preconceived idea, and who thus contributed greatly to a correct understanding of social conditions and to the solution of social problems. He also spoke of him as a brave fighter for the establishment of a more just and humane social system. Louis Sworkin followed in Jewish, speaking along the same lines.

The other two speeches by J. H. Spears and Dr. Schoettler, were in English. They spoke of Zola as a Socialist, not only as a champion of justice in the abstract and an enemy of the shams of capitalist society, but particularly as a champion of the emancipation of the working class upon whose sufferings all the prosperity of the ruling class is built, and their appeal to their hearers to carry out the work in which the great Frenchman had labored evidently fell on attentive ears.

The meeting voted to send to Madame Zola a cablegram conveying the assurance of sincere sympathy in her sorrow.

L. S.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—At a meeting of the Boston Central Committee of the Socialist Party club last evening the following resolutions were introduced by Dr. M. J. Konikow and unanimously adopted:

"The Central Committee of the Boston Socialist Party Club expresses its deepest grief at the great loss which humanity has suffered through the untimely death of Emile Zola.

"Emile Zola was one of the few writers who presented the life of the working class with a heart full of sympathy and consideration; forever looking for the real causes for existing conditions, his works were a protest against the horrors of the capitalist system. After portraying the corruption and wrongs prevalent throughout society, he pointed out the way of deliverance in the Co-operative Commonwealth.

"His great heart was always attuned to justice and brotherhood, and his memorable works and actions have built a monument of love in the hearts of those who recognized his greatness which will prove immortal."

PARTY NOTES.

The National Secretary has issued a report on the strike funds up to Oct. 1. The appeal for funds for strike propaganda, which was issued on June 11 and withdrawn by the National Committee soon after, brought in $76.55, which was spent in agitation in Pennsylvania. For strike relief there was received, in July, $190.60; in August, $1,678.14; in September, $2,659.25; in all, $4,527.99. Of this, $10.85 was sent to the Michigan miners in July; $75 to the anthracite miners in July, $1,007.79 in August, and $3,296.04 in September; $15 to the brewery workers; and $25 to the goldbeaters. The balance on hand on Oct. 1 was $86.31.

Comrade Morris Brown, of Cigar Makers' Union No. 144, of New York City, is a candidate for delegate of the C. M. I. U. to the convention of the American Federation of Labor. Comrade Brown has proven both his ability and his devotion to his class in many a hard struggle and he would be a good representative of the C. M. I. U. at New Orleans. James Woods is his opponent.

Comrade Gildea, one of the striking miners at Coaldale, Pa., writes: "I will most cheerfully distribute as many copies of 'Labor Politics and Socialist Politics' as you can spare me, up to the number of a thousand." I am going to tour a portion of Schuylkill County in behalf of the cause, and I know that pamphlet will bring excellent results. I am receiving and distributing fifty copies of The Worker weekly, and the number of men desiring the paper is five times as great; every copy is read by at least five persons. Everything is satisfactory here in Schuylkill County, so far as the Socialist Party is concerned. We are going to make a still more vigorous campaign from now on; with good prospects for success at the polls. However the strike comes out, it cannot be lost, for it has resulted in giving the miners more education in economics and politics than anything else that ever occurred. The dawn of emancipation is near at hand. The workers here now realize that they can win their freedom by peaceful means, by marching with undivided forces off the political field, where their numbers make them invincible, and using as a weapon the ballot, which has formerly been no more than a cheap toy. From the mountains of Pennsylvania, on November 4, will go a great cry of inspiration and hope to the working people all over the land."—And it is not only the Pennsylvania miners that have learned by this strike, comrade. From Atlantic to Pacific the lesson has been noted, and the growth of the Socialist vote all over the country is going to make Mr. Baer doubt the reality of his divine mission.

Comrade Hagerty of Montvale, N. J., writes that he has struck a new field where he is getting subscriptions for The Worker and expects to organize a local before election.

Kansas Socialists have a full state ticket in the field. Comrade Chapman of Arkansas City writes: "Look out for the vote from Kansas. Our campaign is getting red-hot. The old parties don't know what to think of it."

Comrade Ehret came back from the carpenters' convention at Atlanta laden with subscriptions for The Worker.

A most successful meeting of Hungarian workingmen was held by the Socialist Party at Kearsny, near Perth Amboy, N. J., Monday evening. Galaida's Hall was packed. E. T. Neben presided and K. Szabo and another comrade spoke in Hungarian. Another meeting will be held in the same place Monday evening, Oct. 13.

The Socialist organizations of West Hudson County, N. J., held a mass meeting Saturday at Harrison, with Comrade MacCartney as the principal speaker. The hall, which holds about a thousand people, was filled to the limit, and a pleasing feature was the large proportion of young men. On Oct. 18 another great meeting will be held in the Cosmopolitan Pavilion at East Newark. The local candidates will speak and the Hudson County Socialist Drum Corps will help express the enthusiasm of the comrades at the progress of the movement.

Socialism is on the advance at Covington, Ky. The comrades there have nominated a full city ticket and are holding open-air meetings every evening. Kentuckians who wish to know more of the Socialist Party in Covington are invited to address the Secretary of the Local, F. J. Lavanier, Jr., W. Tenth street.

William T. Brown lectured at New Haven, Rockville, Waterbury, and Danbury, Conn., last week. The lecture at Warner Hall, New Haven, was attended by about three hundred persons. Comrade Brown's eloquent and scholarly address was received with sympathetic interest, and his earnestness deeply impressed his hearers.—The State Committee has engaged Comrade Caldwell to speak in Connecticut the week before election. Most of his time will probably be spent in New Haven and Bridgeport.—The following dates for open-air meetings will be filled by W. E. White, weather permitting: Friday, Oct. 10, Bridgeport; Oct. 11, New Haven; Oct. 13, Greenwich; Oct. 14, Stamford; Oct. 15, South Norwalk; Oct. 16, Danbury; Oct. 17, Bridgeport; Oct. 18, New Haven; Oct. 20, Middletown; Oct. 21, Willimantic; Oct. 22, Putnam; Oct. 23, Norwich; Oct. 24, New London; Oct. 25, New Haven.—George A. Sweetland will speak during the coming week at Forrestville, Plainville, New Britain, Plantsville, Southington, Meriden, Thomaston, Torrington, New Hartford, and Unionville.—Local New Haven will meet as a convention to make nominations for judge of probate, senator, and representatives in the Assembly, Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 8 p. m., at Aurora Hall, 125 Union street.—Charles Ufert has been holding good meetings in the state during the last two weeks, speaking at Hartford, Rockville, Norwich, New London, Stonington, Bridgeport, Meriden, Bristol, Naugatuck, Derby, and New Haven. He sold a large number of pamphlets and took many subscriptions for party papers. This week is given entirely to Hartford and on Oct. 13 he will be at Broad Brook.

Comrade Marcy reports that the Worcester Socialists are wide awake. Noon meetings are held at the large shops daily and the speakers get close attention. The speakers give their evenings to the neighboring villages and towns and are well received. Literature is given out and subscriptions for The Worker taken. Everything points to a great advance.

New Hampshire comrades are sure of a big gain. County tickets have been nominated in Rockingham, Strafford, and Hillsborough Counties and city tickets in Manchester and Nashua.—Orin Swain has been expelled by Local for acting as delegate to a Republican convention.

New York State.

Local Syracuse of the Social Democratic Party has opened headquarters at 233 E. Genesee street. Organizer Leonard Hornung is in charge. All workingmen are invited to visit the headquarters, read Social Democratic literature, and get acquainted with party members. The Social Democratic ticket stands: For Congress, Twenty-ninth District, John L. Franz; Senator, F. H. Horton; Assembly—Second District, Leonard Hornung; Third, Lewis Schreiber; Fourth, E. B. Schwartz; County Treasurer, Robert L. Berggren; Superintendent of the Poor, Charles Voss; Loan Commissioners, Joseph Berbette and Henry Schlemm. A candidate for Assembly in the First District will be chosen later.

Comrade Heleker writes that there is "something doing" in Peekskill these days in the way of Socialist agitation and that the Social Democratic vote is going to be a surprise. The antics of three or four S. L. P. fanatics have served to call the attention of the workingmen there to the difference between the two parties, much to our advantage.

State Organizer Spring began his present trip by addressing the Wood Workers' Union at Herkimer. As a result a party local was organized, and arrangements made for a meeting for Hanford. The next night he spoke to an appreciative crowd at Brownville, and on Friday he addressed the first Socialist meeting ever held in Carthage. The Carthaginians were surprised at first and then pleased, and the Watertown comrades will see that a local is formed. Saturday Spring had a splendid street meeting at Watertown. Sunday afternoon he spoke in the machinists' hall at Watertown, Monday at Cape Vincent, Tuesday at Dexter, and Wednesday again at Watertown. Thence he goes to Syracuse for a week.

New York City.

The 30th A. D. Ratification Meeting of the Social Democratic Party will be held Saturday evening, Oct. 11, in the large hall at the Clubhouse, 200 East Eighty-sixth street. Leopard D. Abbott, candidate for Secretary of State, Herman Walker, candidate for Congress from the Fourteenth District, Henry Stahl, candidate for Senator, Algernon Lee, candidate for the Assembly from the Thirtieth, and John Spargo, editor of the "Comrade," will speak. The comrades of the Thirtieth have settled down to hard work, and the large and attentive audiences which greet our speakers and the eager demand for party literature indicate that there will be a great increase in the Social Democratic vote there.

The Socialist Educational League has very pleasant rooms at 953 Second avenue, just above Fiftieth street. Lectures are given every Sunday evening. Workingmen of that part of the city are invited to visit the rooms, to get acquainted with the comrades, read the periodicals, and spend a pleasant evening or Sunday afternoon.

John Spargo will lecture at Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, Sunday evening, Oct. 12, on "Socialism and the Trust Problem." This is the first of three lectures which Comrade Spargo will deliver. Every one is welcome.—The entertainment given by the 21st A. D. at Colonial Hall last Saturday was a great success, socially, financially, and for propaganda. The stereopticon and living pictures were an especially good feature.

James N. Wood will lecture on "The Coming Crisis" at the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 3309 Third avenue, Sunday, Oct. 12, at 2:30 p. m.

Reports received at the last meeting of the Bronx Agitation Committee showed that all open-air meetings had been very successful except when prevented by rain and that the Sunday afternoon lecture at the Clubhouse, 3309 Third avenue, had been satisfactory in spite of bad weather; steps will be taken to increase the attendance at these lectures. Considerable literature has been sold and distributed. Fifty copies of the "Pionier," fifty emblem buttons, and 3,000 German leaflets were ordered. Arrangements were made to send committees to various labor organizations. The quarterly meeting of all comrades in the Bronx will be held Oct. 9 at the Clubhouse. Comrades who have campaign fund lists are requested to turn in moneys promptly, as funds are needed.

Richmond Borough comrades have arranged to hold public meetings at the following places: Oct. 11 and 25, opposite Bergen Point ferry, Port Richmond; Oct. 15, Jersey street and Sixth avenue, New Brighton; Oct. 18 and 29, Stapleton Park; Oct. 22 and Nov. 1, Kutcher's corner, Stapleton. Local Richmond meets on the first and third Saturday evenings of the month at the Labor Lyceum, Roff street, Stapleton.

The Kings County Committee meets Sunday, Oct. 12, at 2 p. m., in the rooms of the Socialist Club, Ralph avenue near Fulton street.

Organizer Warren Atkinson of Local Kings County desires to hire a number of comrades to do campaign work—distributing literature, etc. Any comrades who are out of work are sequested to call on the Organizer at his home, 122 Fort Green Place, after 6 o'clock p. m.

Comrades of the American Branch, 35th A. D., are called upon to wake up, as only a few are now at work. They may call at 3309 Third avenue any evening and will get work to do. They should also turn out at open-air meetings.

H. Gaylord Wilshire, our candidate in the Tenth Congressional District, will challenge his Republican and Democratic opponents. A lively campaign is on.

The 8th A. D. will hold a rally on Thursday evening, Oct. 9, at 98 Forsyth street. Among the speakers will be Dr. Giradansky, B. Feigenbaum, and Jacob Rankin, candidate for the Assembly.

On Sunday evening the 12th A. D. will hold a grand concert and mass meeting at Seminole Hall, 414 Grand street. A program of vocal and instrumental music has been arranged. The speakers will be William Thurston Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, Joseph Barondess, and William Edlin, candidate for the Assembly. Admission will be ten cents.

The 16th A. D. held four open-air meetings last week, addressed by Wilshire, Reich, and Goldstein, the Congressional, Senatorial and Assembly candidates, and by B. Korn, Henry Cohn, Phillips, and Paulitsch. On Saturday, Oct. 11, Havidon and Goldstein will speak at Avenue B and Fourth street; Monday, Goldstein, Reich, and others, at Stanton and Lewis and at Willett and Stanton.

GREENBAUM RESIGNS?

The Cleveland "Citizen" and the "Social Democratic Herald" report, apparently from private information, that National Secretary Greenbaum has offered his resignation to the Local Quorum, which is considering it. The "Herald" adds that this action was the result of an attack made by G. A. Hoehn and also that L. E. Hildebrand has offered his resignation. The Worker has no direct information.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now half over, and IT DEPENDS ON YOU whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before bettter for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and sympathetic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathiser is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades having lists are requested to forward moneys AS FAST AS RECEIVED. Expenses of the campaign are heavy and a prompt response to this call will alone enable us to carry on the campaign we desire.

All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

It is reported from all over the city and state of New York that the working people are more ready to read Socialist literature than ever before. The Food Trust and the Coal Trust have set them to thinking.

Comrades and friends of the Social Democratic Party should not spare any effort in taking advantage of this state of the public mind. Literature explaining the purposes of the party and calling attention to our ticket and emblem should be distributed everywhere—from house to house, in the shops and factories, at meetings in the streets or in public halls, wherever the workers can be reached.

The State Committee has the following literature on hand. It is the duty of the comrades to see that it is used at once.

IN ENGLISH.

"What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," a leaflet by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor. Having named the author, it is not necessary to add that this leaflet is terse, clear, interesting, and convincing. Prices, postpaid: Two thousand, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

An effective throwaway card, bearing the party name and emblem, the ticket, with portraits of Hanford, Brown, Abbott, and a cartoon of "the man who will never be a Socialist." Price, postpaid, $1 a thousand; smaller quantities in proportion.

"Labor Politics and Socialist Politics," by Algernon Lee; second edition. Especially good to use among trade unionists who have begun to understand the necessity for independent political action. Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies, 20 cents; fifty, 85 cents; one hundred, $1.50.

"The Tragedy of the Vote," a splendid leaflet by John Spargo. Postpaid, 60 cents a thousand.

"Beef and Coal Prices," a clear and timely little leaflet by Henry Slobodin. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"What Socialism Is," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

"Unionism, Wise and Otherwise," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 30 cents a thousand.

The Campaign Book is out this week. It is a 32-page booklet, containing the ticket and platform, portraits of the candidates, cartoons, several timely articles, and a variety of valuable information. It will be supplied at the rate of $5.50 a thousand, postpaid.

Posters, bearing the party name, emblem, and ticket, are now ready, and will be sent free to all who will attend to displaying them.

IN JEWISH.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?"—a 32-page pamphlet by B. Feigenbaum. An excellent thing for propaganda among Jewish-speaking workingmen. Price, postpaid: Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.25.

IN GERMAN.

A good leaflet by Alexander Jonas, including also the state platform, ticket, and emblem. Price, $1.50 a thousand.

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas," a strong appeal to the minds of thinking workingmen. Single copy, 5 cents; ten or more, at 2½ cents each.

"Die Mission der Arbeiterden Klasse," by Charles H. Vail. One of our best short pamphlets, by a well known Socialist writer and lecturer. Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.

"Municipale Forderungen der Social Demokratie." Although written especially for use in city campaigns, it is useful at all times, because it shows the attitude of the Social Democratic Party on what are called "practical" questions, in harmony with the party's basic principles. Single copy, 5 cents; ten copies, 25 cents; fifty, $1; one hundred, $1.50.

Isolated readers of The Worker, who do not belong to the party organization, can help in the work. If you cannot use a thousand leaflets or cards, send for a quarter's worth and distribute them in your neighborhood.

For all campaign literature, send orders, with cash, to H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, Literature Agent of the State Committee.

EFFECTS OF MACHINERY UNDER PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

The capitalist's labor consist in purchasing as cheaply as possible the raw material, labor power and other essentials, and to turn around and sell the finished products as dearly as possible. Upon the field of production itself he does nothing except to secure the largest quantity of labor from the workmen for the least possible amount of wages, and thereby to squeeze out of them the largest possible quantity of surplus values. With regard to his workmen he is not a fellow-worker, he is only a driver, an exploiter. The longer they work, the better off he is; he is not tired out if the hours of labor are unduly extended; he does not perish if the method of production becomes a murderous one. In comparison with all former ruling classes the capitalist is the most reckless of the life and safety of his operatives. Extension of the hours of work, abolition of holidays, introduction of night labor, damp or overheated factories filled with poisonous gases are the "improvements" which the capitalist mode of production has introduced for the benefit of the working class.

The introduction of machinery increases still further the danger to life and limb for the workingman. The machine system fetters him to a monster that moves perpetually with a gigantic power and with insane speed. Only the closest, never-flagging attention can protect the workingman, attached to such a machine, from being seized and broken by it. Protective measures cost money; the capitalist does not introduce them unless he is forced thereto. Economy being the much vaunted virtue of the capitalist, he is constrained by it to save room and to squeeze as much machinery as possible into the workshop. What cares he that the limbs of his workingmen are thereby endangered? Workingmen are cheap, but large airy workshops are dear.

There is still another respect in which the capitalist application of machinery lowers the condition of the working class. It is this: The tool of the former mechanic was cheap; it was subject to few changes that would render it useless. It is otherwise with the machine: in the first place it costs money, much money; in the second place, if, through improvements in the system, it becomes useless, or if it is not used to its full capacity, it will bring loss instead of profit to the capitalist. Again, the machine is worn out not only through use but through idleness; furthermore, the introduction of science into production, the result of which is the machine itself, causes constant new discoveries and inventions to take the place of older ones, and renders constantly, now this, then that sort of machine and often whole factories at once, unable to compete with the improved ones before they have been used up to their full extent. Therefore, owing to these constant changes, every machine is in constant danger of being made useless before it is used up; this is sufficient ground for the capitalist to utilize his machine as quickly as possible from the moment he puts it in operation; in other words, the capitalist application of the system of machinery is a particular spur that drives the capitalist to extend the hours of labor as much as possible, to carry on production without interruption, to introduce the system of night and day shifts, and, accordingly, to rear the unwholesome system of night work into a permanent system.

At the time the system of machinery began to develop, some ideologists declared the golden age was at hand; the machine was to release the workingman and render him a free man. In the hands of the capitalist, however, the machine has become the most powerful lever towards making heavier the load of labor borne by the proletarian and to aggravate his servitude into an unbearable condition.—Karl Kautsky, in "The Proletariat."

THE CITY INCORRUPTIBLE.

Hark! 'Tis the roar of labor,
A ceaseless, deafening sound,
Now from the trembling scaffolds,
Now from the yawning ground;
Not the red fires of Vulcan,
Nor Cyclops' pristine powers,
Could match their feats of magic
Who shape this world of ours!

With myriad panting engines,
With countless picks and drills,
They arch the threatening rivers,
They pierce the hostile hills;
In steam and smoke and lightning
Earth's captive forces play,
To weld with Titan touches
The city of to-day.

Still from their sunken footholds
Those cobweb buildings rise
Whose panes ray back the morning,
Whose foreheads touch the skies;
While many a crowded workshop,
And toiling mill and mine,
Yields up its costly treasures
To make them fair and fine.

Yet, void of civic honor,
Of justice, light, and law,
What were the proudest structures
That e'er the round world saw?
Rome was a queenly empire,
But power and wealth and state
And fame and triumphs failed her,
With sons no longer great.

Firm stand the nation's bulwarks,
Her fortunes wax apace,
While Virtue guards her hearthstones,
And Truth her market place;
Lo, theirs are streets and temples
That dwarf the courts of Kings—
A free and glorious city
Of incorporeal things!

—Cora Read Goodale, in Youth's Companion.

My little daughter, aged ten, was billious for years. She kept growing worse, and recently we had to take her out of school. She had terrible headaches and spells of nausea. As soon as she ate anything, she would be sick. Finally we tried Ripans Tabules. In a short time her improvement was noticeable. Now she is a rosy-cheeked, healthy child.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 180 local branches with 23,000 members and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

MODERN SLAVERY.

Slavery has not been abolished; but its form has been changed. Once the master owned the body of the slave, and could whip him if he would not work. Now the masters own the land, the tools and the machines that the slaves must use in order to get a living, and each slave must look around and find a master who will let him use the tools, or he will starve. This is better for the masters than the old plan; for they do not have to feed the slaves when they do not want their work, but can turn them loose to find other masters, or die. Most of the people in the United States are slaves of this kind. Their masters give them for their labor just enough to keep them alive and let them raise children to work when the parents are worn out. The masters take the rest. They take over four-fifths of the wealth that is produced each year and leave the slaves less than one-fifth.

Now the slaves taken together are much stronger than the masters taken together, and so the masters could not make the slaves obey them if they had to do it by force. They have a better way. They control the schools, the churches, the newspapers, and most of the book publishing houses; so you see they control most of the places from which most of the people get their ideas. Thus they can and do make people think that to act in the way that is best for the masters is "good," and that to act in the way that is best for themselves is "bad."—Chas. H. Kerr.

SOCIALISM IN MONTANA.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 28.—The movement in Montana is earnest and aggressive. One-fourth of the whole population is located in the city of Butte and its suburbs, and it is here that the movement has its greatest strength. The population is overwhelmingly proletarian—miners and smeltermen.

We are blessed with a fake "labor party" in this state, a party organized, financed, and controlled by a capitalist mine owner, H. Augustus Heinze. All sorts of promises, inducements, and blandishments were used early in the campaign by the labor party leaders in their efforts to induce the Socialists not to put up a ticket. The answer was made at their state convention on July 25, where they adopted a clear and class-conscious platform and nominated a full state ticket.

The fact that the fakirs and grafters that were fired unceremoniously from the party were leading lights in the labor party is eloquent testimony as to the character of that party. They were going to prove the sincerity of their Socialism by "swinging the labor party over to Socialism."

Their party is now ready and willing to fuse with anyone. This is indeed satisfactory proof of their sincerity.

The resolutions adopted by the A. L. U. at Denver have strengthened our movement considerably, although the president of that organization who declared himself a Socialist at Denver, has swallowed his declaration, refused to join the Socialist Party and is a leader in the fake capitalist labor party.

The secretary of the A. L. U., Clarence E. Smith, has stood pat by the Denver resolutions, and cast in his lot with the proletarians. He is the Socialist Party nominee for state Senator from Butte. The comrades in Butte, the greatest mining camp on earth, have nominated a full county ticket and are carrying on an aggressive campaign. The "labor party" is in its death throes and when the smoke of the fight clears away the Socialist Party in Montana will be a formidable third party, and the only third party in the state.

Following is the Butte county ticket: For Senator, Clarence E. Smith; for the House of Representatives, John G. Herbet, P. J. Cooney, Jas. Panky, Harry Bietz, O. M. Hogseth, R. C. Scott, J. Spregel, W. N. Holden, W. H. Pierce, Arthur E. Cox, Harry A. Sager; County Treasurer, Geo. Gerson; County Sheriff, John F. Smith; County Assessor, L. A. Van Home; Coroner, Dr. Calder; County School Superintendent, Wm. Bowden; Public Administrator, Thos. Barry; County Clerk, Anthony Ament; Justice of the Peace, Adolf Holst; Constable, Henry Schmitt.

At present writing, five counties in the state have county tickets—Silver Bow, Lewis and Clarke, Kallspell, Park, and Bozeman. Two years ago there were none. Offers of fusion have been numerous and earnest, but they have been rejected with scorn. C.

MINNESOTA MOVING.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 30.—A good campaign is being carried on in Minnesota. Walter Thomas Mills has been secured for four meetings in the state—at Duluth on Monday, Oct. 13, at St. Paul on Oct. 14, at Minneapolis on Oct. 15, and at Winona on Oct. 16. E. Val. Putnam of Missouri spends the whole mouth of October in the state. Up to the end of this week he will have spoken in New Ulm, Winona, Ostrander, Austin, Faribault, St. Paul, and Minneapolis. On Sunday, Oct. 12, Comrade Putnam and J. E. Nash, our candidate for Governor, begins a tour together. Their dates, as far as now fixed, are: Oct. 12, Willmar; Oct. 13, St. Cloud; Oct. 14, Alexandria; Oct. 15, Moorehead; Oct. 16, Hendrum; Oct. 17, Ada; Oct. 18, Angus; Oct. 19, Crookston; Oct. 20, Eldred; Oct. 21, Thief River Falls; Oct. 22, St. Hilaire; Oct. 23, Red Lake Falls; Oct. 24, Crookston, didate for Governor, begin a tour to-

Many of these places have never been visited by a Socialist speaker before this year; but in all but two or three we now have locals of the party and at least a few active workers.

At Mankato it was the Carpenters' Union that undertook to arrange Putnam's meeting. Those who know the labor movement in Minnesota will realize what progress this fact indicates.

The Minneapolis comrades are enthusiastic over the prospects in Pennsylvania. At the last meeting they took up a collection of $10 and sent it to Edelman.

Minnesota cast 867 Socialist votes in 1896 and over 1,700 in 1898. In 1900 we had 3,065, besides 1,329 for the S. L. P. That is, in each two-year period the vote was more than doubled, and there is every reason to believe that the ratio of increase will be even greater this time. L.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE WRONGED.

We have seen the reaper toiling in the heat of the summer sun,
We have seen his children needy when harvesting was done,
We have seen a mighty army dying hopeless, one by one
While their flag went marching on.

Oh, the army of the wretched, how they swarm the city street!
We have seen them in the night where Goths and vandals meet,
We have shuddered in the darkness at the noises of their feet—
But their cause goes marching on.

Our slaver's marts are empty, human flesh no more is sold,
Where the dealer's fateful hammer wakes the clink of leaping gold,
But the slavers of the present more relentless powers hold,
Though the world goes marching on.

But no longer shall the children bend above the whizzing wheel;
We will free the weary women from their bondage under steel;
In the mines and in the forests worn and helpless man shall feel
His cause is marching on!

Then lift your eyes, ye toilers in the desert hot and drear,
Catch the cool wind from the mountains; hark, the river's voice is near—
Soon we'll rest beside the fountains and the dream land will be here!
As we go marching on!

—Hamlin Garland.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the tools on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

IMMEDIATE DEMANDS.

As measures of immediate relief and as steps toward our ultimate end, we pledge ourselves to the following measures:

1. More stringent legislation for the guarding of dangerous machinery and for the sanitation of factories and workshops; absolute responsibility of employees at their work.—So long as the capitalists receive profits from other men's labor they must be held to strict accountability for accidents occurring in their service.

2. Reorganization of the system of factory inspection; inspectors to be elected by the workingmen in the various trades, and to have ample powers to enforce the law.—So long as inspectors are appointed by political favor there is danger that they will cater to capitalist interests. They should be responsible only to the class for whose service they exist.

3. Absolute prohibition of child labor and prohibition of female labor in dangerous and unhealthful occupations.

4. A compulsory maximum working day of eight hours for all wage workers.—The reduction of working hours will increase the chances of employment, and will thus reduce the competition for work and make it easier for workingmen to secure increased wages.

5. Pensions for superannuated workers.—We deem that those who have spent their lives in useful labor are far more deserving of public care than those who have been employed in the destruction of life and property, and that it is not charity, but simple justice for the state to assure them of comfort in their old age.

6. Public ownership of all industries that shall take the form of monopolies.

7. Work to be provided for the unemployed; the state and the municipalities to undertake whatever sort of industry shall be necessary or proper for this purpose; all public work to be done on public account, without the intervention of contractors; union wages and conditions to prevail on all public work.

8. The resources of the public treasury to be available for the assistance of striking or locked-out workingmen struggling for a better share of the product of their labor.—At present the powers of the state are used to help capitalists in their controversies with Labor. We propose to turn their own weapons against them.

9. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation, and the right of recall of representatives by their constituencies, and equal civil and political rights for men and women."

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognise that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

"THE RIGHT TO WORK."

As Defended by the Coal Kings and as Demanded by Socialism.

The Right to Look for Work vs. the Right to Have Work and its Product — Individual "Liberty" and Class Solidarity — An Examination of the Operators' Defence of the "Sacred Right" of Scabs to Work for their Profit.

"The Christian men to whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has given control of the property interests of the country," as Baer describes himself and his confederates, are not only the business agents of God, they are also the liberty-loving defenders of individual freedom, if we are to believe the words of their hired apologists in press and pulpit.

This is the position they have taken from the first, and it was in this disgusting pose as defenders of the right to work that they appeared at the conference between the President, themselves, and Mitchell, the mine-workers' leader. In the White House at his summons, they criticised and defied Roosevelt, rejected Mitchell's offer of arbitration, and in the name of liberty called upon the President to pour troops into the mining region and take legal steps against the United Mine Workers to defend "the right of the individual to sell his labor upon what terms he pleases."

Capitalist Hypocrisy.

Weeks ago that venerable vulture, Abram S. Hewitt began croaking about the rights of the non-union man, who is more appropriately and popularly known as a "scab," and since that memorable conference in the White House, every literary lackey, every journalistic jade, every pulpit prostitute, every editorial hireling, has raised a chorus of cries in behalf of the man who is willing to work if the union did not prevent him—of whom, by the way, it is safe to say, there are very few in the strike region.

Whenever the struggle between the workers and the capitalists breaks out in a strike, the hypocritical voice of the capitalist and his lackeys is sure to be raised in loud defence of "the right of the individual to sell his labor upon what terms he pleases," and the trade union is denounced for "destroying individual liberty" and preventing the man who is willing to work from doing so.

To defeat a strike the capitalists rely upon the services of the scab—the individual traitor who exercises "the right to sell his labor upon what terms he can" regardless of the fact that his fellow-workers have united to fight for higher terms. The capitalists, who are thoroughly organized themselves, would have no trouble in crushing the individual workingman and it is only the organized action of the working class that they fear.

It is not strange, then, in the great struggle between the mine-workers and the capitalists who appropriate the product of the coal-miners' labor through their private ownership of the mines and railroads, that the Most Christian Baer and the rest of the coal capitalists are posing as the defenders of individual liberty and the sacred right of scabs to work.

Individual Liberty and Class Solidarity.

Few workingmen are deceived by this hypocritical cant. The working class mind instinctively realizes that the worker is helpless alone and that only in the strength which springs from united action can he resist the oppression of organized capitalism. Therefore the army of labor unites in organization against the common foe. In the universal war between the working class and capitalist class the trade union is the economic army of the workers. Every workingman shares in the advantages which that army struggles for and every workingman belongs in that army. And just as any national government in the time of a great war forces its citizens to take up the fight against the enemy and punishes deserters and traitors, so the working class government, which is the trade union, must, to the best of its ability, draft every worker into its ranks. The individual has no rights which hold against the interests, the struggles, the aspirations and the higher rights of the whole class to which he belongs. Individual rights end where class interests begin. It is the class organization which protects the individual, fights for his interests, and gains his rights; to his class the individual owes allegiance and duty, and he has no rights which are greater than the rights and interests of his class. The man who aids the capitalist by going to work in time of strike stabs his fellows in the back and for such crawling vermin the working class has no name but traitor.

This is an age of organization, of collective, class action, and no one is more alive to that fact than the thoroughly organized capitalists who are posing as defenders of individual action.

How the Capitalists Respect Individual Liberty.

How much respect have these capitalists for "individual liberty" IN THE RANKS OF THEIR OWN CLASS? How willing are they to respect the "individual liberty" of the smaller capitalist? Everyone knows that they force their smaller competitors into the combination, force them to sell out to the corporation, or drive them out of business, and stop at no methods to do so. If any of the so-called "independent operators" dared to grant the demands of the strikers, the Coal Trust railroads would refuse to transport their coal and the Coal Trust would ruin them and drive them out of business. Again and again all the great trusts have used every conceivable method to force independent capitalists into their combine, and woe to the individual capitalist who holds out against them! So much for the capitalist cant about "protecting the liberty of the individual."

The Privilege of Working under Capitalism.

It is the capitalist class which denies mankind the right to work. It is the private ownership of the means of producing wealth which kills freedom and makes individual liberty impossible. Man does not have the right to work to-day. He has the right to look for a job. He has the right to work if he can get it—the right to work if the capitalist who owns the plants in which he must work, and the land on which he must work, and the great machinery which he must use, will allow him that privilege. All the means of producing wealth, the mines, the railroads, the machines, the factories, and all the other great industrial tools of to-day are the private property of capitalists. These great tools without which labor cannot work are privately owned, and the worker must go to the capitalist owner and ask for permission to work. If "times are good" he may get a job and OUT OF WHAT HE PRODUCES he will be given a small share in wages and the lion's share of his product will be kept as profits by "the Christian men to whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has given control of the property interests of the country." Under capitalism, the man who will work for the lowest wages has the best "right to work." Under capitalism, the capitalist is willing to grant the "right to work" if you will work for his benefit and profit. This is what "freedom of contract" means for the workingman. He has the right to work if a capitalist will let him and the right to work at whatever wages the capitalist will offer and hunger drives him to accept.

And these capitalists who keep all men from working except with their consent and at the terms they dictate have the amusing audacity to say that they "are fighting the battle of freedom for the individual and his right to sell his labor on his own terms," as Baer stated in his reply to Quay and Penrose when these two birds of prey tried to settle the strike, because they feared the political power of the miners.

Divine Rights and Legal Rights.

Baer does not care very much about his divine rights to the coal mines. "Divine rights" are not worth much these days. But he has some rights a great deal more valuable than "divine rights," and those are his legal rights—the rights of private property in the coal mines which the government recognizes and defends. And in their demand that Roosevelt send troops to protect the "liberty" of a few stray scabs, the "operators" took a perfectly logical position, because it is the business of this government to defend private ownership in the means of production and the people have voted that this should be so. They have voted for this kind of "individual liberty," they have voted for this kind of "right to work," they have voted to uphold private ownership of the means of production which the working class created and now uses to produce wealth which it does not get. The government and the constitution, which the people have approved by their votes, stand for these things; these things they voted for and these things they are getting. In fact they have got about enough of them. The national government stands helpless in the presence of men who belong to the capitalist class into whose control the people have given the government by their votes for the continuance of the capitalist system of private ownership of the means of production.

The Right to Have Work under Socialism.

Capitalism denies the right of every man to have work; capitalism denies the right of the workers to the product of their toil. There is only one way to establish the right of all to HAVE work and to enjoy the full product of their work, and that is for the working class to unite on the political field to capture the governing power and use it to bring about the common ownership of all means of producing wealth—which is Socialism. When the means of production are owned by all the people in common they will be open to the use of all and with no capitalist to take profits out of the workers in return for the privilege to work, the people will enjoy the full fruit of their industry. And, as the capitalist will have to go to work for the simple reason that no one else will work for him, the class divisions and struggles which now rend society will be at an end.

Capitalism, or private ownership, stands for slavery; Socialism, or common ownership, stands for freedom. Throughout the country the Socialist Party is bearing the banner of the working class and growing in numbers and power every day.

Which Do You Choose?

The choice lies before the workers on Election Day. A vote for Socialism, in whatever state it is cast, is a vote against Baer and against Ryans, Hewitt, against Morgan and all the tribe of capitalist cannibals. A vote for Socialism is a vote against the Republican party which sends troops against strikers with orders to shoot to kill. A vote for Socialism is a vote against the Democratic party which tries to delude the workers with its New York platform, and is not only silent on the strike in its Pennsylvania platform, but has nominated for governor in that state ex-Governor Pattison, who sent the troops that massacred the steel-strikers at Homestead in 1892. A vote for Socialism is a vote against both the parties of capitalism and corruption. A vote for Democratic or Republican candidates is a vote for "business men," bankers, brokers, corporation lawyers, and capitalists; a vote for Socialist candidates is a vote for workingmen, a vote for freedom, for the right of all to have work, for the full product to the producers.

COURTENAY LEMON.

MUST SCAB OR BE EVICTED.

Predicament of Wage-Slaves in New Jersey Silk Mills—How Capitalism Protects Home and Fosters Liberty.

STIRLING, N. J.—The strike of the employees of the Stirling Silk Company shows the terrible power which the owners of the means of production have over those who operate these means of production and create the capitalists' profits.

A part of the employees had been out for some time, but now it has become necessary to call out the whole force in support of the weavers, warpers, finishers, and pickers immediately concerned in the struggle.

The United Silk Workers made every effort to avoid bringing the conflict to this extremity. The organization submitted to the bosses these very moderate demands:

1. That a shop committee shall be recognized to try to adjust all difficulties that may arise in the mill.

2. That no discrimination shall be shown against any of the employees because of the part taken by them in union matters.

3. That all former employees who are competent shall be taken back in the employ of the company in preference to any outside help.

The Company, however, refused to consider the proposition or even to grant a conference with the strikers' committee. The reply of Superintendent Hegg was terse and cold:

"Replying to your favor of yesterday, we are sorry to say that a previous engagement prevents us from seeing you to-day personally. However, the position of this company is the same that they took on Aug. 19, when our weavers went out on strike, that we cannot recognize your organization any further."

But the Company has not stopped at thus refusing all offers of conciliation. It has adopted retaliatory measures.

A large part of the employees are compelled to live in miserable houses owned by the Company and to pay exorbitant rent for that "privilege." Others, a little better paid, have been saving and scrimping for years to buy homes of their own, and hold them subject to mortgages held by the Company. Lack of employment has, of late, made it impossible for these to keep up their payments, and they are as much at the bosses' mercy as are the tenants of rented houses.

Under these conditions, and with winter right at hand, the Stirling Silk Company has already sent notice to forty families in rented houses that they must scab or be evicted. The notices read as follows:

"Dear Sir—The mills of the Stirling Silk Company were opened for work this morning with the expectation that you would return to your accustomed place and work.

"You did not report for work and the Company now has to say that you must appear at the Company Office and register on or before the 18th instant, thus signifying your desire to return to work. If you do not register as above you must vacate the premises now occupied by you on or before the 20th instant, otherwise the Company will be obliged to proceed according to law at once. Yours, etc.,

"STIRLING SILK MFG. CO."

The local papers say: "The Company will begin as soon as possible to evict those strikers who occupy company houses. Further than this, a representative of the company has stated that foreclosure proceedings will be begun just as soon as any striker whose house is mortgaged fails to meet his interest payments.

"This last measure is considered a very severe one, for several strikers occupy houses that they purchased from the company some time since and have almost entirely paid for. In several cases very small amounts remain to be paid, in one or two cases amounts of between $100 and $200."

Such is the workingman's liberty under capitalism. The only way out of it is for the workers to vote for Socialism—to vote that the mills and the houses in which the useful people of the country work and live shall belong to them, not to useless profit-grabbers.

—The Socialist movement depends on the working class for financial support. Don't forget that.

BENJAMIN HANFORD ACCEPTS NOMINATION.

His Letter of Acceptance a Clear Statement of Socialist Principles.

The Lessons of the Coal Strike—The Remedy, Government Ownership of the Means of Production and Working-Class Control of the Government.

Comrades of the Social Democratic Party and Workingmen of New York:

Every honest man is indebted to the striking coal miners of Pennsylvania. They have done more for the intelligent education of the great mass of the people than would have been accomplished had every man in the United States been given an additional year in school or college. They have brought clearly and squarely before the people the CAUSE of all labor troubles. They have also brought out in clear relief the difference in the character of workingmen and capitalists. They have shown that workingmen can be humane, orderly, upright, and brotherly under the greatest provocation to commit violence and every aggravation to foment discord.

On the other side, the strike has shown the coal capitalists as inciters of violence, bloodshed and disorder, aided by the coal and iron police, deputy sheriffs, militia, and all the judicial and executive powers of the state.

The lesson clearly to be seen from the coal strike is that the people who MINE coal (men who work with pick and shovel), and the people who USE coal are in the power and at mercy of the few capitalists who OWN coal mines and railroads. In ordinary times the average man honestly thinks that capitalists (in this case the coal mine owners or coal capitalists) perform some useful function in the production of wealth. Many honest people believe that the capitalist works hard and that he is a great factor in the production of commodities; it should be brought to the attention of these persons that the coal capitalists have worked harder since the coal strike began than ever before, and yet THERE IS NO COAL. If their work is useful, productive work, why do we not have coal when the coal capitalists are working now more than ever before?

The reason we have no coal is because the COAL MINERS AND LABORERS HAVE QUIT WORK. Could anything show more clearly to whom the people are indebted for coal.

We are to understand that this conflict between the MINERS of the coal and the OWNERS of the coal mines is absolutely in every respect the same conflict that from time to time is waged between the men who OPERATE railroads (that is, engineers, firemen, conductors, laborers, machinists, etc.), and the men who OWN railroads; it is the same battle that is waged between striking MACHINISTS and the men who OWN machine shops; between striking workingmen and employers anywhere, everywhere and at all times.

Men who think should understand that strikes in the future will not be fewer or less bitterly fought than those of the past and present; on the contrary, there will be more strikes and greater strikes and strikes that will last longer and entail even greater suffering to the strikers and to the consumers of commodities as well. Let any intelligent man think for one moment what would be the result of a general strike of railway employees in the United States which lasted, not five or six months, nor five or six weeks, but five or six days. And yet, if we are to continue the present system of private ownership of railways, we must unavoidably reap the fruits of private ownership—that is, strikes by poorly paid and overworked employees, general tie-up of the traffic, stoppage of the transportation, not only of coal, but of food supplies for the great cities; in short, INDUSTRIAL WAR, and the suffering and starvation that inevitably go with war. This will continue just as long as SOME men own the means of employment that OTHER men use, and on which ALL men are dependent.

We are to understand that sooner or later there will be a strike of the men who WORK in the sugar refineries, against men who OWN sugar refineries; sooner or later, strikes of the men who OPERATE street railways against the men who OWN them; sooner or later, strikes by the men who WORK in oil refineries against the men who OWN oil refineries, and so on all through the industrial field. It might easily come to pass, and that in the near future, that a strike might take place among all the workers in these and other fields of industry at one time.

Is there, then, no remedy for this state of affairs? And can nothing be done to prevent their constant recurrence in the future?

There is a remedy, and a very simple one. That remedy is government ownership of all the means of production of wealth—mines, mills, factories, workshops, and railways; but it must be a GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP WITH THE WORKING CLASS CONTROLLING ALL THE MEANS OF GOVERNMENT, law-making, law-judging, and law-administering (legislative, judicial and executive.) How much better it would be for the striking coal miners in Pennsylvania were one of their number governor of the state and another of their number president of the United States and others of their fellow workingmen members of Congress at Washington and of the legislature at Harrisburg, and still others sitting on the judicial bench. Under these conditions it is scarcely possible there could have been a strike, but had there been, it would speedily have been settled in the interests of the mine workers. The same is true of all other workmen; had there been a legislature of workingmen at Albany there would have been no militia called out and no dead to answer for in the trolleymen's strike at Troy and Albany. Were there now a legislature of workingmen at Albany and a workingman in the Governor's chair in this state, there would have been no strike of trolleymen at Glens Falls. When the workingmen of New York state shall capture the political powers of the state, that is, legislature, judges, sheriffs, and governor, there will be no further occasion for strikes, for the reason that the workingmen will make themselves the owners of all the means for the production of wealth, and they will not be compelled to strike against themselves.

This, workingmen, means Socialism. Whatever some may think of it, it is the ONE thing and the ONLY thing that will put an end to our present industrial warfare.

The comrades of the Social Democratic Party ask every man who believes in high wages, short hours and a sure job to vote and work for the success of the Social Democratic ticket. We ask that intelligent portion of the working class who have combined in trade unions to vote for our party and ticket—we ask them to vote against the people who lock them out; we ask them to vote against the people they strike against; we ask them to cease their petitions for favors from the Republican and Democratic parties and to build up their OWN political party just as they have built up their trade unions. We tell them it is as useless for them to vote for political officers that have been nominated by their employers as it would be for them to allow their employers to dictate the officers of their trade unions. The working people have the majority of the votes in every state in the United States and the very moment that they rely on their OWN efforts and unite at the ballot box, in that very moment the government will be theirs, and when the government is theirs it will be as good for them as it now is for their enemies.

In this campaign in the state of New York the Republican party on the issue of the day has said that the government should regulate the trusts. To this it might be replied without possibility of successful contradiction that so far from the Republican party regulating the trusts through the government, the trusts are and have been regulating the government through the Republican party. Nor does the Democratic party differ in any essential respect from the Republican party.

The Republican party of the state of New York is owned and controlled by Thomas C. Platt, president of the United States Express Company. The Democratic party in the state of New York is owned and controlled by David Bennett Hill, special attorney and counsel for more than a score of corporations.

No sane man can suppose for one moment that Mr. Hill will use the Democratic party to regulate or destroy the trusts with any greater effect than Thomas C. Platt has done with the Republican party. These parties are equally and alike owned and controlled by the trusts and the only way a man can tell which is worse than the other is by taking note of which party is in power—whichever party is in office, that is the worse.

The Democratic party's platform of the state of New York calls for government ownership of the anthracite coal mines; it is to be noted that there are no anthracite coal mines in the state of New York; the Democratic party of the state of Pennsylvania does not mention government ownership of the mines, and Pennsylvania is the state where nearly all the anthracite mines are situated. But the people who USE coal are no less dependent on coal mines than on railways, but neither the Republican nor the Democratic party has dared to call for the government ownership of the railways. This, notwithstanding that there has been, is now, and will continue to be one railway strike after another in this state so long as private corporations are allowed to OWN the railways.

Fellow workingmen and fellow union men, what reason have you to choose between the Republican and Democratic parties? Why should you expect more or better from them in the future than you have received at their hands in the past? Why not rely on your own efforts, build your own party, and be your own masters? So long as the world is made up of wage-earners and capitalists, there can never be more than an armed truce between them. As society is now constituted it faces an irrepressible conflict which cannot be much longer deferred.

There can be no doubt on which side will be the final victory. This world no longer has need of capitalists. They must go the way of useless things. The world cannot get along without workingmen. They are the only necessary class, and in the near future they will become the rulers of the class. In that hour the workers will become the owners of the capital and wealth produced by their labor, class wars and struggles will cease, and the world will for the first time be face to face with material conditions which will permit human brotherhood and bring out the best and noblest that there is in human kind. Workingmen, this is YOUR TASK—to free the world. Liberty will not be and cannot be conferred upon you from above. It must be won by your own efforts. You have the strong arms and you have the honest hearts and clear brain, and YOU HAVE THE VOTES. Relying on yourselves, you will win. Relying on others, you lose.

In this spirit, comrades of the Social Democratic Party, I accept your nomination for the office of Governor of the state of New York.

BEN HANFORD.

NEW YORK CAMPAIGN.

State Committee Cannot Fill Demands Made Upon It.

Speakers Are Working to the Limit of Exhaustion—Where Speakers Cannot Be Had Literature Must Do Their Work—Up with the Arm and Torch.

The Worker no longer prints long reports of the meetings of the State Committee, because the members of that body are too busy to hold long sessions. They are doing things, these days, not discussing them—all working hard on subcommittees.

The Committee on Finance is making strenuous efforts to raise funds and the comrades and sympathizers are responding nobly. Returns were slow at first, but are now coming in well.

There are now four speakers in the field, outside the city, under the direction of the State Committee, and these are overworked. Both Spring and Hanford have been completely exhausted by their continuous efforts and have been absolutely obliged to cancel a few of their dates; but both are now hard at work again.

Requests—or, rather imperative demands—for Social Democratic speakers come to the State Committee daily, not only from the organized places, but from towns and villages where the party has had no footing in past years. It is out of the question to satisfy the demand and the State Committee is obliged to use its judgment in sending speakers where they will do the most good.

There is only one way to supply the lack of speakers—and of funds to maintain them—and that is to circulate party literature. Comrades should bend every effort to this task. The people are eager to read about Socialism and they should be abundantly supplied with pamphlets, leaflets, and papers. Every piece of literature given out in this state should bear the name of the Social Democratic Party; if literature not bearing this name is used at all, the lack can be supplied by the use of a rubber stamp. No opportunity should be missed to make the voters familiar with our party name and emblem and the names of our state and local candidates.

So far the State Committee has actually sent out nearly eight hundred thousand pieces of literature since the campaign begun, and five hundred thousand more are now ready or on the press—this, in addition to tens of thousands of papers and pamphlets circulated through other agencies.

The party members and sympathizers all over the state are already doing splendid work in the distribution of literature, and their efforts should be redoubled from now till Election Day. The workingmen of this state are thinking of Socialism as they never did before, and it is our duty to see that their sympathy is crystallized in a tremendous vote for Ben Hanford and the Arm and Torch.

HANFORD'S SECOND TOUR.

Benjamin Hanford, Social Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, will speak at the following places:

Thursday, Oct. 16—Corning.
Friday, Oct. 17—Watertown.
Saturday, Oct. 18—Fort Edward.
Monday, Oct. 20—Peekskill.
Wednesday, Oct. 22—New Rochelle.
Thursday, Oct. 23—Mt. Vernon.

FROM HANFORD IN THE FIELD.

Comrade Hanford writes that he had to cancel his dates for Ilion and Herkimer, owing to a severe cold and cough. This he greatly regretted to do, but says he felt that unless he took a couple of days to rest he might be unable to last out the rest of the campaign. The Ilion comrades sent to Rome and Comrade A. L. Byron-Curtiss of that cit came up and gave a stirring address to an audience of seven hundred.

Comrade Hanford requests that so far as it is possible for the comrades to do so, they have indoor meetings for the rest of his present tour. He has been campaigning now for seventy-five days, almost entirely addressing open-air meetings, and must take some care of himself in order to last until election.

ON WITH THE STRIKE! STRIKE AT THE POLLS!

We believe that every class-conscious workingman in the United States will join us in the hope that the United Mine Workers will reject the offer for a "settlement" of the strike made this week by the mine owners.

Two weeks ago President Mitchell, in the name of his organization, offered terms of arbitration far more liberal than could justly have been demanded of the mine workers. The capitalists spurned that offer. They clamored for more troops. They got more troops. Still the miners would not scab. And now the capitalists come with their counter-proposition—a proposition whose acceptance would almost inevitably mean the defeat of the miners in their just demands.

What does this mean? It means—

First, That the strike is so solid that the mine owners have no hope of breaking it unless by trickery;

Second, That the mine owners realize that Election Day is at hand and think it wise to make some "concessions to public opinion"—but their foolish greed and pride will not let them make a REAL concession.

In connection with this we must mention a local affair—smaller, indeed, but still very important.

The New York Board of Aldermen met Tuesday. But it DID NOT TAKE UP THE PENNSYLVANIA FRANCHISE QUESTION. The public is informed that this will not be passed on TILL AFTER ELECTION.

After election the New York politicians think it will be safe to grant the franchise without the eight-hour and prevailing-rate clauses.

After election, the "operators" think, if they can deceive the public and cut off support for the strike, they can trick the strikers into any sort of "settlement."

The strikers have proved their power, so far. Let them hold out and THE STRIKE IS WON.

Let the workingmen of every trade make public protest against the mine owners' proposition, and BACK IT UP BY SENDING MORE MONEY TO THE STRIKE FUND.

Above all, to clinch the matter, to show the mine owners and the railroad owners—the Morgans and Baers and Cassatts—that the workers are at last awakened to a sense of their interests, let us double or triple or quadruple the Socialist vote throughout the country—the ONLY VOTE THAT THE CAPITALIST CLASS FEARS.

MOTHER JONES AT COOPER UNION.

On Saturday evening, Mother Jones will address a Coal Strike Mass Meeting arranged by Local New York of the Social Democratic Party in Cooper Union.

The workingmen of this city have had few opportunities to see or hear Mother Jones, but all have read of her as a dauntless champion and leader of the coal miners and a terror to the "operators." The value of the work she has done to organize the miners and inspire them with hope and courage—especially in the most difficult parts of the coal fields—can be estimated only by the love shown her by the workingmen in those fields and the mingling of hate and respect with which the mine owners treat her.

Workingmen, readers, pass the word along that MOTHER JONES IS HERE, and give her a reception that will show the Coal Kings what YOU think about the strike.

Frank A. Sieverman of Rochester, organizer of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, and one of the best speakers of the Social Democratic Party, will also address the meeting.

William Atkinson of Philadelphia and John Spargo of New York will also speak, and possibly Fred Long of Philadelphia.

COME ONE, COME ALL!

WEAVERS FOR SOCIALISM.

ADAMS, Mass., Oct. 8.—The Weavers' Union at a special meeting held Saturday evening, unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor recently advised union men everywhere to make a political issue against government by injunction, the question thus arises, 'How shall workingmen vote?'

"Whereas, This union, Local No. 329, United Textile Workers of America, finds that the two representatives of the Socialist Party in the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, James F. Carey and Frederick O. MacCartney, were the only ones who earnestly fought for the Anti-Injunction Bill; and

"Whereas, Frank L. Ernst, the Secretary of our local union, is nominated by the Socialist Party for the office of Representative of this district; be it therefore

"Resolved, That we call the attention of weavers and other workingmen to the attitude of the Socialist Party and advise that all workingmen's votes be cast for the representative of the Socialist Party to advance the interests of the working class."

John C. Chase, Socialist candidate for Governor, spoke to a good audience here on Monday. Comrade Ernst presided and spoke briefly. The meeting had a good effect.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticize their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

THEY DISTRUST MORGAN'S PLAN.

Miscellaneous Section of C. F. U. Urges Miners to Adhere to Original Demands.

At the meeting of the Miscellaneous Trades Section of the Central Federated Union of New York last Tuesday evening, upon motion of Delegate Brown of Cigarmakers' Union No. 144, it was resolved to denounce J. Pierpont Morgan's propositions for the settlement of the coal strike and a resolution was adopted and ordered sent to President Mitchell urging the mine-workers to adhere strictly to their original demands and notifying him that the workingmen of New York have formed plans for greatly increased support to the anthracite strikers.

Upon motion of Delegate Bloch of the United Cloak and Suit Cutters' a resolution demanding that the government seize and work the coal mines was adopted.

REGISTER AND ENROLL.

Under the New York laws you must REGISTER EVERY YEAR in order to vote. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 17 and 18, are registration days. If you did not register last week, just must do so on one of these two days.

All who intend to vote the Social Democratic ticket should ENROLL when they register. You will be handed a slip bearing the names and emblems of the five parties. Take this into the booth, put a cross in the circle under the Arm and Torch, seal the slip in the accompanying envelope, and return it to the clerk who will put it in the box.

Unless you ENROLL you will have no right to participate in the party primaries next year. Every Social Democrat should show his colors by enrolling for his party.

TO ALL SOCIALIST TRADE UNIONISTS.

It is important that all trade unionists should be given an opportunity to learn what the Socialist Party—in New York the Social Democratic Party—stands for.

YOU can help—each one of you. For 75 cents you can get 100 copies of THE WORKER sent to your address; for $1.20 you can get 200 copies. Three hundred or more will be supplied to you at 50 cents a hundred.

Two or three times between now and election you should get enough copies of THE WORKER to supply all the members of your local union.

We want Socialism in our time.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

There is no miners' strike in New York, but there is a big trolley strike; and Republican Governor Odell has sent troops to break the trolley strike at Glens Falls just as his friend Stone has sent troops to break the miners' strike in Pennsylvania. Why did not the Democratic convention at Saratoga say something about this home question? Why did it not declare for public ownership of the trolley lines?

SALUS POPULI SUPREMA LEX.

Comrade Langley of Spottsville, Ky., who describes himself as a native born Kentucky farmer, now eighty-three years old, writes:

"The President should have said to Mr. Mitchell, the railroad presidents, and the lawyers: 'Gentlemen, you forget the maxim which is recognized by all civilized nations—Salus populi suprema lex. The welfare of the people is the supreme law. If you do not open the mines by a given day, giving the workingmen just and generous pay, and supply the people with coal, I will order the Secretary of War, with sufficient force, to open the mines and supply the people. In giving this order, I will appeal to the whole people, and if not sustained by them I am willing to step down and out."

This is exactly what a Socialist president would have done—because he would have felt his responsibility to the wealth-producers of the nation alone. It is just what a Republican president (or a Democratic president, either) dare not do—because he feels his responsibility to the capitalists who actually put him in office.

Theodore Roosevelt had the greatest opportunity ever offered a president of the United States to prove himself a really great man. We are willing to give Roosevelt credit for a sincere desire—even aside from his political aspirations—to end the strike, to give him credit, as an individual, for a very considerable degree of fairness and kindness of heart. But as a man born and reared out of touch with the working class and raised to power by capitalist influence, it was morally impossible for him to grasp the opportunity and cut the Gordian knot of capitalist law and custom.

The maxim which our correspondent quotes sums up the Socialist position—with only a little qualification. The phrase "the people" includes two classes with irreconcilably antagonistic interests. The welfare of the capitalist is diametrically opposed to and inconsistent with the welfare of the workingman. This irreconcilable division of the people into classes develops from time to time in history, and when it develops it must be recognized and fought out.

Mr. Baer claims that "salus populi" means the welfare of the Coal Kings, that Almighty God has so ordained it that all the rest of the people must be dependent on them. So, Louis XIV. said, "The state? I am the state!" The useful classes of the French people afterwards proved, to the silencing if not the convincing of Louis XVI, that the king was not the state.

To-day the capitalist thinks—often he sincerely thinks: "I am the state. I am the people." And so the supreme law to-day is the welfare of the capitalists—business prosperity. And so it will continue until the working class becomes conscious of its separate interest—its interest opposed to that of the capitalists—and, uniting at the ballot box, says to the capitalists: "No, you are not the people. We are going to be the people. If you want to be recognized as part of the people, you must become useful workers like us. Meanwhile, the welfare of our class shall be the supreme law."

When they have done that, when they have substituted Socialism for capitalism, economic class-divisions will disappear. Then, once more, there will be an undivided "populus," a people with one common public interest. Till then, we must not be surprised if the political servants of our masters obey those masters' interest as the supreme law. We need not blame Roosevelt, but we must vote him and his sort out of office.

If we have any right to judge by present indications, the Socialist or Social Democratic vote this year is going to be a record-breaker—even in the city of New York, which is one of the most difficult fields for our work, because of the tremendous power of organized corruption and the cynical apathy which has grown up even among voters who are not corrupted. Never before have we had a campaign so uniformly satisfactory in all parts of the city. In quarters where, even up to last fall, our speakers were likely to be greeted with hoots and jeers that made it almost impossible to address even the few passers-by who were willing to listen, large crowds now stand, quiet and thoughtfully attentive, listening to the Social Democratic speakers, and eagerly accepting the literature that is offered for distribution; and when a drunk occasionally tries to disturb a meeting, it is hardly necessary to appeal to an officer, for the crowd soon hustles the disturber aside. The vote for Socialism in this city and state, as well as in Massachusetts, in Pennsylvania, in Colorado, and all over the country, will, we may now safely predict, astonish the trust magnates and disturb their peace of mind even more than has the splendidly solid and orderly strike of the mine workers.

"ARE THESE MEN MAD?"

The coal operators have refused to concede to political intimidation what they deuied to violence and outrage.

How is Senator Penorse fallen from his high estate that he appears here as the truculent accomplice of rioters and lawbreakers! Has the Governor of this sovereign state of New York lost his senses that he seeks to force the compounding of a felony which strikes not at property, not at the individual, but at the very vitals of government, the constitution itself?

In this there is involved no party, no jeopardy of some one's election to office, no question of coal to burn, but the welfare of the nation, the stability of the whole political and social structure.

Are Senators Quay and Penrose devoid of all sense of American patriotism? Can they see no further than the boundaries of their petty and despicable politics? Are they not aware that to succeed in their present endeavor is to court destruction, to pull the pillars out from under the temple and to involve themselves and the country in one vast and irremediable ruin?

It is no longer a question shall coal be mined? It is shall the law be defied and submerged utterly; shall riot and bloodshed prevail over it and shall we turn our backs upon the constitution of the United States?

The above appeared as a double-leaded editorial in the New York "Sun" last Saturday morning. It is the most remarkable utterance that has appeared for years in the columns of any of the great capitalist dailies, and it is generally so regarded by newspaper men. It is not the outburst of an excited editor nor a malicious attack upon the politicians who have dared to attempt to settle the coal strike. It is plain notice served by the supreme power back of everything controlled by the capitalist class to the puppets who have been permitted to masquerade as the rulers of the people that they may go only so far and that any over-stepping of the mark will be visited by instant annihilation. "Aside, ye miserable servants! I am master!" is written in every line of it. No capitalist newspaper editor would dare to write such an editorial, attacking as it does the leading senators of the two greatest states in the Union and the Governor of New York, without the permission of the Morgan interests, unless, as is the unquestionable fact, the editorial was written by Mr. Morgan's order, or, as is very probable, by his own pen.

As the "Sun" is directly controlled by J. Pierpont Morgan, and is the admitted champion of his interests, it is too much to believe that it would have dared to call the Governor of New York and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania "truculent accomplices of idlers and lawbreakers" unless this were the opinion of Mr. Morgan himself. Nothing ought more to encourage those who are working for class-consciousness among the workingmen of America than this bald admission of the class-consciousness of the capitalist.

Further than this, notice how willingly a capitalist newspaper drops its partisan mask and gnashes its teeth against the leaders of its own party when the interests of the capitalists are jeopardized. The "Sun" is a Republican paper. Odell, Platt, Penrose, and Quay are Republicans. But they are vigorously attacked by the "Sun" because it is J. Pierpont Morgan's paper first, last and all the time, and must whip the Republican politicians into line when they waver in his service.

Are these men mad? Yes, they are. They are mad with the insanity of power. Odell and Platt and Quay and Penrose are only a trifle less mad than Morgan and Baer.

"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." The day of the downfall of Morganism is at hand. We hail this "Sun" editorial as a happy omen. Onward, workingmen, to victory over a foe whose insane and violent arrogance shows the fear in which the labor movement is now held!

All the candidates on the Democratic state ticket in New York, like all those on the Republican state ticket (with the single exception in each case of State Engineer, are either bankers, brokers, railway or manufacturing capitalists, or lawyers.

Hill, who induced Odell to defeat the original Franchise Tax Law, is Coler's manager and Cleveland, who sent troops to break the Chicago strike, is actively supporting Coler. Between Coler and Odell no workingman can make an intelligent choice. The intelligent workingman will choose Hanford.

In New York, where there are no coal mines, the Democratic party expresses sympathy with the miners and puts in its platform a demand for government ownership of the mines. In Pennsylvania, where the coal mines are situated, the Democratic party says nothing of the strike question in its platform, but nominates for Governor the man who sent troops against the steel strikers in 1892 just as Republican Stone has sent them against the striking miners this year.

MONTANA'S CORRUPT POLITICS.

If it be possible to outdo the disgraceful history of Democratic ring-rule in this city and of Republican corruption in Philadelphia, that unenviable distinction has been won by the state of Montana, where the late Marcus Daly, alternately Republican or Democrat to suit his purpose, and the two living Copper Kings, W. A. Clark and F. Augustus Heinze, have reduced politics to the level of the lowest days of the dying Roman Empire, when the imperial office was bought and sold without the slightest concealment or pretense. Daly and Clark in former days, and now Clark and Heinze, charge each other with practising bribery at the primaries, bribery at the conventions, bribery in the state committee, bribery at the polls, bribery in the legislature, and bribery in the courts. And neither side cares or dares to deny the truth of the charges. The reply to all such charges is, in effect: "Well, you are as bad as I am, but I'll beat you at your own game." The deadly corrupting influence of wealth—and especially of quickly acquired capitalist wealth—upon free institutions was never better (or perhaps we should say, worse) illustrated than in the present contest between the two champions of Bryanism and "Jeffersonian Democracy" in Montana. There is but one political factor there able to withstand this poisonous influence. The Socialist Party has rejected the most tempting offers of fusion and division of spoils, has expelled from its ranks those who showed a desire to treat with the enemy, and stands absolutely alone—for the Republican party in Montana is alike helpless and corrupt—as the party of honest politics. The Socialist Party will not carry Montana—not this year. But it will cast a solid and increased working-class vote there that will at the same time alarm the wealth-perverted souls of the Clark and Heinze corruptionists and raise a standard round which the honest workingmen of the state can rally against the power of organized wealth.

Public ownership of the mines, with bankers, brokers, railway directors, manufacturers, and corporation lawyers in all public offices—this is what the Democratic party of New York asks us to vote for. The Socialists—in New York the Social Democratic Party—demand public ownership of the means of production, with tried and true members of the working class in public office to administer them.

The cry of "no politics in the union" is generally most vigorously raised by union leaders who are active in capitalist politics—"plugging," as the phrase is, for Republican and Democratic aspirants for office and themselves looking for nominations or appointments in return.

Roosevelt asks the miners to return to work and he will appoint a commission to investigate and use his influence. Why didn't he ask the operators to grant all the demands of the men, and tell them he would appoint a commission to investigate later and report, etc.? That would be from the other side exactly the proposition he made to John Mitchell.

APPRECIATIVE RESOLUTIONS.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 7.—At a meeting of the local union at Brady yesterday the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That we, the members of Local Union No. 984 of Brady appreciate the helping hand which the Socialist Party of the entire country has extended to the striking miners, financially and otherwise;

"Resolved, That we hereby endorse the Socialist Party and ask the organizations of all other crafts to take up our cause and join us in endorsing the Socialist Party."

HELP FROM A NEW HAMPSHIRE BOY.

It is impossible for The Worker to print even brief extracts from the hundreds of letters that come to the office every week; but here is one that we cannot refrain from giving in full:

"Dear Sirs:—I am a boy thirteen years old and have earned $1.50. I have read some in the paper and heard my father talk and would like to help the miners or their children. If you will please forward the same to the mine strikers I would be very much obliged. Yours,

"GUSTAVE STAHL."

"Gorham, N. H., Oct. 8.

When boys in distant states are eager to help the miners in their battle, the time for the full emancipation of Labor cannot be far off.

FOR STEEL WORKERS TO THINK OF.

Hard times stare sheet and tin workers in the face this winter, according to a notice published in the official organ of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. The notice sets forth the serious condition of the trade by reason of the threatened suspension of the tin men. It calls attention to the danger to sheet and steel mill men in case of the suspension of the tin workers. In this event the sheet and steel mills will be able to make a selection from an average of two applicants for every position. The official organ's warning concludes with this paragraph:

"In the face of these conditions every tin and sheet worker should husband his resources and make the most of whatever funds he has and economize in every possible way."

We would add: In the face of these conditions every tin and sheet worker should think carefully of the serious mistake he has made in the past in voting for the sort of "prosperity" that has brought him to this pass. He can remedy the mistake by voting for Socialism—work for all and to all workers the full value of their product, without any rakeoff for Morgan, Rockefeller, or Carnegie.

SECOND CIRCULAR FROM MILWAUKEE.

Federated Trades Council Further Explains Its Plan for Federation of Unions for Political Action.

In the issue of August 24, The Worker printed a circular sent out by the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council to the central labor bodies, proposing the formation of a federation of such bodies for political action. A second circular has been issued, which is here presented for the information of the comrades:

"To the Officers and Members of Subordinate Central Bodies, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, Greeting:

"The circular addressed to you some weeks ago by the undersigned body, proposing that the various local central bodies of organized labor come together through delegates in conference to devise plans for bringing about better municipal conditions for the working class, seems to need some further explanation, in order that certain misapprehensions as to our purpose may be set right. Especially does this seem necessary when so notable a personage as the president of the Federation has felt moved to issue a circular in opposition, voicing suspicions that are wholly unjust and which place us in a wrong light. Were we engaged in an effort, masked or open, to supplant or duplicate the American Federation of Labor, the central organization of Milwaukee would deserve only the contempt of all true union men. We are too loyal to the national body to even dream of such a thing.

"From other sources has come the suspicion that a new labor party was contemplated. On the contrary, the plan we propose would tend to strengthen the local efficiency of the party of the workers, the Social Democracy, which is the expression of trade unionism on the political field, thus helping to keep the workers from splitting up their valuable voting strength between the two parties of capitalism.

"There should be no misunderstanding as to what we propose. We propose that yearly national conferences be held by regularly selected delegates from the various central labor bodies, who shall meet at some previously determined place and discuss municipal conditions from the standpoint of the working population, from such interchange of information and opinion gaining a better knowledge of the problems that exist and of ways to bring about better conditions through united efforts of the toilers. There would be nothing obligatory in the conclusions of the conference, merely helpful suggestion. Various humanitarian and other bodies of the country hold such annual conferences and much good results from them, although such interests are in no way as important as those of the workers.

"The situation of the working class in the American cities to-day is one of the monster disgraces of the enlightened century we are living in. The class that produces all wealth is forced through poverty to live in back streets in the most unattractive districts which are neglected by the authorities because of the prevailing idea of the unimportance of the laboring class and its lack of power through being disunited. They must live in unhealthy houses because unable to pay high rents, do not have proper bathing facilities, must be contented with inferior transportation service because anything is considered good enough for the workingman, and must put up with poor school accommodations because of overcrowding in the poorer districts, and if their children are lucky enough to escape the factory and get a seat in school, they are subjected to discriminations in favor of the children of richer parents. The workers work amid unhealthy surroundings, they live amid unhealthy surroundings, they must eat adulterated food because obliged to buy cheaply, and altogether their lives are cheerless, because they do not stand together and demand better things. All this is proper matter for consideration in such a conference as we propose.

"And then there are the matters of boycott, the need of inter-city label agitation, uniformity in organizing work, and at all times a consciousness of the necessity for advocating measures tending to dignify toil, to raise the standard of living of the workers partly through educational means, and to agitate for the abolition of the present capitalist-breeding system and for the coming of a system of true democracy and brotherhood.

"In conclusion, we wish to make this further point: that the claim that these matters could be taken up at the annual conventions of the A. F. of L. is not valid. The time of such conventions is properly taken up with strictly trade union and craft matters and there is no time for going into municipal problems. Moreover, the system of voting now in vogue in the A. F. of L. conventions places the city delegates at a disadvantage as against men representing general crafts who have big voting strength and naturally dominate the proceedings.

"We therefore hold that the Milwaukee proposal is a worthy and a loyal one and urge your body to enter into correspondence with our board in order that a place and date may be set for an initial meeting."

The circular is signed by Wm. Arnold, Jacob Hunger, James Sheehan, Herman A. Heiu, Charles Dippel, August Dittmar, and Ed. J. Berner, the members of the Executive Board, for the Federated Trades Council, and communications in regard to the matter are to be addressed to that body at 518 State street, Milwaukee.

PUBLICATION DEFERRED.

It is rumored that Senator Hanna is so busy he has not been able to find time to begin work on his new historical novel to be entitled, "How I Settled the Coal Strike, or, Why Vote for Anybody Else?"—Chicago Journal.

—Every Socialist should belong to the party organization. His efforts will bring twice as great results in organized work.

A SHALLOW TRICK.

Coal Kings Issue a Fake Labor Paper.

"Coarse Work" That Will Not Deceive Any Intelligent Man—Attempt to Excite Suspicion Against Socialists—Shows that They Fear Socialist Party as Well as Union.

The workingmen of the coal-strike field are used to lies by this time and are on their guard, for they have had an abundant and varied supply dealt out to them by the "operators" and their agents during the last five months.

The latest attempt to deceive and divide the miners is worthy of a little attention. It is embodied in a fake paper, called the "International Reform Labor Leader," which was printed for the Coal Kings, in half a dozen languages, at the offices of the New York "Commercial"—a scab paper of the worst sort—and has been scattered broadcast in the strike field.

The intention of the perpetrators of this trick—which, however, is very clumsily carried out—was to make the readers believe that the paper was issued by workingmen. It attacks the "operators" and, at the same time attacks the union and slanders Mitchell and the other union officers.

The work, as we say, is "coarse" and clumsy. There is little danger of any intelligent workingman failing to guess the purpose and the origin of the dirty sheet. But there is one feature of it which makes it worthy of notice.

The only cleverness displayed in the whole job is in two or three paragraphs which are inserted for the purpose of making it seem that the paper emanates from the Socialists—nothing very definite, but a reference to "labor-socialism" and a general declaration that the wrongs of the workingmen are to be righted at the ballot-box.

The "operators" evidently hope that, even if their "International Reform Labear Leader" does not succeed in stirring up dissension within the union, it may check the progress of Socialism among the miners by making true union men believe that the Socialists are responsible for the scandalous attacks made upon the union.

It will hardly succeed even in this, however, despite the prejudice that has heretofore existed against Socialism and has been carefully fostered by politicians, press, and pulpit. The miners have read too many Socialist papers and heard too many Socialist speakers this summer to be fooled any longer into thinking that Socialists are the enemies of the trade union. They know that the Socialist Party has loyally stood by the United Mine Workers, both by stating the true facts and pleading the strikers' cause before the public all over the land and by giving direct financial aid to the union.

The fact that the "operators" have thought it worth while to spend much good money in issuing this fake paper for the double purpose of maligning the union and putting the blame of their malignity on the Socialists proves only that they hate and fear the unions and the Socialist Party alike.

It is only necessary to add: The Socialist Party never issues secret documents or uses indirect methods. If we have anything to say, we say it in the party press and from the party platform. We stand free to criticize the unions and union leaders when we think that they make mistakes and that criticism will help the labor movement. But we do it openly, and anyone who lends his aid to such tricks as this of the "International Reform Labor Leader" is to be branded as an enemy to Socialism, an enemy to the trade unions, and a traitor to the working class and to humanity.

HOW TO VOTE AGAINST PATTISON.

"Election day is drawing near. Let every union toiler in the state vote against Robert E. Pattison, Democratic candidate for Governor, who has, by more than one action, proved himself the enemy of labor."

So says the "Amalgamated Journal," the organ of the iron and steel workers, published at Pittsburg, Pa.

The particular black spot on Pattison's record is that, ten years ago as Governor of the state of Pennsylvania, in the strike of the iron and steel workers, he sent the militia and used the power of the state to break the strike and help Carnegie and his friends to maintain their profitable system of twelve-hour work, blacklisting, and violation of life-protection laws in the iron and steel mills.

Coal miners and other workers in Pennsylvania ought to stand by the iron and steel workers and vote against the bloody-handed capitalist tool.

It may be added that Republican Governor Stone is doing, just so far as he dares, in the matter of the miners' strike, exactly what Democratic Pattison did in the steel strike. His friend and partizan, Judge Pennypacker, has been selected as Republican candidate for Governor by the same boss, Matt Quay, who put Stone himself in office.

Iron and steel workers and all other toilers ought to stand by the coal miners and vote against the candidate supported by this servile tool of the Coal Trust.

The way to vote against Strikebreaker Pattison and his gang and Strikebreaker Stone and his gang is to vote for John W. Slayton, the nominee of the Socialist Party, who is a union workingman, as are J. Mahlon Barnes and Harry C. Gould, his associates on the Socialist ticket.

—You never can tell how much good a single Socialist leaflet or paper may accomplish. It may start a man who will develope into a better Socialist than you ever have been. Moral: Take all the chances and distribute all the party literature you can.

—Workingmen! you need not arbitrate at the polls. You go into the voting booth to express your will and there is your opportunity to dethrone your tyrants.

CHASE'S VIEWS ON THE COAL STRIKE.

Workers Should Accept Mine-Owners' Declaration—"Nothing to Arbitrate" between Robbers and Victims.

John C. Chase, Socialist candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, being asked by a reporter of the Boston "Globe" to give his views on the coal strike, replied as follows:

"The situation in the coal fields is a very peculiar one. It has thrust upon the American people the acknowledgment of the great power in the hands of a few capitalists. The Socialists have long pointed out that the present situation would be the natural consequence of the development of industry.

"The Socialist was long laughed at for asserting that there was such a thing as a trust. To-day the general American public is compelled to acknowledge the presence of the trust. The result of the recent industrial conference called by the President only serves to show that there can be no compromise with capitalism. Through the working of natural economic laws a few capitalists have gained complete possession of the coal fields.

They have starved, ill-paid and otherwise ill-treated their thousands of employees until the latter have been compelled to strike for better conditions. The Coal Barons have assumed the usual attitude of capitalists during a strike, saying, 'There is nothing to arbitrate,' and peculiar as it may sound to say so there is nothing to arbitrate. We should not attempt to arbitrate right and wrong. There can be no terms made with the Coal Barons without compromising right and justice.

"It is absolutely wrong for a few individuals to have a monopoly of a commodity upon which all the people depend.

"There is but one solution of this condition of affairs, and that is the ownership of and operation by the people of the mines. There is a large and growing sentiment for the government ownership of mines as a solution of the present trouble, but I want to say that there is a great difference between government and collective ownership.

"The Socialists advocate collective ownership of the means of production and distribution. The present sentiment among the people is for government ownership, but the government ownership of the mines, under a capitalist administration, would be but a short step toward what is to be desired. The people should collectively own the government, enact and administer the laws if they are to govern any industry in this country.

"A great many seats in the United States Senate to-day are occupied by trust magnates or those who are willing servants of the trusts. Until such time as these people are turned out or control of the government we can expect nothing but legislation in favor of and not against the trusts.

"The present situation in the strike field has done more to show to the American people the truth of the Socialist position than anything else which could have possibly happened. It will mean thousands of votes for the Socialists in every state in the Union. In my travels during the last eight months among the trade unionists of the West I have found that they ardently favor the collective ownership of the mines as well as all other industries.

"The ownership of the mines by the people is absolutely inevitable. Just how or when this will take place is largely a matter of conjecture. It all depends on who is in control of the government when the mines are taken over. There is no doubt that if the mines were taken over under the present administration the mine owners would be paid extortionate prices as remuneration for the mines.

"My opinion is that the mines already belong to the people, and that to pay for something which they already own would be like paying the sneak thief who has stolen your watch for returning it.

"The coal mines of Pennsylvania should be taken possession of by the people. It can be done by laws already on the statute books of Pennsylvania, and would be done instantly if there was a Socialist government in Pennsylvania.

"If the Coal Barons keep up their present attitude of refusing to acknowledge that anybody else besides themselves has any interest in the coal mines of this country it will be but a brief time before the people will rise en masse and take unto themselves that property which by divine right belongs to all the people."

PARADE CONFERENCE.

The Parade Conference met Saturday night at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, with good attendance. Credentials for new delegates were received from 13th, 14th, 16th, 22d, and 34th A. D., S. D. P., Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, No. 375, and German-American Typographical Union No. 7.

Donations were received as follows: Cigar Makers, No. 90, $5; Turnverein Vorwaerts, $2; Cigar Packers No. 251, $5.50; Carpenters and Joiners, 513, $2; 13th A. D., $2; 16th A. D., $2; Women's Social Democratic Verein, Br. II, $3; 18th-20th A. D., $2.

Reports from committees showed progress and promise a successful parade. A special committee, composed of Comrades Meyer and Bowerman, were elected to visit the Brewery Workers on Sunday. Weisner and Canter were chosen to see Carpenters and Joiners No. 309.

It was decided to construct three floats representing various phases of the industrial struggle, Comrade Lentz to do the work. The route of parade was left to the Organizer of Local New York.

Additional appeals were directed to be sent out in order to increase the number of delegates and bodies represented.

The conference will meet on the following dates: Oct. 17, 24, and 31.

JAMES N. WOOD.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Iowa Socialist.

About a week ago President Roosevelt invited the coal operators of Pennsylvania and the officers of the United Mine Workers to meet him at Washington with a view of settling the coal strike. There was to be no political considerations whatever in this movement. It was to be purely in the interest of the public welfare. The fact that an election was to be held in a few weeks which might change the political complexion of the next congress was of no importance at all. No, indeed! The fact that scores of Socialist speakers were being sent into the anthracite mine regions and were crystalizing the latent Socialist sentiment into a stupendous independent political movement had no weight whatever with the executive! Two years ago, in the midst of the presidential campaign, practically the same conditions existed, and Mark Hanna, fearful of the effect a prolonged strike would have on the election, successfully used his influence with the operators in ending it. The same motive prompts the president in his present spectacular play to the gallery.

Wilkes-Barre Courier-Herald.

Our brother unionists, the tin plate workers, are establishing a bad precedent. Cutting wages to obtain steady work is equally as detrimental as making excessive exertions to gain a bonus. Both result in a permanent reduction of wages.

Reading Labor Advocate.

While the Governor of the state is sending the militia into the coal regions, is it not time to pause and take into consideration the lawlessness of the coal-carrying railroads?

For twenty-five years they have openly defied the plain mandate of the constitution of this state, which distinctly provides that no railroad shall be directly or indirectly interested in mining or other manufacturing enterprise, with the exception that the owner or operator of a coal mine can build a railroad not to exceed fifty miles in length in order to carry the product of his mines to a main line of railway.

Why has the Governor of Pennsylvania stood pulseless and inert, when his attention has been called time and again to these flagrant violations of organic and constitutional law by the coal-carrying railroads? Is there one law for the over-capitalized corporations and the trusts and another for the poor miner?

While the Governor is sending the militia into the coal regions, would it not be a good thing for the sheriffs to serve writs upon the officers of the coal-carrying railroads for the purpose of forfeiting their charters, which they have misused to the injury and detriment of the state and nation?

Omaha Workers' Gazette.

The Omaha Street Railway Company this week threatened to discharge a motorman because he was talking against the company's candidate for congress. This is capitalism. Capitalism exists because there are not more men like this motorman or because the workingmen generally vote for capitalism—the monopolization of wealth and the consequent condition of more men than jobs.

PEOPLE'S CHORAL UNION.

The People's Choral Union of New York announces that sixteen classes for the study of sight-singing and the practice of choral compositions will be opened this fall.

This work has been steadily carried on since Frank Damrosch opened the first class of its kind at Cooper Union in 1892. Mr. Damrosch exercises general musical supervision of the movement, and personally conducts the chorus of graduates composing the Choral Union on Sunday afternoons at the Cooper Institute, while the teachers who instruct the other classes are selected by him. The object of the movement is to promote the love and culture of good music among the people, particularly among those workingmen and women who, for want of means and leisure, cannot elsewhere pursue the serious study of music under qualified teachers. At the same time it is not a charitable movement in the sense of being endowed by wealthy patrons, but an independent and self-sustaining organization in which musicians co-operate with music-loving people. All expenses of management are defrayed from the members' dues, which, though extremely moderate, are sufficient to keep the movement alive.

Elementary and advanced classes, to meet on Sunday afternoons or on weekday evenings in various parts of the city are opened this month.

Application may be made at one of the Manhattan offices of the People's Singing Classes, 41 University Place and 2082 Lexington avenue, which are open every evening from 8 to 10 o'clock, excepting Sundays.

The Choral Union under Mr. Damrosch will take up the study of Haydn's "Seasons" as part of this year's work at Cooper Union in October, and will perform it publicly early in 1903.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

PARTY NOTES.

Missouri Socialists are making another effort to have the candidates of our party go on the ballot under the new Socialist Party, with good chances of success. Through the efforts of the capitalist politicians and the S. L. P. the secretary of state had ruled that we could not use that name in Missouri. If finally denied the use of the name our candidates will run under the name, Working Class Party.

"The Iowa Socialist," a bright and well printed weekly, published at Dubuque, is the latest addition to the ever growing list of Socialist papers.

At the last meeting of the County Committee of the Socialist Party of Luzerne County, Pa., the monthly report of the chairman showed that fifty-two agitation meetings had been held and fourteen new locals organized during the month of September. Report of Treasurer showed receipts during September, $76.35; expenses, $43.81; balance on hand Oct. 1, $32.54. Room 78, Simon Long Building, Wilkes Barre, has been secured for headquarters and equipped with telephone. Judging from the encouraging reports of delegates, there is a probability of electing our whole county and legislative tickets. Comrade Quinn and Lavin presented written challenges to debate with their Republican and Democratic opponents. The following district chairmen were appointed to supervise the work of the party in their respective districts until such time as permanent district organizations are formed and chairmen elected: First District, J. F. McEnaney, 97 Grove street, Wilkes Barre; Second District, Thomas Hooper, Maltby; Third District, James Wylie, Plymouth; Fourth District, Wm. M. Evans, 522 Alter street, Hazleton; Fifth District, Anthony Lockwicki, Hudson; Sixth District, Oscar Rieger, Warrior Run. It was decided to hold the next meeting on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 7:30 p. m. Comrade N. Geiger of Cleveland, in a short address, gave the comrades some good advice as to the conduct of the work in the future.

Frederick G. Strickland will speak in Dayton at a rally of the Socialists to be held in the Palm Garden Hall on South Jefferson street on next Tuesday evening, Oct. 21. Comrade Strickland has just begun his return trip from the West. He will make it a point to deal with the coal strike question, and the meeting will be attended by many union organizations in a body on this account. The excitement here is intense and the Socialist principles and their candidates are the talk of the town everywhere. The action of the old parties in putting up two noted anti-labor people is understood by the workingmen as an endorsement of their actions and on every hand condemnations of both the old parties are heard. This is giving the Dayton comrades a good chance to push our propaganda and it is being done. The Publishers' Union donated $10 to Socialist propaganda, the Brewers $5, and the Machinists $5. Many more are to come as yet. Socialist sentiment in this city and congressional district is booming this fall. All comrades and friends should turn out to the Strickland-Hemler rally and help to make it a success. Father McGrady will be in Dayton before the election. Date will be announced in The Worker.

New Jersey State Committee met at 124 Market street, Newark, Sunday afternoon, with delegates present from all organized centers. Reports of delegates indicate determined effort to place full ticket in the field in the respective counties and earnest effort on the part of all comrades to increase membership and energetically push educational work. The numerous in and out-door meetings in progress and planned have severely taxed the state for speakers and it has been found necessary to withdraw the state organizer from unorganized territory and place him at the disposal of organized counties, where the lack of efficient speakers is greatest. Hudson County Campaign Committee submitted a resolution relative to recent action of of State Committee covering engagement of state organizer. The Secretary was directed to acknowledge its receipt in the kind fraternal spirit in which it was tendered. Secretary was instructed to issue a general call for nominations for state officers for election in December. Delegate from Passaic asked for a decision by the committe relative to pasters. On motion of delegate from Camden it was ordered that it be promulgated, that on principle the committee could not and would not sanction the use of pasters.

State Secretary Kearns of New Jersey requests the County Committees of the party in New Jersey to see that the branches promptly use the official forms furnished for nominations for the offices of national committeeman, state secretary, financial secretary, and state treasurer, which will be vacated by limitation on December 31, and to return same to the Secretary at an early date in order that the official ballot may be distributed in time for submission and return, so that duly elected officials may take office on Jan. 1.

During the month ending Oct. 5 there were organized in Hudson County, N. J., three new branches of the party.—Seventh Ward of Jersey City, Branch 3 of Hoboken, and Branch 2 of Harrison—with thirty-three members. Four new members were gained by the older branches. Branches will soon be formed in Bayonne and in the Fifth Ward of Jersey City. Active work is being done all over the county. The net proceeds of the excursion in August amounted to $337.45—of which sum $56 goes to the State Committee, $206.36 to the Local, and $235.80 to the branches. Ten dollars was voted to the miners' strike fund at the last meeting of the County Committee.

The National Secretary has issued a financial report on the Labor Lecture Bureau, covering the period from March 24 to Sept. 28, inclusive. Expenses are: Railroad fare, $411.44; hotel bills, $227.80; salary, John C. Chase, $480; printing, postage, mailing, $225.42; literature, $17.67; total, $1,371.33. Receipts are: From fifty-one party locals, $390; from seventy-nine trade unions, $687.25; from sale of literature, $25; total, $1,111.25. The actual net expense to the national organization was, therefore, $260.08, and the loss due to the premature ending of the tour is estimated at $56.34.

John N. Heldt, State Secretary of the Socialist Party for Montana, died suddenly on Sept. 25, within an hour after completing a report to the National Secretary.

Frederick O. MacCartney, Socialist member of the Massachusetts Legislature, spoke in the New Bedford city hall last week to an audience of four hundred persons. "Socialism and the Class Struggle" was the subject announced, and it was an able exposition of Socialist principles and purposes. That he made a deep impression upon his hearers was shown by the fact that fourteen men signified their desire to join and become active members of the Socialist Party. New Bedford workingmen will give many votes this year for John C. Chase and the Socialist ticket.

Worcester comrades took four hundred copies of The Worker last week for distribution and will probably do it again once or twice before election. Meetings are held every noon and evening and interest is increasing. H. A. Gibbs, candidate for Congress, and C. G. Marcy, candidate for State Senator, are working like beavers, as are many other comrades.

Comrade Harris of Edwardsdale, Pa., writes of the great need of Socialist speakers and literature for the Polish and Lithuanian strikers. We have only two Polish speakers and one Lithuanian, and these have been greatly overworked; we have but little literature in Polish and nothing in Lithuanian, and the lack of funds makes it impossible to fill the need. These people, says Comrade Harris, are pitifully eager to understand the message of Socialism which is giving hope and resolution to their English-speaking brothers. Many of them take copies of The Worker or other party papers home for their children to read and translate to them, as the children who have an opportunity to go to school are quick in learning and are able thus to help educate their overworked parents.—Comrade Harris tells that himself and three other comrades were invited to a party last week. "We accepted," he says, "and found ourselves in a Republican clubroom. We had some Socialist literature along, which we distributed, and then we 'spouted' our ideas. I think we spoiled their club for that night." He also says: "All who heard Ben Hanford say that he is a great speaker. He is the best I ever heard and I am proud to have been able to shake hands with him at Wilkes-Barre."

Utah will have a Socialist ticket for the first time this year. Warren Foster has been nominated for Justice of the Supreme Court and Matt. H. Wilson for Congressman-at-large. There are also county and legislative tickets in various localities. The comrades expect at least to win official standing and to "surprise the natives" this fall. The former factional troubles were amicably settled at a well attended convention held in Salt Lake City on Labor Day, and comrades of both former factions are reported to be loyally supporting the ticket. Madden has refused mail privileges to the "Utah Socialist," the new weekly, but the comrades propose to keep the paper up and force Madden to recognize it. The subscription price is 50 cents a year and the address is Box 882, Salt Lake City.

Comrade Mills is to deliver a series of addresses, beginning November 16, for twelve consecutive Sundays, in one of the largest halls in Kansas City.

"More and more, as I read your paper, do I admire it; and especially at the present time do I appreciate it for the news it gives from that center of our efforts, the strike region in Pennsylvania." So writes Comrade Brooks of Fargo, N. D. He adds: "We have a state ticket up here in the frozen North and we have ten locals in good standing. Walter Thomas Mills speaks here at Fargo on Oct. 12 and later at two or three other points in the state."

Comrade Hansen, who is acting as organizer for the Socialist Party in Latah County, Idaho, writes that the party will probably poll 500 votes in that county alone. He finds workingmen everywhere interested in the movement and glad to read our literature.

Comrade Moser of East Manch Chunk, in the strike field, writes: "At a meeting held here on Oct. 3, Comrade Geiger ripped our capitalist Judge Heydt up the back, to the great satisfaction of the audience. He had notified Judge Heydt in writing of his intentions and challenged him to appear and defend himself; but the Judge did not show up. Comrade Mayes of your city held a crowd of two hundred and fifty men in a drizzling rain for over an hour at a meeting in Manch Chunk. This shows the sentiment around here. This was after the City Commissioners had refused us permission to meet in the corridors of the Court House.

The Socialists of Dover, N. H., are alive and at work. A rally was held in the City Opera House past week, with Michael H. O'Neil, our candidate for Governor, and Dr. H. A. Gibbs of Worcester, Mass., as speakers, our veteran comrade, Benjamin Whitehouse, presiding. Comrade O'Neil discussed incidents of the state campaign and touched also on the coal strike and the child labor question. Comrade Gibbs followed with a forcible address, giving a clear exposition of the industrial question and the principles of Socialism. The speakers held the enthusiastic attention of the audience till a late hour.—Strafford County has a full county and legislative ticket in the field and there is every indication of a large vote.—The local comrades have raised over $30 for the strike fund.—The campaign will be closed with a big mass meeting to be addressed by Comrade Thomas J. Hagerty on October 31.

The Ohio State Secretary's report for September shows receipts of $151.97, expenditures of $138.02, and a cash balance of $17.44. During the month Wilshire addressed eight meetings in the state and Caldwell thirty-three. Critchlow addressed three agitation and one for organization. Two new locals resulted. F. G. Strickland will work in the state until election, and H. W. Baird of Cleveland will also make a tour of the state.

Among the new fields which the Socialist movement has recently invaded is the territory of Arizona. The comrades there have nominated Dr. William Neisal for Delegate to Congress, the only office voted for throughout the territory. Besides this, we have full county tickets in Yuma, Mohave, and Gila Counties. In Mohave County there is said to be a strong chance of electing both our legislative candidates, as well as the candidate for Sheriff, who is Secretary of the Miners' Union. In Gila County the Republicans and Democrats combined on legislative and judicial offices, to make sure of holding them at the service of the mine owners. The shut-down of the Old Dominion mine has driven many of the workingmen voters out of the county, but it has determined many others to vote for Socialism. The company officials gave as a reason for the shut-down the demands made by the Miners' Union and the agitation of the labor question by the Socialists. They propose to discipline the workers of the county; but the discipline may work the wrong way.

Essex County, N. J., makes an earnest appeal for volunteers to come over and help in agitation. The patient sowing of seed and careful cultivation of the ground, coupled with conditions favorable to growth, has resulted in a field of unusual richness and fully ripe for the harvest. Oswald, Firth, and Kearns, answering the complaint of dearth of speakers, have volunteered one evening each. More workers are needed. Who will answer the call? Address D. Rubinow, 124 Market street, Newark, N. J.

Charles Ufert addressed open-air meetings every evening during the past week in Hartford, Conn., and W. E. White spoke in Derby and in Bridgeport. Owing to the extremely cold evenings the attendance was small. Comrade Ufert will go to Massachusetts during the coming week, but it is expected that he will return to Connecticut again before election. Howard H. Caldwell will speak several days each in Bridgeport, New Haven, and Hartford during the week previous to election.

Comrade Wm. M. Davis of Derby, Conn., takes a hand in a local newspaper discussion of the depression of business of which that city is complaining, clearly explaining why it is that the workingmen cannot buy back their product and why there is a constant tendency to "overproduction." It is a good idea for comrades, especially in the smaller cities and towns, to write brief letters to their local newspapers from time to time, commenting on live questions from the Socialist point of view.

The Workingmen's Educational Club of Newark, N. J., has arranged a smoker for Saturday evening, Oct. 18, and every comrade or sympathiser is invited to be present and enjoy a pleasant evening with congenial company. Tickets, 15 cents.

Comrades Frank P. and Kate Richards O'Hare spoke in the Opera House at Hazleton, Pa., last Sunday and, although the meeting had not been arranged for until Friday, the house was filled and besides several hundred miners admitted free, two hundred and fifty paid the admission fee of ten cents, and after expenses were paid money was left for the strikers' relief fund. This locality is so ripe for Socialism that Comrade O'Hare and his wife will probably spend most of their time before election here, speaking twice a day in near-by towns and in Hazleton Opera House on Sunday afternoons. Comrade Sam Levin returned to Philadelphia last week after doing good work in this region. Our correspondent, Comrade Wm. M. Evans, writes: "We are in great need of literature in Hazleton and hope the comrades will send us all the papers, etc., they can."

A Socialist rally under the auspices of the East Boston Socialist Club will be held at Lyceum Hall, Sumner and Maverick streets, East Boston, Mass., on Friday, Oct. 31, at 7:30 p. m. The speakers will be John C. Chase, candidate for Governor; John Quincy Adams, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and Jas. J. McVey, candidate for congress.

In Indiana the S. L. P. has filed a petition against the acceptance of the petition filed by the Socialist Party in that state. A hearing will be had before the election commissioners at Indianapolis on Wednesday, Oct. 15, when the question will be decided. Our attorney, S. M. Reynolds, states that he does not think we can be deprived of our name, but should the S. L. P. be successful we will have to file under a new name, which will be made known to the locals of the party at the earliest date possible. The S. L. P. has practically no organization in this state except a small section at Indianapolis and some of their best men are resigning.

Comrade Little of New Hampshire writes: "We are doing some campaign work this fall and feel sure we shall increase our vote three hundred per cent. over that of two years ago. Our candidate for governor, M. H. O'Neil, is speaking nearly every night. We had a rousing rally in Dover on the 11th. Dr. H. A. Gibbs of Worcester spoke and will speak in Manchester on the 24th. Our candidate for congress, Sumner P. Claflin, has challenged the Republican, Democratic and Prohibition candidates to meet him in joint debate, but I hardly think they will accept. The other parties in this state are all split up this fall over the question of license or no license and there are six candidates for governor in the field. We believe we shall succeed in getting on the official ballot this fall and then the good work will go on faster."

The Socialist Party in the Tenth Ward of Jersey City has nominated Frederick Gilliar for Alderman and Richard Mandel for Constable. On Saturday evening, Oct. 18, a meeting will be held at Carlton street and Montrose avenue.

The Socialist Fife and Drum Corps of Hudson County has resolved that every member must subscribe for The Worker.

New York State.

The Erie County Social Democrats (Buffalo and vicinity) have taken a thousand copies of the Campaign Book and a quantity of other campaign literature and are hard at work distributing it. Comrade Fliege writes that they will soon need a new supply. They have also ordered one hundred copies of The Worker and a like number of the "Appeal to Reason" for each of the four weeks before election, for free distribution in the mines and at the shops. The comrades are working hard and Buffalo will give a big vote for the state and local tickets of the Social Democratic Party.

On Tuesday, Oct. 7, the Johnstown comrades had a magnificent meeting, notwithstanding cold weather and rain, which let up just in time for the meeting to begin. It had been well advertised by Comrade Judge and others, and Comrade Zimmermann, our candidate for State Senator, acted as chairman and made an eloquent address in opening the meeting. Comrade Hanford followed with an address on the coal strike, and after the meeting over fifty persons went to the S. D. P. headquarters and a large number of new party members were acquired.

Through some misunderstanding the comrades in Herkimer expected Benjamin Hanford to speak there on Oct. 9 and a crowd of nearly five hundred men gathered to hear him. The local, organized two weeks ago by Comrade Spring, with five members, has now over thirty, and Socialism is talked of everywhere. Arrangements will be made to send a speaker and make up for the unfortunate mistake of last week.

The Syracuse comrades are working hard according to a report made by State Organizer Spring on the second day of the week he is giving to that city. They have opened headquarters and have a big sign out, showing the party name, candidates, and emblem. Jonas had a good meeting and an equally good one for Hanford seemed assured. Spring found arrangements all made for seven meetings for him to address in six consecutive days.

Hugh Judge, Organizer of Local Johnstown, N. Y., writes: "I got fifty copies of The Worker of Oct. 12 and put a boy on the street to sell them at two cents a copy, keeping half for himself. In a very short time he had disposed of the whole lot. I want fifty a week to use in the same way till further notice. It would be a good idea for every local in the country to try this plan. Fifty copies of the paper cost 50 cents, so the boy gets a cent on each copy sold and yet it costs the local nothing. In every city where we have an organization The Worker could be sold on the streets with good effect." We would add that if a local chooses to send in an order for fifty copies a week for a year—saving bookkeeping in this office—it will cost but $12.50, cash in advance, or less than half a cent a copy.

The great success of the mass meeting held by the comrades of the 30th A. D. in Kruettler's Hall, 1754 Second avenue, on Wednesday evening of last week has prompted them to hold a second meeting in the same place next Wednesday, Oct. 22. At the meeting last week the audience literally packed the hall and was composed chiefly of young workingmen. Comrade Lee was ill and could not attend, but Comrades Fieldman, Spargo, and Butscher held the close attention of the audience. Comrade Franz was one of the hardest workers for the success of the meeting. Algernon Lee, our candidate for Assembly in the Thirtieth, will be present next Wednesday, along with othe good speakers.

Next Monday evening the comrades of Passaic, N. J., will hold a mass meeting at 121 Second street, at which E. T. Neben of Essex County will speak.

Mother Jones will speak for the Socialist Party in Newark, N. J., on Monday, Oct. 27. The hall has not yet been decided upon, but it will be announced in The Worker next week as also in the "Volkszeitung" and the local dailies. Ten cents will be charged for admission to cover expenses.

Comrade Byron-Curtis of Rome, filling Comrade Hanford's place, addressed a meeting of over five hundred at Ilion last week. The comrades were well pleased with the success of the meeting.

New York City.

In response to fifteen hours' notice over twenty Socialist speakers of Brooklyn met at the Socialist Club, in spite of rain, on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 5 to discuss the situation and perfect their work. It was voted at the close of a long meeting to come together for the same purpose two weeks later, Sunday, Oct. 19, at 3 p. m., in the same place.

At the last meeting of the Kings County Committee the special committee which was appointed to investigate the charges made against the Socialist Fife and Drum Corps Committee by some of the members reported, exonerating the committee. The Organizer was authorized to engage such assistance as he may need. The Financial Secretary reported that he was unable to get stamps from the State Committee, and action was taken to get the State Committee to do its duty in the matter. The Campaign Secretary reported all nominations filed. A vacancy having occurred in the Ninth Senatorial District, by the death of Comrade Franz, it was filled by the nomination of Comrade Skorsetz; also Leo Schmidt having declined the nomination for Congress, Comrade Held was chosen in his place. The Committee rose in honor of Comrade Franz. The Campaign Secretary will now take up the matter of getting watchers at all polling-places and every comrade is requested to aid in the work. Reports from assembly districts showed good work being done. The 6th A. D. reported a donation of $5 from the Bakers' Union. The 7th A. D. has formed a second branch. The 16th, 17th, and 18th A. D. will raise a party banner on Saturday. The 24th A. D. will hold a ratification meeting on Oct. 24 in the Turnhall. The 20th A. D., Bc. 1, will hold four meetings a week till election, and has hired a wagon to advertise the party in the streets.

The quarterly meeting of the Bronx comrades at 3309 Third avenue on Thursday of last week was poorly attended, not over one-third of the members being present. It is time for the others to wake up. The situation was exhaustively discussed and action taken in various matters. Reports given here and at the meeting of the Borough Committee on Tuesday showed that good meetings can be held if the speakers are on hand promptly and all arrangements properly made.

Comrade Elizabeth T. Martin died last Saturday morning at her residence, 887 Columbus avenue, New York. She, like her husband, Edward Martin, the Secretary of Local New York, was an earnest and tireless worker in the cause of Socialism. The interment will be in South Boston, where she was born thirty-three years ago. The members of the 21st A. D. of New York visited the bereaved household in a body, taking with them a beautiful floral wreath. The New York "Times" chapel of Typographical Union No. 6 also presented an elegant floral piece and extended condolences to Comrade Martin, who is employed on that newspaper.

Comrade L. D. Boudin will lecture on "The Mission of the S. D. P." on Sunday, Oct. 19, at W. E. A. clubhouse, at 3309 Third avenue, Bronx.

Comrade Corinne Brown of Chicago arrived in New York this week for a short stay.

The 1st, 3d, and 5th A. D. will meet at Comrade A. Schoenberg's restaurant, 150 Spring street, Oct. 20, at 8 p. m. Important business to transact. All comrades who have lists for campaign fund will please bring in donations and make their reports, as money is needed at once.

The Workingmen's Educational and Aid Society has arranged a lecture course of two lectures a week, on Friday evenings and Sunday afternoons, at 98 Forsyth street. On Sunday, Oct. 19, at 3 p. m., M. Winchevsky will lecture on Emile Zola as man, author and Socialist. An admission fee of 5 cents will be charged for the benefit of the Russian exiles who are in need of financial aid.

Leonard D. Abbott will speak at the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues, Brooklyn, on Sunday, Oct. 19, at 3 p. m., on "Trusts or Socialism, Which?"

On Friday evening, Oct. 17, Miss Johanan Dahme will speak at Avenue C and Sixth street in the 16th A. D.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn decided at its last meeting that all members must subscribe to The Worker. Subscriptions should be given through Comrade Weigl. The Club is planning to hold a social evening at an early date.

On Oct. 14 an American branch of the 6th A. D. of Brooklyn was organized with a membership of fifteen, Comrade Heuer secretary. Following discussion as to how to agitate the upper part of the assembly district, Organizer Heuer was instructed to speak in a few place in the "silk-stocking district" and report if it is worth while agitating in that locality. All readers of The Worker and members of the 4th and 5th A. D. where there is no organization should join the American branch next meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 21, at Weber's Hall, Stockton, corner Throop avenue.

The German branch of the 6th A. D. of Brooklyn has arranged for five street meetings every week until election, which are being successfully managed by Comrade Brückner. A ratification meeting will be held at 30 Sumner avenue on Thursday Oct. 23. Ben Hanford, candidate for Governor; Wm. Thurston Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; P. J. Cooney of Montana and others will speak. Bakers' Union No. 23 has donated $5 to the agitation of the assembly district and $3 was added to that through a hat collection.

I had severe stomach trouble and had to take pepsin in some form whenever I ate a mouthful of food. Ripans Tabules were recommende to me and I commenced using them and soon began to have less pain in my stomach and to gain in strength. I continued them for some time and can now say I have no stomach trouble whatever.

IN THE OLD BAY STATE.

Unusually Active Socialist Campaign.

Many Speakers in the Field, but Cannot Fill All the Calls Made—Literature Also in Demand—Coal Strike Increases Interest in Socialism.

BOSTON, Oct. 14.—The Socialist Party campaign of Massachusetts is progressing in a very gratifying manner. The real fight has just begun, and for the next three weeks the comrades will work as they have seldom worked before. Demands for speakers are coming in so fast that the state headquarters cannot begin to satisfy them. We could make use of twice as many speakers as we now have, and would still need more. Our facilities for furnishing literature are also too meagre to meet the occasion.

The demonstrations that have been held upon the coal strike continue to furnish opportunities for Socialists to reach working people such as never have been presented before. When an indignation meeting is held, the program is never considered complete unless some well known Socialist speaker is present. Of course, Carey and MacCartney are the favorites. During the past week Carey spoke at demonstrations in Brockton, Boston, and Lynn, and MacCartney was one of the speakers at Waltham. At each place the Socialist argument was greeted with enthusiasm.

John Mitchell could not attend the meeting in Boston last Sunday, but his colleagues, District Presidents Nichols and Fahy, were present instead. The weather was unfavorable, but over three thousand people attended. There were other speakers besides Nichols and Fahy, but Representative Carey received the greatest ovation, aside from the visitors. Carey severely criticised President Roosevelt, Odell, Stone, and Quay, and his arraignment of Governor Crane of Massachusetts for his attempt to repeat the teamsters' strike fiasco of last spring in the miners' case was received with shouts of approval.

At the Brockton meeting there was quite an exciting time. The affair was arranged by the Central Labor Union and was held on the last night the State Federation of Labor convention was in session. Other speakers besides Carey were ex-Alderman Meade, a Democrat, and Representative Bamford, a Republican, and Comrade Frank Sieverman. Resolutions introduced approved of the strike and congratulated the miners upon their stand for arbitration. Comrade Clark of North Adams, who was a delegate to the Federation convention, introduced an amendment declaring for the collective ownership of the means of production, distribution, and transportation of coal. This caused an animated discussion, which went on for some time. Carey, Meade, and Bamford had already spoken and Carey's Socialistic remarks had been criticised by the other two speakers, so that when the resolutions were considered a great deal of feeling had been stirred up. At last Comrade Coulter, who was chairman, ruled that the resolutions were not in order until after the other speaker had been heard. This other speaker was Comrade Sieverman and when he got the floor he proceeded to pay his respects to Meade and Bamford in his characteristic style. When he got through, the Socialist resolutions were adopted with a swoop and without even a dissenting vote.

The Waltham meeting, at which MacCartney and Mailly spoke, caused a sensation in the city. It was arranged by the Central Labor Union, and the mayor of the city, who is an attorney for the Waltham Watch Company, which practically owns the town, welcomed the speakers to the city. This did not deter the Socialists from speaking plainly. What they said was not at all to the liking of the mayor, who indignantly left the platform. The next day the local papers, which are controled by the Waltham Company, denounced the meeting as "an outrage in the name of labor." The audience didn't seem to feel outraged at what was said, for they applauded vigorously, and when a collection was taken up the miners $185 was realized. The speeches of the Socialists stirred up the town, and as Comrade Chase speaks in Waltham next Sunday evening, there will probably be something more to talk about.

Chase's meetings at Springfield, Warren, Worcester, and Webster were all very good and the comrades in each place are much encouraged by the increased size of the audiences. Next Sunday afternoon Chase is one of the speakers at the Mother Jones meeting at Roxbury, and his dates for the remainder of the campaign are as follows: Oct. 20, Cambridge; 21, Lynn; 22, Brockton; 23, Everett; 24, Newburyport; 25 to 27, Bristol County; 28, Rockland; 29, Quincy; 30, Haverhill; 31, East Boston; Nov. 1, Brighton; 2, Worcester; 3, Fitchburg.

Carey's meetings at Lawrence, Clinton, and Fitchburg were all successful. At Fitchburg, last night, the largest crowd that has ever attended a Socialist meeting there filled the City Hall, and the effect will be felt for a long time. Despite his hard work throughout the year, Carey is in splendid speaking trim, and is doing exceptionally fine work. From Fitchburg he goes to Leominster, Marlboro, Chicopee Falls, Springfield, and Holyoke, and on Sunday, Oct. 19, he returns to Boston to speak at the Mother Jones meeting. In the evening he will address a meeting of the Brighton Independent Club, along with Comrade Coyne. His dates for the remainder of the campaign are as follows: Oct. 22, 23, 24, 27, and Nov. 1, 2, and 3, Haverhill; Oct. 21, South Boston; 25, Gloucester; 26, Lowell; 28 to 30, the Rockland district; 31, Brockton.

MacCartney is also meeting with success, and his New Bedford, Waltham, Franklin, Walpole, Norwood, and Roxbury gatherings were well attended.

At New Bedford an English-speaking branch was started, and at Norwood last Sunday another club was put under way. He speaks this week at Somerville, Lawrence, Hampden, and Milford. His further dates until Election Day are: Oct. 18, Milford; 19, South Braintree; 20, Charlestown; 21, South Hanover; 22, Brighton; 23, Centre Hanover; 24 and 28, Rockland; 26, Quincy; 27, Hanover, 29, South Hanson; 30, Haverhill; 31, East Boston; Nov. 1, Natick; 3, Brockton.

During last week Comrade Gibbs of Worcester spoke in Clinton, Leicester, Southbridge, and Cambridge, and Dover, N. H. The meeting at Southbridge was the first time the Socialists had spoken there. Besides this, Gibbs is constantly speaking in different parts of his own district, assisted by Comrades Abbot, Bokelund, Marcy and others. The Worcester comrades are carrying their campaign into all the small towns, where they have never been before, and the meetings are so successful that they expect good results. On Wednesday of this week Gibbs is at Saugus, Thursday at Everett, and the remainder of the dates made so far, outside his own district, are: Oct. 19, Salem; 21, Malden; Nov. 3, Rockland.

Mother Jones' Tour.

As reported before, Mother Jones' dates are as follows: Oct. 19, Apollo Garden, Roxbury; 20, Haverhill; 21, Lynn; 22, Brockton; 23, Quincy; 24, Rockland; 25, Worcester; 26, Holyoke. At nearly all of these places the entire proceeds will go to the striking miners. At the Apollo Garden affair Chase and Carey will als ospeak, and the proceeds from the 10-cent admission will be sent to the strikers. The use of the Garden has been given free, and the German Workmen's Singing Society will also give its services.

At Haverhill the Socialists give way to the Central Labor Union, which is arranging a miners' demonstration, at which Mother Jones will speak, along with Carey. All along her route she will undoubtedly receive a great reception. On Tuesday afternoon, by special invitation, she will address the Equal Rights League of Lynn.

Father McGrady will speak next week as follows: Monday, Oct. 20, Adams; 21, Springfield; 22, Whitman; 23, Haverhill. Father Hagerty's dates are: Oct. 26, Leominster; 27, Everett; 28, Chelsea; 29, Brockton; 30, Brighton; Nov. 2, Lynn; 3, Rockland.

Frank Sieverman spoke in Holbrook on Saturday last, and in Beverly on Monday. The following dates have been made for him: Wednesday, Oct. 15, South Braintree; 18 and 21, Haverhill; 23, Somerville; 28, Brockton; Nov. 2, Salem; 3, Haverhill.

John W. Brown of Hartford, Conn., is at present in this state, and will speak on Oct. 19 at Lynn; 25, East Dedham; 26, Salem; 28, Ward Twenty, Boston; Nov. 2, Apollo Garden Roxbury.

John P. Weigel, formerly of Trenton, N. J., has consented to speak in German in several places, and will give one night a week and each Sunday, until Election Day. Dates are being arranged for Silvio Origo, an Italian speaker.

On Monday of this week, Squire E. Putney and D. A. White started out as organizers for the party during the campaign, the former working in the Eastern part of the state, and White going through the West. Tehy will visit unorganized places, distribute literature, and try to organize Socialist clubs wherever they can.

John Quincy Adams, our candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is willing to accept engagements, and can be reached this office.

Besides the foregoing, meetings are being addressed nightly in all parts of the state by local speakers, and among others who are filling engagements away from home are Comrades Coulter, Levi Turner, W. J. Coyne, Pat Mahoney, J. Spero, David Taylor, and Mrs. L. H. Merrifield. The writer spoke before the Dixon Club, Newburyport, Sunday morning, and by request addressed the congregation of the Phillips Church at Watertown, speaking upon the miners' strike. On Monday he was with Carey at Fitchburg.

The comrades in Boston are requested to put forth every effort to make Mother Jones' meeting on Sunday a success. If the weather is fine there should be a very large crowd, and it is hoped that every one will do his utmost to realize the expectations of the committee.

"LABOR POLITICS" IN ROCHESTER.

Some anti-Socialist trade unionists of Rochester are trying to get up a new organization known as the Trade Unionists' League, consisting of members of all unions. The purpose of the League is alleged to be "to bring the union men closer together, to advance the cause of unionism and to bring the individual members of the different unions under one head. The league will watch out for anything that interests union workmen."

One of the purposes more definitely set forth is interesting: "To take such political action as from time to time may be deemed necessary in the interests of trade unionists."

The men who are active in forming the League are prominent local unionists who have bitterly opposed the Social Democratic Party on the ground that "we must have no politics in the union." It will be worth while to watch the new organization to see what sort of politics it attempts to bring into the unions. The Socialist movement has progressed to such a point that no "independent labor party" in this state would have the ghost of a show of success, simply because the workingmen who honestly want real labor politics know that the S. D. P. honestly represents their beliefs and hopes. On the other hand, it is getting a little dangerous for labor leaders to mix up in politics of the Platt brand or the Hill brand. Their old cry, "No politics in the union," is likely to be remembered against them.

——If you want information about the Socialist Party, address Leon Greenbaum, Emilie Building, St. Louis, Mo.

SATURDAY, Nov. 1—At Hamburg avenue and Troutman street. Well, Dooley, and Droste.

At Java street and Manhattan avenue. Burrowes and Struempfler.

MONDAY, Nov. 3—At Wyckoff avenue and Grove street. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser and Peiser.

At Noble street and Manhattan avenue. Globus, Lackemacher, and Droste.

All meetings are expected to begin at 8 p. m.

It is suggested to speakers that they take some pains to show that the present situation in the coal mining industry is the necessary and logical consequence of the development of our capitalist system in that branch of production—a result inseparable from it; that, while by arbitration and compromise the conflict may be postponed, it cannot be settled while our present business system prevails in the mining of coal.

Speakers are urged to miss no opportunity to make sharp and clear the distinction btween state socialism (more properly, state capitalism)—"municipal ownership of public utilities," "government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, and telephones," etc.—and the command of the machinery, resources, and organization for industry by the people who work, as advocated by the Social Democratic Party.

HUDSON COUNTY PROTESTS.

The Hudson County Committee at its last meeting adopted a protest against the action of the New York State Committee in accepting the offer of a certain comrade to pay the expenses of an organizer subject to the condition that he be allowed to name the person to be chosen for that position. The Committee disclaims any question of the sincerity of any comrades concerned in the matter, but believes that the precedent set is a dangerous one and at variance with Socialist principle.

The pressure of campaign and propaganda work does not allow of a discussion of this matter at the present time in the columns of The Worker; but it may be said that The Worker believes the protest of the Hudson County Committee well justified and will take occasion to discuss the principle involved after election.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now half over, and IT DEPENDS ON YOU whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and sympathetic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

SPRING AT WATERTOWN.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Comrade Spring has just closed a most successful week's campaign in this county. Every meeting was well attended and more enthusiasm was shown than ever before. Local Watertown had arranged six meetings and had them well advertised. Comrade Spring arrived on Tuesday, Oct. 3, and spoke at Brownville that evening. Friday he went to Carthage, accompanied by Thomas Pendergast, where they addressed a large open-air meeting. Saturday he spoke on Public Square in this city to nearly eight hundred people, and on Sunday afternoon another large audience greeted him at the Machinists' Hall, where he spoke on "The Morals of Capitalism." On Monday, Cape Vincent was visited and a very good meeting was held. On Tuesday night he spoke in Dexter and about fifty members of Local Watertown chartered a car and attended the meeting, which was the largest that has been held in that village. On Wednesday, Comrade Spring again addressed a large gathering on Public Square. We are sorry that he could not stay longer, but he had to leave this morning for Syracuse, where he will remain a week. We believe the agitation that has been carried on here will more than double our vote this fall. We are arranging a large mass meeting for Comrade Hanford, who is to be with us on Oct. 17.

NEBEN WOULD DEBATE WITH CLERICAL ENEMY OF LABOR.

Of all the numerous clergymen who have raged and ranted in defense of the "operators" and against the miners since the strike began, the most rabid that has come to our notice is the Rev. Dr. George S. Bishop of the First Reformed church of East Orange, N. J. His sermon last Sunday, which was reported in the "Advertiser" on Monday, surpassed even the outeries of Baer and Markle.

Comrade Neben sent the Reverend Doctor, by registered letter, a challenge printed also in the "Advertiser" on Tuesday. So far it has not been accepted, nor is it likely that he will be. The defenders of capitalism have no desire to meet Socialists in debate.

MEN OF ENGLAND.

Men of England, wherefore plough
For the lords who lay ye low?
Wherefore weave with toil and care
The rich robes your tyrants wear?

Wherefore feed and clothe and save,
From the cradle to the grave,
Those ungrateful drones who would
Drain your sweat—nay, drink your blood?

Wherefore, bees of England, forge
Many a weapon, chain, and scourge,
That these stingless drones may spoil
The forced produce of your toil?

Have ye leisure, comfort, calm,
Shelter, food, love's gentle balm?
Or what is it ye buy so dear
With your pain and with your fear?

The seed ye sow another reaps;
The wealth ye find another keeps;
The robes ye weave another wears;
The arms ye forge another bears.

Sow seed—but let no tyrant reap;
Find wealth—let no imposter heap;
Weave robes—let not the idle wear;
Forge arms in your defense to bear.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

It is reported from all over the city and state of New York that the working people are more ready to read Socialist literature than ever before. The Food Trust and the Coal Trust have set them to thinking.

Comrades and friends of the Social Democratic Party should not spare any effort in taking advantage of this state of the public mind. Literature explaining the purposes of the party and calling attention to our ticket and emblem should be distributed everywhere—from house to house, in the shops and factories, at meetings in the streets or in public halls, wherever the workers can be reached.

The State Committee has the following literature on hand. It is the duty of the comrades to see that it is used at once.

IN ENGLISH.

"What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," a leaflet by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor. Having named the author, it is not necessary to add that this leaflet is terse, clear, interesting, and convincing. Prices, postpaid: Two thousand, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

An effective throwaway card, bearing the party name and emblem, the ticket, with portraits of Hanford, Brown, Abbott, and a cartoon of "the man who will never be a Socialist." Price, postpaid, $1 a thousand; smaller quantities in proportion.

"Beef and Coal Prices," a clear and timely little leaflet by Henry Slobodin. Postpaid, 45 cents a thousand.

"What Socialism is," by John Spargo. Postpaid, 4 5cents a thousand.

Stickers bearing the name of our party and emblem and the name of our candidate for Governor. Price, 50 cents for five hundred, postpaid.

The Campaign Book is out this week. It is a 32-page booklet, containing the ticket and platform, portraits of the candidates, cartoons, several timely articles, and a variety of valuable information. It will be supplied at the rate of $5.50 a thousand, postpaid.

Posters, bearing the party name, emblem, and ticket, are now ready, and will be sent free to all who will attend to displaying them.

IN JEWISH.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?"—a 32-page pamphlet by B. Feigenbaum. An excellent thing for propaganda among Jewish-speaking workingmen. Price, postpaid: Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.25.

IN GERMAN.

A good leaflet by Alexander Jonas, including also the state platform, ticket, and emblem. Price, $1.50 a thousand.

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas," a strong appeal to the minds of thinking workingmen. Single copy, 5 cents; ten or more, at 2½ cents each.

"Die Mission der Arbeiterden Klasse.," by Charles H. Vail. One of our best short pamphlets, by a well known Socialist writer and lecturer. Single copy, 5 cents; one hundred, $2.

"Municipale Forderungen der Social Demokratie." This pamphlet shows the attitude of the Social Democratic Party on what are called "practical" questions, in harmony with the party's basic principles. Single copy, 5 cents; ten copies, 25 cents; fifty, $1; one hundred, $1.50.

Isolated readers of The Worker, who do not belong to the party organization, can help in the work. If you cannot use a thousand leaflets or cards, send for a quarter's worth and distribute them in your neighborhood.

Experience shows that wherever there is an active organization, these cheap pamphlets can readily be sold at meetings. It is well, also, for every comrade to carry a few in his pocket to give or lend to fellow workingmen with whom he may fall into conversation about Socialism. The leaflets and cards should be scattered broadcast.

For all campaign literature, send orders, with cash, to H. Reich, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, Literature Agent of the State Committee.

SOCIALISM AND TRADE UNIONISM.

The following resolution was adopted by the Socialist Party in National Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 33, 1901:

"The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, declares that the trade union movement and independent political action are the emancipating factors of the wage-working class. The trade union movement is the natural result of capitalist production and represents the economic side of the working class movement. We consider it the duty of the Socialists to join the unions of their respective trades and assist in building up and unifying the trades and labor organizations. We recognize that trade unions are by historical necessity organized on neutral grounds as far as political affiliation is concerned.

"We call the attention of trade unionists to the fact that the class struggle so nobly waged by the trade union forces to-day, while it may result in lessening the exploitation of labor, can never abolish that exploitation. The exploitation of labor will come to an end only when society takes possession of all the means of production for the benefit of all the people. It is the duty of every trade unionist to realize the necessity of independent political action on class-conscious lines, to join the Socialist Party and to assist in building up a strong political movement of the wage-working class, whose ultimate aim and object must be the abolition of wage slavery and the establishment of a co-operative state of society based on the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

Socialist meetings in the strike field continue to be numerous, large, and enthusiastic. Far from discouraging or confusing the miners, the recent developments in the conflict seem only to increase their resolution and thoughtfulness. More and more of them are coming to realize that on Nov. 4 they will have a chance to strike against the whole capitalist system, not merely for a slight improvement in their condition, but for the full product of their labor.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

"WHO PAYS THE PIPER MAY CALL THE TUNE."

(N. B.—This is NOT a call for money, though it is a discussion of campaign funds. You may peruse it, canny reader, with no fear of finding it ends in an appeal to your pocketbook.)

Both the old parties spend money galore in every campaign—to pay for literature, speakers, and halls, and more especially, to pay for fireworks, beer, and boodle. There is not an assembly district in which each of the old parties does not spend far more than the Social Democratic Party has for its whole state campaign.

YET NO ONE EVER HEARD OF EITHER OF THE OLD PARTIES APPEALING TO ITS RANK AND FILE FOR FUNDS.

Where do the funds come from?

WALL STREET BANKS AND FINANCIAL SYNDICATES. COULD TELL. THE GREAT FRANCHISE COMPANIES COULD TELL. THE TRUSTS COULD TELL.

Here are a few illustrations of capitalist interest in politics:

Jay Gould, at a time when he was chiefly interested in "bulling" the stock of the Erie Railway, was asked, "Are you a Republican or a Democrat?" He replied, "In a Republican state, I am a Republican; in a Democratic state, I am a Democrat; and I am for Erie all the time."

H. O. Havemeyer, of the Sugar Trust, a few years ago, testified that his company regularly made large and EQUAL contributions to the campaign funds of both the old parties, and that he believed this to be the general practise of such companies.

Bird S. Coler, banker and broker, is reported to have brought $200,000 into the state campaign fund of the Democratic party, and it is an open secret that the Democratic candidates for the Supreme Court in this district—trained corporation lawyers, all of them—have contributed $30,000 each. The Republican party keeps its secrets better (as it does most things more efficiently); but its nominations certainly did not go at a lower rate in any district where it had a hope of success.

Why are men willing to pay tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars for a nomination from either of the old parties? For principle? For public spirit? For fun? One smiles at such suggestions. They are willing to pay well for the offices because they know that they will be abundantly reimbursed after election.

And why are the great capitalists willing to spend enormous sums every year in the impartial support of both old parties, besides afterward reimbursing the elected officials for their liberal campaign contributions. Not for fun, but for sound business reasons.

"Who pays the piper, may call the tune."

THOSE WHO SUPPLY THE CAMPAIGN FUNDS OF A PARTY ARE SURE OF CHOOSING THE MEN WHOM THAT PARTY SHALL PUT IN OFFICE AND DICTATING THE POLICY THOSE OFFICIALS SHALL PURSUE.

The Social Democratic Party (known in other states as the Socialist Party) levies no contributions on its candidates and it gets nothing from the trusts, the banks, or the franchise companies. IT DERIVES ITS SLENDER CAMPAIGN FUNDS FROM THE VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS OF ITS RANK AND FILE, the vast majority of whom are poor workingmen who can afford to give only nickels and dimes and quarters and occasional dollars. Its candidates contribute on the same basis as other comrades—that is, in proportion to their means and to their liberality. The largest individual donation to the Social Democratic campaign fund in New York this year is only $100, and that is not from a candidate.

The campaign funds of the Democratic and Republican parties are supplied by the capitalist class; those of the Socialist or Social Democratic Party, by the working class.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand, any man in politics will be true to his real masters, to those who really gave him the nomination and paid for his campaign.

Granted, for the sake of argument, that the Socialist candidates are no honester and no wiser than those of the old parties; granted that on both sides they are men of ordinary common-sense and actuated by personal ambition—what follows?

It follows that the Republican or Democrat elected to office, knowing that he was actually chosen by the capitalists, that his campaign was paid for by them, that to them he owes his success, and that to them he must look for future advancement, will faithfully serve the interests of the capitalist class.

It follows, on the other hand, that the Socialist elected to office, knowing that he was chosen by workingmen, that his campaign was paid for by workingmen, and that to them he owes his success and that from them alone he can expect future advancement, will, from plain personal self-interest, if from no higher motive, faithfully serve the interests of the working class.

It is almost an insult to such men as Hanford and Chase and Slayton to put them, even for the sake of argument, on a level with Odell and Coler and Crane and Pennypacker and Pattison—to use, in connection with their names, the phrase, "from plain personal self-interest, if from no higher motive." We do it only for the sake of meeting our capitalist-minded critic on his own sordid ground, to show that even on that ground, the Socialist or Social Democratic Party alone can be trusted to serve the working class. And we repeat—

THOSE WHO SUPPLY THE CAMPAIGN FUNDS OF A PARTY ARE SURE OF CHOOSING THE MEN WHOM THAT PARTY SHALL PUT IN OFFICE AND DICTATING THE POLICY THOSE OFFICIALS SHALL PURSUE.

CHASE ACCEPTS THE NOMINATION.

Socialist Candidate in Massachusetts Pledges His Faith to the Toilers.

Appeals to the Record of Carey and MacCartney in Legislature as Illustration of What Socialists Will Do in Office—The Issue Clearly Drawn.

Squire E. Putney, Secretary, and Comrades of the Socialist Party of Massachusetts:

I have your notification of my nomination as candidate for Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

This nomination, coming to me as it did, entirely unlooked for, and at this particular time in the history of the Socialist Party, can but be esteemed by me as an honor of which any citizen of our Commonwealth might well feel proud. And this, the more so because I am confident that this year marks the real beginning of the Socialist Party as a political factor in this state.

Socialism is no longer a mere theory, promulgated by a few, but a living issue, which gathers force and power in propoption to the development of industry.

Like all the progressive movements of society in the past, Socialism will finally come into power and operation when the evils of that system which it aims to supplant become too oppressive for further toleration by the people.

Socialists have long pointed to the fact that the system of private ownership of the means of life must of necessity result, of its own natural evolution, in the concentration of industry into the hands of the few, and as a logical consequence giving this few an economic power which divides society into two distinct classes, the capitalist class and the producing or working class. The industrial development during the past decade has fully demonstrated to all thinking men that this position has been correct.

No intelligent man to-day will deny that the whole industrial structure is completely dominated and controlled by a few gigantic syndicates or trusts. In the light of this truth, the Socialists assert that there can be room for but two movements in the political life of this nation. One, seeking to perpetuate the individual or private ownership of the means of life—Capitalism; the other, making for collective or cooperative ownership—Socialism.

In the past, our industrial life was composed of three distinct classes: the capitalist class, the middle class, and the working class. Corresponding to these three industrial classes, we have had three phases of political activity. The Republican party representing the capitalistic class; the Democratic party representing the middle or small capitalist class, and Reform parties of various kind speaking ostensibly for the working class, but always representing some phase of middle class life.

Industrial development and concentration has abolished competition to such a degree that the middle class has been annihilated as a factor in industry and commerce, thus making necessary a new alignment of political forces or parties. It is being realized by all thinking people that this political alignment must shape itself to correspond with the industrial development.

The Democratic party, having no definite class interest to conserve distinct from that of the Republican party, naturally found it necessary to take a position in this state in the present campaign identical with the Republican party in the defense and continuation of the present capitalistic wage system. It would require a microscope a million times more powerful than any yet made to discern any difference between the position of the Republican and Democratic parties on the trust question, or the question of labor. Massachusetts could be searched from end to end and no two persons more fitted to serve the interests of the corporations and trusts than the candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties could be found.

In the light of these facts, it at once becomes apparent that the only political party that represents the working class of Massachusetts is the Socialist Party. The people of this state and nation are confronted by the same question industrially that our forefathers faced politically a little over a century ago. Our forefathers decreed and declared that private ownership in government was wrong and should be abolished. When the rule of monarchy became intolerable enough, the people established a democratic form of government relegating to oblivion forever on the American continent the idea of monopoly of government and King Rule. To-day the task we have before us is that of establishing a democratic form of industry and of abolishing forever the private ownership of the means of life and with that the rule and reign of industrial kings.

The establishment of Socialism must be the work of the working class itself through the use of their ballots in their own political organization, and believing that the workers of Massachusetts are awakening to the fact that the Socialist Party is the one party entitled to their support, I accept your nomination and gladly enter into this campaign to help fight as best I can the battle for human freedom and industrial equality.

If elected to the office of Governor of this Commonwealth, I can assure you and the working class of Massachusetts that my official acts shall conform with the attitude of the Socialist members of the Massachusetts Legislature, who, during the last four years, have by voice and vote endeavored to advance the interests of the working class in its struggle for emancipation from wage slavery.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN C. CHASE.

Miners of Pennsylvania, vote for Socialism on November 4th, at whatever cost, That vote will do more than a six months' strike.

CAMPAIGN IN PASSAIC CO., N. J.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 19.—The campaign in Passaic County is well under way. The comrades have determined to work as they have never done before in order to get on the official ballot.

On Thursday, Oct. 23, Comrade Fred Krafft will speak in Koran's Hall, 121 Second street, Passaic.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 25, Comrade Krafft will speak in English and German at Geng's Cedar Cliff Hotel in Haledon. Wm. H. Wyatt of Rutherford, our candidate for Congress, will assist Comrade Krafft.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 29, there will be a grand mass meeting in Turn Hall, corner Cross and Ellison streets, Paterson. Comrades H. Gaylord Wilshire, Fred Krafft, and Wm. H. Wyatt will address the meeting. The comrades in the Sixth Congressional District, which embraces Passaic, Bergen, and Sussex counties, are requested to put forth every effort to make the meeting a grand success. If the weather is favorable there should be a very large attendance, and it is desired that every comrade do his utmost to realize the expectation of the County Committee.

The comrades and sympathizers in Passaic County, before casting their ballots on Election Day, should see that the following names are on their ballot: For Member of Congress, Sixth District—William H. Wyatt; for Members of the General Assembly—William Glanz, Paul Hueck, Ernst Reidel, Theodor Siccama, Arthur Bertheld. W. G.

—"Watch the Counting." Active comrades are requested to read the article under this heading on the editorial page.

Workingmen of Massachusetts, you know the record of Carey and MacCartney in the Legislature. Vote for Chase and the straight Socialist Ticket.

GAIN IN SWEDEN.

At the general election just completed in Sweden, the Social Democrats elected four members to the Riksdag or Parliament—Branting in Stockholm (re-elected), Larsson in Vesterås, Nelson in Malmo, and Thorson in Ystad. Branting was the only Socialist member of the former national legislature. The nucleus of a party delegation in the riksdag is thus formed. There was a noticeable increase in the number of Liberals elected, so that strong hopes may be entertained that general suffrage may finally be granted.

REGULATION AND PUBLICITY.

The Republican and Democratic parties propose to deal with the trusts by "regulation and publicity." Can a wound on your body be healed by measuring and circumscribing it? No. Regulation cannot do away with the wrongs daily inflicted upon the people by the monopolies and trusts. To heal the body politic and social, there can be but one remedy:—

LET THE PEOPLE
OWN THE TRUSTS!

And this is the only issue you workingmen can or ought to be interested in.—From campaign leaflet of the Socialist Party of Minnesota.

They will wonder why we didn't VOTE ourselves better conditions when we had the power to do so, and had before our eyes the example of the non-producer waxing fat by the process while he yelled himself black in the face advising us to "keep out of politics."—Machinists' Journal.

What the Pennsylvania Democrats Did Not Do—"Just Compensation and Public Administration by Bankers and Corporation Lawyers—What the Social Democratic Party Proposes.

On Wednesday of last week, when Bird S. Coler was notified of his nomination as Democratic candidate for Governor, the news had just come that the coal strike and the coal famine would probably be ended. Up to that day it had been intended to make the Democratic campaign in this state on its plank advocating public ownership of the coal mines. On short notice, Mr. Coler altered his typewritten address of acceptance before reading it at the Tilden Club. Instead of making the coal plank the principal point, he passed it over with the barest mention, and talked about—the tariff and the canal.

Of course it is evident that the Democratic party never meant what it said in that now historic coal plank.

Democratic Duplicity.

Consider: IN NEW YORK THERE ARE NO COAL MINES; in New York the Democratic party declares for public ownership of the coal mines—and then drops the issue twenty days before election.

In Pennsylvania there are coal mines; IN PENNSYLVANIA THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY SAYS NOTHING ABOUT PUBLIC OWNERSHIP; instead, it tacitly endorses the action of Republican Governor Stone in sending militia against the striking miners by nominating for Governor Robert E. Pattison, who sent the militia against the striking steel workers at Homestead.

Consider further: In New York there are trolley lines, owned by a few dozen capitalists and operated by thousands of wage workers. EVERY TROLLEY COMPANY IN THE STATE DAILY VIOLATES THE TEN-HOUR LAW. Republican Governor Odell now has the militia in the field in and around Glens Falls to help the law-breaking Hudson River Valley Railway Company defeat the striking trolley workers—just as he sent them last year to break the trolley strike at Troy and Albany. This strike was on at Glens Falls, and the militia were there to do the dirty work of the lawless capitalists, when the Republican and Democratic conventions met at Saratoga, but twenty-five miles away. The Republican convention renominated Governor Odell. Did the Democratic convention demand public ownership of the trolley lines? Did it even condemn Odell for sending troops to break the trolley workers' strikes? Not a bit of it. The Democratic party was as silent as an oyster on the question of trolley lines and trolley strikes—because there are trolley lines and trolley strikes in this state, and the Democratic party (like the Republican party) GETS ITS CAMPAIGN FUNDS VERY LARGELY FROM THESE FRANCHISE COMPANIES, and it does not want to pledge itself to anything against capitalists interests on which it might be expected to make good.

Can We Trust These Men?

Consider yet again: The Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. Coler, is A WALL STREET BROKER and a stockholder in many capitalist corporations; six of his seven associates on the Democratic state ticket are either bankers and brokers, or manufacturing or trolley capitalists, or wealthy corporation lawyers—and the same thing is true of the Republican candidates; the Democratic boss, DAVID B. HILL, is counsel for more than a score of trolley and other franchise companies; BURKE COCKRAN, corporation lawyer, is actively supporting the ticket; so is GROVER CLEVELAND, who sent federal troops to break the A. R. U. strike at Chicago in 1894. Does anyone suppose that such men as these intended the public-ownership plank for anything but political buncome?

Just one more evidence of the insincerity of Democratic public-ownership planks: In 1897 the Democratic party carried the city of New York on a platform declaring for public-ownership of the rapid transit tunnel which was then to be built. What did the Democratic city administration do? With the cheerful sanction of the Republican state administration, it decided to give August Belmont's syndicate $35,000,000 for building a tunnel that will cost only $28,000,000 and then, in addition, to give them the complete use and control and profits of the tunnel for seventy-five years—A CLEAR GIFT FROM THE CITY TO THE SYNDICATE OF $7,000,000 DOWN AND AT LEAST $8,000,000 A YEAR FOR THREE-QUARTERS OF A CENTURY TO COME.

The same Democratic city administration turned over the control and the profits of the bridge cars to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and allowed that corporation to reduce the wages and increase the hours of labor of the men who run the cars.

So much for the sincerity of the Democratic party in New York in this matter of public ownership. Now a word on the plank itself.

"Just Compensation."

The Democratic party proposes that the government take the mines, "with JUST COMPENSATION to the owners"—the men whom Baer describes as "the Christian gentlemen to whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has given the control of the property interests of this country."

These Christian gentlemen have for years violated the Pennsylvania state constitution, which forbids railway companies to own the stock of mining companies.

These Christian gentlemen have systematically violated the state laws requiring proper ventilation of the mines. They find it cheaper to neglect ventilation; and through this profitable neglect, hundreds of miners have been killed in explosions and tens of thousands have died of asthma and consumption caused by the constant breathing of air laden with dust and permeated with poisonous gases.

These Christian gentlemen have forced the wage scale down to the lowest possible point, and then, by false weighing, have cheated the mine workers out of nearly 20 per cent. of what they earned even under that scale.

These Christian gentlemen have, in many instances, systematically violated the law requiring regular payment of wages in cash and have maintained the "company-store" and "company-house" system to keep their employees forever in debt.

These Christian gentlemen have, by thus reducing the mine workers to dire poverty, forced them to send their LITTLE BOYS down into the mines, and have thus violated another state law.

These Christian gentlemen have imported workmen, in violation of federal law, from every country of Europe, to cut down the wages of native workmen. And when the foreign miners learned to demand better wages, these Christian gentlemen have, through the subsidized press and pulpit, systematically striven to cultivate race hatred and religious prejudice to keep them divided.

These Christian gentlemen, finally, when the mine workers peacefully demanded a slight improvement in their condition, have scoured the slums of the great cities to gather together thousands of the most dangerous thugs and arm them to the teeth; and by the order of these Christian gentlemen, such things have, on repeated strikes, ruthlessly murdered unarmed men and women and children.

And the owners of the coal mines, be it remembered, have done no worse than the owners of the other mines, the railways and trolley lines, the cotton mills, the clothing factories, and other forms of capital. The "Christian gentlemen to whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has given the control of the property interests of this country" have all used the same general methods in the service of their one deity—Profit.

WHAT WOULD BE "JUST COMPENSATION" FOR THE CRIMES OF THESE EXPLOITERS? JUSTICE FALTERS AT THE QUESTION AND HUMAN MERCY DENIES AN ANSWER.

When the Democratic party talks of public ownership of the mines, "with just compensation to the owners," it means—even if we grant the sincerity of its professions—it means that THE GOVERNMENT, ADMINISTERED BY WALL STREET BROKERS AND CORPORATION LAWYERS, SHALL RELIEVE THE CHRISTIAN GENTLEMEN OF ALL RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE OPERATION OF THE MINES AND SHALL GUARANTEE THEM THEIR PROFITS, WRUNG FROM THE HARD AND DANGEROUS LABOR OF THE MINERS, IN THE FORM OF INTEREST ON GOVERNMENT BONDS.

What the S. D. P. Proposes.

The Social Democratic Party, on the other hand, when it proposes public ownership of the mines and other means by which the people work and live, means exactly what it says.

It does not propose to give "just compensation" to the exploiters of Labor nor to visit just retribution upon them. It is willing to forgive the past, and TO GIVE BAER AN EQUAL CHANCE WITH THE HUMBLEST OF HIS VICTIMS.

It proposes that the means of production which the working class has created and now operates shall be owned by all the people for the benefit of all that all shall work and get the full fruit of their labor.

And to guarantee this, it calls upon the wage-workers as a class to put in office men chosen by and from their class and responsible only to their class.

In a word, the Social Democratic Party proposes that THE GOVERNMENT SHALL OWN THE MEANS BY WHICH THE PEOPLE LIVE, and that THE WORKERS SHALL CONTROL THE GOVERNMENT.

THE STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

At the moment when the columns of The Worker were closed last week the final terms of the mine owners' arbitration offer to the striking miners had not yet become public. We are not sure that, even with the mine owners' amended proposition before us, we should have spoken differently. Granting the most favorable construction to the proposition and putting all confidence that it is possible to put in the good faith of the chosen arbitrators and in the power of public opinion, still the settlement falls far short of what the miners had right and reason to demand. And had they seen fit to carry on the fight and force better terms, we are sure that the support given them by the working class at large would not have been relaxed in the least.

That the miners have accepted a proposal so far short of that which they had a right to insist upon and which a few more weeks of resistance might have secured proves one thing which ought never to be forgotten as the chief lesson of this strike. This is the thing it proves:

While the "operators" have not, at any period in the strike, shown the slightest regard for the hardships of the miners or of the outside public, while they have been perfectly willing to starve the miners and to freeze the other workers of the land, if they could thereby win their point, the only fault that can be found with the miners' conduct has been that they have been too generous to a foe driven to the verge of defeat and have been unwilling to demand of their fellow workers the further sacrifices that those fellow workers would cheerfully have made to secure for the miners a more definite victory. In a word, it is characteristic of the miners, and workingmen, that they have been willing to sacrifice much to the welfare of society; while it is characteristic of the "operators," as capitalists, that, so long as they had a hope of winning, they were willing to sacrifice every interest of society for their own profit.

The miners, in the consciousness of their right and of their own good faith, have voted to submit all their demands to arbitration by a board a majority of whose members are unquestionably prejudiced against their cause. They have voted to take up their tools once more and supply the people's need of fuel, while awaiting the decision of the arbitrators.

The whole responsibility, so far as concerns the questions immediately at issue, rests now upon these arbitrators and upon him who chose them.

If the result shall be satisfactory to the miners, the whole working class will rejoice with them—and none more than the Socialists, for the miners' victory will mean more leisure for thought, better conditions of life and therefore higher hopes and stronger resolution, for a hundred and fifty thousand of our fellows.

And if the result be unsatisfactory, if this settlement but repeat the shameful history of the settlement of the teamsters' strike at Boston—then, woe to the guilty! Not to the miners, but to the mine owners; not to the workers, but to the capitalists; not to Mitchell, but to Roosevelt.

It is possible to stop a strike, but it is not possible to destroy its results. The five months' conflict which has so forcibly exhibited the courage, the solidarity, the self-control of the workers in a great industry; which has shown in so glaring a light the arrogance, the cruel greed, and the perfidy of the capitalists; and which, above all, so clearly illustrated the social anarchy of the capitalist system—this conflict has had results that will go much farther and deeper than the issues now before the board of arbitration. As a miner wrote to us, two months ago: "Whatever the outcome, this strike cannot be lost. It has given us an education that we could have got in no other way."

There are serious dangers. There is the all too probable danger that the decision of the arbitrators will be but a miserable makeshift compromise between the insolent assumptions of the "operators" and the excessively moderate demands of the miners. There is the danger that, in the settlement of the questions in dispute at the several collieries, without formal recognition of the union, means may be provided by which the "operators" may defraud the miners of even what the arbitrators award them, and that opportunities for discrimination, persecution, and blacklisting may still be left open. There is the danger already obscurely threatened by two of the arbitrators themselves—that an attempt may be made to force upon the miners' union either incorporation or some other form of "financial responsibility," which would leave it at the mercy of capitalist spies and capitalist courts.

These are dangers against which the miners have to guard, and in guarding against which they may still count upon the vigorous support of an awakened working class. And the most effective way of guarding against such dangers will be to show the capitalists and their tools, on the fourth of next month, that we have not forgotten them, that we see no reason to love or trust them, that we propose to fight them to the finish. A doubled Socialist vote in Pennsylvania, in New York, and all over the country, will do more to secure a settlement favorable to the miners than could all the arguments of all the conciliators and mediators in Christendom.

Postscript.—Though the strike is suspended, the need of strike funds is not at an end. The Pennsylvania miners have come out the conflict, poor and in debt, with winter and all its needs before them; in the Virginias there are still some thousands of miners in actual distress, who must be given assistance. The strike fund is still open and the workingmen who have so splendidly supported the strike thus far should do yet a little more.

WHAT THE S. D. P. WOULD DO.

By Ben Hanford.

The question of wages and the unemployed will never be solved until the working class are in possession of the powers of government. Once they have those powers, all will be well with them.

Granted the government is in the hands of the working class, the unemployed will be given work by the city, state, or nation.

Granted the government is in the hands of the working class, the man who locks out his employees will find that a Social Democratic legislature will pass a law confiscating his factory and making it public property; a Social Democratic judge will declare the law constitutional; and a Social Democratic governor and sheriffs will carry the law into effect. That employer would never go into that factory again except to do productive work on the same basis as the other workers. Socialist officials would simply say that if the capitalist could not run industry without lockouts, society could.

If there was a strike, the Socialist government would pursue the same course—confiscate the employer's means of production. Socialist officials would simply say that if the capitalist could not carry on industry without strikes society could.

In the case of a shut-down—the employer ceases to be employer. He no longer employs men in production. And when he stops production society should step in and carry it on, and to do this it would abolish the capitalist's private property in the means of production, and make it social property.

There is no half-way measure which can deal with this matter. The only cure for the ills which afflict the working class is to change the private ownership of the means of production to social ownership.

That can only be done through the capture by the working class of the powers of government. To you workingmen, that is the supreme issue in this country to-day. It will require great effort on your part, heroic sacrifice on the part of many. But you have the strength to make the effort and the courage and virtue to make the sacrifices. You will do both. How soon? The time also rests with you. Your path to triumph leads to the ballot box. Now is the time to start. In this coming campaign, if a man tells you that the Republican party is your friend tell him the facts prove his words to be false. If a man tells you the Democratic party is your friend, tell him history proves the contrary. If either a Democrat or a Republican tells you he is your friend, tell him you are glad to hear it, and if he is indeed your friend he must VOTE YOUR TICKET, the ticket of the Social Democratic Party—for while God lives or time lasts you will never again vote his.

The working class, may it ever be right; right or wrong, the working class!

(You should read the whole of the leaflet from which this extract is taken—"What the Social Democratic Party Would Do," by Ben Hanford, our candidate for Governor of New York. If there is no S. D. P. organization in your locality, send a dime to this office and we will send you a bundle for yourself and your friends.

HANFORD, ODELL, OR COLER—WHICH?

Hanford, as a workingman, has gone through strikes and lockouts. Odell, as Governor, has sent troops to defeat strikes. Coler, as a capitalist, has profited by the defeat of strikes and the success of lockouts. Vote for Hanford under the Arm and Torch.

FATHER McGRADY TO SPEAK IN DAYTON, OHIO.

Father T. McGrady, the well-known advocate of Socialism, will speak in Dayton, Ohio, on next Thursday night, Oct. 30, in the Palm Garden Hall on South Jefferson street, just below Fifth street. No admission will be charged, and everyone should avail themselves of this opportunity to hear this eloquent speaker. Rev. McGrady is pastor of St. Anthony's Church of Bellevue, Ky., and is well known for his advocacy of the doctrines of Socialism and his many writings on this subject. This will be the first time that Father McGrady has ever spoken in Dayton, where admission was not charged, and as a very large audience is assured those desiring good seats should come as early as possible. The meeting will begin promptly at 8 p. m.

BROOKLYN RALLY.

A mass meeting of the Social Democratic Party will be held at Turn Hall, 191 Sumpter street, Brooklyn, on Friday evening, Oct. 24. Ben Hanford, candidate for Governor; Alex. Fraser, candidate for Sheriff of Kings County; Mark Peiser, candidate for State Senator; Dr. G. Fish Clark, Chas. Frederic Adams, and other prominent speakers will address the meeting. All party members and friends are invited to meet at the Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue, at 8 o'clock sharp and march to the hall in a body.

PARADE CONFERENCE.

The Parade Conference will meet at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, Friday evening, Oct. 24, to perfect arrangements for the parade on Saturday, Nov. 1. Every labor organization in the city should be represented in the conference and should take part in the demonstration to show the capitalists that the working class is awakening to a sense of its wrongs and of its power.

CHALLENGE TO HEARST.

Fieldman Invites Him to Public Discussion of Issues.

Millionaire Democrat Called on to Defend the Record of Party Which Endorses Cleveland, Flower, Pattison, Steunenberg—Will He Accept?

Solomon Fieldman, the Social Democratic candidate in the Eleventh Congressional District of New York, has challenged his Republican and Democratic opponents to meet him in debate on the issues of the campaign as they effect the interest of the working class.

The Republican candidate cuts but little figure, as a Republican has absolutely no chance in the Eleventh, and it is to William R. Hearst, the Democratic candidate, that Fieldman devotes his attention. He challenges Hearst to defend the record of his party and of the men whom his party has repeatedly endorsed—Cleveland who sent troops against the Chicago strikers, Flower, who sent militia against the Buffalo strikers, Steunenberg, who established the Bull Pen, and Pattison, who used militia to break the Homestead strike.

He challenges him to defend the principles of the Democratic party, if anyone can find out what its principles are, since Hearst as editor and Hill as boss and Coler as candidate have hedged or contradicted.

Comrade Fieldman has, all through the campaign, been speaking to unusually large and enthusiastic meetings in the district and the old-party politicians know that hundreds or thousands of their former followers have, through Fieldman's efforts, got an understanding of Socialist principles. It remains to be seen whether Hearst will venture to meet his working-class opponent face to face before the voters of his district.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

The question of constitutionality of the Eight-Hour Law will be passed upon by the New York Court of Appeals within a month after election. A big vote for the Social Democratic Party will help to convince the judges that the law is constitutional.

Child slavery in the cotton mills of the Democratic South is exactly paralleled by child slavery in the glass works of Republican New Jersey. Socialists want to put the children in the schools and give men a chance to work. The fight that Carey and MacCartney have made against child labor should show the workers that Socialism is their only hope.

WATCH THE COUNTING.

It is the chief aim of the organized Socialist movement to make Socialists. Second only to this, it is our aim to make Socialist votes. And subsidiary only to these two things, it is important to see that every Socialist vote is counted and reported.

In nearly all, if not all, of the states in which the Socialist Party now has candidates in the field, the election laws guarantee us the right of having watchers at the polls from the time the voting begins till the count is completed.

It must not be forgotten that the election officials are, with few exceptions, active "practical" politicians of the two old parties, that they have every motive to suppress our vote, and that very many of them have no scruples about doing so. One way is to count our vote as "scattering" or to credit the vote of the Socialist Party (in New York, the Social Democratic Party) to the S. L. P., which the capitalist politicians no longer fear. Another method, and one often practised, where we have no watchers, is for the bi-partisan healers in charge to agree to count the Socialist ballots, as they are taken up, alternately for the Republican and for the Democratic party; by this means they maintain their own balance and suppress the Socialist vote which they both wish to suppress.

This can be prevented wherever we have comrades who are willing to take the necessary trouble. We must have watchers in as many polling-places as possible. Even at the expense of neglecting agitation in the last two or three days before November 4, if necessary, our party organizers should see that wachers are secured, that they are provided with whatever credentials or certificates the law of the state may require, and that they are instructed in their duties and their rights under the law.

We have undoubtedly been defrauded of thousands of votes in previous years, through not having an adequate force of watchers. Precaution against fraud becomes more needful as the growing strength of our party more alarms the capitalist politicians, and becomes also easier as the number of our active workers grows. Let no efforts be spared to have the full Socialist vote counted and reported. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

REPORT THE VOTE.

Comrades, you will desire to get the election news as fully and as promptly as possible after the Fourth of November. The Worker desires to give you that news better than ever before. To be able to do it we must depend on your voluntary assistance, for Socialist papers have at their command no such machinery of news-gathering associations and special correspondents as the great dailies have. You must send us the news from each city, town, or village, in order that we may send to each of you the news from the whole country.

We ask that the organizer of each local and the secretary of each county or state committee, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, shall either take the necessary steps to have the Socialist vote in his territory reported to this office as soon as it is known.

For the instruction of the comrades whom we ask to act thus as volunteer reporters, we give a few instructions:

1. Before Election Day, send us by mail, a statement of the Socialist vote (and also of the S. L. P. vote, if any) cast in the city, town, village, or county in 1900, and also, if available, that cast in 1901. We can then have these figures arranged, ready for reference.

2. The Worker will go to press one day late on the week after election—that is, on Thursday evening. As much news as possible should be got to this office by Thursday noon.

3. In most cases, fairly a good approximate report of our vote in each locality can be had by Wednesday noon; if it can be had earlier, all the better; but whether at noon or earlier or later, it should be sent (by special delivery letter, if at any considerable distance), without an hour's delay.

4. The reporter should state the source of his information—whether from newspaper, election officials, or party watchers, and whether complete or not.

5. The reporter should, in each case, state definitely the territory covered and the office and name of the candidate for whom the vote reported has been cast.

6. Where our vote is large, the total vote of all parties should also be given.

7. Where the S. L. P. has a ticket, it should be reported.

8. All letters containing news should be addressed to the Editor of The Worker.

If all our readers will take note of this matter and lend us their hearty assistance, we are sure that each of them will be gratified at the result.

A STATEMENT TO COMRADES.

In reply to inquiries from several comrades we would state that we had in type for last week's issue of The Worker a statement of facts in regard to the situation in California, together with a summary of the arguments on both sides of the important question involved. We had waited until that time, in order to be able to present a full and fair statement. But we found that the subject would require more space than could be spared from important campaign matter at this time, and have therefore decided to postpone it entirely, until immediately after election, when our columns will be less crowded and when the comrades will have more time to consider it.

The Worker is now carrying several thousand three-month and four-week trial subscriptions, gathered through the activity of our comrades in various parts of the country. To all the new acquaintances to whom we are thus introduced we would say: If you like The Worker, if you think it is helping a good cause, if you would like to see its influence extended and its quality improved, you should send on fifty cents or a quarter before your trial subscription expires, so that the paper will continue to come to you for another year or six months without interruption. You will find that it is worth the money to you; and on our side, the money will help us to introduce the paper to still other readers and to equip it, both mechanically and editorially, for more effective work.

TARIFF REVISION AND THE TRUSTS.

Some of the Democrats and some of the Republicans propose to "curb the power of the criminal trusts," as they say (they do not tell us which are the criminal and which the innocent trusts) by reducing the tariff on imports.

This is much as if one should propose to check the ravages of a ferocious wolf by burning the bones of the wolf's dead mother.

No one can intelligently and sincerely deny that the tariff has helped to foster the trusts. The Republican leaders did deny it—unintelligently or insincerely—until within the last year or two, when, the tariff having served its purpose for the great capitalists, some of the "liberal" Republicans propose to make a new campaign issue out of tariff revision.

The tariff helped to foster the trusts it is true. But the trusts are no longer infants. They have reached maturity. The young wolf feeds on its mother's milk like a harmless lamb. The grown wolf tears and devours the sheep and no longer needs to be nursed.

We have a Meat Trust—fostered by the protective tariff on meats. But that trust no longer depends upon the tariff for its power. Instead of being afraid of foreign competition here, it is conquering the markets of England and Continental Europe. America is the largest meat-exporting country in the world. We have the broad and fertile prairies, adapted for cattle-raising. We have the great stockyards and the wonderful packing houses and cold-storage plants for preparing meats. ("We," in this case, means the American capitalists, not the American people.) Neither Russia nor Australia nor even Argentina can compete with the United States in the production of meat—tariff or no tariff. Why, then, is meat dear? Because a small group of capitalists, closely connected with the Standard Oil Company, have secured the ownership of a large part of the cattle ranges and of nearly all the great stockyards and packing houses and cold-storage plants, and hold shares in all the railways which transport cattle and meat. The tariff has, in past years, helped these men to get this control of the means of production. But having got it, they no longer depend on the tariff. When the American Meat Trust can raise the price of meat in free-trade England, as it has done this summer, it is evident that a reduction of the tariff could have little or no effect on the price of meat in this country.

Another instance: We have a Tobacco Trust. Within the last two years this organization, also closely affiliated with the Standard Oil Company, has got control of all the great tobacco factories in the country, and also of all the great cigar and cigarette factories; it has acquired possession of the most valuable tobacco lands in the United States and in Cuba; and it is now, through its agency, the United Cigar Stores Company, taking possession of the retail trade. It has invaded Europe, and has forced the greatest tobacco companies of Germany and Austria to come to its terms. For a little while it carried on a sharp war with the rival English Tobacco Trust in the English market. A month ago came the news that these two trusts had pooled their interests in one gigantic international combine—and the price of tobacco in England went up, but not the wages of tobacco workers there or here. This trust also was fostered by the tariff in its early days. But now, when it has grown to international proportions and is on the point of controlling the raising of tobacco leaf and the manufacture and wholesale and retail selling of tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes all over the world, it is idle to talk of "curbing" it by tariff revision.

Again, we have a Coal Trust, fostered, to some extent, we doubt, by the tariff. But so has Great Britain a Coal Trust, though Great Britain has no tariff on coal; and sixty-eight thousand British coal miners are now deliberating whether they should strike or submit to a reduction of wages. Can anyone imagine that a reduction of the tariff would "curb" Mr. Baer's power, or that it would have helped the Pennsylvania miners in their fight?

Yet, again, the Standard Oil Company, not so very long ago, made a treaty with the Russian Oil Trust, by which they divided the world between them. Not even the discovery of new oil fields in Texas "curbed" the power of this trust—though there is no tariff between Texas and New York. Within six months after their discovery, and in spite of the "anti-trust laws" of Democratic Texas, the Standard Oil Company had complete control of the new oil fields. This Company, as a body, and also its leading members, have invested a large part of their surplus in the stock and bonds of gas and electric companies. In nearly every city of the United States to-day, whether you use kerosene or gas or electricity to light your house, you pay tribute to Rockefeller and his associates. What could be more stupid than to propose to "curb" this international light and heat and power trust by reducing the tariff on oil?

One more instance: The members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers are to-day voting on the alternative presented to them by the Steel Trust: Either accept a reduction of wages so that we can get more foreign orders, or have a part of the mills (and those the strict union mills) shut down and a large part of your men thrown out of employment for months together. The Amalgamated Association knows that it must accept one or the other of the evil alternatives; it is between the devil and the deep sea; it dare not fight the Steel Trust. A reduction of the tariff on steel and iron would hardly affect this question at all. No other country can now compete with the United States in cheapness of iron and steel production. It is therefore the condition of the foreign market that regulates the American iron and steel industry; and the American workers, tariff or no tariff, have to come down to the European level or be laid off.

It is useless further to multiply instances. To sum up:

In years past, the tariff has helped to build up the trusts. But the trusts have outgrown the need of tariff protection, and tariff reduction would therefore not destroy or curb them. Their power now rests on their ownership of all the greatest and most efficient means of production and transportation, which enables them, at the same time, whether under protection or free trade, to crush competition and to defy the resistance of their employees.

The Socialist (or Social Democratic) Party does not propose to "smash" the trusts or to "curb" them; nor does it distinguish between "good" trusts and "bad" ones. It says that all trusts are potentially good in so far as they prevent waste of labor in a hundred ways, and that all trusts are bad in that, under private ownership, this economy redounds wholly to the benefit of the few capitalists and the injury of the many workers. It proposes to preserve the good and remove the evil by making them into public institutions, owned and operated for the public good.

Let the Nation Own the Trusts.

WORKMAN AND MASTER.

WORK.

The fires are out in the foundry; the wheels of the mills are dumb;
The engine has stopped in the factory, the belting has ceased to hum;
There is want and woe in the household, the mother is wasted and worn,
The children are pinched with hunger, their clothing is tattered and torn;
Heavy the heart of the father, worker and winner of bread——
How shall he save them from starving? How keep a roof overhead?

PLEASURE.

Bright is the summer palace. Blue are the wind swept seas;
Merry the mountain mansion; green are the forest trees;
Make room for the holiday coaches, clear course for the white winged yacht;
But why, while the rich man revels, shall the poor man perish and rot?
How long shall the millionaire masters and lords of the food giving soil
Make feast on the brain and the brawn, and the blood of the children of toil?

WARNING.

Can your daughters bedazzle in silk if the silkworm ceases to spin?
Can you warm them in garments of wool if your sheep die in pastures too thin?
When the fire in the foundry goes out the fire on the hearth does the same;
When the hearth in the hovel is cold, the palace may crumble in flame;
Take heed, O ye millionaire masters, who have seised all the gifts of the gods,
Or the slaves you have plundered and wasted may bind you and scourge you with rods.

A MANUAL OF FACTS.

The Socialist Campaign Book published by Charles H. Kerr & Co. in the last general campaign is the most valuable manual of information for speakers that has yet been prepared. Although issued for the campaign of 1900, it is as useful now as ever. Every party speaker should have one, and there should be a copy in the headquarters of every Socialist local or club. We have a few copies left, which will be sold at 20 cents each, postpaid. Address, with cash, Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

The campaign is now half over, and IT DEPENDS ON YOU whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and sympathetic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

THE ART OF MAKING FOREIGNERS.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

It makes a gentleman of the capitalistic persuasion shiver to think how many unprofitable generations of savages have left their bones in the jungles and forests of the world and never wrote a will; how they sweated out, in vain, what might have been profit-producing energy in the mere hunting of animals and pursuit of things for themselves alone. The altruistic felicity of sweating for others never being known to them, they were deprived of that sweetest of poverty's many sweet experiences, the knowledge that they were nourishing a class of people who were not such fools as themselves. They wasted their lives without ever having had revealed to them the knowledge of a foreign incentive, though it was then knocking benevolently at their seaboards for admission, to show them how to be more deeply happy. They knew not the joy of having their personal wants multiplied and their powers of satisfaction diminished, to keep them hustling. The constant stimulus of an artificial famine was not theirs; so they lived and died in a state of lamentable happiness.

It is our bounden duty to see that in this respect mistakes do not repeat themselves and that happiness be kept serious, sober and industrious. The average mob of persons must not be permitted to get happy as it likes; for there is a wrong old way and a right modern way to be happy; and no one but the man who has the experience of possessing large sums of money knows the modern way in which other people ought to be happy.

Just think of the improper state of happiness that prevailed in Africa before American christians began to buy slaves there! Before the missionaries of our strenuous life taught them the future they never knew that happiness is only a reminiscence, or, as Jefferson says, a pursuit.

They wasted centuries tatooing one another, making pictures on rocks, carving their beauty fancies on any sort of handy old surfaces, and doing all things for fun and frolic, never being in earnest but when they were amusing themselves, never laughing at any absurdity except when they were at work, and then laughing chiefly at the absurdity of being obliged to do a thing that they didn't want to.

Oh the wickedness and unprofitableness of those ages of fun and frolic, spent without capital by aboriginal man in the tropical forests. What a pity Mr. Moss and Mr. Hedge (the moral fungus and the property fence) were not there. Too long through their sniffling nonsense the children of the forests postponed the serious, solemn, solid happiness of Morganism, too long by their levity they deferred the luxury of working for, voting for, and then fighting for a full dinner pail. By feeling at home and giving way to happiness these primitive darkies postponed the proper development of their race through American slavery and lynching, and so they remained for several superfluous centuries strangers to the spiritual exaltation of having been emancipated. Strangers too long, were they, to that growth of grace known as political gratitude, especially to the Republican party, and to the consequent duty of scab working and crooked voting. Of all these blessings did they rob themselves by the African habit they had formed of getting prematurely happy the wrong way—that is, without work for wages.

The root of the evil of uncivilization is this very prematurity of people to feel themselves at home in their own country; it is an unwarrantable habit and has brought many a tear to the eye of civilization and kept many a dollar out of its pocket. But let us hope that the history of the American Indians and the speed with which this vast continent of ours has been put under the parchment of private right will prevent future generations from contracting any more facility of thinking themselves at home in countries, because they were permitted to be born in them and permitted to produce all the wealth of them. If past experience fails to warn the majority of mankind everywhere from this home delusion, surely recent economic developments cannot fail to convince that civilization is not patriotism, but an organization for taking care of private property alone; and that it cares incidentally only for the human body as it happens to be stuck to a bit of property during the soul's pilgrimage from earth to heaven. Now if the people everywhere are thus instructed, there need be no alarms of Socialism among us. Spoon-fed by capital, and guided by the clergy, they will cherish no hopes concerning this earth, they will modestly keep their places; and, instead of indulging in futile assertions of their rights, they shall look meekly and reverently to Mr. Baer and his divinely appointed successors, whose tender hearts alone will take sufficient care of them and these Christian gentlemen of property shall wisely consider whether such and such workers can be usefuly conceded the right to be alive at all or not, according to the requirements of the labor market.

This American democracy of ours has been a fearfully perilous experiment; all gentlemen now realize this, and all are determined to draw back from it while yet any civilization and property are left to us. Populations must henceforth be taken in hand sternly and taught better. The nonsense of equal rights must be publicly parted with by educated people and society restored to its ancient basis. We must have a perpetual supply of resident foreigners at work whom we can whip; or of alienated natives whom we can fool into whipping themselves; that is, we must have chattel slaves or proletarians. Ours must be a land of moveable men and unmoveable property as of yore. We must hasten to make slaves and foreigners of the populace and to put a stop forever to their impudence of citizen thinking. We, who are the wise, the good and the great alone shall rule; we only know how to be economically happy on a labor basis. Our happiness consists in knowing how to economize all our own exertions by promoting a healthy perspiration in the working classes. The illiterate, artless workers should be spared the agony of too many disappointments, and their peace of mind ought to be permanently secured. We should at once, and without hypocrisy, place them where we mean to keep them—outside the pale of property on the basis of a foreign population.

Americans are an easy mark; they will get used to this or anything else, so the sooner we begin to foreignize them the fewer strikes we shall witness in the future; and the sooner we shall discover that we are living in the midst of the most satisfiable people on earth. In fact, our population invites our teeth, they want to be chained up; or, let me say it, as the Israelites of old would have expressed it, "The Lord hath delivered them into our hands." It is over the lives of a foreignized population that the chariot wheels of a property civilization must forever roll and we must make foreigners of Americans.

Our gentlemen leaders, as a class, have become pretty well conscious of this foreignizing duty; but are not yet ready to denationalize the whole crowd that has been voting for us. It is deemed to be expedient at this time therefore that a preliminary effort to find the foreign material necessary for the foundation of our property empire be made in other lands. We are developing such a beautiful, ardent moral enthusiasm for the assimilation of foreigners as leaves no doubt of success. But it is in the nature of geography, sooner or later, to give out before an appetite like ours.

This patriot in view of that emergency bethinks him, in this essay, whether it is not possible for our benevolence to be artificially supplied with its human provender from within the borders of our own country after the ultra-American populations of the world have been economically digested.

Of course, the advice I here modestly offer to my fellow countrymen against the time of a famine in foreigners abroad is based upon the hope that the family makers of our beloved country will not go back on us, as they are doing on the capitalists of France, and that the priests of all denominations will still continue successfully to preach the gospel of large families to the poorest of the people, and that our workers will continue to appreciate the national good nature, which, while taking away from them the fruits of all their other labors, leaves them the fruits of their loins, at least until such time as they are grown big enough to compete with papa and mamma in the labor market of the world.

Granting then, that poor American parents will continue to be patriotically prolific, we have to advise how their successful family exertions may best be utilized for a continuous supply of native grown foreigners to the national table. First disarm the patient economically. Take away his tools from him, if he is a handworker, and so order it, that as an individual worker he is of no further use to his country at large, and still less to his diminished self.

This untooling of the population may be accomplished by putting all the tools up into very high lofts and placing armed sentinels on the stairways. But high priced tools, such as a hundred thousand dollar machine, will do just as well as the stairway and the sentry, if you can keep the workers from learning together how to use the whole tool or how to wholly take it away from you. Now as long as you divide the making of a thing into many parts with a machine of such impossible price to the worker, for each part you have done to the whole class, what you had previously done for each unit of it; that is, you have made the class a cipher until his hands have learned to come together as our interests and dollars have already done. Such a coming together is a long way off, but until it comes we may consider the working people as foreigners.

Do not allow workmen to take root anywhere; let them always be as flying seeds or let them be as foreign ships that abide between their voyages in our docks; Compel them to pay harbor dues and dock dues, call it rent, or anything you like; it is a levy made on a transient foreigner for standing still in our dominions.

Enter into no obligation with him to the effect that you shall give him work, or bread, or anything but what it suits you to give him; for any obligation of yours confers upon him that much of a locus standi, and reduces by that much his foreign character, since the state which alone enforces obligations must that much recognize him if you do. While everything else of any value is under the political law of the country let him remain subject to supply and demand. Then you can supply the demands and demand the supply.

If you find that he is not creeping down to a root diet quick enough see to it that you import genuine foreigners to speed him. Set the law of competition in motion and reduce him to the wages of abstinence. When he does not please you hit him with the foreigner and when the foreigner displeases you hit him with the American. After a time they will both be so badly hit as to feel but cowed and discouraged bipeds, whose only hope of bread is in your mercy. They are both in fact a very bad sort of foreigners. One is a man who has run away from his own country, the other is a man whose country has run away from him.

Keep them on the lowest possible plane of motive as workers, for a man who labors always for his own bread only can have no country; with the brutes' incentive solely he can never become much of a citizen, and he must remain in all countries a foreigner. Prevent their family instincts from getting too strong, or before you know where you are they will get farms and homes about them without your mortgage. Never let your workman get nearer to a state function than carrying a gun to shoot himself with when he gets too fresh about his rights. Deluge him with silly reading, if he has any time, and since you cannot keep him from speaking in our native language let us prevent him from thinking in it; therefore keep him supplied with idiotic literature and fool rogue newspapers.

Above all things cultivate in his manhood a childish faith in the reality of his citizenship. Never let him discover that neither the laborer nor the capitalist has any country, while one lives on profit forced from the defenseless and the other on private wages.

By all means let him use the ballot box; it will do you no harm and it will do him no good. So long as his world consists of a fedge of ice with a fire all around it you can afford to let him change his position frequently and shift him about between the Democratic Ice and the Republican Coal Trust wherever he moves. While he works for wages and the capitalist controls the government, be sure the workingman is a foreigner.

THE STRIKE IS DEAD. LONG LIVE THE STRIKE!

By Horace Traubel.

The coal strike is ended. The miners are victorious. The question is settled. "Forever," Mitchell hopes. That dead "forever." No, Mitchell. The essential question is not settled at all. You have won a truce. Perhaps a truce is victory. But the best truce is only a temporary triumph. Your strike came asking a question. The strike was a question. That question was not answered. You know it was not answered. Where, then, is the victory? Let us be precise. Let us talk of the truce. The victory is unwon.

What victory could you have won? If you had got ten cents more per diem. If you had cut one hour off the day's work. If you had got your honest weighers. If you had wiped out the company store. If you had even got your union recognized. What was your victory? The victory would have been a victory only in items, of outposts. The primitive villainy would still remain untouched.

You put up a noble fight. That was your victory. The fight alone was your victory. A little more food goes into your belly. A little more cloth goes on your back. A little more roof is put over your head. But that is not victory. That is food, cloth, roof. That is not victory. It may be a courier. It may be a foretaste. It may be a promise. But victory is something different and farther ahead.

I honor the fight. I honor Mitchell. Mitchell shamed his betters. Mitchell bettered his betters. Mitchell set an example. Mitchell alone. The United States had their president. But democracy had no president. Democracy knocked at the door of official America and was rejected. Democracy knocked at the door of the miner and not less than any one of the miners who loyally backed him. Every miner's name was Mitchell in that fight. To that Mitchell of the hosts I take off my pride. Before the august simplicity of that Mitchell I am humbled.

Do you think the magnates regard the strike as over? The masters are mastered. But it is only a momentary repulse. As soon as quiet is restored they will again commence to invade. Commence to invade? Their very existence is an invasion. The question of the strike will never be settled until there is only one party to the strike. When the private owner ceases to exist the strike will disappear. The real striker is the private owner. That striker the strike will destroy.

Do you not see, you gentlemen of trusts and incomes, that, though we adjourn, we adjourn to reassemble? We stop to get breath. We stop to recuperate. We will review our policies. We will perhaps resort to new devices. But you will meet us again and again. You will meet us on and off the road. You will meet us asleep and awake. You will find us in your office, in your club, in your home. And all our questions will resolve themselves into one question. And that one question capital can never answer except by resignation. And the conditions of resignation may be determined by capital. Capital may retire gracefully. Capital may retire with grudge and grumble. But it must get out of the way. Private capital, I mean. The human spirit will not be satisfied with compromises. It will not hedge or qualify or admit pros and cons. The spirit sees its pro written so large as to cover the earth.

I am hopeless? No one is more hopeful. No one is more confident. I do not say no to the strike. I say yes in the most indubitable way. You cannot make your strike too big for me. The strike will little by little cross the borders of trades and professions till a strike for one is a strike for all. But the strike must not lop off branches. It must cut to roots. It must not tear the clothes. It must reach the heart. Until it does that all its labor is but exercise. Until it does that it is only getting its weapons ready.

Will wages ever take you to heaven? Only principles will take you to heaven. Wages are personal. Principles are universal. The principles say: "It is dangerous to own. It is safe to use." The principles see that ownership is the fenced lot. The fenced lot is an armed enemy. The principles demand the whole earth. They leave no room for personal ownership. We will own nothing. We will use everything. This is what the strike must know. This is the nerve which the strike must reach. Get your muscles staunch. Get your heart true. There's work ahead. Work for men. Work for enduring lovers. I say lovers because only lovers can meet the issue. What can you do for man if your heart lacks love? The most daring striker is the man who most widely loves. For as this world goes a great love supposes the most sublime empiricism. For love disdains to know friend and enemy. Love knows only love.

The strike is past. The strike is resumed. The strike is dead. Long live the strike. The striker is learning love. The striker is trying his limbs, spreading out his chest, getting a clear eye, coming out of strikes sweet with life. I look over into Pennsylvania with eyes full of grateful tears. There have been armies. But was there ever an army like this? This was not an army of destroyers. This was an army of households and hearthstones. Take the bibles off your pulpits. The miner is talking of justice. Take the incense out of your churches. Smell the oil of the miner's lamp. Let the official spokesman of Jesus retire. They have reported falsely of Jesus. The obstructed Jesus. You see him emerge from the coal dump.

TO BE USED BEFORE ELECTION.

We still have a few thousand copies of the leaflet, "What Do You Think of the Beef Trust?"—New York (Social Democratic Party) edition—which should be distributed before Election Day. They will be supplied at the rate of $1 a thousand—expressage extra, if sent out.

We also have on hand two or three thousand copies of the booklet, "Why Workingmen of New York Should Join the Social Democratic Party," which will be sold at 60 cents a hundred, $2.50 for five hundred, or $4 a thousand, postpaid.

Send orders, with cash, to the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

"THOROUGHLY UP TO DATE."

"I am much impressed with the effectiveness of the little pamphlet, 'Labor Politics and Socialist Politics.' It is so clear, concise, and convincing, and so up-to-date in every particular that I think it is the best piece of propaganda literature out at this time. It is just the thing to give out liberally to members of the trade unions and to workingmen generally." So writes Comrade Fliege of Buffalo. The Buffalo comrades got fifty copies two weeks ago; last week they got an additional hundred; now they want several hundred more. About twenty-three thousand copies of this pamphlet have been sold and a third edition will soon be needed. We have still two or three thousand on hand. Prices: Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies for 20 cents; fifty for 85 cents; one hundred for $1.50, postpaid. Cash must accompany all orders. Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

PARTY NOTES.

The "World," last Friday, had a "special" to this effect: "Winsted, Conn., Oct. 16.—The Republicans and the Socialists held rival rallies here tonight. The Republican meeting was addressed by United States Senator O. H. Platt and Congressman Dennis Flynn of Oklahoma, while George A. Sweetland of Bristol, candidate of the Socialists for Congressman-at-large, who was the leader of the Connecticut contingent in Coxey's army, espoused his party's doctrines. SWEETLAND DREW THE LARGEST AUDIENCE."

Bostonians will find The Worker for sale every week on the newsstand at Brigham's Hotel, 642 Washington street, and are invited to buy their papers or give their subscriptions there.

In Bridgeport and Derby, Conn., the city election is held on the same day with the state election and the Socialist Party will have a full ticket in the field in each of these places.—Charles Ufert finished his tour of Connecticut this week with meetings in Broad Brook, South Manchester, Stafford, Waterbury, and Torrington. At Broad Brook the local band, whose members are all Socialists, helped to draw a crowd which filled the hall with one of the largest meetings ever held in Broad Brook. It is expected that Ufert will return to Connecticut before election.—George A. Sweetland, candidate for Congress, is speaking in the northern part of the state. He reports good meetings in New Britain, Plainville, Thomaston, Torrington, and Winsted. On Saturday, Sweetland and Ufert addressed three meetings in Hartford. Meetings were also addressed by W. E. White in Union City, Waterbury, and Danbury.

A comrade in Vineland, N. J., writes: "We expect to push Socialism down here vigorously. We have nominated a ticket and held a mass-meeting at which Comrade Smith of Boston was the principal speaker. He was received enthusiastically and a large vote can be expected at the coming election."

Comrade S. A. Hall of Newport News was nominated for Congress from the Second Congressional District of Virginia and Comrade J. J. Quants of Richmond in the Third District.

The Socialist Party has county tickets in twelve of the twenty counties of Utah, as well as a state ticket.

A miner from the vicinity of Manch Chunk, Pa., writes: "The Republicans are going to try to claim the credit of settling the strike. But many of our men in the Panther Creek Valley say that if it had not been for the cheering words and enthusiasm of the Socialist agitators who come through here there would have been a serious break in the strike there some time ago. This and the financial aid given by the Socialist Party have contributed a great deal to the success that has been won."

Comrade Levenberg of Duluth, Minn., writes of a most successful meeting at West Superior, Wis., across the bay, addressed by H. G. Wilshire. "It looks good for Socialism there," he says. Wilshire had a good meeting at Ashland, too. A local of the Socialist Party will soon be formed in Duluth."

The concert and ball given by Local Philadelphia for the strike propaganda fund has netted over $300 according to present accounts, with many tickets still outstanding. Reports should be made promptly to J. De Bruyn, Secretary, 978 N. Fifth street.

Comrade Carnahan of Salina, Pa., writes of the first Socialist meeting ever held in Avonmore, at which Louis Goudon spoke last week. He says: "You can depend on Avonmore for Nov. 4."

An English-speaking local of the party has been formed at New Bedford, Mass., with John Hettinger as Recording Secretary, Ed. Smith as Financial Secretary, Wm. Cannane as Organizer, and Wm. Obnesorge as Literature Agent.

The first Socialist meeting ever held at Montvale, N. J., took place a few days ago, with Dr. DeYoe and W. L. Wyatt as the speakers. A local was formed at once.

Saturday evening, Oct. 25, the comrades of Manchester Township, Passaic County, N. J., hold a public meeting at Cedar Cliff Hotel, Haledon. Frederick Krafft and Wm. H. Wyatt, Socialist candidates in the Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts, will speak.

New Hampshire Socialists have filed about double the number of nominations that they did in 1900 and expect a large increase in the Socialist vote.

The Pennsylvania State Committee granted charters at its last meeting to twelve new locals in six counties—Tarentum, Spring City, Mt. Carmel, Centralia, Treverton, Gracedale, Stockton, Beaver Brook, Hazleton, Humboldt, Hughestown, and Scotch Hill. Among the speakers of the last days of this great campaign are Comrades Slayton, McGrady, Hayes, Gonzion, Caldwell, Geiger, White, Fischer, Buck, Mikolanis, Heydrick, the O'Hares, and splendid meetings are reported from every point. Large quantities of literature are being distributed and everything points to a tremendous vote. It is of the utmost importance that we have watchers at the polls everywhere and comrades should get watchers' certificates from the County Commissioners.

New York State.

William Thurston Brown of Rochester, N. Y., will speak at Memorial Hall, Toledo, O., Saturday evening, Nov. 1. All readers of The Worker are requested to bring their friends to hear our eloquent comrade from New York. F. G. Strickland will speak in Toledo on Nov. 2 and 3.

Comrade Wm. Thurston Brown spoke before a large gathering of people in front of Music Hall, New Rochelle on Sunday, Oct. 7. He was preceded by Comrade Wm. Wood, of Mt. Vernon, our candidate for Congress, who made a good impression on those present. We are well supplied with literature and New Rochelle is being brought to know what we stand for. New Rochelle will line up strong at the polls election day.

Yonkers is pushing ahead. Over 15,000 pieces of literature have been distributed so far and about 10,000 more will follow. Prospects are bright and new members are taken in at every meeting. Comrade Krafft will speak on Getty Square on Oct. 25 at 3 p. m. and Comrade Lovejoy at 8 p. m. of the same day, at corner Dock street and North Broadway.

Sol Fieldman spoke at Peekskill last week in place of Comrade Hanford, and held the close attention of an audience of three hundred for almost three hours. His speech made a fine impression. Literature was sold and leaflets distributed. The S. L. P. tried to hold a meeting two blocks away, but met with so little success that they gave it up and came over to hear Comrade Fieldman.

New York City.

At the last meeting of the 32d-33d A. D. it was decided to hold meetings every Thursday till election, and all members are requested to attend. The Yorkville Agitation Committee was requested to arrange at least two or three street meetings every week until election. Postals will be sent to all S. D. P. voters to act as watchers at the polls on Election Day. Let every member in the district come forward and help. Especially the "parade Socialists" are reminded that something else besides the wearing of a party button and the payment of dues is now needed.

The comrades of the 18th and 20th A. D., New York, should remember that business meetings are held every Thursday evening until election. Comrades are urged to turn in all campaign lists as soon as possible. Steps will be taken to arrange some agitation meetings in this district.

John Spargo will lecture on "Socialism and the Problems of Trade Unionism" on Sunday evening, Oct. 26, at Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, and Leonard D. Abbott will complete this course with a lecture on "What Socialism Would Do for New York" on Nov. 2. Immediately after election a new lecture course, to continue throughout the winter, will be arranged.

J. C. Holzer, Financial Secretary of Local Kings County, acknowledges receipts of $72.70 for the campaign fund in the week ending Oct. 20, bringing the total up to $137.25. List will be printed later.

Algernon Lee, Social Democratic candidate for Assembly in the 30th A. D., has challenged his Republican and Democratic opponents to debate, and hopes that they will accept.

A lecture will be given at the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, by W. M. Atkinson of Pennsylvania, on Sunday, Oct. 26, at 3 p. m., at which the coal strike will be discussed from the workingman's standpoint.

AGITATION MEETINGS IN GREATER NEW YORK.

Meetings will be held at the points named in the following list, on the dates given. Comrades in the assembly districts where meetings are held should not fail to be present and use the opportunity to assist the speakers by agitating among by-standers and aiding in the distribution of literature.

Platform committees and speakers are expected to report at the places designated for meetings, without waiting for written instructions. Notices of meeting, officially arranged by Local New York will regularly be published in The Worker over the signature of the Organizer.

Chairmen and speakers should lose no occasion distinctly to call attention to the official name and emblem of the party and the names of the candidates.

MOTHER JONES' MASS MEETING IN COOPER UNION

The Social Democratic Party of New York Scores an Unprecedented Success in Coal Strike Meeting.

Thousands Cheer Socialist Speeches by Hilquit, Sieverman, Mother Jones, and Spargo—"Hanford and the S. D. P." the Cry at the Largest Meeting Ever Held in That Hall.

If the Social Democrats of New York were abundantly satisfied with the Cooper Union ratification meeting—the best, up to that time, in the history of the party—their enthusiasm knew no bounds last Saturday, when the success of Sept. 28 was quite thrown into the shade by the great coal-strike mass meeting. Police officers who have been on duty in Cooper Union at meetings of all sorts for many years past, said that they had never seen the hall fill so quickly and that they had never seen so many people crowded within its walls. Within three minutes after the doors were opened every seat was taken, and in another five minutes no standing room was left. Nearly two thousand men and women, unable to enter the hall, stood around the two stands from which Comrades Closson, Simonson, Abbott, Sackin, Searing, Fox, Halpern, and others spoke in the open air; and hundreds more went away regretting only that they had not come earlier.

It was, by a great majority, a crowd of strangers and very largely of young workingmen and women. Throughout the evening the thousands of hearers alternated between the most rapt attention to the speakers' words and the heartiest applause at every telling point. Though some left the hall at the end of Mother Jones' address, every seat was still occupied when, at half past eleven, John Spargo left the platform and Chairman Hillquit declared the meeting adjourned. Cheers such as have seldom rung even in that hall were given, again and again—cheers for Mother Jones, for the miners, for Benjamin Hanford, and for the Social Democratic Party. Socialist literature was eagerly bought and a collection of over $165 showed that the enthusiasm was not a matter of mere noise.

Promptly at eight o'clock, Organizer Wood called the meeting to order in the name of Local New York of the Social Democratic Party and introduced Morris Hillquit as the chairman of the evening.

Hillquit's Address.

Hillquit's opening address was a masterly summing up of the history of the strike and its lessons. In logical and convincing order he told how, through unecounted ages, the forces of nature had prepared the coal deposits, storing up the light and heat of the sun in these great mineral masses; how human genius and the united skill and labor of hundreds of thousands of workingmen had rendered the coal accessible and applied it to the service of mankind. But now, between the hundred and fifty thousand men who dig the coal and the seventy-five millions of people who need it, stands a little group of eight or ten men, who do nothing in the production of coal, but who say, to the miners and to the rest of the people: "These mines exist only for our profit and shall be used only by our consent. You miners shall not have the privilege of working in them, unless you will submit to our absolute dictation. The people shall not have fuel to carry on industry and to protect them from the cold, unless they will come to our terms. It matters not to us what you need or what you suffer. That is not our concern. We will have our profits."

This conflict, said the speaker, had shown more forcibly than it had ever been shown before, that the private ownership of the means of production by which the people work and live, makes the people virtual slaves to the owning class. In this case it was the anthracite coal mines; in another case it might be the bituminous mines or the railroads or the factories where cloth and clothing is made or the flour mills and meat-packing houses. In any case, the principle was the same, and the Social Democratic Party alone offered a way out of this economic slavery by going direct to the cause of the evil and declaring that the means of production, created and operated by the social labor of the working class must be socially owned by the workers.

Turning to other aspects of the strike, the chairman pointed out that, all through the long conflict, the Social Democratic Party had alone given its support to the miners. The Republican party, which was in power at Washington and in the state of Pennsylvania, had given the strikers nothing but injunctions and bayonets and bullets until the strikers had, by inspiring their masters with fear, forced the President to a tardy and doubtful interference. The Democratic party had sought to make political capital of the strike in New York, where there are no mines; in Pennsylvania, where the battle was being fought, it had endorsed the Republican policy by choosing Gov. Stone's prototype, Ex-Gov. Pattison, of Homestead fame, to head their ticket. The Social Democratic Party alone had, in Pennsylvania and in New York and everywhere, given its moral and its financial aid to the miners in the time of their need. And reports from the strike field showed for the miners, as this magnificent meeting showed for the workingmen of New York, that the working class was rapidly learning the lesson of the strike, learning that in public ownership of the means of production and working-class control of the government lay the only solution of the labor question, and that the Social Democratic Party—the Socialist Party of other states—stood as the sole political representative of the working class.

As the first speaker of the evening, the Chairman introduced Frank A. Sieverman of Rochester.

Sieverman on the Arbitration Plan

Sieverman spoke in the highest terms of the conduct of the strikers and of their officers. He discussed in detail the actions of the old parties and the proceedings which had led up to the mine-owners' latest offer.

In commenting upon President Roosevelt's intervention, the Washington conference, and the subsequent events, he reminded his hearers of the teamsters' strike in Boston last winter and the way in which it was "settled." So long as these teamsters stood alone and had little prospect of winning, the capitalists and the authorities had been content to stand by and see them starved into submission. But the workers of other trades resolved to help them win, sympathetic strikes were declared, and within a few days traffic and industry were at a standstill in Boston. Then, when profits were cut off and when the strikers' victory was assured, the eminent gentlemen and politicians of Massachusetts suddenly discovered that arbitration would be a good thing. It was Republican Governor Crane who came to the rescue of the capitalists in this extremity. He persuaded the workmen to call off their strike and to go back to work, on his solemn promise that he would use his great influence—and, as he assured them, with perfect confidence that he would succeed—to secure an amicable redress of their grievances. They trusted him and went back to work; industry revived and profits again flowed into the capitalists' coffers; but to this day not one of the grievances against which those thousands of workingmen struck has been redressed.

In this coal strike the working class had shown its power as never before. The mine owners saw defeat near at hand. The capitalist politicians, moreover, saw the danger of allowing the strike to go on till Election Day. They were in office to serve the capitalists; but in order to get in for another term, they needed the workingmen's votes.

At this juncture the man to whom President Roosevelt turned for advice was, of all men, Governor Crane of Massachusetts. He called him to Washington and asked him, "Crane, how did you do that trick with the teamsters?" Crane explained it to him, and he made his famous offer that, if the miners would go back to work at the old terms, he would ask Congress to investigate their grievances. "But," said the speaker, "you may sell a farmer a gold brick; but you can't sell him the same gold brick twice." The miners refused to be fooled as the teamsters had been, and the operators had now been forced to accept the offer of arbitration. How this would turn out, we had yet to see. But if it turned out well the credit would be due to the wisdom and courage of the miners and their working-class supporters, and not to Theodore Roosevelt.

"Why don't we impeach Roosevelt?" cried a voice from the audience. "We are going to do that," replied Sieverman quickly, "on the first Tuesday in November of 1904"—and the hall rang with cheers. Sieverman closed with an earnest appeal for support for the workingmen's candidates in the now impending election, Benjamin Hanford and the whole ticket of the Social Democratic Party.

Splendid Greeting to Mother Jones.

As the applause finally died away, the Chairman said, "The next speaker needs no introduction to any audience of working people. I need only name Mother Jones." It was several minutes before the gentle and modest but indomitable woman who has earned that proud title of "mother" from the lips of multitudes of toilers could make her voice heard. Her first words were: "It seems to me you are doing a great deal of cheering for nothing. If you will only do that cheering at the ballot-box it will be of some consequence."

"Mr. Chairman and fellow toilers," she continued, "first permit me to thank you for this magnificent greeting. I really do not deserve it. No one does who does his duty to the people when the crisis is on.

"I am not going into the discussion of the economic question. The people of New York have that discussed very often. I am only going in, my friends, to the battle we have just fought. It is not the leaders who deserve the credit. It is the hundred and fifty thousand heroic souls who said, 'We'll starve and fight and win.' It is the wives and children who have said, 'We will go down into our graves hungry and suffering before we will submit to tyranny and oppression.' They said to the President of the United States, 'Your Coal Barons are deceiving you.' They said to the President, 'Send your troops; send all the United States army, but we won't work.' And the dear public got a little bit cold, and they said, 'Mr. President, you have got to settle this strike.' The dear public never moved, you know, till it touched them. They don't seem to be very deeply interested in the great questions that confront this nation to-day. It is the toilers who know so well that the conflict is on and that they must meet it."

Story of Persecution.

Every head was held in an attitude of the closest attention, and often there were tears in many eyes, as Mother Jones, in homely and straightforward phrases, told the story of the strike in West Virginia, in which she has been chiefly engaged. She told how the miners and their wives and babies were evicted from their wretched homes, to live or die as they might; how the union organized a system of strike relief and how the railway companies held up the provisions shipped over their lines in the hope of starving the strikers into submission; how the newspapers of both old parties slandered the miners, representing them as lazy, drunken, and riotous, in order to divert public sympathy; how after the sheriffs and deputies came the militia, and after the militia the marshals with injunctions from United States courts—injunctions forbidding the miners to hold meetings on their own rented land or to walk on the public road near the mines.

"They put twelve of us behind the bars. I was the only guilty one in the lot—the only fellow that said anything, the only fellow that had disrespect for the judge of the court. He said I had contempt for the court. Well, I didn't know what contempt of court meant before I went into it; but as soon as we got before the judge I said to the boys, 'We don't have to go to trial here. We might just as well hold up our hands. We are already convicted. This is a capitalistic judge, a capitalistic court, a capitalistic combination.' But I happened to be the only Socialist in the crowd, and they didn't understand it till they got hit. After they got hit, then they realized it. The result was that we made Socialists out of the whole gang but one, and he couldn't understand English.

"The prosecuting attorney said, in the windup of the affair, 'Judge, notwithstanding that this old woman is such a dangerous old woman; the most dangerous old woman the country has—she comes into the state and disturbs the miners'—think of an old woman of sixty scaring thirty-five thousand miners!—'I would recommend to the court to have mercy on her, because she is a woman. If she will promise to go out of the state and never again return to disturb the miners of West Virginia, I would recommend to the court that he let her go.' " Her account of her blunt refusal to accept such "mercy," and the final decision of the court to let her go unconditionally, brought renewed cheering.

In closing Mother Jones made a strong appeal to the young workingmen to think for their class, to help in this and all other strikes and, above all, to help build up the Socialist movement.

John Spargo was the last speaker of the evening. In eloquent words he voiced the aspirations and the enthusiasm of the Social Democratic Party.

Miss Cook of Brooklyn and the Wright brothers enlivened the meeting with the "Marseillaise" and other Socialist songs.

ANOTHER HISS FROM THE REPTILE PRESS.

How the Capitalist Press Construes the Phrase, "All the News That's Fit to Print."

In the course of her speech at Cooper Union, Mother Jones told how, at one point in West Virginia, when she announced a meeting for the organization of the miners, the coal company put up seven barrels of beer and invited the men to a "blowout" to keep them away from her meeting—in spite of which most of the miners came to hear her and joined the union.

In introducing this incident, she addressed the reporters directly and asked them to take pains to report it correctly, and there was absolutely no possibility of their misunderstanding.

Nevertheless, when we looked at the New York "Times" next morning—the paper which boasts of printing "all the news that's fit to print"—we read in the headlines—

"Says She Made Miners Intoxicated in Order to Organize Them."

And under this headline we read:

"One statement which her hearers were not inclined to applaud as freely as they had her previous remarks was one wherein she told of having given beer to the men in order to induce them to attend her meetings.

"'I had been served with another injunction,' she said, 'and told that I must not work among the miners or I would be in contempt, and the men were afraid to come to hear me on that account and because some of the others had been arrested. But I knew the miners and I sent a wagon for seven barrels of beer and I let it be known around everywhere that the beer was on tap, and then (here Mother Jones swung her arms vigorously) I got those miners drunk. But I had to do it. But I organized them. They had to be organized. It was their only salvation, and I knew it. Their wives and children were hungry and half clothed and organization meant food and clothes for them, and I new they were better organized drunk than unorganized sober."

It will not do to excuse this outrage by laying the blame on a guttersnipe reporter. The reporter, of course, was the immediately guilty person. But no reporter of three days' experience would dare give such a lie to his paper unless he knew his editor would approve.

Such incidents as this only prove the need of a daily newspaper in this city owned and controlled by workingmen. With such a paper in existence, the "Times" and its fellows in iniquity would not dare go to such lengths of impudent falsehood. The capitalist editors, of course, are only doing their duty to their employers when they suppress the true facts and print malignant misrepresentations about the labor movement. We need expect nothing else of them. A plan is on foot for a Socialist and trade-union daily in this city, to be owned and operated without profit by a co-operative association of workingmen. Several thousands dollars have already been contributed toward establishing such a paper. Immediately after election, The Worker will again bring the matter to the attention of its readers. We must have our own daily to help the trade unions in the next great strike and to serve the party in the next campaign.

If you get two copies of The Worker, give the extra one to some friend.

THE NEW YORK CAMPAIGN.

The New York State Committee announces that a new supply of 700,000 pieces of campaign literature is now ready—including three new leaflets, as elsewhere announced. There remains only a little more than a week in which to get this into the voters' hands and no time should be lost.

The State Committee has, during the last week, sent out literature to Amsterdam, Auburn, Cohoes, Congers, Coxsackie, Central Park, Geneva, Glens Falls, Hudson, Herkimer, Haverstraw, Hornellsville, Hilsdale, Ilion, Kingston, Lockport, Mt. Vernon, Monticello, New Rochelle, Nyack, Oneonta, Port Jarvis, Plattsburg, Poughkeepsie, Ravenna, Rensellaer, Sparkill, Sea Cliff, Seneca Falls, Saugerties, Syracuse, Schnectady, Troy, Utica, Union Springs, Yonkers.

Hanford at Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Fitzhugh Hall, holding 2,300 persons, was crowded on the fourteenth, when Ben Hanford talked on the political situation and the coal strike. Comrade F. H. Van Auken presided and in a short speech said that the plain facts of interest to workingmen would be told in a straightforward way by a workingman. W. Thadd Lyon, a mining engineer, who had just returned from the scene of the coal strike, gave a very good description of the conditions of the miners. At this juncture a collection was taken up for the miners' bread fund, which netted the sum of forty-seven dollars.

Ben Hanford addressed a large assemblage of the Machinists' Union while Lyon spoke, and as he entered the hall in company with Organizer Joel Moses, he was given a rousing and very enthusiastic reception, the people standing up in their seats and shouting "Hanford," "Hanford," and clapping hands.

Hanford announced that inasmuch as the conditions obtaining at the mines had been so well stated by the preceding speaker, he would not repeat what they had already heard, but he told of the conditions and circumstances which led up to the strike and said:

"The miners' cause is your cause; if they lose, you lose; for if Morgan can whip the miners to-day, he can whip the shoemakers, the machinists, and other workers to-morrow.

"I recently spent seven days at the coal mines, studying their conditions and listening to their stories of oppression and cruelty, and I saw more exhibition of broad humanity, brotherly love, and sympathy in those seven days than I ever witnessed in any place, at any time, or in any body of men. I saw a poor Polish workingman bring home a small sack of corn meal and through the backyard tripped a barefooted neighbor's boy, who came for two portions, one for his own immediate family, and the other for another family, and this poor Polish miner divided this small sack containing about twelve pounds into thirds, keeping one-third for himself and family. As the boy stalked away there came another miner, and this Polish man divided up his meagre third with him.

"We cannot get an accurate idea of the conditions at the mines from the newspaper accounts published from day to day. We read of great disorder, and are led to believe that it comes from the side of the miners, when in reality the disorder is caused by the coal and iron police and the state militia."

At this point he told of the great newspaper canard which stated that three militia men had been chased five miles by a mob of miners. He stated that these men were intoxicated and failed to answer to the roll call, and, in order to escape the guard house, telephoned this story to the headquarters. They had been out with some lewd women and forgot to return.

Continuing, the speaker told how the agents of the operators secured ten Italians under false pretenses, stating to them that they were wanted for the purpose of building a trolley line near Wilkes Barre, but the car shunted and they found themselves in a mine. When the Italians discovered their mistake they wanted to get out. But they were barricaded and could not. The operators offered $2, $3, $4, and even $5 per day if they would work, but they unanimously cried out: "We worka da railroad, but no mina da coal." They had to sneak out in the middle of the night and run the gauntlet of being shot by the coal and iron police.

Cause of the Strike.

As to the causes of the strike, the speaker said that they were the same as in every other strike, the man who worked on a railroad or coal mine being pitted against the man who owns it.

"What would cure or prevent strikes? The industrial system under which we work is called the competitive system, which is at best but an armed truce, war being either in prospect or in progress at all times. This condition will last as long as the private ownership of the means of production lasts. If private ownership is the cause of war, we can get peace by abolishing private ownership, and that is what the Social Democratic Party proposes to do."

He next told how the Democrats of New York State have advocated government ownership of the coal mines. "This looks well on the face of it, but there is not a coal mine in New York state; they could not even get the coal here, even though they owned the mines. Transportation thereof is controlled by the same people who now own the mines. In Pennsylvania the question is ignored by the same party.

"I am glad that there are so many young men in this audience; they are the hope of the future," said Hanford in conclusion, "although there are some white-haired men here who are no doubt doing their duty, still they have fought the battle of their youth which strife is witnessed by the little brown button in their lapels. Be somebody, do something, enlist in the greatest battle of the world, the industrial emancipation of your own class. We are going to get Socialism anyhow, but you can hasten its arrival. What do you call a man who works next to you in your shop, the man who does not join your union, but who is always going to later, simply because he has to pay union dues? You call him a shirk, don't you? Don't be shirks. Enlist, enlist, I say, in the cause, your own cause, your own cause for the emancipation of your own class, and eventually abolish all classes and inaugurate a system where we can be brothers in fact, not theory."

The Labor Lyceum of Rochester is holding a series of lectures and discussions in the Common Council Chamber, City Hall, on Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Following are the lectures arranged for the near future:

Oct. 26—Frank A. Sieverman: "Lessons Contained in the Late Coal Strike."

Nov. 2—Rev. Algernon Crapsey: "Child Labor in the South."

Nov. 9—J. M. Campbell: "That Favorable Balance of Trade."

Nov. 16—Rev. Murray Bartlett: "Socialism and Evolution."

Nov. 23—Rev. Rob Roy Converse: Subject not yet announced.

Nov. 30—Prof. Franklin H. Briggs: "Co-operation."

At Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 16—Hanford's meeting in Buffalo was not as well attended as it had been hoped it would be, but new faces were seen in the audience which shows that interest has been awakened in new directions, and every word that Hanford spoke counted. Robert Steiner made a brief and effective address to the Germans. After the meeting Hanford was given an informal reception by a large number of comrades from the Musical Protective Association, composed of the orchestra of the various theatres, who, by reason of their occupation, cannot attend meetings in the evening.

E. C. F.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Alexander Jonas was here on Oct. 11 and 12. On the first day he addressed the German Socialists, with the result that a strong German branch was formed. On the following day he addressed a large meeting in International Hall, and made a profound impression on his hearers. Robert Steiner also spoke.

The comrades are busy distributing literature and the Social Democratic Party is commanding a good deal of attention in the local dailies. The "Review" published our resolutions denouncing the "operators" for their conduct at the Washington conference and managed to twist it into an endorsement of Roosevelt! In spite of such tricks, though, the people are learning what Socialism means.

Spring's Work Up the State.

Organizer Spring held five meetings in Syracuse during the week before last. In Rochester last Friday his speech at a meeting of the Brewer's Union, at which about three hundred and fifty were present, was well received and there was a pronounced expression in favor of Hanford and the S. D. P. He spoke to the Shoe Workers' Union on Monday evening, and in Eisenberg Hall on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday evening he was billed to speak at Batavia and from there he will go to Buffalo for one week. On Oct. 29 he will speak at Niagara. Comrade Spring is well pleased with the outlook for our movement in New York state, and says that, judging from the interest manifested throughout the state, the S. D. P. will roll up a good vote.

Highland Falls.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 13.—The meeting addressed by William Thurston Brown, Social Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, night before last was very well attended, considering the heavy rain. If it had been fair weather the hall would have been packed. We hope to get another first-class speaker before election, and want one every month after that. The comrades here are working well.

FACTS ABOUT CHILD LABOR.

A representative of the "Dry Goods Economist" (New York), who has been making a personal investigation of child labor in the South, and has written several articles for his journal on the topic, sums up his findings as follows:

"First, that from one-tenth to one-fifth of the total number of cotton operatives are mere children.

"Second, that they work from eleven to twelve hours a day.

"Third, that they are paid from 10 to 50 cents per day.

"Fourth, that boys and girls from fourteen to eighteen make from 50 to 75 cents a day.

"Fifth, that adults rarely make over a dollar a day, and that on piece work.

"Sixth, that the children's work, though not heavy, is grinding and nerve racking.

"Seventh, that the constant buzz of whirring wheels, the high temperature and vitiated air—conditions inseparable from cotton mills—wear down the stoutest frame and strongest nerves, and the children so employed are long lose the bright eye, healthy glow and elastic step which is the common heritage of youth.

"Eighth, that in many cases these urchins are held in hopeless bondage to their illiterate, heartless and avaricious parents.

"That the normal order of things is, alas, too often inverted, and the saddening spectacle of weak children supporting able-bodied parents, in lieu of parents supporting their offspring.

PARTY NAME SAFE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Attempts of Democrats and DeLeonites to Confuse the Workers at the Polls Are Defeated.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—The candidates of the Socialist Party will appear under the right party name in Pennsylvania, despite the efforts of the S. L. P. disruptionists to compel us to use some other name and so confuse the minds of the voters.

The Pennsylvania organization of the S. L. P., as readers of The Worker probably know, was "suspended" by DeLeon's national organization. Their state organization, nevertheless, protested against our state nomination papers, attempting to prevent us from using the word "Socialist" to designate our party.

We defended the use of our name before the Dauphin County Court, and on Wednesday decision was rendered in our favor.

We made no protest against the ticket of the S. L. P. There will therefore appear on the ballot the candidates of both the Socialist Party and the Socialist Labor Party. Readers of The Worker will bear in mind that the Socialist Party (the same which is known in New York as the Social Democratic Party) is the organization supported by this paper, with John W. Slayton, J. Mahlon Barnes, and Harry C. Gould as its state candidates; while the Socialist Labor Party is the rival organization, which spends all its efforts in cultivating discord in the Socialist movement and in fighting the trade unions.

In Schuylkill and Carbon Counties the Democrats objected to our nomination papers for legislative and judicial offices. We defended these cases before the courts and won on Tuesday.

The field is thus clear. Citizens of Pennsylvania who wish to vote against capitalism and for public ownership under working-class control will cast their ballots for the straight ticket of the Socialist Party—and the number of those who do so will probably surprise the Coal Kings as much as it will please us.

WE WIN IN MISSOURI.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 16.—The DeLeonites laughed too soon. At Jefferson City yesterday the Supreme Court made peremptory the mandamus obtained by G. H. Turner, of this city, Chairman of the State Committee of the Socialist Party, compelling the election officers to put our ticket on the ballot under the name "Socialist Party." We thus definitely defeat the scheme of the S. L. P. to steal our votes. Missouri comrades are jubilant and those of Kansas City are proud.

P.

WE WIN IN INDIANA, TOO.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 17.—The S. L. P. attempted by appealing to the courts in this state to prevent our candidates from going on the ballot under the name of Socialist Party. The case has been decided in our favor and we hold the name.

Comrades throughout the state should emphasize the party emblem—the Hands Clasped across the Globe, typifying the solidarity of the workers of the world—and to the name, "Socialist Party," in order that the party which attempted to keep us off the ballot may not reap the fruit of our work.

J. O.

IN MINNESOTA.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 16.—The protest of the S. L. P. against our use of the name "Socialist Party" on the official ballot has been sustained by the courts.

This will do the S. L. P. but little good. They have only one candidate on the state ticket—for Governor. We have four—Nash for Governor, Brattland for Lieutenant-Governor, Morledge for Secretary of State, and Carlson for Auditor. The decision against us applies only to the candidate for Governor. The S. L. P. candidate will appear under the name of his party and ours without a party name; but the other three candidates on our ticket will appear under our proper party name.

We immediately issued 225,000 sample ballots and leaflets explaining the situation and will have them all distributed in a few days.

As the average vote is what counts in this state for official standing, we are not much disturbed by the adverse decision. Indications are that we will not only win official standing, assuring us the use of our party name in the future, but that we will take our place after this election as the third party.

Nash, Lockwood, Putnam, and Leonard are kept busy speaking in the Twin Cities and in the country. Mills' meeting at Century Hall was the best ever held—collection of $46.68. He is a valuable propaganda speaker. Tuesday morning he addressed the University students briefly at chapel and this morning he spoke to a large crowd of them under the auspices of the Liberal League. His St. Paul meeting was also a success. Reports from all parts of the state are encouraging.

L.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticize their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

CLOSING WORDS ABOUT VOTING.

Fellow workingmen, each of you has a precious, an inestimable right—the right of helping to decide, next Tuesday, whether we shall continue to be robbed or exploited or whether we shall rise to the dignity of free men.

You can throw your vote away, if you will, through apathy or cowardice or slavish deference to tradition. You can throw it away by voting for our masters, for the capitalists who exploit us and the two old parties that support their privilege of explanation.

If you do that, you will yet be sorry for it. You will come to feel that you are to blame for your poverty, for the sufferings of your wives and children, for the degradation of your class, for the shame and demoralization of humanity.

You can do this, if you will. We shall not ask you, no Socialist candidate would ask you, for your votes. We do not want a solitary vote that is not a vote for principle. We would not lift a finger to get your vote unless that vote meant that you honestly believed that in casting it for Socialism you were casting it for the working class and for humanity.

Many of you will vote again for those who have oppressed and insulted us, for those who have claimed divine right to rule us; for those who have brought clubs and bayonets and rifles to enforce their divine right.

Many, even of those who know that Socialism is right and necessary, will vote against it for fear of being in the minority. If all who feel thus could be inspired next Tuesday with the courage befitting citizens of a republic, befitting manly men, the news of the Socialist vote would ring through the world, sounding the death-knell of class rule and the beginning of free society.

Some of you will vote as men. More of you, many more, than ever before. Of that we are sure and that is all we need to know.

For the rest—well, you will learn. The capitalists will teach you, if Socialists cannot. And the time will come when you will be proud to say that you voted for Socialism while the movement was yet weak, or ashamed to admit that you waited till it grew popular before you cast in your first ballot for freedom.

We ask but one thing. And this, indeed, we do not ask. We demand it, and we have a right to demand it, because each vote you cast affects the interest of every other man or woman or little child in the land.

We demand of you that you think before you vote, that you think as a workingman, that you realize that you are not voting for or against yourself alone, but for or against all of us.

And we confidently await the result. We have done our part.

BROOKLYN WORKINGMEN, TURN OUT!

Brooklyn workingmen who have not yet had an opportunity to hear Benjamin Hanford, Social Democratic candidate for Governor, in this campaign, and those who got no chance to hear Mother Jones at the great meeting in Cooper Union will have another chance on Friday evening, Oct. 31.

In the Criterion Theater, corner of Fulton street and Grand avenue, there will be held that evening a great rally of the Social Democratic Party, to be addressed by Benjamin Hanford, Mother Jones, and John Spargo, three of the ablest speakers in the cause of Labor's emancipation.

The platform seats and two hundred others have been reserved for members of trade unions, and the rest will be open to the first comers. The meeting will be called to order at eight o'clock sharp. Good music will be provided.

IN THE TRUSTS.

Democrats and Republicans United by Business Interests.

A Partial List of Prominent Democrats Sitting with Equally Prominent Republicans as Directors of Great Corporations.

The trust affiliations of the Republican party are pretty generally recognized, even by those who still vote the ticket of that party. But it is worth while to give a list of some of the prominent Democratic politicians who are in the trusts, and to show how closely the leaders of the two old parties are allied by their business interests.

DANIEL S. LAMONT is a Democrat most closely connected with Grover Cleveland, who seems to be rising once more to the leadership of the Democratic party. Lamont is a director of the Brick Trust, a $15,000,000 corporation and also of the American Surety Company. In the board of directors of the latter corporation he sits along with Frederick R. Coudert, another prominent Democrat, and with such typical Republicans as Secretary of War Elihu Root, Senator Chauncey M. Depew, J. E. Searles, H. H. Vreeland, W. L. Elkins, Robert T. Lincoln, and James Stillman.

Lamont is also a director of the National Union Bank, and has for fellow directors James D. Crimmins and William C. Whitney, Democrats, and H. H. Rogers and H. McK. Twombley, Republican.

Lamont is a director also of the Northern Pacific Express Company, of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, and of the Pacific Company—the capitalization of which four allied companies exceeds $290,000,000.

EDWARD M. SHEPARD, the Democratic candidate for Mayor of New York last year, who manages to be a friend of Bryan and a friend of Cleveland at the same time, is a director of the Rio Grande, Sierra Madre and Pacific Railway Company, of the Sombrete Mining Company, of the Mexican Mineral Railway Company, of the Mexican Northern Railway Company, of the Potosi and Rio Verde Railroad Company, and of many other corporations.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, most "respectable" of Democrats, is a director of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, one of the constituents of the Coal Trust which drove the miners of Pennsylvania out on strike this year. As such, he felt qualified to give utterance to his impartial opinions on the strike and on trade unionism in general, whenever an opportunity offered.

But this is not his only directorship. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Erie Railroad, and with him in that board sits D. O. Mills, Republican.

Hewitt is also a director of the Morton Trust Company, with such Republicans as Levi P. Morton, John Jacob Astor, Henry M. Flagler, and D. O. Mills, and such Democrats as W. C. Whitney and Joseph C. Hendrix. Among the other corporations in which Hewitt is a director are the Shelby Iron Company, the New Jersey Steel and Iron Company, and the Northern Railroad of New Jersey.

ANTHONY N. BRADY, Democrat, is a director of the Tobacco Trust, along with Thomas F. Ryan, P. A. B. Widener, and J. B. Duke.

He is a director of the Consolidated Gas Company, along with Whitney and Ryan, both Democrats, and Stillman and Sloan, both Republicans.

He is a director of the National Surety Company, along with Coudert, J. D. Crimmins, W. B. Hornblower, Richard Olney, and Perry Belmont, Democrats, and Depew, George Gould, Edwin Gould, and J. E. Simmons, Republicans.

He sits also in the boards of directors of the Corn Exchange Bank, the Central Realty and Trust Company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the New Amsterdam Gas Company, and the New York Gas and Electric Company, with such associates as August Belmont, Hugh J. Grant, Crimmins, and H. O. Havemeyer, Democrats, and equally prominent Republicans.

ANSON R. FLOWER, Democrat, brother of the late Democratic Governor Roswell P. Flower, who sent the militia to Buffalo to shoot strikers, is an intimate friend and associate of Brady. He is a director of the Federal Steel Company and a prominent member of the Steeel Trust.

He is on the boards of directors, also, of at least ten other great manufacturing, railway, mining, and financial companies, in close association with Havemeyer, Perry Belmont, Cord Meyer, Ashbel P. Fitch, and Brady, Democrats, and with D. O. Mills, H. M. Flagler, and F. J. Gould, Republicans.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY, Democrat, is a director of the Consolidated Gas Company, of the State Trust Company, of the Central and Crosstown Railway Company, of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, of the Morton Trust Company, of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of National Union Bank, of the Fifth Avenue Trust Company, and others. Among his present or very recent associates on these boards of directors are such Republicans as Root, Widener, Vreeland, Mills, Depew.

CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD, Democrat, is a director of the National City Bank, the Standard Oil Company's financial agency and the pet of Republican and Democratic national administrations alike. H. O. Havemeyer, Democrat, is one of his fellow directors, and others are Stillman, William Rockefeller, Sam Sloan, and E. H. Harriman, Republicans.

SIEVERMAN IN ROCHESTER.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 28.—Frank A. Sieverman spoke at the Labor Lyceum, Sunday afternoon, on "The Lessons of the Coal Strike." The audience packed the City Hall, and the lessons were impressed upon the minds of all present with all the force of Sieverman's wonderful logic.

Saturday evening, Nov. 1, Sieverman will speak again at Fitzhugh Hall, and a good meeting is expected.

Monday evening, Nov. 3, there will be a big Social Democratic meeting in the Seventeenth Ward, with Chas. R. Bach, Michael Sheehan, F. H. Van Auken, and others as speakers.

No "general apathy" among Social Democrats here—to the great vexation of the old-party leaders.

IN THE LATE STRIKE FIELD.

Charles Heydrick Tells of the Socialist Campaign There.

Republicans Make Beer as Free as Water in the Hope of Keeping Men from Socialist Meetings—Our Speakers Are Heard, Nevertheless, and the Votes Will Be Ours.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., Oct. 26.—I have now been in Carbon County for nine days, and am gratified beyond expression at the result of our State Committee's noble work, as it has come under my observation. Never has better propaganda for Socialism been made, and never has the investment of comrades' money insured greater or more speedy returns; for in the great strike territory the seed has been planted in fertile soil, and increasing fruits will come every year.

As a class, the miners lately on strike are a splendid set of manly, intelligent men, quick to grasp the Socialist philosophy and loyal to class interest to a degree unsurpassed by any other craftsmen, as witness their splendid exhibition af solidarity in the strike. Their spirit animates the workers on railroad, in factory and shop, and the vote is going to shake capitalism to its very center.

Among these slaves of toil I have met a number of coming men. Some of them are officials of the United Mine Workers; others, "common" slaves of the mines; still others, railroaders and laborers; but they are all men of splendid mental qualities, and the flashing eye, the upright, bearing, the frank, open face, and the firm, hearty handgrasp, betoken the MAN. These men, leaders of their comrades, are expounding the Socialist philosophy as clearly and as succinctly as any "intellectual" who ever graced a platform, and the wage workers drink it in as the parched earth absorbs a morning's shower. Never before have I been so pleased with the situation, and never has an executive committee of the party so completely merited the approbation of the membership as has the Pennsylvmania State Committee for the manner in which it has measured up to the occasion here.

You have been told of the delegates who walked ten and twenty miles to the Carbon County convention of our party. It was no fairy tale. Now, I have to relate an incident which happened last night and which prompts this letter. County Chairman Elmer Smoyer billed a meeting at Weatherly, an industrial town about fifteen miles from the county seat. He had been told that we would not get one vote of the six hundred there, and that it would be difficult to get an audience, as the workers were all contented and happy. The bills were posted on Friday; the meeting scheduled for Saturday night. Comrades Wm. H. Bond, our candidate for Register, and Ferdinand Knaake, one of the stalwarts of Local East Mauch Chunk, reached the town at 6 p. m. Comrade Jerry N. Weller and I arrived at 8:40, the train being late. There was no meeting in progress, no crowd waiting. The Republican county chairman, who lives in the town, had made beer free as water at every bar in the town but one—one run by a Democratic county official.

However, we gathered a baker's dozen from the hotel and street and opened the meeting. Comrade Bond made a brief but pointed and effective address, in which he arraigned the system that made it possible for politicians to live off the workers by such actions as had just been witnessed, and showed to the wage-earners present that the road to their industrial liberty led to the ballot-box. Comrade Weller was ft home in Weatherly. He made one of his characteristic speeches, which, like the preceding one, was frequently applauded. By this time nearly a hundred men were congregated—one-sixth of the voting population—in spite of the free-flowing booze. The writer pointed out the class character of society and showed the imperative necessity of working-class unity on the political field, exposed the hypocrisy of the Democratic charge that we were in the service of Matt Quay, in the light of the action of Quay's petty local lieutenant, and was proceeding to develope the Socialist philosophy when a whistle up the valley told us the last chance to reach home was at hand. A rush was made for the train and a lot of literature left for distribution, which was eagerly taken.

It is to be hoped that another meeting may be held in Weatherly before Election Day, for the attention paid by the wage-workers and their generous applause of telling points give the lie to the claims that they are happy and contented and that we will not get a vote in the borough.

A tireless campaign has been waged in Carbon County; the workers are true as steel; no money can buy them, no booze can betray them; a surprise is in store for the parties of capitalism, and a conservative estimate of the vote forecasts the triumphant election of the entire Socialist senatorial, legislative, judicial, and county ticket, with bright promises for the Congressional candidate, Comrade James Hughes, President of the U. M. W. of Summit Hill, who is the peer of any man who ever sat in the United States Congress.

One thing I would impress upon the comrades of the country is that, though the miners' great strike is settled to their honor, if not to their entire satisfaction, there is still need of financial assistance and of Socialist propaganda. Though their organization has withstood a fearful strain and proved their mettle true, the trying time is still before them. They need our aid and they deserve it; let it not be withheld. Let the grand work of our candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, J. Mahlon Barnes, who raised $16,000 for their bread fund, be duplicated again and again. And let the agitation fund be increased until every shack and hovel of the millionaire makers shall be permeated with the doctrine of economic equality and the class-consciousness that makes for freedom. Let not the field so splendidly sown be neglected in the growing, but let the cultivation be carefully continued until a mine workers' union shall be synonymous with a local of the Socialist Party. It is almost that now. Another year will make it so, and when the men who have shown the wage-slaves of the land how to strike shall show them how to vote, the doom of capitalism has struck. Continue your contributions. The fight is well begun. The day is ours.

As an evidence of progress it is said that in one mining town the miners' union will meet on election morning and march by twos to the polls to strike for freedom as an organization—a straight Socialist ballot—no 'scabbing.

Can your money be better spent for the cause than in cultivating this spirit of class-consciousness so thoroughly aroused? Fraternally, for Socialism,

CHARLES HEYDRICK.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

See That the Socialist Vote Is Counted.

Important Instructions to Those Wishing to Vote for Socialism and to Watchers at the Polls—Campaign Vigorous to the Last.

An excellent campaign in Pennsylvania is nearing its close. That thousands of workingmen will vote the Socialist ticket there can be no doubt. But it is pertinent to remark that a vote not counted is no vote at all.

Each watcher should go into the polling place when the polls close, show his certificate to the judge of election and remain there till the count is concluded and the ballot-box is sealed. At each polling place there are four sheets in the possession of the election officers, known as return sheets. See that each one of these is made out in ink and signed by the election officers, and that a statement showing the vote is posted on the door of the election house. Then mail o postal with the Socialist vote stated thereon to J. Mahlon Barnes, 1022 Arch street, Philadelphia. If any of the instructions are ignored, it is possible that a number of votes will be lost to the Socialist Party.

Where candidates are elected, wire at once to J. Mahlon Barnes, 931 Callowhill street, Philadelphia.

How to Vote.

The ticket of the Socialist Party will appear in the fifth column on the official ballot. Look for the name of J. W. Slayton. Mark a cross within the circle above that name, and that will be a vote for the entire ticket—state, congressional, legislative, and county.

Pressure of work in the office of the State Secretary and in the office of The Worker make it impossible to give detailed news of the campaign now being carried on. Suffice it to say that good work is being done all through the state and that large and enthusiastic audiences everywhere greet our speakers.

(Later.—There have been received further, $50 from Eugene Dietzen and and $31.60, collection in Local Chicago, per John Collins, bringing the total up to $2,325.40.—Charters have been granted this week to locals at Scranton in Lackawanna County and Port Griffith in Luzerne County.—Comrades Long, Moore, Philip Montis, Parker, and Barnes spend the week in the coal field—two days at Hazleton, two at Wilkes Barre, and two at Mauch Chunk.

—In Pennsylvania, where the coal mines are, the Democratic party does not advocate public ownership of the mines, but nominates for Governor the man who sent militia to break the Homestead strike. Vote for Slayton.

Comrade Hanford will speak on Sunday, Nov. 2, 8 p. m., at Wunler's Hall, 315 Washington street, near the post office.

MASSACHUSETTS.

An Unprecedented Campaign Nearing the Close.

Old Parties Complain of Apathy, While Socialists Cannot Meet the Demand for Speakers — Comrades All Are Confident.

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—The situation in the last week of the Massachusetts campaign reveals several reasons why the Socialist should be confident of a good gain next Tuesday. First, an increase is conceded by old-party leaders, who are seriously puzzled to guess just how many votes the Socialists are going to poll. This has caused papers of both parties to attempt to turn away the voters from Socialism back to their old ideas. While the Republican press ridicules the Socialists, the Democratic "Post" pitifully appeals to the voters "not to throw their votes away on a third party," insisting that the fight is between the Democratic and Republican parties and the Socialist Party should not be supported.

In addition to this are our well attended meetings. While the Democratic and Republican spellbinders have bene doing their turn to slim audiences, the Socialists have been in many places turning people away. Senator Lodge and Lieutenant-Governor Bates and Gaston, the old-party candidates for Governor, have met with a frost in every place where they have spoken, while Chase, Carey, MacCartney, Gibbs, and others of our speakers have been greeted by large audiences.

The Lively Campaign

Mother Jones' tour has been a great factor in rousing the working people. Her meeting in Boston was attended by thousands, and was the largest and most enthusiastic of the kind ever held in the state. Her receptions in Haverhill, Lynn, Brockton, Rockland, Quincy, Worcester, and Holyoke were highly creditable to the party and worthy of "Mother" herself. She left here stronger than ever in the hearts of fellow Socialists and leaving an indelible impression upon the minds of all who heard her.

Father Hagerty has had splendid meetings at Leominster and Whitman and equal success is promised at Chelsea, Rockland, Brighton, and Lynn. He will be at Lynn on Sunday and at Rockland Monday.

Chase, Carey, and MacCartney have been speaking nightly to large and unusually friendly audiences, and Dr. Gibbs, George E. Littlefield, Levi Turner, Father McGrady, Frank Sieverman, John W. Brown, Charles Ufert, Mrs. S. H. Merrifield, J. P. Weigel, and others have done yeoman service. Among the dates made for the closing days are:

Chase—Friday, East Boston; Saturday, Brighton; Sunday, Worcester; Monday, Fitchburg.

Carey—Friday, Rockland; Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, Haverhill.

Gibbs—Saturday, Plymouth; Monday, Rockland.

Sieverman — Saturday, Norwood; Sunday, Salem and Lynn; Monday, Haverhill.

Brown—Saturday, Norwood; Sunday, Apollo Garden, Roxbury.

Mrs. Merrifield—Friday, Cohasset; Saturday, South Duxbury; Monday, Brockton.

Littlefield—Monday, Amesbury.

Turner—Friday, Brockton.

On Sunday afternoon, J. P. Weigel will speak in German at Fall River and Mrs. Konikow at Arbeiter Hall, Roxbury, and Silvio Origo in Italian at Haverhill; Origo speaks in Boston Sunday evening.

New Clubs Formed.

In addition to the foregoing is the work of Squire Putney and Dan A. White as organizers. Putney had to quit the field on Saturday, but will speak at Cliftondale, Brockton, and Amesbury before Election Day. He visited some twenty-three cities and towns, distributing literature, holding meetings at several places, organized clubs at Saugus and Gloucester, and prepared the way in other places. White stirred things up wherever he went. He has organized clubs at Hanson, Leicester, North Grafton, Westboro, and Norwood, and has more coming.

Clubs have also been organized recently at New Bedford, Highlandville, Pittsfield, and Newton, showing that all that is necessary is a little work to get the state thoroughly organized.

All this work will bring results. Carey's re-election is practically assured; although the Democrats and Republicans are covertly working together against MacCartney in Rockland, he will go back, probably with a larger vote than ever; and comrades in Brighton, Quincy, Roxbury, Campello, and the Natick district have strong hopes of electing men to help Carey and MacCartney at the State House.

We have more local speakers than ever before, wherever we are organized agitation meetings are held nightly, we have sent out a great deal of literature, and the party was never so generally known throughout the state.

Challenge Opponents.

Last week Comrade Chase challenged the Democratic and Republican candidates for governor to debate the trust question, but neither has been heard from. He also contributed an article to a symposium published in the "Globe" last Sunday, entitled "Has Socialism Any Chance in America?" The other articles were as painfully weak as Chase's was clear and strong. His letter of acceptance was published in full by three leading Boston papers.

Frederic J. Stimson, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Twelfth District, attacked Socialism at a meeting in Franklin, charging that "Socialism would be slavery." The Executive Committee has invited Mr. Stimson to meet a representative of the Socialist Party in a public meeting upon the question before Nov. 2.

The extent to which the Socialist Party has become a factor in Massachusetts can be understood from the number of our nominations. Besides the full state ticket, we have nominated thirteen candidates for Congress (every district but one), eight for the Council, thirty-four for the Senate, one hundred and two for Representative, and five for County Commissioners.

There has been so much confusion caused among voters through there being two sets of candidates running under the name of Socialist that Secretary Putney of the State Committee protested to the Board of Election Commissioners against the S. L. P. appearing on the ballot without the designation of "nom. papers." The commissioner recognized the protest and the S. L. P. candidates will now appear as follows: "Socialist Labor Nom. Papers," while our candidates will be followed by the simple word "Socialist." We believe this will be effective in preventing the destructionists from polling votes intended for our party.

The comrades must get out all the literature they can, and send in all the money they can to state headquarters. We have only a few more days left, and we must take the fullest advantage of them. There should be no let up until the votes are counted.

We make no predictions as to what our vote will be. That there will be an increase, we are sure. We have worked hard and now we will let Election Day tell the rest of the story. Comrades should see that returns are sent in promptly to the undersigned.

The Social Democratic Party of the State of New York is officially a part of the Socialist Party of the United States. The difference in name is solely on account of capitalist election laws.

SAYS COLER MAKES VOTES FOR HANFORD.

The New York "Times," which is trying hard to give its editorial support to Mr. Coler and the Democratic party, was nevertheless compelled to print a Syracuse dispatch on the political situation in that city, which contains matter of great interest to Social Democratic readers. The dispatch says:

"Democratic leaders here say that Mr. Coler's repudiation of the plank of the Democratic platform advocating the government ownership of anthracite coal mines will cost him in the neighborhood of 1,000 votes. These votes, it is said, will now go to the Socialistic candidate for Governor."

Democratic ex-Mayor McGuire is further quoted as saying that he "finds himself handicapped by Mr. Coler's refusal to stand on the mine plank." Mr. McGuire is "telling his audiences that in respect to the coal plank the party platform counts for more than the utterances of its leading candidate."

Mr. McGuire is in a hard position indeed. He has a job on his hands to explain what good it will do to vote for a platform which the candidates have already repudiated. The Socialists, meanwhile, are pointing out that the voters do not have to take any such chances in the matter. The Social Democratic Party has always declared for public ownership, and every one of the Social Democratic candidates, from Hanford down, stands squarely and firmly for the platform.

Mr. McGuire is undoubtedly right in saying that Mr. Coler has made votes for Hanford. His only mistake is that he underestimates the number of them.

READ THIS AND PASS IT ON.

VOTE THE TICKET STRAIGHT.

Workingmen of New York State Put a Cross under the Arm and Torch.

Workingmen of New York, if you wish to put the government of the state again into the hands of bankers and corporation lawyers and trolley magnates, do not vote the Social Democratic ticket.

If you wish to have militia sent out again to break strikes, if you want more injunctions against your unions and more decisions that labor laws are unconstitutional, do not vote for Ben Hanford or the other Social Democratic candidates, for they will refuse to do these things.

If you are satisfied to be poor while the idlers and gamblers grow rich upon your labor and the labor of your wives and children, do not vote for the Arm and Torch.

If you like the sort of prosperity you have had under Democratic and Republican rule in this city and state, if you want more of the same, throw dice to decide which old-party ticket you will vote. It will save you the trouble of thinking and the result will be the same.

But if you do this, don't grumble when you get the clubs, bayonets, and injunctions you voted for.

Workingmen of New York, each of you has the same power at the polls as J. Pierpont Morgan.

The only way to throw a vote away is to use it wrong.

If you wish the legislative, judicial, and executive powers of city, state, and nation used to help you in your struggle for better conditions; if you desire to put an end to the poverty of the workers and the power of the idlers; if you hope to secure a better life for your children than you have had; if, in a word, you believe in the principles advocated, the year 'round, in the columns of this paper, put your cross within the circle under the Arm and Torch, next Tuesday.

Be careful. There will be on the ballot a ticket called "Socialist Labor." That ticket does not stand for Socialism nor for Labor, but for "union-smashing," as its leaders openly avow. We don't ask you not to vote it. We only warn you against voting it by mistake. A cross under the Hammer will mean that you approve of boss-rule and union-smashing. A cross under the Torch will mean that you want Socialism as advocated by Benjamin Hanford and by The Worker. Take your choice.

WORKINGMEN, BE ON YOUR GUARD.

The Republican and Democratic politicians know that the present rapid growth of the Socialist Party (in New York the Social Democratic Party) threatens their power and the profitable rule of their capitalist masters.

In order to prevent workingmen from registering their vote for Socialism these politicians will stoop to any measures and deceit. They have proven, again and again, that honor and conscience are to them unknown quantities in politics.

They know that the party of the working class has a vigorous and well circulated weekly press, but that it has no daily papers in the English language. They will be careful, therefore, to bring out their lies in the last three or four days before election, too late for us to reply.

Be on your guard, workingmen.

If you read that some Socialist candidate has withdrawn in favor of the Democratic or of the Republican; if you read that the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party has arranged a deal or fusion with either of the old parties; if you read in the Republican press that the Democrats are giving aid to the Socialist movement or in the Democratic press that the Republicans are doing so—if you read any such story, set it down as a campaign lie that they did not dare to spring upon you until it was too late for the Socialists to reply.

The Socialist candidates everywhere stand square on the party platform, without evasion or qualification.

The Socialist candidates will not and cannot, withdraw; they are the servants, not the masters, of the party.

The Socialist Party is fighting both the twin capitalist parties alike; it has no choice to make between them; Socialists would not spend a cent nor say a word nor lift a finger to help either old party against the other; what we want is Socialism in our time, not a merely to "turn the rascals out" nor to patch up a fundamentally bad social and economic system.

If you are of this mind, reader, cast your vote for Socialism (in the state of New York, under the Arm and Torch), and do not be disturbed by any sensational reports that may come out a few days before election.

A word to the wise is sufficient.

TROLLEY STRIKERS HEAR BEN HANFORD.

Social Democratic Candidate for Governor Attends Large Meetings at Glen Falls, Sandy Hill, Fort Edward

FORT EDWARD, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Benjamin Hanford held three highly successful meetings in this vicinity. The trolley strike, the presence of Republican Governor Odell's soldiers, and the fact that the Democratic party of the state, while pretending warm sympathy with the miners in Pennsylvania, had nothing to say on behalf of the poor trolley workers at home—these facts made Hanford's presentation of Socialism especially timely and welcome here.

Saturday evening, in spite of a hard rain, we had a hundred and fifty people out in Fort Edward.

Sunday afternoon, Hanford and your correspondent walked seven miles (no scabs cars for Social Democrats) to Glens Falls where we had a large audience, who showed the utmost satisfaction with Hanford's speech.

Leaving there at five o'clock, we walked to Sandy Hill. Again it rained, but again the speaker had a hundred and fifty interested listeners.

A year ago there were only fifty Socialist voters in the three towns, but this time we expect the number who vote under the Arm and Torch to run into the hundreds. The effect of Hanford's words was worth the ten miles' walk.

C. H. C.

—If you want Wall Street brokers and corporation lawyers to govern the state of New York, throw dice to decide between the old parties. If you want workingmen to govern the state, vote for Socialism under the Arm and Torch.

—The class that supplies the campaign funds of a party dictates the party policy. The old parties get their funds from the rich. The Socialist (Social Democratic) Party gets its funds from the working class.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

The board of arbitration appointed by the President and Mr. Morgan is to inspect the homes of the miners in its investigation of their condition. After the board has done this let it inspect the home of Baer and the Fifth avenue homes of the holders of coal trust stock, and it may have a faint idea of the difference in the condition of the man who works and the man who robs.

W. R. HEARST AND HIS PAPERS.

William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of the New York "Evening Journal," the New York "American" (formerly the "Morning Journal"), the Chicago "American," and the San Francisco "Examiner," claims to be a friend of labor and his papers profess to champion the cause of the "common people" against the trusts.

Many people think the editorials written by Arthur Brisbane and Arthur McEwen and appearing under the name of W. R. Hearst are Socialistic. The editorials of the "Journal" have doubtless aroused a great deal of rather aimless radical feeling and prepared the minds of many people for the reception of Socialist ideas. But the real principles of working class Socialism cannot be found in the columns of the Hearst organs.

The Hearst newspapers have always supported the Democratic ticket and Hearst is now running for Congress as the candidate of the Democratic party in the Eleventh Congressional District of New York.

In Democratic convention assembled, his nomination was seconded by WILLIAM S. DEVERY, the frankest and most bare-faced corruptionist and "grafter" who ever sat in the shameful councils of Tammany Hall. Tammany Hall lives to levy blackmail upon gamblers, dive-keepers and prostitutes and plunder the public funds. TAMMANY SUPPORTS W. R. HEARST AND W. R. HEARST SUPPORTS TAMMANY. The corruptionists and blackmailers of Tammany Hall are his political comrades and co-workers.

Hearst is the candidate of the Democratic party. Democratic judges have issued infamous injunctions to break strikes and Democratic officials have repeatedly sent troops to shoot strikers. The crimes of the Democratic party against the working class are too numerous for enumeration here. The funds of the Democratic party are supplied by capitalists and its candidates are capitalists and corporation lawyers.

Hearst's paper, the New York "American," in an editorial supporting the Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, says: "Robert E. Pattison, the Democratic candidate for governor, has twice served in that office and SERVED WELL." Pattison was the governor who sent the troops who massacred the steel strikers at Homestead in 1892. Do the miners and steel workers of Pennsylvania think he "served well?"

The Socialist shows that there is an irrepressible struggle between the working class and the capitalist class and that in this struggle the Republican and Democratic parties are the servants of the capitalist class and use the powers of government to crush the working class and maintain the private ownership of the means of production by which the workers are robbed of their product. The Hearst papers talk about reconciling Labor and Capital, talk of harmony between them, and ask the workers to vote for the Democratic party which injunctions them and shoots them, like its Republican twin, in time of strike.

Hearst says "Destroy the criminal trusts," implying that some trusts are all right and that the bad ones should be smashed in order to protect the small business man by going back to the wastes of competition. The Socialist says: Let the people take possession of all the trusts and all means of production that they may have the full product of their toil and enjoy the benefits of co-operation which now swells the profit of the capitalists.

The Hearst newspapers call for the public ownership of some "public utilities" to be managed by the capitalists and corporation lawyers who are the candidates of the Democratic party and the owners to reap the profits through "just compensation" and interest on bonds. The Socialists call upon the working class to capture the powers of government at the ballot-box and inaugurate public ownership of all these things under working class administration and without profits to idle parasites.

The Hearst papers try to please at one and the same time the small capitalists who are being crushed out by the trusts, and the workers who are exploited by all trusts and all capitalists alike. The Socialist Party (in New York the Social Democratic Party) TRIES TO PLEASE NO CAPITALIST. It declares that the interests of all workingmen are opposed to the interests of all capitalists and stands solely for the interest of those who work for wages against those who live on the product of other men's labor.

Does Hearst SINCERELY desire to fight the battles of the working class? IT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE WHETHER HE IS SINCERE OR NOT. If he is in the Democratic party and owes his election to the Democratic party he will be controlled by that party and must serve that party and do its will; and that party, like its Republican twin, is a capitalistic party and an enemy of the working class.

The working class does not need flattery and the working class does not need the aid of "friends of labor." THE WORKING CLASS NEEDS TO RELY UPON ITSELF.

WE DO NOT WANT "FRIENDS OF LABOR" IN OFFICE: WE WANT LABOR ITSELF IN OFFICE. The Socialist (Social Democratic) Party is a party of workingmen; its funds are supplied by workingmen; it is completely controlled by its working class membership, and its candidates are workingmen. It is in this party that every workingman belongs and outside of its ranks the workingman can have no political "friends."

Hearst's hired man, Brisbane, has said many a true thing in his editorial column and said it powerfully. All the truths that he has voiced have been taken from Socialist philosophy and Socialist literature, but they have been used merely as bait to catch the workingmen, to increase the popularity and serve the political ambition of W. R. Hearst, and catch votes for the Democratic party. And every true and good thing which has appeared in the editorials of Hearst's paper has been qualified or nullified by something else calculated to mislead the working class, which is usually mixed in in the same editorial.

If Hearst is an honest and fearless man ready to fight for the truth as he sees it, why did he attack not only McKinley's public acts, but his personal character while he lived and after his assassination, in a fit of panic-stricken cowardice, glorify not only his personal character but his public policy which he had formerly condemned in the bitterest possible words? Why did he support Bryan's anti-imperialism until election and come out for imperialism the day after Bryan's defeat? Why did he support Tammany in the last municipal campaign and editorially term Tammany's defeat a "well merited rebuke" in the "Evening Journal" the day after the election? Are these acts the acts of a man or the acts of a jumping-jack? Are they the acts of a man of principle or the acts of a demagogue who thinks of nothing but his own personal popularity, his own secret political ambition, and the circulation list of his newspaper?

On the eve of both this and the previous state campaign Hearst tried to get the Democratic nomination for governor. It seems probable that he is wise enough to see that there will be a great political uprising of the masses against their oppressors within the next few years and foolish enough to think that under such circumstances he could gain the presidency as the candidate of a radical and rejuvenated Democratic party. That he dreams of the White House is the most plausible supposition as to the motives which actuate him. And his past record and present position justifies the belief that he is ready to subordinate all principle to that end, and that if he has at the same time any desire to serve the people it is secondary to the gratification of personal ambition and desire for notoriety and power and the spoils thereof.

But the question of Hearst's motives and character is secondary to that of his public position. No matter what sort of a man he may be, no man can politically serve the working class except in the political party of the working class.

Let workingmen remember this when reading the "Socialistic editorials" of the "Journal" and let the working class remember this when Hearst calls upon them to support the corrupt, capitalistic and impotent Democratic party through which he hopes to rise to political power. C. L.

Odell sent militia to break the trolley workers' strike at Albany last year and at Glens Falls this year. Will you vote him the power to repeat the trick for two years more?

There is no coal strike in New York, so the New York Democrats can safely talk of public ownership of the coal mines. There is a big trolley strike in New York, so the New York Democrats do not advocate public ownership of the trolley lines.

ELECTION HOPES AND FEARS.

It is significant that, as the campaign draws to a close, the Socialists alone, among the political parties, are not spending any time or trouble in making estimates of the vote that will be cast next Tuesday. To an old-party politician immediate success, the election of his candidate to office, is an absolute necessity; the Democratic party out of office is nothing, and the Republican party out of office is no more. To get votes is naturally the one thought of their leaders—by fair means if convenient, by foul means if need be, but by all means to get votes. And one of their principal methods of getting votes in the last week of the campaign is to make confident claims, backing them up by all sorts of specially manufactured "canvasses" and by unlimited and senseless clamor and display, for the purpose of catching those who are too lazy or too stupid to think for themselves and who care only to be on the winning side.

On the other hand, we see the Socialists carrying on their same calm and earnest campaign of argument, up to the last moment, with no change except a little steadier application to the work and an increase, if that be possible, of the cheerful sacrifices made by the rank and file for the great cause.

We make no estimates. We do not know whether the Socialist vote is going to be doubled or tripled or what will be the ratio of its increase. We do not know how many more offices we are going to carry this year than we carried in the last election. We know two things:

First, that our vote is going to show an increase that will carry encouragement to tens of thousands of weaker brethren, who are now coming our way but have not yet reached the point where they can break old ties and traditions; an increase, moreover, which will be noted by the capitalists and their old-party tools and will make them more careful how they abuse their power hereafter.

Second, we know that the increase of our vote, however great it may be, will not be at all an adequate measure of the real results of our work; that, for every man whom we have fully convinced and whose vote will be cast for Socialism this year, we have sown the seeds of thought in the minds of several or of many who will vote wrong or not vote at all this time, but who will go on reading and thinking and will be with us in the end.

The Socialist is never discouraged nor weak-hearted in times of trouble and of slow progress, such as we have often had in the past; nor is he carried off his feet with enthusiasm in the time of greatest success. He knows that Socialism is coming, with him or without him, and he is glad to feel that he is helping to bring it in. That is enough for him. When the good news comes that is sure to come next week—the only question being, How good?—the Socialist will take a day off for jubilation, maybe, and then he will buckle down to work again, to complete the task so well begun. Among all the frantic hopes and fears of Election Day, the Socialists alone will go with cool heads and strong hearts, sure of victory in the great battle of which this campaign is but one little skirmish.

SEND IN THE NEWS.

We would remind our readers that The Worker will go to press one day late next week, in order to have more time to get election news. The paper will go to press Thursday evening and will be in the mails on Friday.

We have asked our comrades everywhere to help us by acting as volunteer reporters to give the news of election. For a number of the larger cities and of the places from which especially interesting news is to be expected we shall make special arrangements for telegraphic reports. For the rest, we would ask the comrades in each city, town, or village to help us to the best of their ability.

If you get any trustworyth reports on election night, send them at once. If additional or more accurate news is to be had by Wednesday noon or evening, send it then. In any case, send as early as possible.

For reports sent by letter, use special delivery. Address the Editor of The Worker. And remember that reports should be in this office by Thursday noon—or as much earlier than that as may be.

Give separately and distinctly the vote of the Socialist (or Social Democratic) Party and that of the S. L. P. (where it is in the field.) Give the vote cast for each party in 1900. And make it clear just what territory is covered and for what candidate the vote reported has been cast.

The organ of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers is appealing to the workingmen of Pennsylvania to vote down Democratic Pattison, who sent the troops to Homestead. The members of the United Mine Workers are justly inclined to vote down Pennsypacker, the friend and co-partizan of Stone, who sent the troops to the coal fields. A vote for Pennypacker is a vote against the miners; a vote for Pattison is a vote against the steel workers; either one. If cast by a workingman, is a scab vote. Let the mine owners and steel-mill owners vote for these strike-breakers. Let the workingmen vote for Slayton, a union workingman, against both.

Grover Cleveland says Bird S. Coler is the right man for Governor of New York. Grover Cleveland, as President, sent federal troops to break the Chicago strike.

When Coler failed to get a nomination for Mayor last year he said: "I'm tired of politics. I want to get back among the honest men of Wall Street." Why not send him back there again?

AID FROM GERMANY.

German Miners Send Five Thousand Marks to Their Brothers in America.

The President of the German Miners' Union, Comrade H. Sachse, Social Democratic member of the Reichstag, has sent to the editor of the "Volkszeitung" the sum of five thousand marks ($1,186.23) to be transmitted to the United Mine Workers of America. The letter enclosing the draft left Berlin a few days before the strike was ended, but the German miners know by experience how sorely money is needed even after the close of such a struggle, especially with winter right at hand.

Bad as is the condition of the American miners, that of the miners of Germany is far worse, and the gift of five thousand marks to their brother workers in a distant land represents a great sacrifice and a keen feeling of the solidarity of labor in all lands.

FOR THE MINERS.

National Secretary Greenbaum reports receipts of $1,049.89 for the miners' strike relief fund during the week ending Oct. 26, bringing the total collected through the national organization of the Socialist Party to $7,768.35. Of the week's receipts, $725.75 was forwarded through the office of the "Volkszeitung" and The Worker, $85 through "Robotnik," $23.10 through the Workmen's Circle and the rest from party locals, unions, workingmen's societies, and individual comrades all over the country.

LABOR'S CANDIDATE FOR JUDGE.

The Central Labor Union of Middletown, N. Y., adopted a resolution last week endorsing John Franklin Clark, Social Democratic candidate for Justice of the Court of Appeals. The unionists of Middletown remember that the Court of Appeals wiped out two labor laws last year and that the Eight-Hour Law is coming before the same court within a month after election. They rightly consider that the most forcible argument to convince the judges that the law is constitutional will be a large vote for the Social Democratic Party.

THE TWO IDEALS.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

Never was there a cause so efficient to the using of a thorough manhood, in its entirety and at its best tension, as is the cause of Socialism. We have seen some big brains and vigorous moral natures agitating themselves inside of other small cagey questions not big enough to admit of more expansive effort than a barking. We know today, in our country, some splendid people worthy to stand upon moral mountains who are extinguishing themselves as public forces under a beer glass. They have belittled the cause of the common people's poverty and suffering to a mere question of so much alcohol, and so have they set that diminutive beer glass circle around their own otherwise spacious lives; thus limited, they fuss and fume through the world as temperance agitators, mere reform manikins, though nature had made them giants and surrounding facts really invite them to fields titanic.

Socialism, through historic research, having revealed that, howsoever varied the sins may be which society is heir to, the cause is always one, thereby made sublime simplicity and splendid ampleness possible to the work of every agitator. Socialism thus steps out among the reformers as the economizer of their public genius and activities. And by simplifying and bringing to a point the multitude of distracting issues which heretofore divided and wasted them, she multiplies immensely the potency of every public spirited man who has the intellect and courage to become an industrial revolutionist.

The integration of the property class-interests in every land has been accompanied, if not accomplished, by the disintegration of the social mind. A bewildering diversity of phenomena has cropped up everywhere; so that mind, confused and overwhelmed, yields to impotent cobbling despair as to social matters. With this final dirge on their lips "it is a world of differences," our born redeemers fall into Spencerism, or ego soul-saving, or tariff nipping or any straw chopping of practical politics.

Men of national genius are wasted in petty property disputes; they are consumed and absorbed by the insatiable and forever thirsty litigations of meum and tuum.

So in the governmental archives of the Foreign Office here and abroad may be found whole cemeteries of official reports representing years of precious human intellect enslaved, exploited and buried in the commercial interest as mere watch dogs for capitalism.

War, whose victims we are accustomed to count only on the battlefields, numbers the vast majority of its slain in the colleges and institutions where it is studied as a science, and in the armories, garrisons, forts, and fleets during times of peace where it is practised as a science of earth and prepared for as a thing veritable and to be thought of outside of awful hell. And when at last this professional blood-brooding ends, where it must, in another armed clash of nations, the crime is followed by a depraved public taste for false rough riding, bowling heroes bedraggled in blood, for heroes whose only claim upon the public attention should be for pity to persons just come out of a high fever of national madness—some of whom have caused and decreed things to be done which should never meet the human eye in print, and have done with their own hands, and willed and looked upon things which no consenting mind could ever come away from worthy of honor.

Then comes another sacrifice. The peaceful minds, the antiseptic thoughts, the willing self-devoting more geniuses, the social phagocytes, as in the physiology of the human body, fly to the wounded place and sacrifice themselves at the gates of violence. With labor and law and philanthropy they, after the smoke of battle is over, lay down their precious lives undoing that which but for the sword of private property would never have been done. How cruel is all this physical waste, this tragedy of the better mind forever halted on its way to Socialism by the incessant calls of locally afflicted persons with endless varieties of indubitable but little wrongs. Thus has wisdom been too long arrested by love and pity, thus has the healing thought of the world, age after age, been cast wastefully into the moving sands. Thus brain and soul are thrown to that which is more dissolute than water, the little wrongs, the sand that never stays the moving dust, that only carries away but never holds that which has been committed to it, thus have been dissipated the social minds of men.

The ideal cause at last has come to us. Socialism takes hold of everything in society; it is the social soul of democracy illuminant; it is the mind of democracy unfractured; it is the science of society comprehensive; it is the all including executive; it is the broad shoulders of democracy; the strong providential generous hand of labor. With all of this inspiring and upholding greatness Socialism stands behind the weakest man at the street corner who lifts his voice and delivers, though yet in crude sentences, the economic wisdom of the world.

Behind the rude speech of the workman who has become a Socialist stands, almightily, the sub-conscious will of all history, the world movement of men out of the singular to the common life. Big indeed is the power that wields him. It is the ideal cause, being at once a scientific statement of social law and that law itself the true final policy of all politics, the end of panaceas; the root of radicalism, the law of social gravitation, the ideal cause. Now for such a cause where shall we find the man, the propagandist? The man for whom earth is too good, or too bad; who has therefore transported all his better hope to heaven for the harvesting, is not he.

The man for whom the earth is too good, or he too bad for any more of it than a dinner pail will hold is not he.

The man for whom a few walled acres with an inheritance of slaves thereon are all sufficient is not he.

Neither is the threadbare Democrat, the ragged Republican who loves his country so well as to be content to accept its traditions as his share of it.

Nor he, the worker with the capitalist mind, who slowly starves, waiting to take his chance in a thieves' scramble, who sees no harm in the Morganization of labor's products because he also would steal morganically if he could; the frankly unsuccessful poverty stricken rogue who lays, Jacob like, his empty head upon a stony pillow to dream admiringly of his country's future thefts, though he be a man with an idea is not the ideal man. Hard indeed it is, after a century of shameless prodigacy in the use of the nation's labor to find among our masters that man, and hard is it to find him among the wage slaves who have withered away, eyeing the master's hand, the movements of which beckoned them to work or to starvation. But out of the whole mass of complex wrong there is growing up a coherent resentment, a mind that repudiates, a will that reveals, an intellect that scrutinizes and indicts the robber class.

Slowly, like a frail tissue at first is the Socialist mind formed. With utmost timidity it takes its early steps in reform, a faint petition for electoral franchise here and there; for a little remission in the hours of labor, for a few more penny mercies to the poor, and with this art of beggarly articulation the knowledge of its utter disinheritance grows upon it until at last it becomes revealed to itself the robbed of all. Then takes root class-consciousness. Powerfully convinced of its own sacrificial doom to feed capital, it is seized with the idea of self-deliverance. With this idea in fifty years a hundred years undoing seems already done. He who feeds can move the world. Gradually this great self-helping mind of the class-conscious proletariat had spread over it such an arch of hope as never widened in the world's history before any band of self-deliverers. The nation was sleeping, the state like a derelict ship was drifting in the hands of a few successful pirates. All were sleeping but the slaves below, a few whose sorrows and hunger had kept them watchful, the laboring men, must save satisfied America from a villainous disaster.

At once for themselves, and all, labor receives commission from the world's greatest crisis to save the remnant of civilization from the capitalist class. The workingmen, the untaught, undrilled, unsophisticated toilers of the world have suddenly the banner of deliverance thrust into their keeping. By a strange revolution of events the man from nowhere, whom no one knows, is called upon to fight out through his own pitiful cause the redemption of the whole people. With so much thrust upon his cause, so much that was never his own, the ideal man is now in preparation. Chastened by the charge of a whole world's fortunes committed to him, this strong patient elder brother of the race is up and doing. He strikes at first for more money and more time that he may learn better how to deliver; he stays in his unions as points of economic defense that he may the better sally forth from them for political attack. On behalf of the world's permanent peace labor must henceforth be the single cause and interest of all states. This self-saving man perceives the vastly greater good beyond himself for which he is called upon to fight. He rises to the glory of his great commission, and in the heat of battle forgets only himself, the fighting altruist is he, the political workman cutting his way to the Capitol—the ideal cause has created the ideal man.

WOULD USE BAYONETS.

General of United States Army Advocates This Method of Settling the Labor Question.

The New York "American and Journal" of Oct. 22 reports (in its New Jersey edition—singularly enough, the matter was left out of the New York edition) that General Horatio C. King, speaking against public ownership of the coal mines in the Bulletin Club, a debating society attached to Plymouth Church, opened his speech with these words:

"This question of the right of men to work without the dictation of labor unions will be settled, if necessary, by the bayonet."

The report continues:

"Then he made the statement that in the anthracite coal fields 17,000 men had worked courageously to uphold the principles of individual freedom. When the walking delegates 'of the worst trust on earth' interfered with this 'God-given right,' it struck at every principle of liberty, said the General."

A hundred and thirty years ago, George the Third maintained that the question of the God-given right of a British king and parliament to govern and tax the American colonists would be settled, if necessary, at the point of the bayonet. It was settled—disastrously to King George.

The Socialist (Social Democratic) Party wants to settle the labor question at the ballot-box. If the workingmen delay too long in using this means of peaceful settlement, the capitalists will force the bayonet-and-bullet method upon us. The more workingmen vote for Socialism this year, the less likelihood there will be of strikers having to face bayonets next year.

ENGLISH UNIONS ARE IN DANGER.

Eminent Student of Labor Question Points Out Their Peril—A Warning for American Toilers.

John A. Hobson of Oxford University, an eminent sociologist and student of the labor question, is visiting in Boston. In an interview the other day, he said:

"In England the organization of labor, from the nature of things, is far less firm than capital. Still, the organization is going on rapidly, especially where machinery is greatly used and skill is required. The trade unions object to the employment of non-union men, in order to protect their organizations. The employers of England are about to try to break down the labor unions and to break down the principle of collective bargaining. They have turned to the two weapons of law and politics. The House of Lords HAS DECIDED THAT UNIONS CAN BE SUED. This will pave the way for litigation, in which because of weaker resources, the unions may be ruined.

"English workmen WILL TURN TO POLITICS IF THEY HAVE THE BRAINS. In the meantime, as trade declines, we will see a series of big strikes and lockouts."

American workingmen may well bear these statements in mind, as a warning of what is coming in this country as well. The plan of ruining trade unions by bringing damage suits against them has been tentatively adopted for more than a year past, especially by the National Metal Trades Association against the machinists. It will undoubtedly be carried further.

There are indications, as shown elsewhere in this paper, that the most important development in the arbitration of the coal strike may be an attempt to force the unions to incorporate, thus making it easy for bosses to sue them for damages in case of strike or lockout or, through the employment of a few spies, to demand a receivership or something of the sort at the most critical moment, tying up all the funds in the hands of an appointee of the court.

As Mr. Hobson says, "the workingmen will turn to politics, if they have the brains." That is what the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party is in the field for. With judges and other officials chosen by and for the capitalist class, grave dangers confront the labor organizations; with judges and officials chosen by and for the working-class majority, we would have nothing to fear.

—Platt says the Democratic mine plank is dangerous. It would be dangerous—to his class (and Hill's)—if the Democratic party meant to carry it out.

PARTY NOTES.

Among the many union miners evicted this week by the Markles, "independent operators" in Pennsylvania, is John Jaquish, Socialist candidate for County Commissioner. He is evicted because he is faithful to his brother workingmen. The miners can give the Markles a lesson next Tuesday by voting for Jaquish and the whole Socialist ticket.

The Seattle "Socialist" has issued in neat leflet form the introductory article to its series, "The A B C of Socialism." It is a very good thing for elementary propaganda. The price is $2 a thousand or 25 cents a hundred. Address, "The Socialist," Seattle, Wash.

The Toledo comrades are doing things well. We noted a few weeks ago the admirable booklet issued by Dr. J. S. Pyle, Socialist candidate for Congress in that district. There now comes to our desk another booklet by Dr. C. H. Reed entitled, "The Essential Difference between the Republican, Democratic, Prohibitionist, and Socialist Parties." We expect good news from Toledo on Nov. 5.

Comrade Edkins of Greensburg, Ind., writes that he has begun hustling for subscriptions for The Worker in his vicinity. For the first time, the Socialist Party has an almost complete legislative and county ticket there, and a lively movement is expected from now on.

Comrade Gallagher of Bay Side, Mich., writes of the organization of a new local there on Oct. 10, with seventeen charter members and sends in an order for two thousand leaflets and seventy copies of Hanford's and Lee's pamphlets to start the education of the working people of that place. That is a good omen.

A. Frank Hayward is the candidate of the Socialist Party in the Twelfth Congressional District of Massachusetts, embracing Norfolk County.

Father McGrady spoke for the Socialist Party at Adams, Mass., last week with good effect. All who were present were impressed and many others will crowd to hear him the next time he comes.

This is a busy week in Connecticut. Charles Ufert, Howard H. Caldwell, and George A. Sweetland speak in all the larger cities during the week and up to Election Day. Comrade Sweetland, our candidate for Congressman-at-large, addressed two street meetings on Sunday, Oct. 19, in Hartford, and during the following week spoke in Southington, Plantsville, Meriden, Wallingford, New Haven, and Bridgeport, with a meeting last Sunday in Rockville. This week he speaks in Stafford, Willimantic, Putnam, Norwich, New London, and Meriden, and on Sunday, Nov. 2, in Hartford. Comrade Sweetland has developed into an excellent speaker and all who hear him are pleased. Comrade Caldwell spoke on Monday in New Haven, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Bridgeport; Friday he speaks in New Haven again, and Sunday and Monday in Hartford. Charles Ufert will speak Saturday, Nov. 1, in Waterbury, and Monday in Bridgeport. Silvio Origo of Springfield will address an Italian meeting in New Haven on Saturday, probably at St. Patrick's Hall. A number of Italian Socialists have recently joined Local New Haven and an Italian branch may be organized soon.

Comrade Sam L. Smith of Bellevue, O., writes: "The cause is certainly advancing here. The Worker of Sept. 28 containing Thirteenth Congressional District matter is doing much good. We delight to compare the clear-cut ideas and style of our comrades with the buncombe twaddle of the capitalistic pie-eaters."

The Socialist Club of Ridgefield Park, Bergen County, N. J., held a well attended meeting in Colin's Hotel on Oct. 23, and all present were well pleased with the lecture given by Comrade Dr. C. P. De Yoe of Ramsey. Comrade Graft read an interesting criticism of the present system. Another mass meeting will be held in the Town Hall on Nov. 1, which will be addressed by three good speakers.

The mass meeting in Newark, Monday night, proved to be the greatest ever held in Essex County by the Socialist Party. The new Auditorium was crowded with an audience that greeted with applause time and time again the appeals of Mother Jones and John Spargo. Geo. H. Goebel presided. The returns on tickets already made show that all expenses were met and perhaps a surplus left for new work. The meeting was remarkable for the number of trade unionists present.

The Socialists of Philadelphia will have a grand re-union next Wednesday evening at the Labor Lyceum to celebrate the assured good results at the polls on Tuesday. Frank and Kate O'Hare, John Collins, and others will be there to speak. Bring your friends along.

New York State.

Comrade Hulse of Port Jervis, N. Y., says that the success of Social Democratic meetings held there shows a wonderful growth of Socialist thought and feeling. We never had more than ten votes in the township before, but Comrade Hulse says two hundred would not surprise him next week.

Comrade Sol Fieldman spoke at Woodside, L. I., last Thursday, with the result that a new local of the party was organized, with fifteen charter members.

Comrade Hunt of Schenectady is keeping the Trades Assembly Halls flooded with copies of The Worker.

Mother Jones will speak on Getty Square in Yonkers, Saturday, Nov. 1, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Comrade Fieldman will also speak. The whole population of Yonkers is expected to turn out.

New York City.

Last Thursday's meeting of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville was rather poorly attended, but a good deal of work was done. Two new members were taken in. In response to a call from the Yorkville Agitation Committee for comrades to act as chairmen at open-air meetings during the week, Comrades Paul, C. Oerter, O. Oerter, Sprotte, Willvonseder, Lenz, and Strompf volunteered. It was resolved that the Club join in the parade of Nov. 1 in a body and a transparency was ordered for the occasion; $2 was contributed toward parade expenses. A committee was elected to make arrangements for the formation of a fife and drum corps. Next week the subject for discussion will be the common objection to Socialism, that if no one were in fear of poverty no one would work. All young people interested in the Socialist movement are invited to join the Club, which meets at 206 E. Eighty-sixth street every Thursday evening. Dues are 10 cents a month.

Financial Secretary Holzer of Local Kings County acknowledges receipts for the campaign fund during the week ending Oct. 20 as follows: Cigarmakers' Union No. 149, $10; Do., List 822, by Schaefer, $5.50; 19th A. D., List 562, by Franz Albert, 50c.; Do., List 570, by Edward Martin, $5; Do., List 571, by John Rausch, $1; W. S. & D. B. F., Br. 135, List 697, by H. Studt, $9; Do., Br. 89, List 695, by Isaacson, $16.55; Karl Marx Branch, $10; 20th A. D., Br. 2, List 497, by Kiesel, $1.75; Do., List 591, by M. F. Jurnick, $1.50; List 1,473, Mrs. N. Kiesel, $1; Coopers' Union No. 7,698, List 827, by L. Gundel, $2.90; W. S. & D. B. F., Br. 68, by Weir, $5; total, $137.25.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville is going to organize a fife and drum corps among its members to assist in party work. Any comrade or sympathizer who is willing to act as instructor is requested to communicate with Emil Paul, of the committee, who may be addressed at the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street.

One of the remarkable features of the campaign in New York City is the number of boys and young men who come to headquarters at the Labor Lyceum, asking to be set to work for the party in their leisure hours. Some address envelopes and send out circulars, others distribute leaflets, others go on errands or help get out the platforms for speakers, and all are glad to feel that they are doing service in the great cause.

The enthusiasm for the Social Democratic movement on the East Side has reached a higher point this week than ever before. The crowds at our outdoor meetings actually block the streets and the people clamor for more hall meetings. If the answer is given that funds are running low, a collection of pennies and nickels and dimes is immediately taken up, and so the work goes on.

The lower West Side, which is a good field for Socialist propaganda, nearly all the people being wage-workers, but which has never been properly cultivated before, is evidently going to yield a great harvest of votes for the Arm and Torch of the Social Democratic Party this year. Fieldman's meetings along Eighth avenue and many others arranged by the party have been well attended and many strangers gave in their names as being interested in the movement and desiring further information. Last Saturday evening a meeting was held at Utah Hall, Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, to which these inquirers were invited by circular. The hall was crowded. Comrades Hanford, Lissauer, and Atkinson spoke and had the closest attention. When Organizer Wood announced that a West Side Social Democratic Club was to be organized and called for those who wished to join, thirty young men at once responded. Steady work will henceforth be carried on the year round on the West Side and this year's vote will be only the beginning.

At the last meeting of the Kings County Committee the Organizer reported that the Criterion Theater, corner of Fulton street and Grand avenue, Brooklyn, had been secured for Friday, Oct. 31. Mother Jones, Ben Hanford, and John Spargo are engaged to speak. Two hundred seats on the platform and two hundred in front are to be reserved and tickets will be sent to the trade unions. The meeting will be advertised in three of the daily papers. Comrade Snyder will be asked to supply the music. Comrade Burrowes drew up a set of resolutions paying loving tribute to the memory of Comrade J. L. Franz, who died recently. The resolutions are incorporated in the minutes and will be published generally. Several requests for speakers have been received from trad unions. Seventeen applicans were admitted to membership in the party.

The American Branch of the 35th A. D. appeal to comrades and sympathizers to act as watchers in the election districts of the Bronx. Those able to do so should call at the club-house, 3309 Third avenue. One comrade will be in the club-house every night to give instructions.

The Bronx Borough Agitation Committee reports that the financial condition is satisfactory, as branches 179-180, W. S. & D. B. have promptly responded; Bakers' Union did its share, the Child S. & D. Benefit also contributed $10 and a good collection was taken up at branch, $6, and we still have a committee that will try to get some money from their general funds. The Worker and other literature is being sent to all registered S. L. P. and S. D. P. voters. About 10,000 pasters and 200 posters have been used. Our emblem has been well advertised and some remote places covered with literature, only about 10,000 pieces being left out of the 60,000 provided. Comrades should be at the club-house every night to assist in distributing literature and obtaining watchers for polling places. One hundred and eleven watchers are needed and we hope our sympathizers will help us to secure all votes cast for our candidates. Considerable literature has been sold and 125 copies of The Worker are made use of every week; $5 has been donated to the State Committee and $5 to parade. All comrades and sympathizers in the Bronx are requested to remember the parade and turn out in a body to make a good showing for the Bronx. The meetings of branches were poorly attended and the old veterans living in the 34th have badly neglected the lower part of that district. They should atone for it by coming to 3309 Third avenue every night and distributing literature. We do not intend to rest after the campaign, but wish to prepare the field for contesting some aldermanic and assembly seats and need money for propaganda. So we hope all comrades having subscription lists will turn them in promptly so that we need not waste time in looking after them.

Our agitation in Brooklyn, as elsewhere, has never met with such great success as at present. Many trade union organizations are asking for more speakers than we can supply. Almost all the branches of the Brotherhood of Carpenters are calling at once for speakers, and the machinists invite our representative to occupy their platform. The union of the tailors also calls on us for speakers. And our hall meetings have an unprecedented attendance.

Brooklyn comrades who are appointed to do committee work at the meeting in the Criterion Theater, Friday evening, are requested to report in the committee room promptly at 7 o'clock. All Brooklyn speakers are also requested to report at the committee room, as they will be needed for outdoor meetings.

The 30th A. D. is carrying on a good campaign. The second meeting in Kroether's Hall, which was held on Wednesday of last week, with Butscher, Sackin, and Lee as speakers, was a complete success. Another meeting was held on Monday in Frank's. The street meetings have been numerous and well attended. This week the comrades have had a wagon out every evening, with Comrade Lee, our candidate for Assembly, and other speakers. A great quantity of literature has been distributed. The 28th A. D. is also making a good campaign on similar lines, and everything points to a marked advance in the Social Democratic vote in the Yorkville districts.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn is having well attended meetings, enlivened by discussions on Socialist principles. The Club requires that all its members shall be active—no deadheads. On Nov. 22 the Club will hold a social evening at Kreuscher's Hall, corner of Cypress and Myrtle avenues, and the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkvile is invited to attend in a body.

The Socialist Educational League will hold a festival at its club rooms, 953 Second avenue, Sunday evening, Nov. 2. Mother Jones and others will speak. A good literary and musical program will be given, followed by dancing. Admission, 10 cents.

Comrades from all districts in Manhattan and Bronx will please call at the office of the Organizer and get additional envelopes and leaflets for distribution in their election districts.

A business meeting of the 7th, 9th, and 25th A. D. in connection with the West Side Socialist Propaganda Club will be held at Clark's Hall, corner Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, Friday, Oct. 31.

NOTICES FOR NEW YORK.

The State Committee desires that on the evening of Election Day the organizer or some other officer of each local in the state shall, immediately on receiving news of the vote for Benjamin Hanford and for Daniel DeLeon, telegraph the same to Henry L. Slobodin, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

If watchers in New York City find on Election Day that they are interfered with in the performance of their duties, they should telephone the Organizer at the Labor Lyceum. Call: 2850 Spring.

WHO WILL WIN IT?

We have received the following letter to call to the attention of comrades in New York City:

"Editor of The Worker:

"Dear Comrade:—Some testimonial should be given to the district showing the largest proportionate gain. The undersigned hereby offers five dollars to be given to the assembly district organization in Greater New York which shall show the highest percentage of increase in the Social Democratic vote this year over that of last year, the matter to be decided by the State Committee.

"Fraternally,

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The Social Democrats of New Rochelle are certainly wide awake and are making the old-party leaders uncomfortable. On Oct. 21, Comrade Owen R. Lovejoy of Mt. Vernon spoke in Music Hall, at the invitation of Carpenters' Union No. 42. His subject was, "Conditions as I Found Them in the Strike Field of Pennsylvania," and the hall was packed with eager listeners.

On the Wednesday following, Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor, addressed a large open-air meeting at Port Chester, which was arranged by Comrade Dixon of the Westchester County Committee. Comrade O'Conners of New Rochelle, formerly a miner in the Schuylkill district, gave an account of the miners' life, and Hanford followed with an impressive discussion of the principles involved in the strike. The way he roused his audience to the necessity of political action by the working class was enough to gladden the hearts of every Socialist, and the result will be seen at the polls.

On Thursday evening, Hanford addressed a large and enthusiastic audience on the streets of New Rochelle. The crowd would stand for no interruption, and one drunken disturber was unceremoniously hustled out. The local papers are expressing alarm and surprise at the impression made here by Hanford's speech and by the activity of the local comrades.

It may be added that the Social Democratic Party is the only party that has a banner up in this place. So far we have distributed about eight thousand leaflets, and will keep it up till Election Day. J. G.

FIELDMAN AT SYRACUSE.

Comrade Sol Fieldman, whose work has contributed so much to the effectiveness of the Social Democratic campaign in New York City this year, will speak in Syracuse on Sunday, Nov. 2. It is to be hoped that the comrades there will have the meeting well advertised so as to have a large attendance, for Fieldman can be counted on to put some new thoughts into the minds of al his hearers.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

The campaign is now nearing at an end, and IT DEPENDS ON YOU whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never better for us than at present and we must close the campaign with more thorough work than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

WILL THEY ACCEPT?

Socialist Candidate Sweetland of Connecticut Challenges His Old-Party Opponents.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25.—George A. Sweetland of Bristol, the candidate of the Socialist Party for Congressman-at-large, has given the old parties an unwelcome invitation to prove their claim on the workingmen's votes by methods of argument, instead of their customary methods of brass bands, beer, and boodle. Comrade Sweetland has sent to his Republican and Democratic opponents, Messrs. George L. Lilley and Homer S. Cummings, the following challenge to debate:

"Gentlemen:—You have been selected by your respective political parties as candidate for Representative-at-large in Congress, and are now conducting a campaign in their interests and are soliciting the votes of the people of Connecticut. It is but fair and just to the citizens of this commonwealth that they should know just what you stand for and the policies and interests you represent.

"As the candidate of the party of the working class, the Socialist Party of Connecticut, I challenge you to meet me in public debate on the subject: 'Are the Policies of the Republican and Democratic Parties for the Interests of the People?' at whatever time and place you may see fit to designate, before Election Day, Nov. 4, 1902—preferably in Hartford or New Haven, the two largest centers of population in the state.

"I sincerely hope you will accept this challenge. If you ignore it, the people of Connecticut may have reason to doubt the sincerity of your purpose in accepting the nomination. If we are wrong, you should not hesitate to expose and crush our alleged political and economic heresies. If you are right, you should not fear to meet a representative of the working class. Yours truly,

"GEO. A. SWEETLAND."

"Bristol, Conn.

It is not to be expected that either of the eminent gentlemen will take the risk involved in accepting the challenge; but should they do so, the Socialists of the state would be highly delighted and the workingmen in general would have an unusually good opportunity for comparing the arguments of the capitalist twins with those of the Socialist Party.

ATTENTION! BROOKLYN SOCIALISTS.

The territory of Kings County is so large that it is impossible for the members of the party alone to cover every election district in the county. We therefore appeal to all sympathizers to act as watchers at the polls and see that the vote cast for our party is credited to us.

In the following places comrades will be present the whole day on Election Day where every one willing to act as watcher may call and get his credentials and instructions, and where he will be assigned to an election district:

For the 1st, 2d, 3d, and 10th A. D., at the office of Dr. C. L. Furman, 121 Schermerhorn street.

Fourth, 5th, and 6th A. D., at the headquarters of the 6th A. D., 80 Sumner avenue.

Seventh A. D., upper part, at the residence of Comrade Ward, 45th street and Twelfth avenue.

Seventh A. D., lower part, 8th, 9th, 11th, and 12th A. D., at Concordia Hall, 335 Prospect avenue.

13th-14th A. D., at Eckford Hall, corner Eckford and Colyer streets.

15th A. D., at Miller's Hall, 187 Montrose avenue.

16th, 17th, and 18th A. D., at the Socialist Club, corner Ralph avenue and Fulton street.

19th A. D., at the Labor Lyceum, 949-955 Willoughby avenue.

20th A. D., at Koch's Hall, 257 Hamburg avenue.

21st A. D., at Keystone Garden, corner Pennsylvania and Glenmore avenues.

The headquarters of the party on Election Day will be the Labor Lyceum, 949-955 Willoughby avenue, where the campaign secretary will be present the whole day, and comrades may call for information, and where all returns of the vote must be made. Watchers must report first to their headquarters, whence the vote is to be reported to the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, where all returns will be tabulated and returns received from all parts of the state and country.

Sympathizers who are willing to act as watchers may also communicate with the Campaign Secretary, J. Gerber, 888 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, who will assign them to an election district.

—A good man elected by a bad party can do no good. Even a bad man elected by a good party can do little harm. Moreover, good parties do not nominate bad men.

DISRUPTERS BEATEN IN HUDSON COUNTY.

The S. L. P. disruptionists in Hudson County, N. J., tried to keep the candidates of the Socialist Party off the ballot, but the Socialist Party won official standing in last year's election, and the protest of the disruptionists was denied by the election officials.

Besides our candidates for Congress, A. B. Hopkins and Frederick Krafft, Wm. H. Morton for Sheriff and Henry Kuhn for Coroner, we have twelve candidates for Assembly, nine for Freeholders on the county ticket, a city ticket in Hoboken, four aldermanic candidates in Jersey City, and one for Councilman in Bayonne. Unless all signs fail, the Socialist Party will make a large gain.

McDERMOTT WON'T DEBATE.

Frederick Krafft, Socialist candidate for Congress in the Tenth District of New Jersey, comprising a part of Hudson County, sent to Allan L. McDermott, the present incumbent and candidate for re-election, a registered letter inviting him to debate the issues of the campaign as they affect the interests of the working class. So far not a word in reply has been heard from Mr. McDermott, who evidently thinks it wisest to talk only when his opponent has no chance of getting the floor. Considering that Mr. McDermott has the undivided support of the Trolley Trust of Northern New Jersey, there is certainly no good reason to expect him to attempt to justify his position by argument before the workingmen.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruptions. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $3.00 and $2.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1.75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

WHY NEW YORK WORKINGMEN SHOULD VOTE FOR HANFORD.

Because he is a workingman and an active and faithful trade unionist since his boyhood.

Because, with all his associates on the ticket he stands firm and square on the Social Democratic platform.

Because he and the other candidates of the Social Democratic Party were nominated by workingmen and their campaign is conducted and paid for by workingmen.

Because the capitalists don't want him—as shown by the fact that the papers which have lied about the coal strike have tried to suppress all news about the Social Democratic Party.

Because the triumph of Socialism would mean work for all and to all workers the full product of their labor.

Because Hanford's election would mean that the power of the state would be used to help workingmen win better conditions, not to break their strikes.

Because a big vote for the Social Democratic ticket, even if Hanford is not elected, will frighten the capitalists and their political tools and inspire them with respect for the working class.

Put a cross under the Arm and Torch.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

IMMEDIATE DEMANDS.

As measures of immediate relief and as steps toward our ultimate end, we pledge ourselves to the following measures:

1. More stringent legislation for the guarding of dangerous machinery and for the sanitation of factories and workshops; absolute responsibility of employees at their work.—So long as the capitalists receive profits from other men's labor they must be held to strict accountability for accidents occurring in their service.

2. Reorganization of the system of factory inspection; inspectors to be elected by the workingmen in the various trades, and to have ample powers to enforce the law.—So long as inspectors are appointed by political favor there is danger that they will cater to capitalist interests. They should be responsible only to the class for whose service they exist.

3. Absolute prohibition of child labor and prohibition of female labor in dangerous and unhealthful occupations.

4. A compulsory maximum working day of eight hours for all wage workers.—The reduction of working hours will increase the chances of employment, and will thus reduce the competition for work and make it easier for workingmen to secure increased wages.

5. Pensions for superannuated workers.—We deem that those who have spent their lives in useful labor are far more deserving of public care than those who have been employed in the destruction of life and property, and that it is not charity, but simple justice for the state to assure them of comfort in their old age.

6. Public ownership of all industries that shall take the form of monopolies.

7. Work to be provided for the unemployed; the state and the municipalities to undertake whatever sort of industry shall be necessary or proper for this purpose; all public work to be done on public account, without the intervention of contractors; union wages and conditions to prevail on all public work.

8. The resources of the public treasury to be available for the assistance of striking or locked-out workingmen struggling for a better share of the product of their labor.—At present the powers of the state are used to help capitalists in their controversies with Labor. We propose to turn their own weapons against them.

9. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation, and the right of recall of representatives by their constituencies, and equal civil and political rights for men and women."

WARREN ATKINSON, Organizer.

WHY NEW YORK WORKINGMEN SHOULD NOT VOTE FOR COLER.

Because Coler is a Wall Street broker and all but one of his associates on the Democratic state ticket are either bankers or corporation lawyers.

Because the present Democratic boss, Hill, as Governor, twice vetoed the Secret-Ballot Law; as United States Senator, argued against the Income-Tax Bill; and as counsel for a score of franchise companies successfully opposed the Franchise Tax Bill.

Because the Democratic party, when in power in this city, state, or nation, has never enforced labor laws.

Because Coler is supported by Grover Cleveland who, as President, sent federal troops to break the A. R. U. strike.

Because Flower, Pattison, and Steunenberg, Democratic governors in New York, Pennsylvania, and Idaho, have sent militia to break strikes.

Because, as soon as the coal strike was ended, Coler disavowed the public ownership of mines plank in his platform.

Because Coler's campaign fund is supplied by the capitalist class and he will have to be true to capitalist interests.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

SOCIALISM AND TRADE UNIONISM

The following resolution was adopted by the Socialist Party in National Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 31, 1901:

"The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, declares that the trade union movement and independent political action are the emancipating factors of the wage-working class. The trade union movement is the natural result of capitalist production and represents the economic side of the working class movement. We consider it the duty of the Socialists to join the unions of their respective trades and assist in building up and unifying the trades and labor organizations. We recognize that trade unions are by historical necessity organized on neutral grounds as far as political affiliation is concerned.

"We call the attention of trade unionists to the fact that the class struggle so nobly waged by the trade union forces to-day, while it may result in lessening the exploitation of labor, can never abolish that exploitation. The exploitation of labor will come to an end only when society takes possession of all the means of production for the benefit of all the people. It is the duty of every trade unionist to realize the necessity of independent political action on class-conscious lines, to join the Socialist Party and to assist in building up a strong political movement of the wage-working class, whose ultimate aim and object must be the abolition of wage slavery and the establishment of a co-operative state of society based on the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

Canadian Machinists Tell a Story of the "Right to Work" as Interpreted by Capitalist Judges.

Electric Lodge No. 313, I. A. of M., of this city requests The Worker to publish a statement of facts from a sister lodge in Ontario.

More than a year ago, President Harty of the Canadian Locomotive Company requested the Union to present an agreement embodying the provisions of its constitution providing for the annual adjustment of grievances. This agreement was presented to the Company on Nov. 23, 1901. The Union heard nothing further, and on Feb. 23 reminded the Company of the matter. In reply came a document entitled, "The Declaration of Principles of the National Metal Trades Association."

The Company followed this up by beginning to discharge union machinists, filling their places with "handy men" and boys. After trying hard to effect an amicable settlement, the men were forced to strike, on April 30, last.

On Aug. 6 the Company began suit for $30,000 damages and, at the same time asked for injunctions to restrain the strikers from interviewing applicants for positions in the strike shop.

Three union men were arrested for approaching a man about to enter the shop—presumably a scab—and on Sept. 15 these men were sentenced to a fine of $50 and costs, with the alternative of going to jail for a month. The magistrate lectured the men and told them that if they would decide within ten days to go back to work at the Company's terms he would suspend execution of the sentence.

The machinists wish to bring before all their fellow workingmen this outrageous abuse of power in the interest of the bosses by a magistrate sworn to administer impartial justice. Such things happen, not only in Canada, but in the United States as well. As Secretary Tremborg of Lodge 313 remarks in transmitting the matter: "Nothing else can be expected of judges and other officials nominated by capitalist influence and elected on a loose and equivocal platform. If the workingmen continue to build their house upon the sand, whose fault is it when the tempest tumbles it about their ears?"

EQUALITY TRIUMPHANT.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.—Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776.

Equality triumphant! Aye, once to us she came,
We answered to her summons, we gave her loud acclaim;
The patient, plodding people looked upward from the sod
To hail no tawdry tyrant betwixt them and their God.
No crimson robes were trailing atween them and the sun,
No dizzened crowns and coronets by dripping sabers won.
She spake, the nations trembled: "The earth was made for man!
Himself alone the master, with none to blight, or ban!"

We love thee not, Equality, with that keen love of old,
When spurned were prince's favors, and scorned their beaten gold;
When o'er the startled waters the bells of freedom rang,
And valor clanged her cymbals and faith her peans sang.
The dying moon of monarchy betwixt us and thy face
Eclipses our fair scutcheons and handicaps our race;
We grope in gruesome shadows where once our lines were thrown,
To knit the world-republics in one encircling zone.

In what fair land, Equality, hast thou a home to-day?
Where are thine altars kindled, where are thy foes at bay?
Will kingdom set to kingdom afford thee resting place?
Will master matched to master extol thine ancient race?
Art thou in galleys sailing across the sullen sea,
Or in the mines a-whispering that men may yet be free?
Or in the mills, where, elbow touching elbow, in array,
The galley slaves of commerce work their weary lives away?

They wait for thee, Equality, to plead the rights of man,
Who hold thy name in reverence in God's eternal plan;
They pine in lonely places, they starve in crowded street,
Adown the dusty highways you hear their sodden feet;
In sweatshop and in factory, their helpless children cry,
The beggar's crust their portion, their privilege to die;
They beat upon the billows of life's unending sea,
With none to man their life-boat, Equality, but thee.

Equality triumphant! Again shall we behold
The sons of freedom rally around thee as of old;
Again the patient people shall hail thy beauteous dawn,
And tawdry tyrants tremble to see thee marching on.
No foreign land shall hold thee from coming to thine own;
No truckling power invest thee with garments long outgrown;
The people, all the people, shall till and toil and share,
And love shall chant of heaven, and faith of answered prayer.

Equality triumphant! Our fathers dimly saw
That justice is eternal and love the higher law;
That in the Social Commonwealth there is no great or small,
But love's unstinted portion is meted out to all.
As they with eyes ecstatic beheld thy face sublime
We wait in expectation the fullness of thy time,
The promise and fulfillment of God's eternal plan,
The crowning of Equality—the Brotherhood of Man.

WHY NEW YORK WORKINGMEN SHOULD NOT VOTE FOR ODELL.

Because Odell is a corporation lobbyist by profession, and a stockholder in many franchise corporations.

Because, with one exception, all Odell's associates on the Republican state ticket are either bankers or corporation lawyers.

Because Odell has twice sent militia to break strikes of trolley workers.

Because the Republican boss, Platt, is the representative of the Goulds, as his colleague, Depew, is the representative of the Vanderbilts.

Because the Republican party, when in power in this city, state, or nation, has never enforced labor laws.

Because Odell's friend and partizan, Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania, sent militia to try to break the miners' strike, and because many other Republican officials — such as President McKinley, Governor Roosevelt, Judge Jackson—have used the power of their office to persecute striking workingmen.

Because the Republican platform, on which Odell stands, offers nothing in the interest of the working class.

Because Odell's campaign fund is supplied by the capitalist class and he will have to be true to capitalist interests.

GLASS SILVERERS ORGANIZE.

A new acquisition to the labor movement of New York is the Glass Silverers' and Platers' Union, organized through the efforts of Comrade Gustave Theimer of Richmond, a silverer in the employ of the Pittsburg Glass Company. The new union was formed a few days ago with sixty charter members and many more are expected to join its ranks in the immediate future. Comrade Theimer was elected First Chairman, with Ch. Ronkaly as Second Chairman, Geo. Schehr as Treasurer, Ernest Bonnet as Financial Secretary, Fred. Curottis as Recording Secretary, and Henry Vallee as Sergeant-at-arms.

Meetings are to be held on the first and third Monday evenings of each month at 85 W. Third street and all workingmen in this trade are invited to come and join. Until the end of November the initiation fee will be $1; after that time it will be $5. Dues are 25 cents a month. If the men of this trade will join and take an active interest in their organization there is no doubt that their conditions can be greatly improved.

—Workingmen of New York, if you want laws enacted and enforced to protect you in life and limb at your work, vote under the Arm and Torch. See Planks 1 and 2 of the state platform of the Social Democratic Party, printed in this paper.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticize their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

FOR UNIONISTS TO THINK OF.

Significant Capitalist Utterances on Strike Settlement.

Attitude Taken by Capitalist Papers Indicates that the Arbitration May Serve Only to Bring the Questions to a Clearer Issue.

In connection with the strike settlement proposition made by the "operators" and accepted by the United Mine Workers, several very interesting and suggestive utterances on the subject have apeared in the capitalist press.

The following, which appeared in the "Engineering and Mining Journal," of which E. W. Parker, a member of the Arbitration Commission, is editor, may be taken as expressing Mr. Parker's own views:

"The board of arbitrators appointed by President Roosevelt to take up all the issues in controversy between the striking anthracite miners and their employers is not likely to be altogether satisfactory to the latter, though organized labor will certainly get a fair show from it. We have no wish to criticize the President, since his choice is doubtless as good a one as would be made by any man in his position in the middle of all the political wire pulling that has been the feature of this strike for several weeks.

"It is our belief that the board will act fearlessly, showing favor to neither operators nor to the United Mine Workers. Issues far greater than the rate to be paid for mining a particular coal seam are involved—issues that are of national importance, and are bound to call for legislation within a few years. The whole question of the rights of labor organizations, their duties and responsibilities, have been involved in the present strike, and we believe that the board by acting fearlessly, and insisting that its report be not edited to suit political exigencies, can do a permanent service to the nation—a service that will insure to its members lasting fame."

What are these "issues of national importance," what is the capitalist view of the "rights, duties, and responsibilities of labor organizations," is more definitely indicated in some other extracts which we shall make from newspapers which are always recognized as speaking for the capitalist class.

The New York "Commercial" is a paper circulating chiefly among Wall Street men. In both editorial and business policy it is bitterly hostile to the labor movement. Its office, by the way, was "ratted" last year, and in that office was printed, a few weeks ago, the fake labor paper issued by the "operators" in the hope of causing dissension among the miners, to which we made some reference at the time. One is not surprised, therefore, to find that on the morning when the miners' convention began, the "Commercial" contained the following editorial:

"President Mitchell and his United Mine Workers are between the upper and the nether mill-stone. When the delegates meet in convention to-day, it is not going to be all smooth sailing in their deliberations. They are by no means a unit on accepting the operators' proposition. Some of them at least see clearly the full significance of the negotiations so far and do not look upon the thing as a 'strikers' victory' by any means.

"If they decline the operators' proposition for arbitration, popular opinion from one end of the country to the other will condemn them, and with a discredited leader and the loss of popular sympathy the union would be powerless to keep its miners from going back to work.

"Should they accept the offer, they would win well-deserved popular applause—but what would become of their organization then? Mitchell might go back to his men and boast to them that, while he failed to get 'recognition' for the union, he did force the operators to arbitrate—but would that be the fact? Would the organized miners who have been fighting for 'recognition' take that view of it? Would they not not be confronted with the fact that the latest and the accepted proposition to arbitrate came from the operators—not from Mitchell? And could they hold their organization together in the anthracite region for sixty days after they had resumed work? To us it looks extremely doubtful.

"Commissioner Wright's forecast of separate organizations—one of the bituminous, the other of the anthracite miners—seems a not unlikely outcome of this strike in any event."

It will be remembered that Commissioner of Labor Carroll D. Wright, who has been appointed as Recorder to the Arbitration Commission, made a special investigation of the strike in September, the results of which are embodied in the October Bulletin of the Department of Labor. Among the alleged "reasonable suggestions" which he there offered for the permanent adjustment of the relations of mine owners and mine workers, were: First, separation of the anthracite miners from those of the bituminous fields; Second, some method (not specified) of holding the union to "financial responsibility" for its acts.

This latter suggestion becomes much more intelligible in the light of the statement of John Hobson, which we printed last week, in regard to the attack which is being made on the British unions. It has been decided there that a union, even though unincorporated, can be sued for damages. A beginning has been made in the same direction in this country, especially in the great general strike of the machinists; but the legal principle has not yet been established.

With the courts so completely under capitalist influence as they now are in this country, it is easy to imagine what would be the result of making the unions financially responsible before the law. It would mean that whenever the the workingmen, through their union, engage in a struggle against their employers—whether strike, lockout, or boycott—the employers could bring suit against the union for damages on account of the injury done to their business; and even though such suits might not always be successful, the courts would have power to issue orders tying up the union funds pending trial and thus to paralyze the unions.

The courts of this country will probably follow the example set by those of England in this matter and establish the principle that employers can collect damages for injury done to their business by the activity of the unions in strike, lockout, or boycott. But the capitalists do not intend to stop with this. They evidently intend, if it be possible—and the arbitration of the coal strike will be made the occasion for driving in an entering wedge—to force incorporation upon the unions. This would mean that it would be in the power of the employers, with the assistance of a few hired traitors within the unions, at any time to sue for a receivership or for the dissolution of the incorporated union or to regulate the disposition of the union funds. And with trained corporation lawyers on the bench, such as the Republican and Democratic parties choose, there could be no question of the effectiveness of such measures against the unions at the most critical times.

That this plan is seriously contemplated is proven by recent news dispatches from Massachusetts and from Illinois. On the Massachusetts bill the "Evening Post," a most distinctly capitalist paper, comments as follows:

"It is in keeping with the solid traditions of Massachusetts law-making that a bill for the incorporation of labor unions is to be discussed in the state legislature. There is an especial appropriateness, too, in the fact that the first serious attempt to fix the legal responsibility upon these powerful organizations should be made in a state which strictly regulates the incorporation of capital. If the trade union bill should become a law, it would simply show that the state of Massachusetts is determined to control all great combinations which affect the common weal, whether composed of capitalists and investors or of laborers. * * * The discussion of this bill cannot but be salutary, and we trust that many other legislatures will follow the example of Massachusetts in this matter."

To sum all up, the trade union movement is undoubtedly confronted with greater dangers to-day than ever before and stands more in need of alert and aggressive spirit to resist the insidious attacks that will be made.

The miners will have to meet this new attack first. But it is not only a thing for the miners to think of. It concerns all trade unionists. It will be "up to" the American Federation of Labor convention at New Orleans to take measures, if it can, for protecting the labor organizations.

Still more, it is something for all workingmen to think of, not only as trade unionists, but especially as voters.

If the capitalists propose to get laws through the legislatures to cripple the labor organizations, the workingmen must send men to the legislatures to fight such laws. In Massachusetts there are now three such men. The records of Carey and MacCartney give assurance that they will make a brave fight; and the fact that Ramsden is also elected on the Socialist ticket is sufficient guarantee that he will do his full part.

If the capitalists propose to make the courts their agents for interfering in the internal affairs of the trade unions and so rendering them impotent, the workingmen must see that the corporation lawyers chosen by the capitalists as judicial candidates are voted down and that men tried and proven true to the working class are put on the bench in their place.

John Hobson, after telling of the attacks upon the British unions through the courts, said: "The British workingmen will turn to politics, if they have the brains." We believe that the American workingmen have the brains and the Socialist (in New York, the Social Democratic) Party is in the field as their political agency for this purpose.

LABOR CANDIDATES ON CAPITALIST TICKETS.

Of the two hundred and fifty-eight candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties appearing on the official ballot in Greater New York last Tuesday, ninety-nine were lawyers and sixty-six were capitalists (bankers, brokers, manufacturers, merchants, or agents), according to the classification made by the "Evening Post." Of the others, fifty-two are included under the headings of artizans and mechanics, clerks, engineers, and architects, and telegraph or railway employees; but of these, apparently all workingmen, the greater part might be described as only honorary members of the working class, being actually understrappers for the capitalists—either as professional "heelers" or as shop foremen, superintendents, and the like; and the few genuine workingmen on either of the old-party tickets were, in almost every case, nominated for unimportant offices in districts where the party in question had no chance of success.

SPLENDID GAINS IN EAST AND WEST.

Incomplete Returns of Socialist Vote Give Assurance of Speedy Victory for the Working Class.

Massachusetts and Pennsylvania Treble Their Vote—New York Gains Fifty Per Cent.—Ohio Doubles and So Does Chicago—Minnesota's Vote Probably Quadrupled—Good News from Montana.—Third Socialist in Massachusetts Legislature.

The returns of Tuesday's vote so far as the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party is concerned, are as yet very meager. The capitalist press and news agencies, with some notable exceptions, systematically suppress information on the subject and it is a difficult task for the Socialist press to gather the information.

We know enough, however, to show us that the vote cast for our presidential ticket, Debs and Harriman, two years ago, is at least trebled in the state and congressional elections just held.

Of the West we are able to give but little definite information.

The New York "World" states that a very heavy Socialist vote was polled in Indiana.

The "Sun" refers to a surprisingly large Socialist vote in Colorado.

The "Post" notes that the Social Democrats or Socialists of Milwaukee County, Wis., cast 12,000 votes. Montana, too, sends us good news.

Speaking of Utah, the "Post" says that "one feature was the heavy Socialist vote in Salt Lake City."

Our returns show that the vote in Chicago and in the state of Ohio is doubled and that of Minnesota is quadrupled.

In the East our returns are fuller and give ground for the utmost enthusiasm.

Massachusetts more than trebles the vote of last year and takes the lead, apparently, of all other states.

New Hampshire, Connecticut, and New Jersey, so far as reported, show gains that, in an ordinary year, would be considered exceptionally good.

In New York the Social Democratic Party, in spite of the ineubus of De Leon's S. L. P., gains 50 per cent. or more; the only unsatisfactory feature of the returns is that the S. L. P. probably remains on the ballot, apparently keeping about the same vote it had in 1900.

Pennsylvania, the state to which all eyes are first turned this year, makes a proportional increase equal to that of Massachusetts—that is, the vote is at least trebled.

While the Republicans are lamenting over their reduced majorities and the Democrats over their failure to capture the offices they hoped for, and while each is accusing the other of fraud and chicanery, the Socialist Party alone comes out of the campaign clear, triumphant, and full of courage.

"The world is ours."

On with the fight.

NEW YORK CITY.

Incomplete Returns Show Large Gains for Social Democratic Party and Small Increase for S. L. P.

The returns of the city vote were waited for by large crowds at the Labor Lyceum in Fourth street, at the West Side Labor Lyceum, and the W. E. A. Clubhouse, and at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, and as the news came in the enthusiasm grew and the comrades felt well rewarded for all their hard work.

Manhattan and Bronx.

The following tables show the vote of the Social Democratic Party and the S. L. P. for Governor this year in Manhattan and Bronx, as reported by the Social Democratic watchers. Comparison is made with the vote cast for Mayor a year ago as officially reported. This year's report is, of course, incomplete and subject to revision.

These figures show a total of 10,440 for Hanford, S. D. P., and 5,503 for DeLeon, S. L. P., in these two boroughs.

Last year Manhattan and Bronx gave the Social Democratic Party 6,409 and gave the S. L. P. 4,323.

In the state election of 1900 the two boroughs gave 6,387 for the Social Democratic Party and 5,395 for the S. L. P.

The "Sun" gives Hanford 9,872 and 5,214 for DeLeon in Manhattan and Bronx.

DeLeon's paper gives a statement of his vote, as furnished by S. L. P. watchers, in nineteen of the assembly districts of Manhattan and Bronx. In these districts they claim 12 votes more votes than are conceded them in the foregoing table.

Brooklyn.

In twelve assembly districts reported for Brooklyn the DeLeonites claim 282 more than are conceded them in the foregoing table.

The figures for the Borough of Brookly nare still farther from being complete. As will be seen from the table, the Social Democratic vote is reported in eighteen and the S. L. P. in seventeen of the twenty-one assembly districts, in most of which, however, some election districts are missing.

These incomplete returns show a gain over last year's vote of 842 for the Social Democratic Party and of 234 for the S. L. P.

In 1900 the Social Democratic Party cast 2,575 in Brooklyn and the S. L. P. had 1,925.

Queens.

Incomplete returns for Queens—thirteen districts missing—give 931 votes for Hanford. Two years ago we had 668. The returns are so incomplete that it is impossible to say how the S. L. P. has come out, but it has probably made a small gain.

IN NEW YORK STATE.

Partial and Scattering Returns of Socialist Vote Outside the City.

In the state election two years ago the Social Democratic Party of New York (identical with the Socialist Party of other states) polled 13,493 votes for Governor and the S. L. P. (DeLeonites) polled 13,762.

This year the vote for Hanford on the Social Democratic ticket certainly exceeds 20,000 and may go considerably over that figure. The S. L. P. apparently made some gains.

The vote of New York City, so far as reported, is given under another head. Scattering and generally incomplete returns from outside are here given:

Rochester.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 4.—This city gives Hanford, on the Social Democratic ticket, 2,048 votes. DeLeon, on the ticket of the S. L. P., has 775. This is incomplete. G. W. M.

Two years ago the whole of Monroe County, including Rochester, gives us 1,019, while the S. L. P. had 442.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 5.—Two more districts heard from raise the vote of the Social Democratic Party to 2,103. Five districts are still missing. Great enthusiasm prevails. Fifty dollars raised for state campaign fund on election night. G. W. M.

Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 4.—Onondaga County, incomplete, gives 350 for Hanford and 400 for DeLeon. H.

In 1900 the Social Democratic Party had 352 votes by the complete and official count in Onondaga County, and the S. L. P. had 1,135.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Fifty-three city districts give 302 for Hanford and 297 for DeLeon. Two districts outside the city give Hanford 28 and DeLeon 25.

These fifty-five idstricts in 1900 gave us 313 votes, with 907 for the S. L. P.

Twelve city districts and sixty-eight outside, which are yet to be heard from, gave 29 for us two years ago and 228 for the S. L. P.

It appears that Onondaga County will show a loss of over 700 for the S. L. P., with a probable slight gain for the Social Democratic Party. E. B. S.

Buffalo

BUFFALO, Nov. 4.—Districts which last year gave the Social Democratic Party 125 votes give us 229 this year. The same districts gave the S. L. P. 190 last year and now give 390 for that party. W. W. A.

BUFFALO, Nov. 5.—Forty of the hundred and eight election districts of the city of Buffalo give 252 for the Social Democratic Party and 376 for the S. L. P.

In 1900 the whole city gave 376 for the Social Democratic Party and 877 for the S. L. P.

Erie County, outside the city, in 1900, gave 25 for us and 70 for the S. L. P. E. C. F.

The S. L. P. paper prints a Buffalo dispatch to the effect that eighty-seven election districts, which gave the S. L. P. 575 votes last year, now give 904 for that party, and that the total S. L. P. vote there will reach a thousand.

Westchester County.

PEEKSKILL, Nov. 4.—In five of the eight districts we have 85 straight Social Democratic votes in Peekskill and 30 for Hanford on split tickets—total, 115. DeLeon has 32 straight and 17 on splits—total, 49.

In 1900 Westchester County gave 258 votes for the Social Democratic candidate for Governor and 416 for the S. L. P. candidate. Returns from some points in the county show a large gain for the Social Democratic Party.

NEW ROCHELLE, Nov. 4.—Hanford has 227 votes here; DeLeon, 27. Two years ago, we had 63. Last year we had 37 and the S. L. P. had 10.

YONKERS, Nov. 4.—With eight districts missing, Hanford has 82 votes here. Last year we had 51.

MOUNT VERNON, Nov. 4.—This place gives 105 for Hanford and 55 for DeLeon. Last year the Social Democratic Party had 40 and the S. L. P. 15. J. B.

TROY, Nov. 4.—Thirty-nine out of the fifty-four election districts in Troy give Hanford 178 votes, with 266 for DeLeon. W. N.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Green Island gives us 28 votes and the S. L. P. 35; Watervliet, 20 for the Social Democratic Party and 37 for the S. L. P.

Two years ago the whole of Rensselaer County, including Troy, gave 103 votes for the Social Democratic Party and 229 for the S. L. P.

FORT EDWARD, Nov. 5.—Fort Edward and Sandy Hill give 108 votes for Hanford and 37 for DeLeon.

In 1900 the whole of Washington County gave 24 for the Social Democratic Party and 21 for the S. L. P. H. C.

JOHNSTOWN, Nov. 4.—Hanford has 268 votes here, as against 78 in 1900. DeLeon has 65, as against 61 in 1900. The whole county (Fulton) gave us 111 two years ago. H. J.

PORT CHESTER, Nov. 5.—Hanford has 49, DeLeon 16.

SPARKILL, Nov. 5.—Hanford has 4; DeLeon, 2; last year, S. D. P. one.

WOODSIDE, L. I., Nov. 5.—Hanford has 48 here and DeLeon has 5.

PORT JERVIS, Nov. 4.—We have 59 votes for Hanford and DeLeon has 95. H. H.

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 4.—Hanford has 24 here; DeLeon has 20.

In 1900 the whole of Orange County, in which Port Jervis and Middletown are situated, gave 28 votes for the Social Democratic Party and 77 for the S. L. P.

ONEIDA, Nov. 4.—Hanford has 47; DeLeon, 9.

In 1900 Madison County gave 69 for the Social Democratic Party and 49 for the S. L. P.

SCHENECTADY, Nov. 4.—The Social Democratic Party gets 131 votes here and the S. L. P. gets 237.

In 1900, Schenectady County gave 30 votes for the Social Democratic Party and 247 for the S. L. P.

TICONDEROGA, Nov. 4.—Hanford's vote here is 60 and DeLeon's is 15.

In 1900, Essex County gave 44 votes for the Social Democratic Party and 12 for the S. L. P.

GLOVERSVILLE, Nov. 4.—In Gloversville Hanford has 156 votes; De Leon has 82.

Two years ago the Social Democratic Party had 111 votes in Fulton County and the S. L. P. had 186.

HORNELLSVILLE, Nov. 4.—Hanford has 28; DeLeon, 12.

Steuben County, two years ago, gave 47 for the Social Democratic Party and 51 for the S. L. P.

CATSKILL, Nov. 5.—Incomplete returns for Catskill, Kiskaton, Leeds, and Coxsackie show 68 for Hanford and 12 for DeLeon. Two years ago Greene County gave 27 for the Social Democratic Party and 82 for the S. L. P.

FRANKFORT, Nov. 5.—Two of the three districts give 72 for Hanford and 04 for DeLeon.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 5.—This place gives 14 for Hanford and 2 for DeLeon.

ILION, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Last year the two Socialist parties together had 37 votes. To-day the Social Democratic Party polls 88 and the S. L. P. 39.

MASSACHUSETTS' VOTE.

Report of Progress in the State Where We Won Our First Victories.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—Incomplete returns indicate that the Socialist Party may poll 35,000 votes for Chase for Governor. Last year we had 10,551. The increase is general all over the state, the vote in some places being four times that of last year.

Carey and MacCartney are re-elected and Ramsden is sent from the Campello district in Brockton to join them in the Legislature.

Twenty-two towns and eleven cities outside of Boston, which, in 1901, gave 4,074 votes for Wrenn, our candidate for Governor, give Chase 11,955 this year.

Thirty-one precincts of Boston which gave us 281 last year give 1,807 this time. One hundred and sixteen precincts are yet to be heard from.

Brockton gives over 2,000, against 887 last year.

Haverhill gains 500.

Lynn increases from 272 to 970.

Chelsea advances from 117 to 633.

Fitchburg rises from 328 to 853.

RESULTS OF THE ELECTION.

Comment on the Socialist vote is unnecessary. It would almost be impertinent. The figures tell their own story. Baer and Quay and Platt and and Crane will understand it, perhaps, as well as the miners of Pennsylvania, the teamsters of Boston, the trolley workers of New York.

The results of the election as regards the two old parties, however, will bear some comment.

The Democratic politicians and editors—and even some of the "independents" and the weak-kneed Republicans—are talking of the result as a rebuke and a qualified defeat for the Republican party at the hands of a "regenerated" Democracy.

It is nothing of the sort.

It would, indeed, have been surprising had the Republicans lost less or the Democrats gained less—whether in the country at large or in New York City.

Look over the election records of the last thirty years and you will find that the victory of either party in a presidential election is almost invariably followed by a reaction in favor of the other party at the next congressional election. The reasons of this are not far to seek. But it is not necessary to recount them here. We merely refer to the indisputable fact.

It might reasonably have been expected that the Democrats, simply through the force of this ordinary reaction, would carry several important Republican states and would nearly if not entirely wipe out the Republican majority in Congress.

That they did not succeed in doing this constitutes a defeat for the Democrats. It is quite proper that Grover Cleveland's letter should sound more like a dirge than a rallying-cry.

As for this city: Look over the election records from time immemorial and you will find that a "reform" administration never gets a second term, that one year of such an administration almost invariably results in restoring the old Tammany majority. This is the natural consequence of the impotence and insincerity of capitalist reform—as dishonest as Tammany and far less efficient, because less in touch with the masses of the people.

That Coler carried the city by so large a majority is the normal result of the fact that Low is Mayor, that Jerome is District Attorney, and that Partridge is Police Commissioner. That Coler failed to carry the state is another defeat for the Democratic party.

The defeat of Tom L. Johnson is yet another distinct defeat for the Democratic party. Of Johnson it may be said, as of Roosevelt; but with even greater truth, that he is not brave or wise enough to succeed in honest politics and not mean enough to succeed in dishonest politics. He was too manly to avoid making enemies of the Hills and Crokers of his party in Ohio; but he was incapable of adopting an attitude that would command the respect and confidence of the workingmen of the state.

The simple fact is that the Democratic party is making the hopeless attempt to ride two horses, to serve God and the Mammon of Unrighteousness at once, to be at the same time on both sides of the now unbridgeable and widening chasm between the working class and the capitalist class. That chasm yawns for all compromisers—for sincere harmonists as well as for cowardly equivocaters; it has swallowed little men like Coler and big men like Johnson; it has swallowed Bryan and it will swallow Hearst far more easily.

In a word, the Democratic party is played out. It has no principles, no program, no conception of the issues of the day, no reason for existence. It cannot regain its vitality except by ceasing to be the Democratic party—by breaking with Bryanism as well as with Clevelandism—and this it cannot do.

Mark Hanna rightly said, almost two years ago, that Socialism, not Democracy, is the enemy the Republican party has to fight and to fear.

The question is: Are you for Mark Hanna or for Socialism?

If you are for Socialism, take note that there is much to be done between now and 1904. There are city elections in nearly all states this December and next spring and many state and legislative elections next fall and then more city elections. If we have a quarter of a million votes now, we have a year and a half in which to raise the figure to at least half a million, before we enter the national campaign.

This means work for YOU.

The day of the final battle draws near.

Are YOU doing YOUR part?

THE LATEST FROM PENNSYLVANIA

As we go to the press comes this news:

Five mining counties that gave Debs 699 give Slayton 7758, incomplete.

Sixteen counties that gave Debs 2908 give Slayton 15,816.

Socialist Party vote will reach 20,000.

Rockland gave 155 a year ago and now gives 483.

Plymouth had 42 and now has 216.

Springfield gives 1,167 instead of 522.

Chicopee raises its last year's poll of 161 to 412.

Everett, heretofore an S. L. P. stronghold, increases its Socialist Party vote from 45 to 273.

The S. L. P. disruptionists pretty nearly disappear. Their candidate, Berry, polls but 50 votes in Haverhill, as against 159 a year ago. W. M.

Brockton.

BROCKTON, Mass., Nov. 4.—Wallace C. Ransden is elected to the Legislature on the ticket of the Socialist Party from the Ninth Plymouth District (Campello.) Chase's vote here is about 2,000; last year we had 885. T. C. S.

Haverhill.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Nov. 4.—This city gives Bates, Republican candidate for Governor, 2,865 votes; Chase, Socialist, 1,630; Gaston, Democrat, 1,258; Berry, S. L. P., 50.

Last year the Republicans had 2,972; we had 1,149; the Democrats, 860; the S. L. P., 159.

For Congress, this year, the Republican candidate wins with 2,674; the Democrat got 1,659; the Socialist, Littlefield, 1,276.

For Legislature, Third Essex District, the vote stands: Republican, 1,057; Keene, Socialist, 418; Democrat, 324.

The Fourth gives: Republican, 762; Democrat, 348; Strayton, Socialist, 276.

The Fifth: Carey, Socialist, 811; Republican, 714; Democrat, 85.

The Ninth: Republican, 924; Democrat, 540; Spofford, Socialist, 207.

For Senator in the Fourth Essex District, the Republican candidate has 2,694; Bellefeuille, Socialist, 1,470; the Democrat, 991. G. A. K.

Rockland.

ROCKLAND, Mass., Nov. 4.—MacCartney is re-elected to the Legislature in the Fourth Plymouth District, with 974 votes; Bradbury, Republican, has 493; Mansfield, Democrat, 84.

Rockland gives Chase 543, with 717 for Bates and 282 for Gaston. J. A. B.

Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 4.—Complete returns here give Chase, Socialist candidate for Governor, 859 votes; Berry, S. L. P., has 216. Last year we had 200 and the S. L. P. had 310. C. E. F.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Returns from two hundred and ninety-one cities and towns show 32,105 votes for Chase, Socialist candidate for Governor. The S. L. P. has 5,241 in the same places.

Our senatorial candidates in the Brockton and Rockland districts carried those cities and needed only a little more in the rural parts of the districts to elect them.

Boston gives Chase 8,142, as against 1,281 last year. Berry lost 200 votes in Boston.

Capitalist politicians are staggered. Indeed, the large vote of the Socialist Party has caused a sensation all over the state. W. M.

The Boston "Globe" is full of expressions of surprise at the size of the Socialist party vote. We condense some of the reports given:

Brockton—Ransden elected to legislature by plurality of 210 in a previously strong Republican district; Beals, for Senator, carried the city, though not the whole district; Chase polled 2,105 out of the 6,654 votes for Governor; Skinner, for Congress, polled 2,221; McKendrick, Sullivan, and Brodeur, legislative candidates, polled heavy votes.

Lynn—Chase got 1,031, against 250 last year; Turner, for Congress, polled 914.

Chelsea—"A surprising feature was the large vote which the Socialist candidate for Governor received, 633."

Everett—"Socialist gains were enormous. Chase has 10 per cent. of the vote."

Quincy—"One of the surprising features was the high vote cast for Levi H. Turner, Socialist candidate for Representative. Mr. Turner had a total of 853—a gain of 606 over the highest Socialist representative vote of last year."

Boston's Gain.

Chase ran well in every ward of Boston, his vote ranging from 92 in the Eleventh to 611 in the Fourteenth, and his total for the city reaching 8,442.

In an interview given to the Boston papers on election night Chase said, in part:

"At this time it is safe to say that our vote for Governor will reach close to 40,000, as against 8,860 last year. At the beginning of this campaign I predicted a vote of 30,000, later in the campaign I increased my estimate to 40,000. This gain is something that all Socialists may well feel proud over.

"We have been at a great disadvantage in our campaign in not having any newspapers to give publicity to our meetings, which in every instance nearly have been large and enthusiastic. If our meetings had received the same publicity as did the meetings of

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

It was worth working for, wasn't it?

It is the irony of fate that Coler should have come so near carrying the state on the strength of the one plank he so pusillanimously disavowed.

This campaign is over. Another is coming. Let us have our daily paper in the field before the active campaign opens. We shall need it.

AS TO OUR FUTURE WORK.

Elsewhere in this paper we print the reports of John C. Chase, until recently Lecturer for the Labor Lecture Bureau of the National Committee, and Fred. J. Spring, who has just resigned his position as State Organizer for the Social Democratic Party of New York. We commend these two reports to the attention of all party members, for they deal with questions of the utmost importance.

The Worker is heartily in accord with Comrade Chase in believing that the work of the Labor Lecture Bureau should be continued and that it should be extended as fast as possible.

We can see but one reason for desiring to suspend this work, and that is a motive which we should not like to attribute to any comrade—namely, a desire to weaken the national organization of the party by depriving it of its most useful functions.

On the other hand, we can see many reasons for continuing the work.

The trade unions are becoming permeated with vaguely socialistic sentiment, tending toward independent labor politics and public ownership. But many dangers lie in their road. The knowledge and experience of the Socialist Party can be of immense service in clarifying their ideas, avoiding the dangers, and directing their forces into the easiest and surest paths to the attainment of our common end. The experience of Chase's tour in the West, and with as much other experience in all parts of the country, prove that the unions are becoming ready and eager to hear our speakers. It will therefore be our own fault if they err for lack of our fraternal counsel.

In the strongly organized states the local forces of the party may suffice to meet this demand for Socialist propaganda within the unions. In the states where the party organization is new and weak, where the comrades themselves are lacking in experience, it is absolutely necessary that aid should be given by the national organization. As it happens, it is in these very states that the most rapid growth of Socialist sentiment is taking place and therefore it is here that the opportunity and the danger and our responsibility is greatest.

Whatever may be the opinion of the comrades about the authority to be vested in the National Committee, it seems to us that there should be no question as to the continuance and the extension of the work of the Labor Lecture Bureau. We should have, not one, but at least three or four men constantly in the field addressing meetings arranged by the unions, speaking from the Socialist standpoint on matters of immediate interest to the unionists. In no way can the national committee do better service for the cause, and the comrade who is afraid to trust it with this function can surely have but little faith in the stability or the intelligence of the movement.

Turning to Comrade Spring's report, we need only say that the recommendations which he makes are of the most practicable sort, that they involve comparatively small expense, and that they promise great and lasting results.

It is important that we have a vigorous campaign for three months before each election. But in order that such a campaign shall be really effective, it is absolutely necessary that we carry on a systematic campaign of education all through the year.

It is significant that the "American" (late the "Journal") is now singing the praises of Murphy, the man who so exactly fills Croker's shoes. It is also significant that this same alleged workingmen's newspaper, in printing, the night before election, a partial facsimile of the ballot, for the instruction of voters, included the ticket of the "union-smashing" S. L. P. and drew the line there, omitting the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, the only one headed by a union workingman.

The experience of the miners' strike proved the need of a Socialist daily. The Socialist papers were the only ones that told the truth in their news columns and advocated the cause of the miners editorially. But a few Socialist weekly papers are no match for the capitalist dailies. More strikes are coming. The sooner our daily is started, the better for the working class.

The "respectable" papers say that Coler and Tom L. Johnson were defeated because of their leanings toward Socialism. They do not try to reconcile this claim with the fact that the real Socialist vote is enormously increased; it is easier to suppress that fact. The real explanation of the failure of Democratic politicians to win on semi-socialistic planks is that the workingmen are learning to distrust the sincerity of capitalist politicians posing as "friends of labor."

THE CALIFORNIA SITUATION.

We print in this issue of The Worker, a statement of the main facts in the California affair, with arguments on both sides by Comrades Appel and Harriman of that state.

There are undoubtedly many supplementary facts to be brought out, and we shall, so far as space will allow, welcome brief and pointed communications on the subject.

Writing on the day before election, we have no hesitation in expressing our opinion, the opinion we have held from the first, that the California comrades have made a very grave mistake. Nor do we think that any election news from that state, however favorable it may be, will alter our opinion.

Granting to the utmost that the Union Labor Party of California is a genuine labor party, inspired and controlled wholly by working-class thought and feeling (which seems to us far from sure) still we are opposed to fusion.

If the union men are Socialists, the Socialist Party welcomes them to its ranks with open arms. It offers them the fullest opportunity to participate in all its councils, to take an equal part with the older comrades in choosing its candidates and in directing its campaigns. What more can a Socialist workingman desire?

If they are not Socialists, but are acting only under the influence of vague and unenlightened discontent, then why shall we give up our place in the field to them?

We agree in hoping and believing that these unionists will become Socialists. We wish to help them on in that direction. But the way to do that is not for us to go over to their lines, but for us to hold high the standard of Socialism and advance it by the most strenuous efforts, making it a rallying center around which the very force of circumstances will surely force them to align themselves.

Granting even that no harm has been done in this single case, it must be remembered that this sets up a precedent and that precedents are notoriously elastic. If in California, why not in Connecticut or in New Jersey or elsewhere? Will anyone tell us where we are to stop?

Had The Worker had any intimation of what was likely to happen before the decision was made, we should have raised a warning at once—regardless whether or not the California comrades were in the mood to hear it. We had no such intimation. It therefore seemed best to leave the whole discussion to a time when, the campaign being over, the comrades of the whole country would have time to consider the matter. We now invite a most careful consideration of the question involved. We are confident that the Socialists of California will learn by experience that their present course is a mistake. But experience is a hard teacher; if forethought can take its place, much time and trouble will be saved to the movement.

The amount of important matter of all sorts that has got crowded out of the columns of The Worker during this campaign convinces the editors that we simply must have that daily before the next campaign begins.

It will be remembered that, a few weeks ago, when Secretary of the Treasury Shaw took such extraordinary measures to "relieve the money market," it was quite openly and unblushingly admitted that advance information of his intention was given out to certain favored bankers, who were able to guide their speculations accordingly and were loud in his praise when the public announcement of his plans was made. Now comes an apparently well-founded report that the decision to be rendered by Vice-Chancellor Emery in the Steel Trust stock-conversion suit was known a fortnight in advance to some of the parties in the cause. These are examples of the business integrity, and public honor, and judicial impartiality on the ground of which the capitalists claim the respect of the working class.

How soon we shall have our daily depends on how soon we can raise the necessary funds. Hurry up with the fifty thousand dollars.

The good old respectable "Evening Post" is shocked at the action of the Plasterers' Union in demanding that the foreman of a job shall be "responsible, not to his employer and paymaster, but to the body which has made him a foreman"—the "Post," of course, forgets to add, "and whose labor creates the employer's profits." It is too bad, indeed. Maybe Mayor Low, who is said to own stock in the New York Evening Post Company, will lend the kind-hearted employers and paymasters his aid in the shape of policemen's clubs, to teach these presumptuous plasterers to "know their place," just as Mayor Van Wyck did for the cigar manufacturers.

From the press dispatches describing the visit of the Arbitration Commissioners to the Manville mine, owned by the D. & H. and the D., L. & W. companies, we take this suggestive bit:

"The commissioners inspected three breasts and were in the mine two hours and a half. The first breast was 2,200 feet from the foot of the shaft, and the commissioners had to walk along in a stooping position, owing to the low roof. It was extremely tiresome for those unaccustomed to the mine.

"At the face of the breast a miner and his helper were found. Some of the commissioners plied the two men with all sorts of questions. The miner said he was able to get out four or five cars a day; told how much he made, and gave other information to the commissioners.

"Judge Gray was so fatigued by walking in a bent-over position for an hour that he decided to go to the surface. He was hoisted to the top with Bishop Spalding."

"It was extremely tiresome for those unaccustomed to the mine." The miners are used to that sort of thing and presumably they find it refreshing to work there ten hours a day. But it was really cruel to require such well-paid gentlemen as Judge Gray and Bishop Spalding to stand there for two hours, tormented by visions of their own comfortable homes and offices. Wicked Mr. Mitchell, to require such sacrifices of the eminent gentlemen.

LOCOMOTIVE MANUFACTURE.

Locomotive building is one of the few branches of manufacture in which average wages increased during the ten years from 1890 to 1900. Nor was the increase even here a very large one, notwithstanding the great amount of skill required in such work.

According to Census Bulletin No. 243, the number of wage-workers in the establishments devoted exclusively to locomotive-building increased from 15,670 in 1890 to 19,039 in 1900—a gain of 21.4 per cent. Their total yearly wages increased from $8,697,488 to $10,899,614—a gain of 25.3 per cent. In other words, in 1890 the average yearly wage was $554.75, and in 1900 it had risen to $572.50.

The number of salaried officials, clerks, etc.—including proprietors and firm members on the payroll—rose from 317 to 763 and the total of salaries from $381,654 to $902,196; so that the average salary of these employees rose from $1,204 to $1,226.

In 1900 there were only 27 children employed in these shops; but in 1900 the number of children in the 28 shops had risen to 214.

—You can't spend a dollar better than by sending it to this office along with the names and addresses of ten non-Socialist workingmen. Three months reading of The Worker will probably convert all of them.

OUR OPPORTUNITY AND OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

By Franklin H. Wentworth.

(Part of a speech at a mass meeting of the Socialist Party, Handel Hall, Chicago, Friday, Oct. 21.)

"The present," says Leibnitz, "is the child of the past—the parent of the future."

All we have to-day is the product of yesterday; and in the seed which we plant to-day lies enfolded the blossom of to-morrow.

Life is progress; and to arrest progress is to die.

"To let well enough alone"—that is the philosophy of death, for unless to-day is better than yesterday, to-morrow will be worse than to-day.

Whenever in any epoch, the energies of the people are expended in preserving the present, the worm of decay has already eaten out the heart of that epoch, and progress must then spring from a new tap-root.

The present social epoch is dying.

All the powerful forces of the church and state, all the established organs of public education and opinion are to-day at work trying to perpetuate a social system that is rotten to the core.

Instead of laying a foundation broad and deep, the foundation of a structure that shall shelter the millions of the future, the great forces of society are to-day frantically propping an outworn temple that must in a few years fall crashing into hopeless ruin.

The rarest virtue ever given to man is the ability to judge his own epoch; the ability to see in the midst of the splendor of social and industrial achievement that true progress may have been arrested, and that the beginning of the end may have come. To recognize and understand the great social forces and their import, one must have a social faith; a point of vantage at which, as in the shadow of a wall, he may stand out of the heat and dust for an instant, and observe the tides of humanity, free from the domination of their ebb and flow.

The Socialist has this point of vantage; he has a standard of judgment; he reads history with a purpose, as it should be read—merely to throw light upon the problems of the present.

Those who are in authority in the American nation to-day are the helpless creatures of an environment they cannot read, of social forces they do not understand. Like a rudderless ship, the great republic is drifting, the plaything of every wind and tide. Fear is in every heart; and it is the fear of the unknown, an unreasoning fear, like the fear of the animal before the rumblings of a gathering storm.

We see the Secretary of the Treasury in an unreasoning panic rushing to the relief of the stock gamblers and exploiters of the people, with the people's money, taken from their pockets by taxation.

We see a nation of eighty millions standing helpless in the insolent presence of a dozen men who deny it the privilege of keeping warm with its own coal.

We see a president lauded with abject and fulsome praise—for doing what? What is this act of mighty courage that challenges the admiration of the nation?

The President has asked the miners to go back to work!

Ah, brave hero! Rival of Spartacus, of the Gracchi, of all the mighty ones of history!

Where are our standards of judgment that we shriek a maudlin praise of such a puny act? Courage? Heroism? If such an act be heroism, then I ask you, What is cowardice?

Where is the initiative, where is the constructive statesmanship that is to build the nation's future?

Is it statesmanship to avert for to-day a tempest that must break to-morrow? Is it statesmanship that patches up a petty truce over the pitfall of a crying wrong?

In the vaporings of futile joy that to-day declare the coal strike ended, I make the counter declaration that it is not ended, that it is just beginning. The great world-giant Labor is but testing his muscle. The coal strike was but a trial of strength, full of portent for the future. The real battle has not yet begun. To-day's struggle for a pittance is to pave the way for to-morrow's struggle for a portion; and to-morrow's struggle, once begun, will never cease until the toilers of the world shall gain their own.

Deep down in the heart of things a new life is growing; a life virile and purposeful; a life that shall rend our rotten civilization as the oak-root splits the rock, and blossom into beauty.

Will this growth be arrested because the creatures of the present are too gross and dull to detect it?

Stories have come to us of the luxury of Newport; of the reckless gambling at Saratoga; of social debauchery of a lower type than ever degraded any court of Europe.

The same careless and profligate waste of the sources of the common life, the same fool feeling of "after us the deluge," which marked a certain celebrated period of France, sits grinning above the social boilers to-day.

But the strong hand of Labor is slowly reaching upward from the mire; its fingers are closing about the controlling lever; it has learned the hidden secrets of forced draught, and the great social engines are throbbing a dithyrambic hymn of freedom.

No longer shall youth be stunted and starved. No longer shall little children be denied the joy and innocence of life's morning. The day of the united peoples is dawning.

We who are not blinded by the sophistries of the present must build the highroad to the future. It is a task for manhood. It is a task for the pure in heart.

We must keep the Socialist movement clean and united and above all reproach, to do this mighty work. Our thoughts must be high; our hearts must be pure; our lives as open as the day.

Upon the Socialist movement hangs the sole present hope of human liberty. And everywhere the cause is growing. It is no longer confined to one nation alone. It is as wide as the world. In far-off Japan it is lifting up the hearts of men; in darkest Russia it is sustaining the serf in his dungeon; throughout continental Europe everywhere the peasant reads with glad, hopeful eyes the message of the dawn. At last, at last the brotherhood of man! In the hovels and huts of the poor you will find to-day the writings of Marx and Engels and Tolstoy and Kropotkin. The peasant begins to think; the man with the hoe is lifting up his head; he hears the voices of to-morrow, and "a thinking peasant makes a quaking throne."

As the movement grows, so will grow the responsibilities of its leaders. The movement can never be crushed by enemies without. We need not fear the aimless, purposeless, futile warfare of dying capitalism. No one can destroy us but ourselves. Then let us watch and ward. Let us develop individual characters that shall shine through the social night, for it is not what we profess that will win the peoples to our standard; it is what we are. Let us aim so to live that the word Socialist shall stand for all that is noble, all that is pure, all that is virtuous and righteous in our present life.

Thus alone shall we earn the right to mold the future.

THE BUILDER SINGS.

BY HORACE TRAUBEL.

Do not denounce the enemy. Explain the enemy. Do not admit you have any enemies. State yourself. State yourself again. And still state yourself. Finally the deafest ear will hear. You do not need to use vituperation. Vituperation is a weapon that kicks. What you must use is plain talk. You must convince even the man who imagines he is your enemy that what you propose doing is as much for his good as yours. Any other confession avould be anti-social.

We should be so busy loving we have no time for hate. We are going to take man at his best. We will not consider man at his worst. And man at his best is capable of any sacrifice and any achievement. Do you think I believe that man delights in doing mean things? Man does mean things because he is forced to do them. Let man alone, give man but half a chance, and he will dazzle you with the magnificence of his success. But if you have a dirt opinion of a man he will do all he can to justify it.

The most potent war is peace. No; apology. Not weakness. But that generic confidence which dares to be just. For it is out of the stubbornest opposition that order will finally emerge. And justice is order. You know how little less than chaotic is a social situation which leaves so many to the chance episodes of the seasons. This chaos cannot be perpetuated. We will get rid of it. The soul demands order. Order. Order. Always order. Thievery is not order. Only integrity is order. And we to-day largely subsist by thievery. And a state supported largely by thievery cannot last. Nor can an income half bond and half free be fixed. And yet, though we will twist the crooked back to the straight, we do not propose to hate that incident of history which has warped the general will. We will sing at our work. We will repair that which was broken. We will rebuild that which was thrown down. But we will not hate the destroyer. We will sing as we build.

And build we will. The children cry to us, and we build. The old men and women cry to us, and we build. And the middle-aged cry to us and we build. We take all incomes away in the interest of income. We see all private fortune lapse into a general fund. That is because we build. For out of the imperfect we will build the perfect. And out of a race of men and women and children maimed and half done we will build a race of men and women and children unmarred and complete.

But we will always sing. For the workman who sings can work as no other workman can work. And, though the hand of the tyrant is heavy, we will not admit that it crushes our soul. And no blow given us will be returned. We will only love and build. And even the lash of the master will be used in the interest of the fairer world of our sacrifice. For we are builders who build not alone of good but also of evil. For we who build will not concede that there is any material too stubborn to be turned to the uses of our ideal.

I am assailed and bleeding. And yet I do not resent assault and am willing to give my blood. For I am so intent on the big achievement ahead that I am not worried by the little deterrents around. The beautiful prospect allures me. The rehabilitated bodies allures me. The happier faces allure me. The good earth cleansed allures me.

I see no man now hurrying to do his own work. I see every man hurrying to do some other man service. I see a world in which the only errands are those of succor. I see a world in which the lips of man have ceased to speak of property. I see a world in which the farcical economics now celebrated in the orthodoxies of culture have given place to the simple doctrine of universal ownership.

And this consummation is so surely to be expected I can afford to wait to have it come and can afford to sing as I wait. It is not the man with the ideal who needs to rant and swear and suspect. It is the man who sees only the alien present who may rant and swear and suspect. For we live in a world in which we cannot be at home. But we are to make this empty world full. For a world full of homeless people is of all worlds emptiest. But when we have accomplished our miracle earth will be home enough for all. And that miracle we will effect. For the builder is building his home. And the builder sings as he builds.

LEAVES FROM A READER'S NOTEBOOK.

I. Webster's Tragedy and Its Lesson for Socialists.

I have been reading Henry Cabot Lodge's little life of Daniel Webster—and wishing, incidentally, that Mr. Lodge, who knows something about history and can write very clearly and judiciously on such subjects, had kept to the strait and narrow path of literature, instead of becoming a sycophantic politician and illustrating in his own person some of the very public vices that he can so well discern in the subjects of his biographical studies. But this by the way. It is the tragedy of Webster's life, not of Lodge's, that I had in mind in beginning this note.

Doubtless there has not been in American history one figure more heroic, at first sight, than that of Daniel Webster. Endowed by birth with every physical and intellectual quality needful to the orator and man of high public affairs, cast by fortune into such circumstances as called into action all his great abilities, his friends and enemies alike, as Lodge remarks, constantly and spontaneously applied to him the name of "giant," as the only one that fitted his massive and overpowering genius. Admittedly pre-eminent as an orator, whether before bench or jury or senate or public assembly, whether dealing with strictly political or with strictly legal or, best of all, with large constitutional questions, worshipped rather than loved by his followers and regarded with a wondering admiration that stifled even justifiable animosity in his opponents, had Webster died but three years earlier, he would, notwithstanding the disappointment of his presidential aspirations in 1848, have been counted forever among the most fortunate and successful and perhaps as the most distinguished of the public men of the century in this republic.

Yet this man's biographers, even those whose political opinions and practises most incline them to be lenient to him, have now to write of him in a tone of apology. This man lived to hear that New England whose very life had once lived in him re-echo Whittier's terrible dirge—

So fallen! so lost! the light withdrawn
Which once he wore!
The glory from his gray hairs gone
Forevermore!

Revile him not—the Tempter hath
A snare for all;
And pitying tears, not scorn and wrath,
Befit his fall!
Oh, dumb be passion's stormy rage,
When he who might
Have lighted up and led his age
Falls back in night.

Let not the land once proud of him
Insult him now,
Nor brand with deeper shame his dim
Dishonored brow.

Of all we loved and honored, naught
Save power remains,—
A fallen angel's pride of thought,
Still strong in chains.
All else is gone; from those great eyes
The soul is fled:
When faith is lost, when honor dies,
The man is dead!

Pitying tears from those whose voices, not much given to loud praise, had through long years applauded him as almost more than human—to no man could such an end have been more bitter than to Daniel Webster.

It seems to me that this tragedy has in it a great lesson, not for public men so much as for the public that makes and follows these men.

The secret of Webster's moral degeneration, from petty personal jealousies and from a laxity in money affairs that left him open to the charge (no doubt an unjust one) of actual bribery, on to that final treason to his followers, himself, and the very cause he had so far supported—the explanation of it all must, I think, be found, not in any weakness peculiar to the man, but in the extreme, unreasoning, blind, fanatical worship paid to him by his political followers. Truly, the land once proud of him had no right to indulge itself in scorn and wrath when he betrayed its cause.

New England had made him its spokesman. It had gone on and made him its leader and its hero. It had forgotten that he was its servant. Its pride in his power had left no room for doubt of his fidelity or of his infallible wisdom. It had ceased to give him a mandate and had given him instead a blank commission. What wonder if, when New England failed to remember that he was its creature and its chosen servant, he should come all unconsciously to dream that he was its appointed master?

Webster is not the only, though, perhaps, he is the most striking example to be found in our American history, of this moral decay, this growth of arrogance, this utter forgetfulness of earlier ideals, arising from the possession of irresponsible power of whatever sort. The students of mental disease have explained to us what they call "the insanity of power," and two of our keenest observers of human nature—Nathaniel Hawthorne and Dr. Holmes—have shown us how fearfully dangerous a thing it is for any man to be withdrawn from and especially to be lifted above the current of the common thought.

For Socialists, especially, there is a grave lesson to be drawn from the contemplation of such magnificent lives reduced to ruin—for Socialist leaders, now and in the future, and still more emphatically for us of the rank and file.

We owe a duty to our leaders. If one rises among us gifted with eloquence of tongue or pen, with keenness of insight, personal magnetism, and power of persuasion above the ordinary, we are tempted, far more than those of other parties, to give him implicit faith and excessive adulation. I do not say that we are more likely to yield to the temptation; we are not, because our philosophy and the very instinct of our class go far to guard us against it. Yet the temptation is with us especially strong, in that it wears a mask of reason and of duty. We know that the Socialist movement has no pecuniary rewards nor even—for the present, at least—any popular honors to offer to its great men at all comparable to those by which the enemy will seek to seduce them; we have a right, therefore, to assume perfect sincerity in any man of high ability who gives his allegiance to our cause. The temptation to worship our leaders, then, is a strong one, and it will grow stronger with the growth of the movement.

It is of this subtle temptation that we ought always, consciously to beware. We owe this duty to our leaders, to ourselves, and to the cause that is greater than they, greater than any or all of us—that we remember that they are but spokesmen and chosen leaders, that we watch them, not suspiciously, but with fraternal solicitude, that we neither forget nor let them forget that they are our comrades, raised up by our glad recognition of their merits, raised up to lead us, but by no means freed from the responsibility of leading us aright.

RAIN: A FABLE FROM THE CHINESE.

Reprinted from The Era.

The Son of Heaven, may his name outlast the universe! the Emperor, Li-O-A, stood by the window of his porcelain palace.

The rain fell. It poured in torrents. The heaven wept, the trees and flowers shed tears for it.

The Emperor's heart was very sad and he exclaimed:

"How bad for that man who has not even a hat in this rain!"

And turning to his chamberlain he said: "I should like to know how many such unfortunates there are in my Pekin?"

"Light of the Sun!" answered Tsung-He-Tsang, falling on his knees and bowing his head, "is anything impossible to the Sovereign of Sovereigns? By sunset, you will know, oh Father of the Dawn, what you wish!"

The Emperor smiled kindly and Tsung-He-Tsang hurried away as fast as he could to the Prime Minister, San-Che-San.

He came running up, scarcely drawing his breath, and in his hurry he did not have time to show all the honors which are due to the Prime Minister.

"The Universal Joy, our most gracious Emperor," he said breathlessly, "is greatly disturbed. Those people who go about without hats in our Pekin disturb him and he wants to know to-day how many there are!"

"There are such rascals!" answered San-Che-San, "and besides——"

He ordered Pi-He-Vo, the commander of the town, to be summoned.

"Bad news from the palace!" he said, when Pi-He-Vo bowed his head to the ground as a mark of attention—"the Master of our lives has noticed disorder!"

"What?" exclaimed Pi-He-Vo, with horror. "Is there not a beautiful shady garden which hides the palace from Pekin?"

"I don't know how it happened," answered San-Che-San, "but His Majesty is dreadfully disturbed over the scoundrels who are walking in the rain without hats. He wishes to know today how many such people there are in Pekin. Arrange this."

"Call that old dog, Jur-Sung, to me at once!" cried Pi-He-Vo, in a minute, to his subalterns.

And when the chief sentinel of the town, pale with horror and trembling, threw himself at his feet, the mandarin threw a perfect avalanche of curses at his head.

"Scoundrel, miscreant, base traitor! You want us all to be sawed in pieces along with you!"

"Explain the cause of your anger," said Jur-Sang, in a perfect shudder, at the mandarin's feet, "so that I may understand the comforting words you say to me. Otherwise I am afraid I do not understand the language of your wisdom."

"Old dog, who ought to look after a herd of swine, and not after the largest city in the world! The Sovereign of China himself noticed that there is disorder in the city—on the streets scoundrels are wandering about who, even in the rain, have not hats to put on. I give you till evening to let me know how many of them there are in Pekin!"

"Everything will be performed with exactitude," answered Jur-Sang, striking his forehead on the floor three times, and in the twinkling of an eye he had cried out and stamped with his feet for the sentinels, who were called together by the deafening sounds of a gong.

"Scoundrels, half of whom I shall hang so that the other half may roast upon live embers! How do you look after the city? People are going about in the rain without hats! See that in an hour all are caught who have not hats, even of reeds!"

The sentinels rushed off to fulfill the order, and in the course of an hour there was an actual hunt on the streets of Pekin.

"Hold! Seize him!" cried the sentinels, hunting the people who had no hats.

They dragged them from under the fences, from the gateways, from the houses, where they had taken refuge like rats, whom the cook pursues to make ragout of. And in one minute less than an hour all those who had no hats in Pekin stood in the courtyard of the prison.

"How many are there?" Jur-Sang asked.

"Twenty thousand eight hundred and seventy-one," the sentinels answered, bowing to the ground.

"Execute them!" Jur-Sang answered. And in half an hour 20,871 headless Chinamen lay in the courtyard of the prison.

And 20,871 heads were thrust on spears and carried through the town for the edification of the populace.

Jur-Sang went with his report to Pi-He-Vo. Pi-He-Vo went to San-Che-San. San-Che-San informed Tsung-He-Tsang.

The evening approached. The rain came to an end. A wind, springing up, shook the trees, and a shower of diamonds was scattered from the trees to the fragrant flowers which sparkled and glowed in the rays of the setting sun.

The whole garden was filled with brilliancy and fragrance and the Son of Heaven, Li-O-A, stood by the window of his porcelain palace admiring the wonderful picture. But, good and young as he was, he did not forget the unfortunate at that moment.

"By the way!" he said, turning to Tsung-He-Tsang, "you were to find out for me how many of the people of Pekin had not even hats to protect themselves in the time of rain?"

"The desire of the Master of the Universe has been carried out by his servants!" answered Tsung-He-Tsang with a low bow.

"How many are there? Be sure to tell me only the truth!"

"In all Pekin there is not one Chinaman who has not a hat to put on in time of rain. I swear that I am telling you the absolute truth!" And Tsung-He-Tsang raised his hands and bowed his head as a sign of a sacred oath.

The face of the kind Emperor was illumined by a happy, joyful smile.

"Happy city! Happy country!" he exclaimed, "and how happy am I that the nation thrives so under my sovereignty."

All in the palace were happy at the sight of the happy Emperor.

And San-Che-San, Pi-He-Vo and Jur-Sung received the Order of the Golden Dragon for their paternal care of the people.

THE POND AND FISHES: A FABLE.

Having introduced a Big Fish into his Pond, the Owner on his next visit was surprised to find most of the Little Fishes were gone.

"How's this?" he said to the Big Fish. "I guess you've eaten them."

"I have," was the reply, "but why do you Object? They were of excellent Flavor."

"You rascal," shouted the Man. "I'll take you out of this and put you in a Pond by yourself where you can do no harm."

At this the Big Fish made a great Outcry: "How dare you think of such a thing and what Compensation do you intend to give Me if you carry out your wicked Threat?"

"Compensation!" gasped the astonished Owner. "Why you've eaten most of the Little Fishes already."

"I was not speaking of them," said the Big Fish, "they are gone and cannot be recalled. Moreover I have already borne witness to their excellent Quality. I was thinking of Those I have not yet eaten."

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

"Twenty-five per cent. of all the manufacturing industry of the United States is now in the hands of the trusts" is the startling conclusion of Dr. I. M. Rubinow in an article on "How Much Have the Trusts Accomplished?" in the October number of the "International Socialist Review." He arrives at this conclusion after a most thorough analysis and careful compilation of the facts shown by the last census, and the whole article is one of the most valuable studies yet published on the trust question. The census facts on agriculture are analyzed by A. M. Simons with special reference to tenantry and agriculture, with a discussion of the actual methods of exploitation in agriculture. Geo. B. Leonard writes ably on "Government by Injunction," and "Marxist" replies to Julian's criticism under the head of "Mr. Hennessey's Philosophy." A poem by Isabel N. Wilder, "The Tenement Mother;" "A Correction," by Thomas J. Hagerty; a review of Kautsky's recent conclusions of the "Trade Crisis," by Austin Lewis, and "The Semi-Annual Report of the National Committee of the Socialist Party," make up the body of the "Review."

The departments of the World of Labor and Socialism Abroad give a survey of the political and economic movement of the workers in every land. The present favorable outlook for Socialism in the United States is summed up editorially, together with some criticisms of the report of the local quorum of the Socialist Party.

Ernest Howard Crosby, author of the popular novel "Captain Jenks, Hero," has written, in a very different strain, a song in defense of the striking coal miners, entitled "The Land of the Noonday Night." The first stanza is as follows:

We have eyes to see like yours
Way down in the deep, deep mine,
But there's nothing to mark but the dreadful dark
Where the sun can never shine.
On the banks of the clammy coal
Our lamps cast a flickering light
At the bottom drear of the moist black hole
In the land of the noonday night.

The song has been set to music by Eleanor Smith and is published by Chas. H. Kerr & Co., in regular sheet-music style at 30 cents, by mail or at the music stores.

The "Comrade" for November presents a brief note in memory of Emile Zola, by Leonard D. Abbott; "An Eavesdropper of Nature," by J. William Lloyd, in his usual charming, if not very satisfactory manner; "The Singer," a Russian revolutionary story, by Simon O. Pollock; a short article on the Belgian Socialist co-operative societies, by Emile Vinck; "How I Became a Socialist," by May Wood Simons; "The Daughter of a Revolutionist" (of John Brown), by W. A. Corey; besides poems by Ernest McGaffey, William R. Fox, F. Reile, and W. W. Atkinson, and other matter. Portraits of Zola and Vinck, and of Mrs. Simons, William T. Brown, and other "Socialist wothies," as well as a number of cartoons, are among the other attractions.

The November number of "Wilshire's Magazine" is, as usual, bright and up to date. Its leading features are some highly interesting interviews with three of the day's most talked of men—John Mitchell, Mark Hanna, and Tom Johnson. "Current Events" and the editor's experience as "An International Office Seeker" are written up with that combination of wit and philosophy which distinguishes Wilshire's writings. There is a "Study of the Trusts," by Joel Benton, and a discussion of "The Death and Renascence of the Democratic Party," by Charles Ferguson. J. Stitt Wilson gives "An Economic Exposition," and Daniel B. Strong writes convincingly on the "Effect of Competition in Wages." Rev. A. L. Byron-Curtis, in "Society and Religion," holds that society should be founded on the basis of the new commandment "that ye love one another." Literature and the drama receive attention in a criticism of Pinero's new play, "Iris," and a study of Walt Whitman by Louville H. Dyer, and "Art as Affected by Economics" is discussed ably by A. M. Simons. And to complete the round, Bernarr Macfadden describes some "Exercises for Physical Strength."

CLASS AND NATION.

The working class is the only class which is not a class. It is the nation. It represents, so to speak, the body as a whole, of which the other classes only represent special organs. These organs, no doubt, have great and indispensible functions, but for most purposes of government the state consists of the vast laboring majority. Its welfare depends upon what their lives are like.—Frederic Harrison.

Frederic Harrison was not far from the truth, yet his statement, which we see quoted in many exchanges, may be misleading. In the first place, the capitalist class, or its divisions, cannot be considered any longer as useful organs of the social body; they once had functions to perform, but now they have become mere parasitic appendages. Secondly, while it is true that the working class is the whole useful body of the nation, yet it must be remembered that the capitalist class still has the power through its ownership of the means of life and is in control of the state, and that, until our social system is changed, the workers remain a subordinate class.

THE SITUATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Relations of the Socialist Party and the Union Labor Party in San Francisco and Los Angeles—Important News for the Consideration of Party Members.

The Worker remarked, a few weeks ago, that as soon as the pressure of campaign work was over a number of internal party affairs would call for the attention of party members. Among these one of the most important is the situation in California.

Our readers in California have so far departed from the established policy of the party that they have entered into a virtual fusion with the Union Labor Party in that state. We present herewith a brief statement of the facts, together with a letter by Comrade Appel of San Francisco, first printed in the "Socialist" of Seattle, in opposition to the course adopted, and the greater part of an article by Comrade Harriman of Los Angeles, printed in the Los Angeles "Socialist," in advocacy of that course.

It will be remarked that in the San Francisco city election of 1901 a Union Labor Party appeared, which carried the city, electing as Mayor one Eugene Schmitz, a capitalist now, but formerly a workingman and still an honorary member of his union.

This success led to a pretty widespread desire among trade unionists that the U. L. P. should enter the present state campaign. But there seems to have been cosiderable divergence of opinion as to the exact course to be pursued—some desiring an independent Union Labor ticket, others believing that the unions should support the Socialist Party, and others leaning toward fusion with one or the other of the old parties.

The state convention or conference of unions to decide those matters was held at the same time and place with the state convention of the Socialist Party and a number of men were delegates in both bodies.

The result of the conference was a decision not to nominate an independent ticket, not to endorse Republican or Democratic candidates, but to support the ticket which the Socialist Party convention had, in the mean time, put up.

What followed, and what gives rise to this discussion, is that the Socialist Party, in San Francisco and Los Angeles, decided not to nominate local candidates, btu to give its support to the local tickets of the U. L. P.

Appel's Letter in Opposition.

So much for the barest statement of the facts. Against this action Comrade Appel wrote as follows:

"Dear Sir and Comrade:—The San Francisco Local Convention of the S. P., composed of delegates elected under the new primary law, met on Sunday, Sept. 21, at the Turk Street Temple. A motion was made 'that we now proceed to nominate a local ticket for assembly, state legislature, judiciary, etc.,' which was defeated by the opportunist element with a 21 to 19 vote.

"The burden of the argument that won the day was that the S. P. should not nominate a ticket in opposition to the Union Labor Party. That this party (with its capitalist or private ownership principle) should be aided by the S. P. in electing its local ticket and that it would in turn aid us in electing our state ticket. (They also tried this fusion game in the state convention regarding the Fourth and Fifth Congressional ticket, but we nominated our candidates in spite of them.)

"The opportunists, compromisers, and fusionists gained their point. This was the consummation of their political trade. The class-conscious comrades are up in arms against such high-handed action and treasonable conduct and as a result there is a strong sentiment of reaction setting in.

"Many of the comrades are beginning to realize that they were the dupes of the political traders ('cow-traders), as William Liebknecht called them in Germany). The opposition are quarreling among themselves and flying at each other's throats. And on the heels of this complaints are coming from the country throughout the state. The 'Advance' is rapidly losing ground. Notices are coming in to stop the paper and members are sending in their resignations from the party.

"The Union Labor Party has adopted a fusion policy by leaving vacancies on its ticket in favor of the Democratic party and by accepting endorsements at the hands of that party and by nominating certain men proposed by that party. It is simply the tail of the Democratic kite.

"A Democratic politician, upon being interviewed, spoke as follows: 'The Democrats realized that they were not strong enough to win out against the Republicans, so they proposed to the leaders of the Union Labor Party that if they would nominate certain men named by us, among which was one Livernash (a non-unionist and Democratic lawyer) for Congress in the Fourth District, the Democratic party would endorse those candidates.' (This program was subsequently carried out.) He continued further: 'With the help of the Union Labor Party the Democratic party will sweep the state.'

"Our movement in San Francisco has been completely demoralized since the advent of Walter Thomas Mills, who is a disintegrator of the most dangerous type. While it is true that he talks of the historical class struggle, he ignores the raging class struggle of to-day as the central point of Socialist propaganda by arguing that the proletariat must look to the plutocratic and middle class saviours for leaders. That the working class cannot free itself without the aid of the brains of the middle class and that the superior minds of the bourgeoisie are more to be trusted than proletarian leaders.

"To which the scientific Socialist replies that capitalists should not be allowed to shape the policy of a working class organization, whether they are members or not. The S. P. is the party of the working class, which must be governed by and in the interests of that class, and when it ceases to be so governed it ceases to be a working class party.

"So long as the wrokers let capitalists control their movement they will be led like sheep to the shambles; so long as the proletarians look to the 'middle class saviors' for guidance they will be offered upon the altar of capitalism like cattle on the slaughter bench.

"As a result of the Mills propaganda we have our local controlled by a combination of aspirant capitalists, bankrupt speculators, indebted labor skinners and designing politicians, who would ride to wealth and power upon the shoulders of the proletariat, leaving it forever in wage slavery. This bourgeois element has been running things with a high hand. At our state convention on Sept. 10 they disenfranchised 68 dues-paying proletarian comrades by preventing the seating of the three delegates elected by District No. 1 with the names of said 68 members attached to their credentials.

"With the opportunists, principles, like shoddy commodities, are made to palm off on others, not for home use. Thus in the name of revolution these political schemers serve the cause of opportunism and reaction, in the name of ethics and morality they commit the most immoral acts; in the name of liberty they trample under foot the interests of the proletariat.

Harriman's Justification.

Comrade Harriman's article in defense of the course adopted appeared in the Los Angeles "Socialist." We give the greater part of it, omitting, we believe, nothing essential:

"* * * When these unions enter the political field, it will be because they have learned that the strike and the boycott are not the only weapons of warfare within their reach. And we may be sure that the same class interest and the same class-consciousness which begets the unions and preserve them from the influence of the capitalists, will become the controlling power and preserving factor of their political party. Doubtless they will make many mistakes in their political experience as they have made and still do make in their economic organizations; but their class interest, to which they are inseparably bound, will always guide them and determine their actions.

"It is this class interest, developed, not theoretically, but by the economic struggle, and personified by the trade union movement, that must dominate the Socialist movement before we will become a living and potential factor in American affairs.

"Not only is this true, but the Socialist movement will never be safe from middle class tendencies until it is absolutely dominated and controlled by the interests of the organized portion of the working class.

"Why should it not be thus? To whom does the militant Socialist movement belong if not to the working class? Have they not the right to it? Have the unions not the power to take it when they wish? Have they not already begun to take it in various cities of the land? What is the Socialist movement without the working class? What is it without even the organized portion of the working class—or what can it become? Are not the principles of Socialism the logical deductions from the labor movement and the present economic development? Is not political action on the part of the working class, and especially of the organized portion of the working class, the very thing that Socialists have, by reason of their deductions, so long foreseen and hoped for?

"And now shall we fight the unions when they are just beginning to separate themseles from all capitalist parties? Shall we fight them now, when they are refusing to indorse even union men who are nominated by capitalist parties, and are indorsing all union men nominated by the Socialist Party?

"If it is true that the principles of Socialism would further the interests of the working class, and if it is true, as we have so long taught, that every class will do whatever is to its interest so far as it sees and can, and since it is a fact that labor parties are rejecting all capitalist political parties and are accepting the Socialist Party, and are moreover asking us wherein the principles of Socialism will further the interests of the working class, would it be for the interests of that class for the Socialists to decline their invitations and to fight them on the political field?

"If the principles of Socialism are correct, will not the interests of the working class cause a strictly labor party, in time, to develop into a Socialist party, whether we accept or reject their invitations? Shall we block their efforts?

"Since the unions are guarded by their interests, what more can we ask of them than an opportunity to fight for their interests and at the same time do propaganda work among the only class where there is any hope of success?

"Shall we join them or fight them? Arouse their enmity or gain their friendship?

"Fusion? Well, do not fear it. It is either fusion or benevolent assimilation. Fusion is perfectly safe for Socialists if that fusion is made with a class-conscious workingman's party, even though that party may not be posted on economics or see their political class interests with our clearness of vision.

"The independent, Socialist Party, in my judgment, has but two years' lease of life on this coast. The trade unions will put up tickets in all the important cities in the state two years hence. In that case where will our vote be found? It will be found with the working class uarty—where it should be. It will be a repetition of the same story that is now being told in San Francisco, only we will have less votes and they more, because the hope of the working class success will be livelier and the interest greater.

"Let us not fear such fusion. Let us consider the People's party fusion and see the difference.

"The Populists proposed middle class, capitalist, measures and their party was dominated by middle class capitalist interests. Their tendencies were determined by their interests, and therefore they naturally aligned themselves with one of the stronger capitalist parties.

"But both the Socialist and the Union Labor parties are dominated by working class interests—their tendencies are away from all capitalist parties—and therefore they will be safe in joining their forces in combat with the capitalist parties.

"No Socialist will assert that the Populists could have carried out their proposed measures, even had they not fused with the Democrats. Neither will it be held that there were other than capitalist measures proposed by the Populists, and therefore the logical place for them was in company with one or the other of the capitalist parties, and union became an irresistable mandate for them.

"The very same fact, namely, that the interests of the Union Labor Party and the Socialist Party are identical and the measures proposed are for the interest of the working class, will, in time, force the two organizations to work together for their common end—even though maintaining separate organizations.

"Joint action between the Socialist and the Union Labor party is therefore not dangerous to either party, and is the only safe course for both of them to pursue.

"The class interest dominating the Union Labor movement will hold the Socialist Party strictly to the economic struggle and save it from middle class tendencies and ethical sophisms, while the Socialists, by reason of their economic knowledge, will save the Union Labor Party from political mistakes, which would require years to rectify. Far better to have the principles of Socialism incorporated in a platform of a party which is dominated entirely by working class interests and by organized workingmen, who are fighting for their interests on both the economic and political field, than to have those principles incorporated in a platform under the correct name, but partially dominated by middle class interests and tendencies.

"This does not mean that the farmers are refused admittance into the Socialist ranks. It only means that the immediate interests of the farmers are not and cannot be supported by working class or Socialist legislation.

"It is to the farmers' immediate interest to preserve his farm, free from mortgages and thereby keep himself in comfort. This he cannot do. Economic development will eventually force the small farmer to the wall.

"The small farmer is therefore interested immediately in his own self-preservation, but he is also interested in ultimately establishing the Co-operative Commonwealth.

"Individuals may be moved by their ultimate interests, but as a class men only act in accordance with immediate interest.

"But the immediate interests of the working class, as well as their remote interests, are in perfect accord with Socialist legislation, and for this reason the working class interest will logically dominate the Socialist movement and all others who come to the Socialist movement must forsake their immediate interest for the ultimate purposes of Socialism.

"The men in the trade union movement, who against all odds, persistently fight for their own interests and the interests of their class, are the timber out of which a class conscious, political movement must be built. Those workingmen who will not join with their fellow workmen in the economic struggle will not stand to the guns in the political struggle. There may be a few exceptions, but this is the rule.

"It would undoubtedly be a calamity to lose our name—which is far from probable—but a stroke of palsy, such as the S. L. P. is suffering from, would be infinitely worse. Let us make no mistake, for it is the same fight in a little different form. If we turn our back to the working class when they are in a struggle, whether economic or political, we will be justly considered as their enemy; hatred for and prejudice against our movement will be engendered with more or less justification; the now open doors and welcome hands will be closed against us and the tide in the affairs of our movement, which if now taken at the flood, will lead on to fortune, will if ignored, result in misfortune to the working class and our movement will be delayed for years to come; that is until the working class without our organized aid can work out their own salvation. * * *

"In this discussion I beg of the comrades not to resort to that bitter and unreasonable method of discussion made so offensive by the S. L. P. Let us keep our organization intact and whichever side is in the majority abide by the decision. Let us also grant to the minority the perpetual right to agitate for their views and remember that this is not the only knotty problem that will develop in the Socialist movement. Let the columns of our papers be opened to a free, full, and manly discussion."

SPRING'S REPORT.

New York State Organizer Gives an Account of His Work and Makes Suggestions for the Future.

Comrades:—In tendering my resignation as State Organizer, I desire to submit the following report of my work, covering a period of seven months.

During that time I held one hundred and thirty-two public meetings, twenty business meetings of locals, and addressed eighteen trade-union meetings on the subject of Socialism. I organized twelve locals and three branches. I arranged twenty-three meetings for Chas. H. Vail, ten meetings for Wm. T. Brown, and forty-four meetings for Benjamin Hanford. I secured one hundred three-month and about thirty yearly and six-month subscriptions for The Worker, and distributed a large quantity of literature. I also visited personally many comrades and sympathizers. My official correspondence during that time amounted to some six hundred and fifty letters and postals in all.

Many of the places which I visited had for the first time been invaded by a Socialist agitator, and in such places I had to arrange my meetings unassisted.

This, in brief, sums up my entire work; and though the immediate result of my efforts appear slight, yet I am satisfied that the work accomplished will, in the near future, bear much fruit for the Socialist movement in New York state.

I wish to take this opportunity of thanking the State Committee and the comrades throughout the state for their very earnest co-operation and the valuable assistance which they rendered me in performing my duties as their Organizer. I also wish to thank my brothers of the trade unions for their kindness in extending to me the privilege of addressing them upon the subject of Socialism, and hope that the seed I have sown among them may blossom into a class-conscious conviction and bear fruit at the ballot-box for the Socialist Republic.

I will close with a few suggestions:

First, That an organizer be kept in the field and that he take up each county in consecutive order, and endeavor to organize the principal town in each.

Second, That the locals co-operate with the State Committee in sending a speaker through the state each month. This is, in my opinion, one of the best means of keeping young locals alive and growing and will stimulate the older locals and will be fruitful of good results from every standpoint.

Third, That the State Committee issue at cost to the locals, each month, leaflets applying our philosophy to some important current event; and that each local, through its officers, should see that such leaflets are ordered and systematically distributed.

Fourth, That a systematic effort be made by each local to increase the circulation of The Worker and a special effort be made to place it in the hands of trade unionists.

I am confident that, with the proper organizer and speakers in the field and a liberal distribution of the proper literature, nearly every town in the state can be organized and in good working order for the campaign of 1904.

Fraternally,
E. J. SPRING.

DEI GRATIA REX.

If God be guilty of that heinous crime
Which is ascribed to Him by wicked men—
If He doth make one child a king, and then Another child a slave, throughout all time
Doom that poor innocent to want and grime—
If He make rich and poor, this world a den
Of thieves and hogs within a filthy pen;—
If God do that—then haste to stop the chime,
And curse His name, for He's a fiend from Hell.
No. God did never make men rich or poor,
He gives enough for all: 'Tis men who steal
By law, more than their share, then lying tell
"To one God opes, to other shuts the door"
Of plenty, hope and Nature's ample weal.

R·I·P·A·N·S
My skin was getting yellow, and liver spots were getting all over me. I had often heard of Ripans Tabules and a friend told me to try them. I started to take the Tabules, and I can never praise them enough. I am feeling better than I have for three years. They are indeed a wonderful medicine. They keep my bowels regular, and my skin is much clearer than it was.

SOCIALISM AND TRADE UNIONISM

The following resolution was adopted by the Socialist Party in National Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 31, 1901:

"The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, declares that the trade union movement and independent political action are the emancipating factors of the wage-working class. The trade union movement is the natural result of capitalist production and represents the economic side of the working class movement. We consider it the duty of the Socialists to join the unions of their respective trades and assist in building up and unifying the trades and labor organizations. We recognize that trade unions are by historical necessity organized on neutral grounds as far as political affiliation is concerned.

"We call the attention of trade unionists to the fact that the class struggle so nobly waged by the trade union forces to-day, while it may result in lessening the exploitation of labor, can never abolish that exploitation. The exploitation of labor will come to an end only when society takes possession of all the means of production for the benefit of all the people. It is the duty of every trade unionist to realize the necessity of independent political action on class-conscious lines, to join the Socialist Party and to assist in building up a strong political movement of the wage-working class, whose ultimate aim and object must be the abolition of wage slavery and the establishment of a co-operative state of society based on the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is daily increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

When ordering mention THE WORKER.

A PERSONAL WORD TO OUR READERS.

The circulation of The Worker has increased more rapidly in the last six months than ever before in its history. We take this to mean that the comrades fully realize the value of The Worker as an advocate of true Socialism.

The increase which we have made only makes us desire a still more rapid growth in the future. We wish to double our circulation every six months until we reach the whole working class of the country.

Of the value of the Socialist press as a means of propaganda it is not necessary to say much. When a man subscribes for a Socialist paper, it means that he will receive every week the equivalent of several good propaganda leaflets, and that the constant comment upon current events will fix his attention and ensure his reading it.

We believe that as a Socialist propaganda paper The Worker is not inferior to any other in the land—and that is enough to say in our own praise.

Another function of the Socialist press is, perhaps, still more important than this. The party is daily taking in new members. They are seldom well grounded in Socialist principles at the time when they join, nor have they the experience to guide them safely among the many difficulties of party work with which they have to meet. A Socialist paper, coming to them weekly, is the most effective means of keeping up their interest, of completing their education in Socialist principles, and of equipping them with the practical knowledge necessary to make them effective workers for the cause.

We believe that in this respect, also, The Worker takes a creditable place among Socialist papers.

The season for open-air meetings is now at an end. In many places our public hall meetings will be few and far between for some months to come. The comrades, therefore, have leisure and energy to spare to increase the circulation of their party papers. We would suggest:

1. That each local subscribe for a weekly bundle to be sent to the Literature Agent and distributed in meetings or in shops or elsewhere, both for propaganda and as samples to be used in getting subscriptions.

Five copies a week for a year will be supplied for $1.75; ten copies a week for $3.25; twenty-five copies a week for $7.50; fifty copies a week for $12.50. As these rates barely cover cash cost of printing and mailing, payment must be made in advance.

2. That each local instruct its Literature Agent, or some other chosen comrade or comrades, to work systematically and vigorously to get subscriptions, and that reports on their work be heard at every business meeting.

A commission of 20 per cent. is allowed on all new subscriptions.

The most convenient way is to use the paid subscription postals. Let the local buy a supply of yearly and half-yearly postals, at the rate of 40 and 20 cents, respectively. When the agent gets a subscription, he fills in the blanks for name and address and mails the card, and this office does the rest. This plan saves considerable cost in postage and work in keeping accounts.

Comrades, bring this matter before your locals and help us to double the usefulness of The Worker within the next six months.

Among the features of The Worker in the coming months will be:

A series of articles especially adapted for those who are just beginning to get acquainted with our movement—taking up various objections commonly urged against Socialism and treating in an elementary manner of various phases of Socialism and of its relation to various special matters now in the minds of the working people.

A series of articles by the leading Socialist writers of the country, men whose names have become well known through their advocacy of Socialist principles and whose words will therefore command attention.

A number of articles dealing especially with the immediately pressing problems now confronting the trade-union movement, which is undoubtedly about to be subjected to more vigorous open assaults and dangerous insidious attacks than ever before.

A discussion—and we think our past record will assure the comrades that it will be carried on in a fair and dignified manner—of some important questions of Socialist party tactics, to which it is especially important that our newer comrades should give careful study.

A more systematic condensed statement of and running comment on current news than has heretofore been given, with the object of supplying our agitators every week with a few rounds of fresh ammunition to use in their skirmishes on the platform and their individual sharpshooting.

In a word, The Worker will be a better paper than it has ever been before—good for making converts, for enlisting them as active comrades, for training and educating them, and for supplying old comrades and new with valuable information. We ask you to increase its service to the cause by increasing its circulation.

SPLENDID GAINS

the old parties our vote would have been much larger.

"This vote, however, establishes the socialistic party as a party of standing in Massachusetts. The increase of the vote in Brockton, Fitchburg, Chelsea, Lynn, and cities of similar size is especially gratifying.

"The most gratifying gain made by our party, perhaps, is that made in Boston. We have made remarkable advances among the working classes in Boston and contiguous cities. This increase is largely due to the fact that the records of Carey and MacCartney in the legislature have at last aroused the working class of Boston to a realization of the fact that the Socialist is their only true representative.

"There is nothing now that can stay this movement in Massachusetts. The Socialist Party with its vote of this year is a party to which the voters will rally in the future. In the past we have been so few in numbers that the average workingman felt that he was throwing his vote away if he cast it for us, but with our present standing this objection is removed, and I can confidently predict to-night as I have predicted during this campaign, that next year the Socialist Party of Massachusetts will poll in the neighborhood of 100,000 votes and will elect a Governor in two years time or three at the outside."

MILFORD, Mass., Nov. 4.—Milford gives 114 for Chase, a gain of 33. Hopedale gives 18, a gain of 8. J. W.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 5.—Chase gets 206 votes and Berry, 178. Our other state candidates ran from 330 to 468 and those of the S. L. P. from 166 to 220. Last year we had 110 for Governor and the S. L. P. had 243.

Massachusetts Cities.

From the "Globe" we take the following table, showing Chase's vote in thirty-three cities as compared with that for Wrenn, our candidate in 1901:

	1902.	1901.

Western Massachusetts.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 5.—The Socialist vote for Governor in cities and towns of Western Massachusetts is more than double that of last year. Here are figures so far obtained:

Cities.	1901.	1902.
Williamsburg	11	48
Greenfield	31	56
North Adams	77	172
Pittsfield	35	58
Chicopee	161	401
Monson	7	18
Palmer	45	163
Easthampton	8	32
Northampton	51	121
South Hadley	16	27
Montague	25	76
Orange	17	133
Athol	15	42
North Brookfield	90	11
Warren	55	65

(Note.—We omit the figures for Springfield, West Springfield, Westfield, Holyoke, Adams, and Ware, which are given in other dispatches.)

These twenty-one cities and towns give a total of 3,640, as against 1,618 a year ago.

The decrease in North Brookfield was due to the closing of the Batchelder shoe factory, which drove many workers to other places.

Wrenn, our candidate for Congress in the Second District, got 1,333 votes in Springfield alone. R. S. B.

ADAMS, Mass., Nov. 4.—Chase has 195 and Barry has 65. This is a gain of 100 for the Socialist Party and a gain of 7 for the S. L. P. S. K.

WOBURN, Mass., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party here polls 69 votes for Chase. Two years ago we had 58. W. E. P.

WARREN, Mass., Nov. 5.—Chase has 65 votes here and Berry 5.

City Elections Coming.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—The municipal elections occur a month from now and the campaign begins immediately. The increase in Brockton assures the re-election of a Socialist mayor, and the election of a Socialist mayor again in Haverhill is also practicaly assured. The effect will also be felt in Lynn, Cambridge, and other cities where comrades have carried on an active campaign. Next Saturday a meeting to celebrate the advance of the Socialist Party will be held in Faneuil Hall at which John C. Chase, Representatives Carey and MacCartney, Dr. H. A. Gibbs, Representative-elect Wallace C. Ransden, Ex-Mayor Charles C. Coulter, and others will speak. The Brockton band is expected to be present and a parade will probably be held. W. M.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 4.—Springfield gives 1,267 for Chase, the other candidates on the Socialist Party state ticket ranging from 1,066 to 1,379. Berry, S. L. P., has 175.

West Springfield gives 81 for Chase, the rest of the ticket polling from 68 to 100.

Westfield gives 118 for Chase. Ware gives 280.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Nov. 4.—Chase, Socialist, has 373; Berry, S. L. P., 193. Buckland for Secretary of State, runs highest on our ticket, getting 583 votes. Last year we had 201 for Governor and the S. L. P. had 248.

READING, Mass., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 56 votes here, as against 14 last year and 12 in 1900. Our other candidates run from 64 to 74. The S. L. P. has 6, as against 14 last year and 10 in 1900. We have 6 per cent. of the vote. H. E. S.

CONNECTICUT GAINS.

New Haven Makes a Good Showing for the Socialist Party — Small Gains Elsewhere.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—New Haven raises its vote for the Socialist Party from 437 in 1900 to 806. The S. L. P. grows from 253 to 317.

STONINGTON, Conn., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 43 votes here and the S. L. P. 11. Two years ago we had 18 and the S. L. P. had the same 11.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party gets 337 votes in Hartford. The S. L. P. gets 94. In 1900 the Socialist Party had 339 and the S. L. P. had 99.

MERIDEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 100 votes here. The S. L. P. has 4.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5.—In 1900 our vote in thirty-six towns was 1,741. Nineteen of these towns which have thus far reported on yesterday's election show 2,538 votes.

The largest Socialist vote ever recorded in Connecticut was in 1898, before the split, when the S. L. P. polled 2,836 in fifty-one towns. It appears that the Socialist Party alone has now passed that mark.

A feature of the returns is the vote of 141 in Naugatuck. We have a young and vigorous organization there and the Naugatuck valley promises to become a Socialist stronghold. W. E. W.

PUTNAM, Conn., Nov. 5.—The Socialist Party has 9 votes here and the S. L. P. 3.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 5.—We are given about 50 votes here, but many more were cast and counted out by the Democrats. H. D.

DERBY, Conn., Nov. 5.—The Socialist Party polls 75 votes in its first campaign here. The S. L. P. has one. We shall do better next time. W. M. D.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 5.—The figures given us by Town Clerk for yesterday's vote are as follows: Socialist Party, 244; S. L. P., 81. Our watchers claim 256, with one district lacking.

In 1900 we had 86 and the S. L. P. had 156.

VERNON, Conn., Nov. 5.—The Socialist Party state ticket gets 166 votes; the S. L. P., 31. Our legislative ticket runs from 202 to 213; that of the S. L. P., 23. We have 11 per cent. of the vote, straight. H. K.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 5.—For Governor, the Socialist Party has 259, a gain of 85; the S. L. P. has 102, a loss of 3. A. E. B.

NAUGATUCK, Conn., Nov. 5.—We have 141 and the S. L. P. nothing. A. B. C.

DANBURY, Conn., Nov. 5.—Danbury gives 73 for the Socialist Party.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Conn., Nov. 4.—We have 77 votes here, as against 25 last year. The two S. L. P. votes of last year are no longer on record. J. F. C.

MILFORD, Conn., Nov. 5.—Socialist Party, 2; S. L. P., 9.

NEW JERSEY RETURNS.

Reports Are Scanty, but Show General Increase of Our Vote.

HARRISON, N. J., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 77 votes have as against 60 last year.

NEWARK, Nov. 4.—In ninety-three election districts we have 743 votes for the Socialist Party. This indicates that we shall have a thousand in Essex County, a gain of one-third.

These districts give the S. L. P. 390 votes, indicating that the DeLeonites will have about 500 in the county, a loss of about 200.

GUTTENBERG, N. J., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 43 votes here to 12 for the S. L. P.

PEETZBURG, N. J., Nov. 4.—A year ago the Socialist Party had 4 votes in Peetzburg and Oradell. To-day we polled 39.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Nov. 4.—The Third Election District gives the Socialist Party 16 votes with 6 for the S. L. P. The Fourth gives us 7 and the S. L. P. 2.

WESTFIELD, N. J., Nov. 5.—We polled here 45 straight Socialist Party votes; John Bearman, our candidate for Congress in the Fifth District, got 47. Two years ago we had 9 straight votes. The S. L. P. gets 8 votes.

The comrades worked hard and have succeeded in surprising this old town. The total vote of the town is about 750. C. Z.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Nov. 5.—This place gives 10 straight votes for the Socialist Party and 3 on splits for Wyatt, our candidate for Congress. The S. L. P. has one.

MANCHESTER, N. J., Nov. 4.—W. H. Wyatt, Socialist Party candidate for Congress, gets 34 votes and our legislative candidates range from 45 to 49. The S. L. P. candidate for Congress gets 14 and their legislative candidates 16.

In North Haledon we have 24 straight (25 for Wyatt) and the S. L. P. has 3.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 5.—The city gives the Socialist Party 283 votes and the S. L. P. 147. The whole of Union County gives us 352 and 166 for the S. L. P.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., Nov. 5.—This place (in Ocean County) gives 35 for the Socialist Party—a gain of 30 in one year. H. H.

VINELAND, N J.,. Nov. 5.—Vineland and Landis Township give 88 for the Socialist Party.

NEWARK, Nov. 6.—The city of Newark, with fifteen districts lacking, gives the Socialist Party 767 votes. Last year the whole city gave us 583. The S. L. P. has 402.

RIDGEFIELD PARK, Nov. 5.—We have 31 and the S. L. P. 5. Last year the two parties had but 15.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 5.—Returns are not complete, but show gains. West Hoboken reports 260, a gain of 62. Union, 140, a gain of 27. Eleventh Ward, Jersey City, 203, a gain of 18; Twelfth Ward, 301, a gain of 45. Kearney and Arlington, 210, a gain of 149. Guttenberg, 43. The S. L. P. makes smaller gains.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Some of the Results of the Coal Kings' Arrogance and the Socialists' Devotion.

It is impossible to tell as yet how far the experience gained by the miners in the great strike has crystallized in a Socialist vote at the polls. The polls close late in Pennsylvania, the ballot is so arranged that the counting is slow, the Socialist vote is mostly in small and scattered towns, many of our watchers were inexperienced and the old-party politicians in charge of the elections are loath to give out information about the political awakening of the working class.

So far as the dispatches go, they are very pleasing.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Forty-one out of the three hundred and two election districts of Luzerne County give Slayton, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, 1,216 votes, with 993 for Quinn, our candidate for Congress.

Fourteen of the fifty-one election districts in the Third Legislative District give our candidate, Jenkins, 534 votes. Jenkins is ahead and may be elected. The race is close.

Last year the whole county gave but 114 Socialist Party votes out of a total of 35,320.

We carry Nanticoke, Edwardsvile, Exeter, Durgea, and Maltby. J. G. R.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—Philadelphia doubles the Socialist vote of the presidential election in 1900.

Shamokin, in the strike field, gives 699 for the Socialist Party and 1,944 for the two old parties. We carry three wards. Two years ago the whole of Northumberland County gave us but 48 votes, with 41 for the S. L. P.

Carbon County is claimed by Republicans, Democrats, and Socialists.

Berks County gave us 243 votes in 1900. Yesterday the city of Reading alone gave us 1,080 straight.

Lawrence County, which gave 287 for Debs two years ago, now polls 800 for Slayton. J. M. B.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—Incomplete returns from twelve counties which, two years ago, gave us 2,800 votes, now give us 8,500. That is, at the very least, the vote is more than trebled. Our total vote in the state two years ago, was 4,831. J. M. B.

READING, Pa., Nov. 5.—In 1900 this city gave us 197 votes; in 1901 this rose to 246; yesterday we polled 1,086. Our legislative ticket runs over 1,200. J. A. A.

Comrade Stokes of Reading lives in the same precinct with George F. Baer, special representative of Almighty God. This precinct gave 16 Socialist votes two years ago and now Comrade Stokes reports the existence of 96 rebels against divine right there.

COALDALE, Pa., Nov. 5.—In 1900 we had one lone Socialist vote here. Yesterday 227 votes were cast for Slayton, Socialist candidate for Governor, against 54 for Pattison, Democrat, and 51 for Pennypacker, Republican. The vote for our county ticket runs from 208 to 246. C. G.

YORK, Pa., Nov. 4.—The capitalist press conceded us 140 in the city and 60 in three towns of this county. This is below the real facts. The county will give us 300, as against 204 last year. H. W. S.

SALINA, Pa., Nov. 5.—Bell Township, Westmoreland County, gives us 12 out of a total of 123. Two years ago we had 6. H. C.

DUQUESNE, Pa., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 30 votes here, a gain of 27; the S. L. P. has 6, a gain of one. T. D.

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 5.—Two years ago we had 2 votes here; a year ago, 11; now, 28. The S. L. P. has 4. L. G.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 6.—Two years ago Erie County gave 293 votes for the Socialist Party and 154 for the S. L. P. Unofficial returns give us 1,750 for Slayton this year, with other candidates on our ticket running up to 2,000. The S. L. P. has 150. A. W. G.

FOREST CITY, Pa., Nov. 5.—Last year the Republicans had 108 votes here and we had none. Now they have 42 and we have 38.

COKEVILLE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Slayton carries this place. He has 38 votes to 31 for the Republican, 20 for the Democrat, and 4 for the S. L. P. S. E. K.

SUNBURY, Pa., Nov. 5.—Northumberland County gives 2,058 for the Socialist Party; last year we had 10. Teh S. L. P. has 293, a gain of 229. The total vote in the county is 15,200.

WEST NEWTON, Pa., Nov. 5.—The Socialist Party has 18 votes; last year none. The S. L. P. has 12. C. G.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

DOVER, N. H., Nov. 5.—Michael H. O'Neil, Socialist Party candidate for Governor, has 193 votes in Dover. Other candidates on our ticket range from 173 to 182. Of these 126 are straight.

In 1900 we had 22 votes. In 1901 we had 52 straight and 84 in all for our candidate for mayor. D. E. D.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 5.—This city, incomplete, gives us 96 for Governor, 95 for Mayor, 105 for Congress. We are not very well satisfied. J. S. M.

CHICAGO DOUBLES.

Socialism Is Evidently on the Forward March in Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—The vote of the Socialist Party in the city of Chicago is about 15,000. This is an increase of 100 per cent.

The Socialist vote in the city election last spring was virtually the same as in that of 1901, something over 7,000. This year's increase makes a pleasant contrast with the apparent (but only apparent) lack of progress for some time in the past. We may expect Chicago to go rapidly forward from this time.

Two years ago the whole state of Illinois gave but 9,687 votes for the Socialist Party—then called the Social Democratic Party, as it still is in New York.

OHIO ALSO DOUBLES.

State Will Cast Fifteen Thousand, Adding Ten Thousand to the Figures of 1900.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 5.—Eight counties in Ohio give the Socialist Party over 10,000 votes and assure official standing. The average gain is over one hundred per cent. Ohio will surely run over 15,000. W. G. C.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 5.—Our vote in Lucas County two years ago was 636. Now we get 1,592 for Hayes on the state ticket and 1,716 for Pyle for Congress. C. R. M.

In the presidential election Ohio gives us 4,867 votes. A year ago our vote in the state election rose to 7,359.

XENIA, O., Nov. 4.—Five of the seven wards give us 117 votes, a gain of 77. R. R.

CONNEAUT, O., Nov. 5.—In spite of the efforts of Rev. H. S. Bigelow, Single Taxer, pseudo-socialist, and Democrat, the Socialist Party gets 4,000 votes in Ashtabula Count, a gain of 800, with sixty precincts to be heard from. E. H. V.

PORTSMOUTH, O., Nov. 4.—Incomplete returns show 225 votes, a gain of 35 over last year. W. C. E.

The S. L. P. paper prints a report from Cleveland stating that Cuyahoga County gives 2,063 for the Socialist Party and 607 for the S. L. P. as against 710 for the Socialist Party last year and 681 for the S. L. P.

MINNESOTA'S BIG GAIN.

State Keeps Up the Record of Progress Begun in 1896.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 5.—Partial returns indicate that the Socialist Party has 2,000 votes in this city and 1,500 in St. Paul, and that our vote in the state will be from twelve to fifteen thousand. We shall be the third party henceforth. G. B. L.

In 1896, the first time a Socialist ticket appeared in the state, the S. L. P., then the only Socialist party, cast 1,125 votes for Governor and 867 for President. In the state election of 1898 this rose to over 1,700. In 1900, after the split, the Social Democratic Party (now Socialist Party) cast 3,065 and the S. L. P. kept 1,329.

MONTANA'S BIG GAIN.

Socialist Vote Leaps from Seven Hundred to Five Thousand.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 5.—On the least estimate, the state of Montana will give 5,000 votes for the Socialist Party. This county (Silver Bow) will give not less than 1,500. The gain is 500 per cent. J. F. F.

In 1900 Montana entered the Socialist ranks for the first time, polling 708 votes for Debs and Harriman. In the present campaign the rival Copper Kings, Clark and Heinze, have used every means of cajolery and corruption to get the labor vote. Such an advance in the straight Socialist vote is the more gratifying under these circumstances.

MICHIGAN.

DRYDEN, Mich., Nov. 4.—Our vote rises from 6 in 1900 to 17 to-day. The one S. L. P. voter of 1900 has quit. C. J. L.

ST. CLAIR, Mich., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 36 here, a gain of 5. A bitter humbug fight between old parties explains small increase. W. H. G.

KENTUCKY.

COVINGTON, Ky., Nov. 5.—Campbell and Kenton Counties in this Sixth Congressional District show large gains, even on incomplete returns. We have not heard from the other six counties.

Covington gives us 500, a gain of 230; West Covington, 65, a gain of 51; Central Covington, 48, a gain of 24; Newport, 732, a gain of 302; Bellevue, 156, a gain of 83; Dayton, 128, a gain of 65; Fort Thomas, 25, a gain of 23; Ludlow, 28, a gain of 24. In all we have so far reported 1,682, as against 840 in the same places two years ago. F. J. L.

MARYLAND.

The New York "Times" notes that het Socialist Party cast 484 votes in the Third Congressional District of Maryland, in Batlimore.

"MINERS FOR THE SOCIALISTS."

Under this head, the New York "Sun," although it gave no report of the Socialist vote in Pennsylvania, published the following interesting dispatch, the latter part of which must be "taken with a grain of salt," perhaps:

"TAMAQUA, Pa., Nov. 4.—The majority of the Mine Workers' leaders in this district were out at the polls today electioneering in the interests of the candidates on the Socialist ticket. They told all the members of the union that it was their duty to support the candidates of that party and intimated that it was the desire of the union that they do so.

"A great quantity of Socialistic propaganda has been distributed here during the past few weeks and the Mine Workers' leaders say that many of the union miners have decided to cast their fortunes with the Debs party. They also say that at the next National Convention of the party an effort will be made to have a mine worker nominated for either president or vice-president.

"They refuse to say whether on effort will be made to persuade Mr. Mitchell to accept the nomination."

CHASE'S REPORT.

Urges Continuance and Extension of Labor Lecture Bureau under Supervision of National Committee.

Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary of the Socialist Party.

Dear Comrade:—It was my intention, upon ending my trip in the West so abruptly, to at once send you a report, which would be something of a review of the entire tour of the lecture field. But up to this time I have been unable to find opportunity to do so. I will endeavor to cover a part of the ground in a few moments respite I now have in the heat of our campaign. It is my desire to bring to the attention of the movement in general, and to the National Committee in particular, the good that can be accomplished in no other way as effectively as through this means of propaganda.

Let us first understand clearly the situation.

The times are, in the words of Lowell, "ripe and rotten-ripe for change" in the attitude of organized labor toward the question of political action. Organized labor is going into politics. Which way shall they go? As an independent labor party or in support of the organized Socialist movement? Their action depends largely upon our attitude in our propaganda among them.

The Labor Lyceum Bureau was established for the purpose of placing speakers among the trade unions of the country to deliver to them a message; to deliver to them the gospel of emancipation from wage slavery; in short, to teach them the class struggle. My purpose in making this report is to show, if possible, from what has already been accomplished in this direction; what may be accomplished in the future if the work of the Bureau is continued and pushed forward to perfection.

In the seven months that I was engaged in the work as lecturer for the Bureau I addressed in all about one hundred and fifty meetings, about one hundred of which were under the auspices of trade unions. Let it be understood at once that these meetings were public meetings held generally in the city hall, court house, or opera house, and always well attended by the general public. It will be readily seen by the observant Socialist that the most of these meetings were in places before people whom we could not reach through any other manner for a long time without great expense to our organization. The possibilities of propaganda through the work of the Bureau cannot be overestimated and the effect of this same propaganda is still more impossible of exaggeration.

As I have already mentioned, the trade unionist is ready for action politically and can be made to see that absolute class-conscious action with the political party of his class is his only proper course. We have the opportunity through the Bureau, if supported and continued, of teaching this truth to the trade unionist and without cost to our movement or interference with any other form of propaganda.

Now a word as to the financial end of the matter.

My tour, directly under the Lecture Bureau, was of twenty-seven weeks duration. The deficit for salary, hotel, railroad, and all other expenses, that had to be met and paid from headquarters in this time, was something like sixteen dollars. The whole deficit, including this expense and printing advertising matter, letter-heads, envelopes, and mailing cards, cuts, addressing and postage, amounted to $260, or about $9 per week. If this were to be the average cost of a speaker carrying on national propaganda, we can see that this would be a splendid investment. But as a matter of fact, this expense is but the natural cost of experiment. It must be remembered that the trip was the first and in a part of the country, to a great extent, where railroading was expensive, and where long jumps were made from town to town. That all would be cut down for the several speakers, as valuable knowledge of the country and as to the best way to send the speakers through is gained at headquarters by the first experiment, and would necessarily make it possible to cut down the expense so that the speaker would be able to cover all expense, including advertising and office work, for his trip.

There has been some discussion and advocacy of abolishing this Bureau, and I believe the question is now before the National Committee for a vote upon the question as to whether or not it shall be abolished. The vote may have been taken before this article will reach the members and their decision given to abolish this part of our propaganda, but I sincerely hope that such is not the case. To stop in this work now is not only childish, but criminal, for it is the very best means of agitation on a scientific scale that has ever been adopted in the American Socialist movement.

To say that it should be abolished because of an expense in the national office is absurd, for the reason that there need be no expense to the Bureau or national office, once this system is established; and if there were an expense, it would be such a trifle, as the experiment so far has shown, that it would be the most economical means of carrying on our work of education.

Another objection that has been raised is that this Lecture Bureau gives too much power to one man; namely, the National Secretary, who would have charge of the speakers. This objection is positively ludicrous and of the kindergarten variety. The Socialist movement is too large for any one man or set of men to control, or to use for building up a machine for personal aggrandizement. That will do perhaps in that organization where some men prefer to be a big toad in a small puddle rather than a small toad in a big puddle. To be afraid of one man's power, or to be constantly trembling over the thoughts of expansion or concentration, is to confess a disastrous weakness in our movement which is not part of it nor likely to be.

The Bureau should be continued, and there is no reason why it should not, and there are a few reasons why it should.

First. Because it is an effective means of getting before that class whom we must have with us, and whom we can reach in no other way so effectively—namely, the trade unionists.

Second. Because it enables every state movement to secure any or all speakers whom they desire to have, at a cost that is insignificant compared to what it would be should the same speakers be obtained through any other source or at any time when they were making an extended tour under the auspices of the Bureau.

Third. Because it makes it possible for our speakers who go out in this work to come in direct contact with the varied industries of the country, see for themselves the conditions in every part of the country and become familiar with the movement generally.

Fourth. Because it enables the Socialists themselves in the various states and cities to have men from distant states to speak for them and inform them of conditions existing in that part of the country of which they have no personal knowledge, thus making possible more solidarity in our movement.

Fifth. Because it provides speakers at the lowest price to locals and enables them to have speakers of national reputation without paying fifty or a hundred dollars for the lecture.

Sixth. Because it is a scientific and economical manner of conducting propaganda and strictly in line with all the philosophy and science of Socialism.

For these and many other reasons it should be continued.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN C. CHASE.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

TUNNEL ECONOMICS AND POLITICS.

Several of the leading dailies of New York and Brooklyn, led by the New York "Times," have united, during the past week, in a campaign of misrepresentation against the Cloth Spongers' Union. It seemed rather strange that so many big guns should be trained against this comparatively small organization. But the mystery disappeared when there came to light a circular issued by the Merchants' Association and circulated among the large employers of the city.

From this it appeared that the attack was not, in fact, chiefly aimed at the Cloth Spongers, but at the movement for the eight-hour and prevailing-wage clauses in the Pennsylvania tunnel franchise.

The circular is an interesting one. It is signed by some sixteen eminently respectable Republicans and Democrats, as officers and directors of the Merchants' Association, most eminent among them being John G. Carlisle, Democrat.

The circular is headed:

"Steady Work and Good Wages for Working Men.

It begins by reciting that the trade unions of the city have "protested against granting the Pennsylvania Tunnel Franchise unless the Company agrees to pay Ten Hours' Wages for Eight Hours' Work" and further that the Cloth Spongers' Union has driven more than half the clothing trade out of the city by insisting on short hours of work.

These labor unions of the clothing trades are very wicked people, indeed. "They forced excessive wages for a limited class of clothing workers, made manufacturing profitless in this city, and deprived of work many thousands who once drew good wages as clothing makers." (It would be interesting to have Mr. Carlisle cornered somewhere and compel him to tell when and where the clothing workers got good wages—especially when there was no union.)

The writers of the circular then plunge into economics, in this fashion:

1. "Good wages depend on prosperity."—If you ever thought it was the other way around, you were mistaken. Take Mr. Carlisle's word for it, you can't get good wages unless you are prosperous.

2. "Unless the manufacturing, commercial, and financial interests of this city are prosperous, its work-people cannot be prosperous."—Think of that, you insolent workingmen. If Mr. Carlisle and his friend Whitney and the rest of them don't get big profits out of you you can't be prosperous. Mr. Carlisle says so.

3. "Prosperity is destroyed and work driven away by the arbitrary demands of labor."

See the argument? It is in three links of a logical chain: 1. If the workers get high wages, you destroy the capitalists' prosperity. 2. If the capitalists are not prosperous, the workers cannot be. 3. If the workers are not prosperous, they will get low wages.

Think it over. It is profound. Mr. Carlisle, Mr. Cleveland's Secretary of the Treasury, got it up for your benefit. Turn it inside out, thus: 1. If you work for low wages, your boss will be prosperous. 2. If your boss is prosperous, you will be prosperous. 3. If you are prosperous, you will get high wages.

Ergo, The only way to get high wages is to get low wages, and vice versa. Q. E. D.

So much for the economics of the Merchants' Association. Having got rid of this chunk of scientific argument, the merchants, under Mr. Carlisle's guidance, proceed to business.

Here comes another headline:

"Ask Your Employees to Declare Against It."

"It" is the eight-hour and prevailing-wage demand.

Attached to the circular are several petition blanks. The petition runs thus:

"To Hon. Charles V. Fornes, President Honorable Board of Aldemen, Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall.

"Sir:—The undersigned hereby request the Honorable Board of Aldermen not to grant the demand for an EIGHT-HOUR LABOR CLAUSE in the PENNSYLVANIA TUNNEL AGREEMENT, believing that it will prevent the building of the tunnel, to the great injury of the city, against the best interests of workingmen and taxpayers."

The employers are given instructions:

"Ask your employees, WHOSE EMPLOYMENT DEPENDS UPON YOUR BUSINESS PROSPERITY, to sign enclosed petition; have others sign; then mail it." etc.

What do you think of it, you workingmen who voted against Socialism last week?

What are you going to do about it, when your boss comes around and "asks" you to sign a petition for low wages and long hours of labor on the tunnel?

Read over that phrase printed in capitals, three paragraphs above. Is it not true that your employment depends upon your employer's interest, even upon his whim and caprice? Is it not shameful that it should be so? Do you think the Social Democrats are so far wrong in saying that the workers ARE DEPENDENT and that they OUGHT NOT TO BE?

You, who might have voted for your own interest, will send in your petition—your real, freely signed petition—for the labor clauses. Your bosses will send in these fake petitions, with your coerced signatures, against the labor causes. Which set of petitions do you suppose will be considered by the City Hall gang (Reformers and Tammanyites), whom your eminently respectable bosses nominated for you and whom you obediently elected?

Think it over, that is all. If you really think—no matter though you do fancy yourself a Republican or a Democrat now—you will see through the game after a while.

Then you will vote under the Arm and Torch and won't have to petition any more.

Nov. 28—Jas. N. Wood, Organizer of Local New York, Social Democratic Party—Subject: "Socialism and Common Sense."

Dec. 5, 12, and 19.—Algernon Lee, Editor of The Worker, will give a course of three lectures on "Social Evolution," "The Capitalist System," and "The Tendencies of Capitalism."

Admission is free and all are welcome. The workingmen of the West Side should bring their wives and friends to hear the truth about capitalism and the way out of wage-slavery.

Members of the club should be present by 7:30 p. m. every Friday evening in order to attend the business meeting which will be held during the half-hour preceding the lecture of the evening.

After the lecture this Friday the members of the club will be invited to proceed in a body to the jubilee smoker to be held by the Social Democratic Party in Manhattan Lyceum.

TELL US THE REMEDY.

Under "Labor Aphorisms," in the "Coast Seamen's Journal" we note the following:

"In point of practicability the advice to 'strike at the ballot-box' amounts to much the same thing as advice to men in a storm to seek shelter under the plans of a house."

We would say to the ink slinger of the "Seamen's Journal" that there is nothing material in the plans of a house. There is no power in the specific draft of a building on paper. The unity of the working classes at the ballot-box is the peaceable weapon before which capitalism must fall and the only weapon under the constitution that will wipe out the wrongs that bear upon the shoulders of the masses. As long as the few hold in their possession the tools and machinery of the commercial world the many must accept the terms of capitalism. Unionism cannot furnish jobs for the unemployed, nor can unionism give a lease to those who are now employed for any period of time. The members of organized labor as at present constituted, are completely at the mercy of their masters, who are in a position to say when they shall work and when they shall not work. If striking at the ballot-box is not practicable, then let the editor of the "Seamen's Journal" forward the remedy. We know of no other, and we challenge the idolater of trade unionism to suggest any other peaceable weapon that will emancipate men and women from industrial slavery. — Miners' Magazine.

QUARTER OF A MILLION SOCIALISTS.

The Gains the Party Has Made in Two Years and the Responsibility which These Gains Impose upon Socialist Voters.

A Satisfactory Feature of Our Advance is that It Is Pretty Evenly Distributed over the Country—No Mushroom Growth—We Now Need Every Socialist Voter as an Active Party Worker—As Final Victory Approaches, the Responsibility of the Rank and File Becomes More Imperative.

Incomplete as our returns still are, it is certain that the recorded vote of the Socialist Party (called in New York the Social Democratic Party) has risen in two years from 97,000 to 225,000, and it seems highly probable that it reaches 250,000.

We say "the recorded vote" advisedly, for we know that a large part of our vote, in places where we have no organization and no watchers, is deliberately stolen or reported as "scattering" by the old-party election officials.

In the midst of our rejoicing over this tremendous ratio of increase—a ratio that is sure to be increased between now and 1904—it is well that we should take serious thought of the responsibility which this great increase throws upon us.

It is a most pleasing feature of our party's growth that it has not been local, that it has been pretty evenly distributed over the country. If Massachusetts has trebled the vote, so has Ohio; if Pennsylvania has quadrupled, so has Minnesota; and the Rocky Mountain states, in which we have had but a small vote in the past, now come well up in the line of battle.

So far as we now know, we have gained only two new offices—a seat in the Massachusetts Legislature and one in the Saginaw Board of Aldermen. For us, we are pleased with this. We can wait for the actual fruition of our work until the work is farther advanced.

But even so, we have to consider that the increased importance of our party involves new dangers as well as new opportunities.

Hearst's editorial, "Labor, Democracy's Natural Ally," would not have been written had not the Socialist vote been so greatly increased. That manifesto is for us but a signal of danger, an intimation that the most corrupt and shameless of the forces of capitalism are to make a desperate attempt to sidetrack the socialistic tendencies of the labor movement and of public opinion in general to bring about increased confusion among the workers in order that the capitalists may extend their term of power.

Along with this we have—not to speak here of California—the Heinze labor party in Montana, the labor policy of the Democratic party in Colorado, and other confusing tendencies of the same sort in other states.

Of yet another danger—the continued existence of a scab labor party masquerading under a Socialist name—we shall speak more particularly next week. It is necessary barely to refer to it here.

What does all this mean for us? It means that still less than at any time in the past can we trust to "the forces of social evolution" (convenient phrase for indolent minds!) to do our work for us. It means that we must draw closer the lines of party organization, that we must redouble our party activity, that we must enlist as an actual party worker every impassive Socialist voter who can be awakened to his duty, that, in a word, we must realize that we are living in an era of revolution and must bear the responsibilities of revolutionists.

This is not a time for spinning fine theories about what might have been. It is not a time for sentimentalizing over the possible good motives of our enemies. It is a time for action.

NEW YORK.

Official Returns from Only Fifteen Counties — Social Democratic Vote Will Probably Pass 22,000—S. L. P. Will Have Over 16,000.

We have official returns from fifteen of the sixty-one counties of the state of New York, as given below:

Counties.	Hanford.	DeLeon.
Allegheny	15	45
Cattaraugus	17	53
Chautauqua	107	172
Cortlandt	5	2
Clinton	5	10
Essex	08	29
Fulton	465	177
Genessee	33	43
Monroe	2,171	845
Orange	142	187
Orleans	11	26
Schoharie	3	5
Seneca	10	28
Tompkins	35	25
Westchester	698	544
Totals	3,785	2,197

Two years ago these fifteen counties gave a total of 1,629 for the Social Democratic Party and 1,447 for the S. L. P.

The gain of the Social Democratic Party is 2,156 and that of the S. L. P. 750.

The Social Democratic Party gains 132 per cent. in these counties and the S. L. P. gains 52 per cent.

It would not be safe,however, to assume that this ratio of increase in the Social Democratic vote will hold good for the whole state outside New York City, as the exceptionally good counties of Monroe and Westchester are included in this list.

The safest estimate that can now be made for the state is that the vote for Hanford on the Social Democratic ticket will run to 22,000 and probably higher and that the vote for DeLeon on the S. L. P. ticket will be between 16,000 and 18,000.

The Annexed Districts of New York City give 135 for Hanford and 69 for DeLeon—a gain of 85 for the Social Democratic Party and 31 for the S. L. P.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Westchester County gives 698 for the Social Democratic Party and 544 for the S. L. P. This is a gain of 440 for us and a gain of 128 for the "union-smashers."

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The town of Cortlandt, including Peekskill, has 118 for Hanford, a gain of 54; the S. L. P. has 68, a gain of 31.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Allegheny County gives Hanford 15 and DeLeon 45. In Wellsvills, where the difference between the parties is known, Hanford has 8 and DeLeon 5.

DOLGEVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Hanford, 31; DeLeon, 13.

ILION, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Hanford has 116 here and DeLeon has 46. Our gain is 64. The whole of Herkimer County in 1900 gave the Social Democratic Party 168 and the S. L. P. 55.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Tompkins County gives 35 for Hanford and 25 for DeLeon. In 1900 the Social Democratic Party had 23 and the S. L. P. 46.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Hanford has 4 and DeLeon 3.

CAMILLUS, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Hanford has 3; DeLeon, none.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 7.—This city gives 342 for Hanford and 55 for DeLeon. Two years ago the whole of Jefferson County gave 206 for the Social Democratic Party and 58 for the S. L. P. Hanford's vote in the county will run to 500.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Chautauqua County gives 107 for Hanford and 172 for DeLeon. In 1900 the Social Democratic Party had 47 and the S. L. P. had 57.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Official returns for Orange County give the Social Democratic Party 142 and the S. L. P. 187. Two years ago we had 28 and the S. L. P. had 77.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Official returns for Westchester County give 698 for the Social Democratic Party and 544 for the S. L. P. In 1900 the county gave us 258, with 116 for the S. L. P.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Wellsville gives 8 for Hanford and 5 for DeLeon. The whole county (Allegheny) gives 15 for the Social Democratic Party and 45 for the S. L. P. In 1900 each party had 12 in the county.

We have had little organization work here, and the S. L. P. has had none. We have circulated the "Appeal to Reason" widely. That is the only Socialist paper circulating in the county. It is evident, therefore, that most of the S. L. P. votes were so cast through misunderstanding.

ILION, N. Y., Nov. 7.—This place gives Hanford 116 and DeLeon 46. Two years ago Herkimer County gave 170 for us and 54 for the S. L. P.

HERKIMER, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Hanford has 23 in this town and DeLeon has 14. Last year we had 18 for our county ticket and the S. L. P. had no ticket. In 1900 we had 6 and the S. L. P. had 7. We have gained each year.

DOLGEVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 7.—In Dolgeville (Herkimer County) there are 31 votes for Hanford and 13 for DeLeon. C. H.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Despite Prejudice, Slander, Intimidation, and Confusion, Socialism Makes Great Progress in the State of Quay and Baer.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Reports so far received show that twenty out of the sixty-seven counties of Pennsylvania give 19,000 votes for the ticket of the Socialist Party. In 1900 the state gave less than 5,000. The counties reported are, of course, our best ones, but the others will undoubtedly bring the total well above 20,000.

In the Strike Field.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 9.—The official count for Luzerne County gives the following result for the Socialist Party:

State ticket: Slayton, 4,556; Barnes, 4,424; Gould, 4,155.

Congress: Quinn, 3,911.

County ticket: Seward, for Treasurer, 3,209; Cathrall, for Register, 3,566; Mlenarie an Jacquot, for County Commissioners, 3,335 and 3,358.

Legislature: First District, Lavin, 582; Second, McGovern, 721; Third, Jenkins, 1,271; Fourth, Berger, 487; Fifth, Dooley, 384; Sixth, Chicknouski, 221; total, 3,666.

The S. L. P. had only a state ticket. Their vote ranged from 526 to 563, a large part of it cast through misunderstanding and intended for the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party is now an official party, holding third place, and will go on the ballot without petition. Another gain like this and we will carry the county.

Erie.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 8.—The city of Erie gives 1,519 votes for Slayton; 48 from the outlying districts bring the total for Erie County up to 1,567. The "union-smashers" have 176.

Most other candidates on the Socialist ticket run somewhat ahead. Barnes, for Lieutenant-Governor, has 1,650; Gould, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, 1,622; O'Camb, for Congress, 1,590; Ward, for Assembly, 1,825; Heydrick, for District Attorney, 1,729; Benson and Reed, for County Commissioners, 1,799 and 1,716; Mayer, for Director of the Poor, 1,690; O'Brien and Perry, for Auditor, 1,683 and 1,674; Allen, for Register, 1,463; Stephenson, for Prothonotary, 1,663; Greist, for Clerk of Courts, 1,666.

In 1900 Erie County gave us 293 votes.

YORK, Pa., Nov. 9.—The official count here gives us 288 votes for Slayton. Our other candidates run ahead, some as high as 311. In 1900 we had 124. H. W. S.

EDWARDSDALE, Pa., Nov. 5.—The borough of Edwardsville gives 194 for Slayton; 187 for Barnes; 189 for Gould; 188 for Quinn; 230 for Jenkins; 167 for Cathrall, for Register of Wills; 176 for Mlenaric and 170 for Jacquot, for County Commissioners; 170 for Seward for County Treasurer. The vote of all parties in the borough is 601. J. H. H.

Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia "Inquirer" gives the Socialist Party vote in that city as 1,709 for Slayton, 1,862 for Barnes, 1,816 for Gould, 1,715 for our candidate for Sheriff, and 516 for Moore, our candidate in the Second Legislative District, comprising only a part of the city. In 1900 our state ticket had 1,297 votes in the city.

The "Inquirer" credits the S. L. P. with 478 votes, as against 290 in 1900.

New Castle.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 6.—This city gives 639 votes for John W. Slayton, Socialist candidate for Governor, as against 535 in the city election last spring. In 1900 the whole of Lawrence County gave us but 287 votes.

The Fifth Ward, in which Slayton lives and which he represents in the City Council, gives him 284 votes, with 344 for Pennypacker, 88 for Pattison, and 51 for Swallow, Prohibitionist.

Lycoming County.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Nov. 6.—Lycoming County gives Slayton 809 votes; other candidates of the party run slightly ahead.

In 1900 this county gave us 211 votes, with 17 for the S. L. P.

The "Statesman," a local labor paper, says: "All honor to the independent men who stood up bravely and voted the Socialist ticket. The column will continue to increase. No earthly power can prevent it. The ranks will swell until the tread of a mighty phalanx is heard from Lake Erie to the Delaware—until the principles of the Socialist Party shall prevail and an end be put to the damnable methods now in practice, where the poor man, no matter what his ability, finds his aspirations checked by the power of the money kings."

The "Statesman" elsewhere exclaims, "Now for the election of Socialist councilmen in February!"

HAMILTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—This township (Salem) of Wayne County gives 3 Socialist votes. Last year I was alone. T. B. L.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Further Details of Advance in Socialism in the Old Bay State—More Gains Coming in City Election in December.

BEVERLY, Mass., Nov. 5.—Chase gets 147 votes here; last year Wrenn had 66. Our other state candidates get from 157 to 179; last year, from 63 to 89.

The S. L. P. has 24 for Berry and from 23 to 32 for other state candidates; last year, 46 for Berry and from 30 to 50 for other candidates.

Littlefield, our candidate for Congress, has 116; Gordon, for Councillor, 217; Putnam, for Senator, 151; Foster and Grout, for Representatives, 180 and 142 respectively. Weed, for County Commissioner, 148; a large gain in each case. W. H. G.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Nov. 5.—Chase has 216 votes here; last year Wrenn had 75. Our other candidates on the state ticket range from 224 to 259. Berry, S. L. P. candidate for Governor, has 52; other S. L. P. candidates, 51 to 54.

Skinner, our candidate for Congress, has 222; the S. L. P. man, 59.

Bloomstrand, our candidate for Councillor, has 274; Drew, for Senator, 238; Thompson, for Representative, 160; Dunn, for County Commissioner, 263. J. H.

CLINTON, Mass., Nov. 6.—Chase has 279 votes here. Last year Wrenn, who headed our ticket, had 114. Mullen, for Congress, has 330; this is the first time we have a candidate for Congress. Abbott, for Senator, has 294; Knox and Lawrence, for Representatives, 245 and 261 respectively. G. K.

EAST DEDHAM, Mass., Nov. 5.—Dedham gives 140 for Chase and 15 for Berry; Hyde Park, 376 for Chase and 18 for Berry; Norwood, 195 for Chase and 11 for Berry.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Nov. 5.—Chase has 56 and our other state candidates run from 46 to 82. The S. L. P. has 27 for Berry and from 27 to 37 for other candidates.

Koehler, our candidate for Congress, has 62; Neuman, for Councilor, 64; Dunham, for Senator, 20.

Turners Falls gives 58 for Chase and from 31 to 46 for our other candidates; Berry has 19 there and the other S. L. P. candidates from 17 to 24.

In Turners Falls we have 46 for Congress, 44 for Councillor, 21 for Senator.

Quincy's City Ticket Named.

QUINCY, Mass., Nov. 8.—Encouraged and inspired by our great gain over last year—the vote rising from 188 to 360 on the state ticket and from 247 to 853 on the legislative ticket—the Socialists of this city last night chose candidates and began an active campaign for the city election in December.

William T. Richards is our choice for Mayor. He is a native of Massachusetts, forty-four years of age, a machinist by trade, and now employed as a travelling salesman for a large machinery house in Boston. He is an ardent Socialist and advocate of trade unionism and is well known here.

A full list of candidates for the Council, at large and in the wards, was nominated, and Mrs. Emily T. Turner was named for member-at-large of the School Committee.

We have strong hopes that Quincy, as well as Haverhill, Brockton, and perhaps other cities, will be governed in the interest of the working class next year.

OHIO.

Hanna and Johnson May Take Warning from Growth of Socialism in this Industrial State.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 10.—The official count gives 4,373 for Hayes in Hamilton County. Other candidates of the Socialist Party run up to 4,510. In 1900 we had 1,141. The S. L. P. has 739, a loss of 99. Had the largest meeting of the year yesterday. Great enthusiasm. E. H. V.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 9.—The official count of the vote in Lucas County slightly increases the figures reported in The Worker of this week. Max S. Hayes, as head of the state ticket, gets 1,605. Last year the vote was 495. Dr. John S. Pyle, for Congress, leads the ticket with 1,721 votes. Otherwise the ticket runs uniform, with votes in every precinct in the city.

The morning papers give the vote for Dr. Pyle in the district as follows: Fulton County, 20; Ottawa, 2; Lucas, 1,721; Wood, 74; total, 1,817.

There were 205 votes in this county for the S. L. P. state ticket, as compared with 147 last year. In both instances the votes really belong to us, for there is not a single known member of that organization in the city. They get their votes from uninformed persons. Next year we go on the ballot without petition and will have an emblem, which will help to draw the line on the "union-smashers."

We are this week distributing one thousand copies of The Worker to show that Toledo is not the only Socialist vote-booster. We will have another thousand extras next week, and then we will go after subscribers, for the biggest gains in this city came from the places taking the greatest number of copies of The Worker.

The general rejoicing over the contents of this week's paper is marred by finding Comrade Job Harriman defending a policy universally condemned by members here. "To think of Harriman doing this makes me sick," is a common expression. Time will vindicate the editorial position of The Worker. C.

ASHTABULA, O., Nov. 6.—This place gives 185 votes for Hayes. Last year Thompson had 83. The S. L. P. gets 32, undoubtedly intended for the Socialist Party, as there are no S. L. P. men known here. W. H. F.

TIFFIN, O., Nov. 6.—Seneca County last year gave 67 for the Socialist Party and 9 for the S. L. P. This year we have 150 and the S. L. P. has 12. Our candidate for Congress, Charles R. Martin, has 128. This is official. A. A. F.

CANTON, O., Nov. 6.—We have 90 votes, a gain of 32 over last year and of 61 over 1900. The S. L. P. has 72.

ONWARD, FOR THE SOCIALIST DAILY!

The Work Is Well Under Way and Should Now Be Vigorously Carried On.

Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association Resumes the Task of Getting Funds—A Mite from Every Socialist Voter Would at Once Provide the Party with a Daily Paper.

The Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association, a body formed for the purpose of publishing a Socialist and trade-union daily in the city of New York, has resumed its activity in the task of gathering funds for that purpose, temporarily interrupted during the closing weeks of the campaign.

The Board of Management met at the Labor Lyceum Monday evening and on Thursday evening, Nov. 13, the fifth session of The Daily Globe Conference meets at the same place. It is desired that every trade union, every subdivision or neighboring local of the Social Democratic (Socialist) Party, and every other progressive labor organization shall be represented by delegates in the sessions of this important conferenrce. A general meeting of comrades and sympathizers will be held on the Thursday following.

The Board of Management authorized the issuance of the following address:

"Comrades and Sympathizers:

"The election just passed demonstrates the fact that there is a tremendous sentiment for Socialism in the United States. Many thousands of workingmen have stood by their convictions, going to the ballot-box and voting for what they wanted, for the Co-operative Commonwealth.

"Considering the large increase in the vote this year, it behooves us, members and sympathizers of the Social Democratic Party, from now on, to put forth every effort to educate those who have voted with us for the first time, as well as the masses of workingmen who do not yet see the light of Socialism.

"We must therefore use every means which lies within our power to establish our daily paper before the next election, and we urge every comrade who has made a pledge to begin at once to pay his instalments promptly and regularly so that the daily paper can be issued in the near future.

"To those comrades and friends of Socialism who have not yet made contributions or pledges, we urge that they give or pledge what they can right now. It is your imperative duty to do all within your abilities to assist in raising the fund necessary for the purpose of creating the Daily Globe and placing it before the working people of New York and vicinity.

"Every comrade or sympathizer must be enlisted in this enterprise, and with a gigantic and simultaneous effort on the part of all, we shall place in the hands of our party a mighty weapon for advocating Socialism, and one that will combat the capitalist press daily in its attempts to belittle and belie the great Socialist movement of the United States.

"Comrades, the time has come for decisive and united action. Let every reader of this appeal feel his or her personal responsibility. Put your shoulders to the wheel and do all you possibly can to raise funds and advertise the coming 'Daily Globe.'

"There is plenty of work to be done and every comrade or friend of the Social Democratic Party is urged to attend the general meeting to be held at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, on Thursday evening, Nov. 20, at 8 o'clock sharp.

"WM. BUTSCHER, Sec'y."

To New Readers.

For the information of the many new readers of The Worker it may be stated that it is considered necessary to raise a fund of $50,000 before issuing the first number of the paper, in order that there may be no question of its success. A good start has been made, as shown by the lists printed below. With over 80,000 Socialist voters in the five contiguous states of New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, all of which will come within the direct field of the paper, it ought to take but a very short time to raise the necessary fund.

If you have made a pledge, see that the instalments are paid promptly.

If you have not yet done so, send in your pledge and first instalment at once. Make the pledge ten dollars or twenty-five or as much more as you can; pay, if possible, at least a dollar a month on it, and pay regularly. If you are not in a position to make a pledge now, at least send in as liberal an immediate contribution as possible.

A blank for pledges is printed along with this article. Clip it and fill it out or copy it, and send it to William Butscher, Secretary, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

If you are willing to do anything in the way of collecting money in your locality or otherwise helping the movement along, write to Secretary Butscher for instructions.

FIELDMAN AND O'HARE.

Comrades Sol Fieldman and Frank P. O'Hare start together from New York City on Monday, to spend some time at the Mills School. Mrs. O'Hare remains in the city for a little while to get leisure for her work on a women's edition of the "Coming Nation," soon to be issued.

Comrades Fieldman and O'Hare intend to make about a dozen stops on their way and hold meetings. We should be inclined to congratulate the locals in towns where they make a stop.

Comrade O'Hare is well-known as a Socialist agitator in many parts of the West and most favorable reports have reached us of his recent work in the strike field of Pennsylvania.

Of Fieldman we can speak from personal knowledge. We had not a more effective Socialist speaker in our city campaign. His power of getting and holding the attention of a crowd, even of a crowd at first inclined to be indifferent or derisive and of compelling them to think, is really remarkable.

The comrades in any town where Fieldman and O'Hare make a stop should spare no pains to get out the biggest audience they can. No one will be disappointed—unless at the fact that they cannot stay longer.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

We have to thank the many comrades who responded to our request for a prompt report of election results. By their aid we were able to give much fuller information in the issue immediately following Election Day than we have done in any previous year. Readers will take into consideration the fact that we closed our forms forty-eight hours after the closing of the polls and that we have none of the facilities of the capitalist press for collecting the news of our vote. Under the circumstances we are well satisfied with the manner in which we were able to cover the subject and frankly give the credit to the increased alertness of the comrades. By next election day we hope to have a daily instead of a weekly and then the Socialists will not have to wait so long to know what has been the result of their year's work.

"THE CARNEGIE SYSTEM."

The Waterbury "American," in an article which is being widely reprinted, says:

"A Pennsylvania man who has studied at first hand the way the Carnegie enterprises were built up says that 'Schwab is simply another victim of the Carnegie system.' This man continues:

"'Carnegie was utterly ruthless in his way of working human machines. He looked upon them as mere machines to be raised to the 'nth' power in effectiveness, and then to be discarded as any old-fashioned machine is thrown onto the scrap heap. His policy, when he actively controlled the Carnegie works, was to choose promising young men and to push them to the limit. He paid them enormous salaries, comparatively speaking, and gave them positions of great power. They usually lasted from five to ten years. But then there were others to come along to take their places. It happened that about the time Mr. Schwab would have been ready for the scrap heap, the Morgan deal was put through, the Steel Trust was formed, and he was saved for the place of president, one far less exacting than that of superintendent of the Homestead works, which he had filled before. The effect, however, of his previous exhaustion under high pressure continued, and he has broken down. In short, he is not himself, and must in time retire from the presidency of the Steel Trust, a victim of the Carnegie system, the system of the man who made him.'"

Of course we are all sorry that Mr. Schwab has broken down under the pressure of the Carnegie system. But we do not forget that there are other and more pitiable victims of that system, to be counted by tens of thousands.

The presidency of the Steel Trust is, no doubt, as alleged, an easier job than that of superintendent of the Homestead works. And the latter position is, in turn, far easier than that of a puddler or a roller or even a common laborer in the steel mills.

Charles B. Spahr, in his little book on "America's Working People," tells of the conditions prevailing in those mills, where men have to work twelve hours a day and often seven days in the week, in a roasting temperature and breathing an atmosphere laden with vapors from the hot metal—conditions such that at the age of thirty-six a roller is counted an old man and that few can stick to the work beyond the age of forty.

Add to this the dangers of the steel workers' life. Last January The Worker published an article on this subject, showing that in Allegheny and Lawrence Counties, Pennsylvania, where the greatest iron and steel works are situated, thousands of workers are killed every year and other thousands maimed, in "accidents" that might easily be prevented, simply because the proprietors find it more profitable to run their works at the highest speed so long as they have orders, without stopping for repairs, and because life-protecting appliances cost money while the killing of workmen costs the capitalists nothing.

This is what the "American" describes as "the Carnegie system." The name is hardly accurate. Carnegie may, indeed, be taken as the type of the capitalist class—typical in his cold-blooded cruelty, his greed and egotism, his smug hypocrisy. But he is, at the worst, only a little worse than the Vanderbilts and Morgans who profit by the slaughter of railway workers, the Goulds, who fatten on the slow and agonizing death of women in the match factories, the Havemeyers, whose riches come from the earthly hells of the sugar refineries, the Baers and Markles, for whose aggrandizement the coal miners are killed by hundreds at a time in preventable explosions, and all the others, big and little, of the capitalist class.

Let us not do even Carnegie injustice. It is the capitalist system, not merely the Carnegie system, that treats men as mere machines for producing profits, works them to the limit of endurance, and then ruthlessly throws them on the scrap heap, because there are plenty of others to come along and take their places.

This is the system that the workers now support. This is the system so perfectly exemplified by Democrat Carnegie and praised by Republican Roosevelt under the name of "the strenuous life." This is the system under which workingmen suffer, the system that Socialists propose to overthrow and to replace with a fraternal organization of industry, in which the interest of one shall be the interest of all.

It is for you, reader, to say whether you stand for the old system or the new, and to prove your sincerity, not by words alone, not even by your vote alone, but by active and continuous work for the cause.

The Hartford "Times," noting the large increase in the Socialist vote, says:

"The Socialists of Germany have been organized for many years, and are numbered by millions, but somehow they never get to be a majority. The Massachusetts Socialists may increase largely for several years to come, and yet fail to get possession of the government of the commonwealth."

Very true. "May" is a safe word. In the fifties timid conservatives and cautious trimmers talked in the same way about the growth of the political movement against chattel slavery.

The Social Democrats of Germany have, indeed, been organized for many years. At each election they have increased their vote. They are now the largest party in the empire and are kept from controlling the government only by the coalition of Conservatives and Liberals against them. But there is a general election coming in Germany next spring. We shall see.

And there are more elections coming in Massachusetts and throughout the United States. We shall see.

The Philadelphia "Record," Democratic, has these sapient remarks to make on the election returns from the strike field:

"There are some bright spots in this Pennsylvania election. After six months of idleness and semi-starvation it was conceived that the miners of Luzerne, Lackawanna, and Schuylkill counties would succumb to corruption, but all three have returned handsome majorities against machine misrule. These miners, too, are the people of whom a narrow and pharisaical spirit of nativism expresses much dread of danger to the political institutions of the country."

Right you are, gentlemen of the "Record." The miners are not corrupted, not a bit of it. They are thinking, and thinking together, as they never did before. Several thousand of them showed it last week with a vote against Pennypacker and against Pattison which you, gentlemen of the "Record," did not dare to report. In a year or two more, by handsomer majorities than you ever saw, they are going to drop the corruptionists of both old-party brands into the deep dark pit of oblivion.

"How are the mighty fallen!" Bryan, with all his high talk of purity, yet appearing as the friend of Clark and of Croker, was bad enough. And now here is the strenuous Roosevelt, most aggressive of civil service reformers, following up his appointment of Spoilsman Clarkson by giving open recognition to the malodorous Addicks. Do not blame Bryan and Roosevelt. Blame capitalist politics. No politician can, in practise, be better than his party; and no party supporting the principles of capitalism can be otherwise than corrupt.

THE ECONOMIC LEAGUE IN CONNECTICUT.

A comrade in Hartford writes of the political situation there:

"Notwithstanding the fact that we made no gain here in this election (lost two from our former figure of 339) the circumstances are very favorable. There was an Economic League here. The Leaguers endorsed the Democratic Party. Result: They are kicked out and are 'a back number,' sure enough. There is a large good element among them, and these men are now kicking themselves for having been in that deal. They openly say, 'It is Socialism now and forever with us.'"

The comrades are already taking steps to open an active campaign with speakers and literature to acquaint all the wage-workers of Hartford with the principles of Socialism and the methods of the Socialist Party, and they feel very confident of the result.

These facts may prove both instructive and reassuring to comrades in other parts of the country where there either is or is likely to be an "independent labor party," a "union labor party," or something of the sort.

The Socialist Party has nothing to fear from such movements, so long as it maintains its own separate identity and pursues its own course, teaching straight Socialism and practising straight Socialist tactics. Repeated observation has shown us that labor parties not founded on the sound principles of Socialism are inevitably of little vitality and of short life, no matter how sincere their rank and file, or even many of their leaders may be.

Where such a movement arises, it is the business of the Socialist Party, not to go out of its way to attack the new organization, certainly never to provoke avoidable rancor, but to nominate its own candidates and carry on, if possible, a little more vigorous campaign of education than before.

For the time we may not gain, we may even lose votes. But we at least hold up the flag of Socialism for the disappointed followers of the evanescent labor party to rally around when, as invariably happens, they learn, by hard experience, the mistake they have made.

We want to command the confidence of these men. We can do that only by deserving their confidence. We can deserve it only by being true to ourselves.

Our comrades in Connecticut have had a hard fight to make this year, on account of the delusive hopes raised by the election of a number of labor mayors and councilmen in various cities last year. They have borne themselves bravely and wisely in that fight, and the gain which they have made, small though it is in comparison with that of some other states, is worth more than ten times as many votes would have been, if won at the price of even the smallest compromise.

THE PLACE OF WEALTHY MEN IN THE PARTY.

The comrades need not be surprised that we have many more or less unpleasant party affairs to take up for discussion as soon as we have finished our campaign work and in the very moment of our rejoicing over election results. Nor need anyone be alarmed at the existence of party troubles. As the boy grows to manhood he inevitably meets new hardship, new dangers, new problems, new temptations, new trials of his strength and his endurance and his courage and his wisdom. To hope to reach the stature and power of manhood and yet to escape its troubles and the mistakes through the experience of which wisdom is bought would, indeed, be an idle dream. Even so is it with our party or with any other social movement. As it grows it must meet ever new and greater difficulties, external and internal. The saving consideration is that, as it grows, it has ever greater ability to overcome these difficulties.

We have spoken last week of the California affair and have deprecated and condemned the virtual endorsement of another party, even though that party is a union labor organization. We shall have more to say on this matter. But this week we have another subject to discuss—that of the position of wealthy men in the Socialist Party.

Two incidents of the last few months make a discussion of this subject timely.

In New Jersey a certain comrade made an offer to the State Committee to the effect—at least, it was to this effect that it was then understood and with this understanding it was, for the time, accepted—that he would pay the salary of a state organizer on condition that a certain comrade named by him should be appointed to that office.

The second case is a larger one, though not heretofore made public and not yet carried into action. We are credibly informed that a certain wealthy comrade has offered to pay the expenses of a delegate from the Socialist Party of the United States to the next International Congress on condition that one of three men named by him should be chosen for that honorable and responsible post. This offer has not been acted upon, nor do we believe that there is the slightest probability of its even coming before the party for decision. We cite it only as a text.

In both cases we wish it to be distinctly understood that we make no question of the good faith or the pure intentions of any one of the comrades concerned. The good faith of Comrade X or Comrade Z would, indeed, be a matter of very small concern, compared with the principle involved in these cases.

The guileless may, perhaps, ask: "Where is the harm? If the man recommended by our wealthy comrade is not fit for the position in question, we can refuse the offer. If he is fit, there is no reason why we should not accept it."

But sad experience has taught us the power of precedent and the dangers of acquiescence. "It is not enough that Cæsar's wife be virtuous. She must be above suspicion."

We have in mind a case in a New York trade union, parallel to those stated above in every respect except that of good faith. A certain labor leader and Tammany politician wanted to go as a delegate to the last state convention of the Workingmen's Federation. His own local union, disapproving of his activity in capitalist politics, voted him down. Promptly, before the matter could be generally known, he sent his representatives to another local of his trade—a small local, which could not afford to send a delegate at its own expense—with word that he was going at his own cost anyhow and would be glad to have credentials from this small union. The credentials were given, all unsuspectingly. Only when it was too late did the members of the small union in question awaken to the fact that they had been used as tools to further the schemes of a misleader whom those that knew him best in his organization had refused to trust.

Every trade unionist of any experience will recall many incidents of the same sort—some bringing immediate disaster, others, still worse, not at once showing their evil tendency, but silently undermining the self-reliance and self-respect of the rank and file and giving prestige and power to certain individuals who happened to have more money than the others, and especially, in the end, to the least scrupulous among them.

We do not wish to repeat in the Socialist Party the experience that has been gone through by so many other organizations. We should profit by their experience and learn to avoid their errors.

We have no desire to cultivate a habit of suspicion in the rank and file nor to carry discipline and strictness of tactics to an unreasonable extreme. Yet, if we are to make the choice, it were better to err on this side than on the other.

We need not exclude men of wealth from our ranks, if they choose to join us in good faith, nor need we repulse their offers of pecuniary aid. It is their duty and their right, since they have more, to give more to the cause than the poor workingmen. But the poor workingmen who make up the great mass of our party must not forget that on themselves rests the real burden of responsibility. Because others give more, they must not think that they have any right to depend on those others to give all, or to concede to those givers any authority in virtue of their gifts. If that is the alternative, then were it a thousand times better that we reject all offers of service from any but actual wage-workers.

But it is not necessary to go to any such extreme.

What, then, is to be our rule in this matter? It seems to us very plain.

We must draw no arbitrary lines among those who offer to join our ranks. Be they workingmen, moved by a consciousness of their class interest, or men of wealth and culture, actuated by humane sentiment or intellectual conviction, we assume their equal good faith, in the absence of valid evidence against it, and we welcome them all equally as comrades.

We must draw no lines among our party members other than those of proven personal fitness for this or that sort of work. If one comrade, a laborer, gives a quarter to the campaign fund and another, a skilled and well paid mechanic, gives a dollar, we do not grant the latter an extra vote nor do we listen to the former with any less respect because of the smallness of his gift. If, then, another comrade gives a hundred dollars or a thousand—involving, perhaps, even less sacrifice than the quarter given by the poor laborer—this donation is no ground for our granting his authority to dictate party policy nor even for our listening any the more carefully to his advice. Each has given what he felt that he owed to the cause. The party accepts each contribution with equal regard and owes nothing to either giver—nothing but that the party shall be true to itself.

Of the wealthy comrade himself, as well as of the party, we may say, "It is not enough that his motives be sincere; they must be above suspicion." Let him remember that the greatest thing he can give, and the thing that he must give first, else all the rest is in vain, is not his purse, but himself. Of his money, let him give as much or as little as he pleases. That is for him to judge. But if he gives money, let him give it absolutely without conditions or restrictions, absolutely for the party to dispose of at its judgment. And if he has not yet learned this lesson, if he does not understand that spirit of democracy which makes such a demand, let the party illustrate it to him by refusing even the most munificent gift, if coupled with any condition that puts his judgment above that of the rank and file.

We are coming to the time when this question will frequently arise. We are coming to the time when we shall have such offers made, not, as now, in good faith, but by crafty emissaries of capitalism. Let us guard the revolutionary spirit against any taint of commercial ethics and capitalist politics.

Two days after election the "independent" mine owners of Pennsylvania—the Markles, who, the week before, were evicting active union men and Socialists from their homes—gave notice that they would accept the decision of the Arbitration Commission. A quadrupled Socialist vote in the state had its effect upon them.

A READER'S JUDGMENT.

"From The Worker I have received much entertainment and instruction. Four or five such articles as Courtenay Lemon's in the issue of Sept. 6 on child-slavery are worth the subscription price for the year. Such clear-cut reading furnished by The Worker each week should develop Socialists with earnestness and backbone in their make-up. I have taken about twenty subscriptions here for Socialist papers, but the readers are but babes as yet. I am in hopes that some of them will soon relish the 'strong meat' supplied by The Worker." So writes Comrade Ryerse of Simcoe, Ont., in renewing.

THE CO-OPERATIVE PRESS.

A co-operative job printing establishment has been started in connection with The Worker and "Volkszeitung" at 184 William street, New York City, which is expected to become a valuable addition to the forces of the forward labor movement.

The establishment is controlled by a conference representing one hundred and twenty-nine unions and other labor organizations. No dividends will be declared, nor profits given in any form, the whole net proceeds of the business going to improve its equipment and to serve the labor movement in whatever way the conference may think best.

The office is prepared to print cards, tickets, handbills, leaflets, pamphlets, and do all other sorts of job work in English or German. Labor organizations and individuals who would rather give their orders to a co-operative establishment than to pay profits to a private capitalist are requested to remember The Co-operative Press, 184 William street; telephone call, 302 John.

STATE AUTONOMY.

State autonomy properly defined and safe-guarded is as necessary to our movement as democracy is necessary to Socialism.

State autonomy is not state exclusiveness. It is not a license for a state committee to sever itself from the general movement. It is not authority to keep inter-state speakers out of its territory or to prevent the national committee from arranging transcontinental tours. It is not an apology for cheating the national organization out of dues. It is not a special permit to compromise the principles of international Socialism in order to curry political advantage in a locality.

It is the placing of the responsibility of organization on the locality where such work is being done. The responsibility being thus placed, the work is effectively done. The tremendous growth of our movement may be largely attributed to this distribution (to the states) of responsibility.

That every state issue a separate set of printed supplies is not essential to state autonomy. That the National Quorum be supplied with a duplicate list of organizations and their accounts would not destroy autonomy. But if the comrades in St. Louis could, by the stuffed club of national authority, compel the locals of Montana to oppose the American Labor Union, this would destroy state autonomy, and likewise the Socialist movement in Montana.

What is being opposed over the country is not state autonomy, but the misuse of state autonomy. But the misuse of state autonomy cannot be so harmful as the misuse of an imperial national organization.

The political organization of this country is by states. When we become official in the different states we must act by state organizations or be illegal. We must keep state autonomy or come to it later.—Social Justice.

"THE LAW ALLOWS IT AND THE COURT DECREES IT."

We have had exhaustive—and, as some of us think, exhausting—reports of the Molineux case in the capitalist press. The case of William C. Crane vs. the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company has not been very fully presented. Yet it much better deserves the attention of workingmen.

We give the account of this case as printed in the "Evening Post" of Friday, Nov. 7. It is worth reading and thinking of. The "Post" says:

"In the case of William C. Crane against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, which has been on trial in the Supreme Court, before Justice Gildersleeve, since Monday, the jury this morning brought in a sealed verdict in favor of the company. Crane was the administrator of Joseph Patrick Connolly, a brakeman, who was killed in a collision between two freight trains, near Long Hill, Conn., on Sept. 30, 1901. The collision was caused by the forgetfulness of one of the engineers, who had, it was testified, been required by the company to work continuously for so long a time as completely to exhaust him, both physically and mentally.

"It was shown upon the trial that this engineer had been CONTINUOUSLY ON DUTY, day and night, from four o'clock on a Friday afternoon until five o'clock on the following Monday morning, when the collision occurred, a period of SIXTY-ONE HOURS, in the course of which he had been able to snatch only six hours and fifteen minutes sleep. On Sunday morning, after working for thirty-six hours consecutively, he had asked to be relieved, upon the express ground that he was tired out, 'near dead,' as he testified, from lack of sleep, and that he was not fit to run an extra train he had been ordered to take out. Nevertheless, he was not relieved. The collision resulted, killing three men, injuring several others, wrecking both locomotives and about twenty cars, and destroying thousands of dollars' worth of freight. The overworked engineer lost his right hand in the 'accident.'

"The suit was brought to recover $25,000 damages for the death of Connolly. In defence the railroad company took refuge in a technical point, claiming that damages could not be recovered because Connolly was an employee of the company, and the collision resulted from the negligence of a fellow-employee.

"After the verdict had been returned, counsel asked that it be set aside as against the weight of evidence. His application was denied, and notice of appeal was given."

The verdict was rendered in accordance with the rulings of the judge and the judge denies the motion to set aside the verdict.

It is thus decided, on the authority of the Supreme Court of the state, THAT AN EMPLOYER MAY REQUIRE HIS EMPLOYEES, UNDER PENALTY OF DISCHARGE, TO WORK TWO DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS IN SUCCESSION, WITH ONLY SIX HOURS REST, AND THAT THE COMPANY IS NOT EVEN FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE IF A FATAL DISASTER RESULTS.

That is terrible enough. It should furnish food for thought for every railway worker and every other workingman—for every trade has its risks and the decision applies to all trades.

But that is not the worst. The worst is that THE DECISION IN THIS CASE IS PERFECTLY IN ACCORD WITH THE ESTABLISHED PRINCIPLES OF LAW.

Aren't you glad we have wise men to make laws for us, you workingmen? Aren't you proud to call yourselves law-abiding citizens?

The engineer lost a hand in the "accident." He has no case against the company, says the law, because he made a "free contract" with the company which employed him. If he did not feel like going to work Sunday morning, after working thirty-six hours at a stretch, he was perfectly free to refuse, get discharged, go home and take a nap, and then go out to hunt another job and find himself listed on every road in the country as "discharged for disobeying orders." He took the risk, "voluntarily assumed it," says the law, and he alone is to blame that he has only one hand now.

The brakeman lost his life. His widow and orphans have no case against the company, says the law, for he also made a "free contract" with the company, "voluntarily assumed the risk" of going out on a train run by an engineer who had only six hours sleep out of sixty-one. He, too, would have been discharged and blacklisted if he had refused to go out. But he was a free man and it is his own fault that he is dead.

So says the law, established by the decisions of generations of dead-and-gone judges and confirmed by this present Judge Gildersleeve.

But why is the law so? Why does the law pretend that there is a "free contract between employer and employee? Why does the law overlook the fact that the workingman is dependent on the capitalist for permission to work and live at all? Why does the law give the workingmen all the dignity and all the responsibility and give the capitalist all the profit?

Why? Because THE WORKINGMEN HAVE ALLOWED CAPITALIST POLITICIANS TO NOMINATE TWO SETS OF CORORATION LAWYERS AND HAVE THEN PROCEEDED TO DIVIDE THEIR VOTES BETWEEN THEM AND PUT ONE SET OR THE OTHER ON THE BENCH TO TRY JUST SUCH CASES AS THIS.

Merchants whose property was destroyed in that collision can recover damages.

Capitalist law protects capitalists from each other.

Workingmen who were injured in that collision, working women whose husbands were killed in it, have no case against the company. Capitalist law does not protect workingmen against capitalists.

The judicial candidates of the Socialist Party (in this state, the Social Democratic Party) are pledged to overturn such principles as this, to throw to the dogs the unjust precedents of capitalist judges, to establish the new principle that, so long as capitalism continues, so long as there are master and servant, the master shall be held responsible for injury to the servant who makes his profits, and that no fiction of "free contract" shall protect him.

Our legislative candidates are pledged to incorporate this new principle in the statute law and our candidates for executive office are pledged to enforce it.

You will have another chance next year, fellow workers, to say WHETHER THE LAW SHALL SACRIFICE LIFE TO PROFITS OR WHETHER IT SHALL BE USED TO PROTECT YOU AGAINST YOUR EXPLOITERS.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Cleveland Leader (Rep.)

Many readers of this paper will remember that it has predicted the growing seriousness and importance of Socialism as a political force in the United States. The opinion has been expressed that the Socialists were sure to become the next important minor party, and that they had elements of continuing strength which several organizations once prominent in American public life have lacked.

Hard times are the natural opportunity for small parties of discontent to flourish. In prosperous years they make headway slowly, as a rule. Then the force of inertia holds men in old organizations, and there is a general disposition to rest content with familiar political divisions and subjects of discussion. Unrest breeds new parties. Industrial and commercial troubles beget discontent.

Now there is general prosperity and an unusual disposition to shun changes. Business conditions are adverse to the spread of Socialism. Its gains now are made in spite of the general nature of the times. And yet it grows and grows fast.

In Massachusetts the Socialist candidate for governor has just polled 34,000 votes, or about one in every dozen cast in the state. His party has scored a gain in a single year of about 300 per cent. It has shown more strength than any other minor party ever did since the civil war.

Similar results, though less emphatic, are noted in Ohio. Here the Socialist vote seems to have been multiplied by three, and it has risen to such a bulk that it will not be necessary for the Socialist ticket to be placed on the official ballot by petition, next year. Max Hayes, the Socialist candidate for Secretary of State, seems to have received about 15,000 votes in Ohio, and to have run far ahead of all other small party tickets.

It is not hard to read the meaning of such facts. When the next period of dull business comes, the Socialists will have to be reckoned with as a power threatening the stability of American institutions. For a long time important elements in the Democratic party have been catering to vague and incipient Socialism. The results may be seen in conditions which will force conservative Democrats into the Republican ranks by millions.

Chicago Daily News.

A heavy Socialist vote was reported early to-day, many of the laboring men voting this ticket. The Socialists have made claims that they would break all previous records for their party in Cook County at this election and indications are their boasts will be verified. Many supporters of the united labor party are said to have cast their ballot for this ticket this morning.

FOR THE MINERS.

National Secretary Greenbaum reports the receipt of $45.45 since Nov. 2 for the Miners' Strike Fund, bringing the total received and forwarded by him for this purpose up to $8,967.90.

The following sums have been received at the office of The Worker and sent to Secretary Greenbaum:

Previously acknowledged, $2,705.60; F. Schultz, $1; United Journeymen Tailors, New York, $213.75; E. K. & Co., $12; Deutscher Maschinisten Klub, Brooklyn, $50; Theo. Etter, $3; J. Rehm, 50c.; India Rubber Co., Comb Dept., College Point, L. I., $16.17; Hungarian Speaking Socialist Club, collection, $20.80; P. Bisson, Raymond, Cal., 50c.; Wm. Hoffman, Warsaw, Ill., $1; L. Grand, 50c.; S. Sharf, 50c.; F. Frank, 50c.; Progressive Lodge, No. 335, I. A. M., $14.10; Success, 50c.; Otto Lepke, $1; Arbeiter Ring, No. 7, W. Hoboken, $10; U. B. of Carpenters and Joiners, collected in organized cabinet shops, $210; Turn Verein Vorwarts, N. Y., collection, $27.25; Soc. Mchr., Hoboken, N. J., $10; collected by Henry Schneller, Pearl River, N. Y., $15; Passamenterie Workers' Union, N. Y., $12; Bakers' and Confectioners' Union, No. 25, Brooklyn, $10; Hutter, New Haven, Conn., 50 c.; S. Grubttzer, $1; Prog. Lodge, No. 335, I. A. M., $1; Chas. Effenberger, Lancaster, Pa., $2; U. B. of Carpenters and Joiners, collected in organized cabinet shops, $150; Success, 50c.; John Veara, Chicago, Ill., 50c.; "Volkszeitung" Chapel (Typographical Union), $10; Success, 50c.; Arb. Kinder St. Kasse, Br. 70, Mount Morris, $5; total, $3,514.67.

This fund may now be considered as closed. The Worker feels well satisfied with the part which the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party has taken in helping the miners in their heroic fight, and we believe the miners fully appreciate the aid given.

THE CALIFORNIA AFFAIR.

So far as The Worker has received an expression of opinion from the comrades in regard to the California affair as reported last week, it is unanimously against the policy adopted by our Western comrades.

The matter has been much discussed at the Labor Lyceum and in other places where Socialists come together in this city, and the only difference of opinion seems to be on the best measures to be taken to protect the party from the opportunist tendency illustrated in this case.

In another column appears a brief note from Toledo expressing the feelings of the sturdy and aggressive band of Socialists who have done such splendid work in that city, in the face of Jonesism and Johnsonism, during the last two years. We print below a few other letters on the subject:

I.

Editor of The Worker.

The nature and extent of the California heresy pains and amazes me; I could not have believed such a thing possible. I fear it is but the beginning and that the end will be disastrous to the Socialist Party. The Independent Labor Party of California will be in national politics next year or the year after in competition with the Socialist parties.

This party can be no more to us than is the Republican or the Democratic party, or one of any other name which is not a Socialist party. The fact that it is socialistic in its tendencies, and has already attracted to it prominent and able Socialists, is nothing in its favor. Two Socialist parties are enough—one too many; there must not be another.

Let parties be multiplied by the dozen or score, if people desire it. Let them draw their followers from those parties which are our avowed enemies and we will not object. But when they seek to divert Socialists from the direct road to the Co-operative Commonwealth, we know they are no friends of ours, and we will have no dealings with them.

We have been too much given to speaking of trade unions and labor organizations as if they were socialistic bodies—as they should be, but are not, and will not be until bitter experience has shown them that more is needed for the welfare and safety of their membership than is dreamed of in their philosophy. We must think and talk and print more Socialism, if not less trade unionism.

W. H. WYATT.

Rutherford, N. J.

II.

Editor of The Worker.

The recent occurrences in California, which The Worker lays before its readers in last week's issue, admit, in my opinion, of discussion on but one point. All comrades will doubtless agree that the Socialist Party cannot, under any conditions, fuse or work in harmony with any other party which is not a strictly Socialist organization. The only question then to be decided is: Is the Union Labor Party a Socialist organization? We in New York City know little or nothing of its professed principles or tactics. To aid comrades in forming an opinion it might be advisable to publish its platform and to give details of its practical work in San Francisco. We know this much, however; its acknowledged leader, Mr. Eugene Schmitz, present "labor" Mayor of San Francisco, came to New York City, THE GUEST OF TAMMANY HALL, two weeks before election. The New York "American," mouthpiece of organized corruption, political boodlery, and psendo-working-class politics in this city, took this opportunity of again posing as "labor's friend" and incidentally booming the candidacy of its owner, Wm. R. Hearst.

From this it seems that the U. L. P. has been organized, like so many other "labor parties," by disgruntled politicians who propose to climb into office over the backs of the working class or, not succeeding in this, to regain the favor of old-party machines by means of the "labor vote which they control," as the phrase goes.

E. WILLVONSEDER.

New York, Nov. 8.

Comrade Goebel of Newark writes: "I wish to commend the stand The Worker has taken in regard to the California situation. While it is hard to get all the facts this far from the locality directly affected, yet it seems plain from what we know that a very dangerous precedent is likely to be established if we allow this action of the California comrades to go unnoticed."

A Southern comrade writes: "Your editorial on 'The California Situation' meets my view exactly. I can't account for the supidity of the Pacific Coast Socialists except on the theory of the all-around damphoolery of the workingman. He is the simplest thing in nature."

JUBILEE SMOKER.

Friday evening, Nov. 14, the Social Democrats of New York hold a jubilee smoker in the Manhattan Lyceum, 66-68 E. Fourth street, to celebrate the results of one year's hard work and demonstrate their enthusiasm in beginning another. All who voted the Social Democratic ticket last week and all who intend to vote it next November are invited to attend. Admission is 10 cents.

HAS FOUND HIS PARTY.

"I cast my first vote for the Democratic party in 1840, but soon became convinced that both the Democratic and Whig parties were owned by the slave-holders. I have not been attached to any party since. From what I have recently learned I see that I have been a Socialist all this time." So writes H. More of Denver to Comrade Reich of New York, in ordering Socialist literature.

——Those fellows that threw their votes away for Coler and Steckler are just our game. Go after them, comrades, with Socialist papers and pamphlets as ammunition.

PARTY NOTES.

The Worker and other Socialist literature is on sale at Emery's News Room, 381 Middlesex street, Lowell, Mass.

The Ohio State Committee of the Socialist Party realizes the value of the party press. A printed slip has been prepared and is circulated among party members on every possible occasion, bearing on one side a list of several good party papers and on the other these words:

"Comrade:—We suggest that the members of your local read at least one Socialist paper which publishes in every issue an account of the party's methods, the work being accomplished by party organizers and agitators, and also the results of party organization—local, state, and national. Yours fraternally,
"W. G. CRITCHLOW, State Sec'y."

The Connecticut State Committee deserves credit for the excellent system adopted for getting in prompt election returns. Postal cards were printed, with blanks for the name of the city or town and for the vote of each party. Some of these were sent in advance to a reliable comrade in each place with instructions to get the returns as early as possible on election night and immediately to fill in blanks and mail one of the cards to the State Secretary and others to party papers. Similar preparations should be made in every state next year.

The Socialists of Lawrence held a jubilation meeting on the Sunday after election. Louis R. Talbot presided and the speakers were James A. Wilkinson, our candidate for Congress in the late camapign; William J. Lynch, our candidate for Mayor, and Representative James F. Carey. Enthusiasm was unbounded. Twenty new members joined the party organizations, and Comrade Tepper writes that twenty more are expected at the next regular meeting of the local club.

Any readers of The Worker who are willing and able to contribute to the Brockton city campaign fund are requested to send in their contributions, great or small, without delay, to F. C. Sullivan, 12 William street, Brockton, Mass. The Brockton boys have put up a good fight in the state election and they deserve all the help that can be given them in their effort to carry the city next month.

Comrade Shay of York, Pa., writes: "We intend to secure a good circulation for The Worker in York, if possible. Among other methods, we shall have a boy to sell the paper on the streets." They start off with a hundred copies of the present issue.

The November number of Strickland's "Social Justice" is a very bright little booklet full of good propaganda talk and wisdom on party matters. The next number of "Social Justice," which has formerly been issued at Yellow Springs, O., will be issued from Aspen, Colo., about February, 1, 1903.

New York City.

Comrades and sympathizers in the Bronx holding campaign fund lists from the Bronx Borough Agitation Committee are requested to turn in the lists with moneys collected on them at once, as it is desired to settle up all accounts as soon as possible and begin the work for next year with a clean slate.

Six new members were admitted at the last meeting of the 35th A. D. A letter enclosing a dollar was received from an unknown friend in Washington, D. C. Regular meetings will be held henceforth on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of each month.

The 1st, 3d, and 5th A. D. of the S. D. P. will meet at 150 Spring street at the restaurant of Comrade Scharenberg on Nov. 17 at 8 p. m. Be prompt.

Sunday evening, Nov. 16, Charles Uffert of Jersey City will lecture in Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, under the auspices of the 21st A. D. His subject will be "The Mission of the Working Class." Admission is free and all are welcome.—The next business meeting of the district will be Friday evening, Nov. 21, at the same place.

The 16th A. D. took in eight new members at its last meeting. Steps were taken toward establishing a club room. It was decided to send The Worker for four consecutive weeks to all those who gave their names at the outdoor meetings in the campaign and to send the Jewish booklet, "What the Social Democratic Party Is and What It Stands For" to such of them as read Jewish. It was also decided to buy fifty copies of The Worker weekly and place them on the newsstands at Third street and Avenue B, Second street and Avenue D, Willett and Stanton streets, Houston and Ridge, and Fifth street and Avenue C. The comrades are well pleased with the vote, in their own district and elsewhere and are resolved to do still better next year. The district meets on the first and third Thursday evening of each month at Lafayette Hall, 8-10 Avenue D. The next meeting will be on Nov. 20. Every reader of The Worker in the district should join.

The 28th A. D. will hold a discussion meeting at 1497 Avenue A, Friday evening, Nov. 14, at which some good speaker will discuss the results of the election and their significance. All Social Democrats in the district and all who are interested to know what we have accomplished and what we intend for the future are invited to attend.—Regular meetings of the district will be held on the second and fourth Friday evening of each month at the same place. Every Social Democratic voter is expected to join the organization.

BOSTON'S JUBILEE.

Faneuil Hall Never Held a More Enthusiastic Crowd.

It Was at Once a Celebration of the Splendid Gains Just Made and the Opening of the City Campaign.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—Last night in old Faneuil Hall the Socialists of Boston celebrated the trebling of their vote in the state, the re-election of James F. Carey and Frederick O. MacCartney to the Legislature, and the election of Wallace C. Ransden to re-enforce them there. To say that the meeting was enthusiastic is to put it mildly. All the old workers for Socialism were there and plenty of new ones. The hall was packed and jammed, and the "Globe" concedes that no more jubilant crowd ever gathered in that "cradle of liberty."

The meeting was preceded by a parade, starting from the South Station immediately on the arrival of the Brockton contingent. The Brockton Socialist Band was there, with three hundred comrades from that city, escorting their new representative, who received a veritable ovation. Not less than fifteen hundred comrades, men and women, were in the line that passed up Sumner and Washington streets to Adams Square and then to Faneuil Hall. Great crowds gathered along the way and cheered lustily.

Our veteran comrade, Squire E. Putney, introduced Patrick Mahoney as the chairman of the meeting. The speakers that followed were, in order, William Mailly, Parkman B. Flanders of Haverhill, Charles H. Coulter of Brockton, Dr. H. A. Gibbs of Worcester, Representative MacCartney, Representative-elect Ransden, L. B. Talbot of Lawrence (in French), John C. Chase, and Representative Carey. Every speaker was at his best, as befitted the occasion and rousing cheers preceded and followed each address.

A collection of $123.93 further testified to the enthusiasm of the audience. As a jubilee it was a success. As an opening for the city campaign it was as brilliant and full of good omen as the now historic meeting, just two months earlier, at which the Socialist resolutions on the coal strike were carried with such telling effect.

Comrade White of Maine resumes his work as State Organizer this week and his previous success justifies the expectation of good results.

Preparations for the municipal campaigns in the various cities are going on rapidly and there is no doubt that the December elections will bring us still further gains.

John Spargo of New York will spend a week for the party in Massachusetts, beginning Nov. 24.

The Boston city convention will be held on Saturday evening, Nov. 15, at 724 Washington street, to make nominations for Street Commissioner and School Committee. W. M.

THE MONTANA CAMPAIGN.

The Butte "Miner," a Clark Democratic paper, was forced, in the week before election, to abandon its policy of ignoring the Socialist Party. It said, in part:

"The Socialist Party that expects to be able to boast of a great growth of party strength, held a meeting at the Auditorium last evening. The figure set by the most hopeful and enthusiastic of the Socialist leaders for their vote in Silver Bow County is 1,200 and 3,000 in the state. The meeting last evening compared favorably in attendance with any Republican meeting that has been held in Butte during this campaign, and the enthusiasm displayed was much more spontaneous. Also the applause, although not so loud as is usually produced by the paid rooters at the Heinze meetings, was certainly more sincere and was joined in by a greater proportion of those present. * * *

"The managers of the meeting had issued a challenge to the speakers of any of the other parties to a joint debate, but it was evidently the busy night of the orators of other political faiths, for none of them put in an appearance. The debate was to have been on the question: 'Why the Socialist Party Should Not Win at the Coming Election.' As none of the opposing forces were at hand, the Socialists had everything their own way.

"Whatever may be said of the impracticability of the Socialist theory, or of the utopian nature of their proposed system of government, it is certain that in Montana the party is making an aggressive campaign and has aroused interest. Their unique manner of street campaign has proved quite effective in reaching voters, and now, at the end of the most memorable campaign in this county and state, other movements have fallen into line and have adopted the same method of reaching the people.

"Clarence Smith, Secretary-Treasurer of the American Labor Union, was one of the speakers. In a three-minute speech Mr. Smith severely arraigned every other party in Silver Bow County except the Socialist Party, charging that all were controlled by capitalists and corporations.

"He referred to the regular Democratic party as the party of W. A. Clark, the Republican party as controlled by the Amalgamated Copper Company, and the so-called fusion party as the tool of the United Copper Company. 'I make the charge, and I make it deliberately,' said he, 'that the so-called labor party is in reality not a labor party at all, but that it is officered, managed and controlled absolutely by F. A. Heinze and the United Copper Company.'"

As shown by our dispatches, the success of the Socialist Party considerably surpassed the expectations of the most sanguine comrades—and that, in spite of an unprecedented campaign of fake and boodle carried on by all three of the copper-capitalist parties.

GEORGIA TO KILL CHILD-LABOR BILL?

The Democrats of several Southern states, notably Georgia and Texas, alarmed by the expose of the infamies of child-labor in the Southern cotton mills, made solemn promises during the campaign that effective legislation should be adopted to remedy the evil. How they intend to keep these pledges is foreshadowed in the following special to the "Evening Post," relating, it will be observed, to the session of the Georgia Legislature on the day after election:

"ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—The Child-Labor Bill came to the front in the House of Representatives in a rather unusual manner to-day, when Representative C. C. Houston of Fulton County, author of the bill, asked to have it transferred from the Committee on Labor and Labor Statistics, of which he was chairman, and referred to the Committee on Education. There was objection, but a motion to that effect was finally carried by an overwhelming vote, and the Education Committee will take the bill up for consideration early next week.

"As soon as this action had been taken, Mr. Houston tendered his resignation as Chairman of the Labor Committee, and declined to serve on it in any capacity. Mr. Houston gave no explanation of his action to the members of the House, but in an interview, later, said:

"'After an investigation of the matter, I have become convinced that the committee was appointed with a view to bringing in an adverse report on the bill. I have found that fifteen of the twenty-two members on the committee are opposed to the bill. Thus it was intended that the bill should be shelved in the committee room, or that I should carry an adverse report on it back to the House. For that reason, I had the bill recommitted to the Committee on Education, where I am satisfied it will have a fair and impartial hearing, and, I believe, a favorable report.'"

We shall believe in that favorable report when it is made, not before. We shall believe in its sincerity if the bill passes both houses and is signed and enforced by the Governor. We do not expect to see that bill until there is a good Socialist vote cast in Georgia.

It is safe to predict that the Child-Labor Bill now under discussion will pass one house and be quietly killed in the other. That is the way the Republican and Democratic politicians do things in Washington and Albany, and those in Atlanta probably know the trick.

A STATEMENT FROM COMRADE BARONDESS.

Editor of The Worker.

My Dear Comrade:—It has come to my notice that there are two rumors circulated among our comrades regarding myself. I do not know who is responsible for the spread of these rumors, but it seems that the "tattler" is alive among us, trying to do what mischief he can in order to create internal strife among the workers in the movement.

I should not mention this matter at all, if it were not for the fact that the movement might suffer by it more or less. I refer to my presence at the Schmitz reception and to my acquaintance with District Attorney Jerome. The facts are as follows:

An invitation signed by several prominent trade unionists was received by me, inviting me to be present at an informal reception to be given by some trade unions of this city to the mayor of San Francisco. I considered the matter quite carefully and, in view of the fact that the invitation plainly stated that this was to be purely a trade union affair, extending cordial greetings to a trade unionist, and of the fact that Schmitz was endorsed by the Socialist Party of San Francisco, I decided that it would be proper for me to attend. I must say that I was very anxious to see the mayor of San Francisco, so as to form an idea of the action of our comrades there. I called there, and at the beginning it looked as though it was purely a trade union affair, but later on they plunged into politics and decided to make it a Hearst affair.

I told Edward King that I would have to retire, and asked him to tell the chairman to keep my name out of the game, otherwise I should be compelled to make public announcement that I had nothing to do with it. I had no objection to have the "Journal" state that I was present at the trade union reception, but I distinctly stated that I did not want my name to be mentioned in connection with any political scheme advanced by them in the interest of Hearst.

Regarding my connection with District Attorney Jerome, I wish to say that three members of the Suspender Makers' Union who were engaged in a strike were arrested and sentenced to four months imprisonment by the Court of Special Sessions.

A shyster lawyer and political wirepuller was after that union, asking them for $500 to try with some political influence to have those men pardoned. As the term of sentence was only four months, I knew that the men would have to serve out their full term before this politician would think of them, and that the $500 that the union would have to pay would go for nothing. Besides, the union was in such a terrible predicament that it could not afford to collect the $500 by any means.

Another incident connected with this affair was that the union gave a benefit on behalf of the incarcerated members, and I being present there, learned that a band of fake missionaries, headed by the well-known individual, Warszaviack, were quite active in the matter, promising the union that they would use their "Christian political influence" in order to free the three men arrested. These missionaries made a scene at the theatre, trying to make missionary capital out of the trouble of the Suspender Makers' Union. I got a chance to speak, and gave these fellows a roasting. Addressing the audience, I said that only through the influence of the labor movement of this city was it possible to obtain the release of these men, and promised to do what I could in that direction.

I thereupon called at the Court of Special Sessions. The present District Attorney Jerome having been one of the judges at that time, I naturally spoke to him the same as I did to the other two judges. I called there in company of Comrade Louis E. Miller, and simply made a strenuous demand for the release of those men. I must say that at first we were met with a strong refusal of the judges to do anything in the way of suspension of sentence or its mitigation. I said I would bring the matter to the attention of organized labor and would make a special issue of the matter. Finally, after a great deal of effort on my part, they brought these men back to the Court of Special Sessions, and after a "learned lecture" read by the presiding justice of the Court of Special Sessions to the three men, they were released without any fine whatever.

From this, our everlasting DeLeon made a sensation and he has the time and place fixed where Mr. Jerome met Louis E. Miller, London, myself, and others of the Social Democratic Party, where a clear sale was made to Jerome of the Socialist votes of this city.

Of course you understand that what DeLeon says about me doesn't bother me in the least, but that our comrades should give credence to a DeLeon fake and spread rumors of that kind is a surprise to me.

I hope this statement will set the matter right, and that our comrades will beware in the future to take any cognizance of DeLeon fake sensations.

Fraternally yours,
JOSEPH BARONDESS.

STRIKE BREAKERS.

A new business has sprung up. It is the business of supplying "strike breakers."

To illustrate the character and scope of this detestable occupation we quote from the advertising card of a New York detective agency which has embarked in it, evidently on a large scale:

Special.—We are prepared to furnish strike breakers, men to take the place of strikers, in every capacity from messenger boys to locomotive engineers on reasonable notice. This includes machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, conductors, and brakemen and motormen for trolley roads, etc., etc.

If labor were in great demand how could "strike breakers" be so easily secured. If there were real prosperity they would be better employed. That they can be secured, however, does not depend upon the unconfirmed advertisement of a detective agency. It is demonstrated by actual experience. A large squad of "strike breakers" was recently taken by a Chicago detective agency a distance of 1,000 miles from Chicago to New Orleans to break a street-car strike.

Rioting resulted, of course. So long as human nature is what it is, such things will cause violent outbreaks. If you dispute it, put yourself for a moment in the palce of the New Orleans strikers. You have your home in that city. Your family is dependent upon your wages. Your wages are low and your hours are long. You solicit of your corporate employer a consideration of your condition, asking for a few pennies more in wages and a few minutes less in working time. Your solicitations are ignored. Then you do the only thing you can do, unless you merely keep on at your work, with its exhausting hours and shabby pay; you join with your associates in a peaceable strike. While this is in progress a group of strange men, imported from a thousand miles away, come into your city, in charge of a private detective. They do not come to settle among you as neighbors. They do not come to cast in their lot with the citizens of the city, where your humble home is established. They come as aliens, as enemies, as professional "strike breakers," and their coming means the loss of your home as the alternative of continuing in the slavish dependence for a niggardly livelihood upon the soulless body corporate for which you work.

Perhaps you wouldn't heave a brick at the interlopers. But have you ever been put to a similar test and withstood the temptation?—The Public.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER.

When the roses of summer were budding and blooming,
And the yellow wheat bent 'neath its burden of gold,
The Prodigal Son came, world-weary and tattered,
To the home where his footsteps had echoed of old;
And they clung to his garments with tears and caresses,
'Till the cup of his welcome ran over with joy,
And the flowers of love and forgiveness were woven
In a blossoming crown for the Prodigal Boy.

When the icicles hung from the leaves and the branches,
And the winter winds moaned 'round the dwellings of men,
Forsaken and homeless the Prodigal Daughter
Crept back to the home of her girlhood again;
But they turned her away in the storm and the darkness,
To the icy cold winds with their chill, piercing breath,
And the pitiless curses that followed her footsteps
Were fierce as the tempest and cruel as death!

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength at present composed of 150 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

THE TRUST PROBLEM AND THE SOCIALIST SOLUTION.

Half a century ago Marx and Engels, the two great Socialists who were the first to discover the laws of social evolution and commodity production and to whose genius is due the credit of having placed the study of society upon a scientific basis, predicted the coming of the great combinations of capital now popularly known as trusts. Even before Marx the great "utopian" Fourier had predicted the combination of capital.

Socialists foretold the coming of combination and when the era of combination arrived they consistently predicted its triumphant progress and the inevitability of still greater industrial concentration and the increasing control of a constantly diminishing number of capitalists over a constantly increasing amount of capital.

The Socialist was not recognized as a scientist. He was called a fanatic and a dreamer. But the Socialist had discovered the law of industrial evolution; he had discovered that competition leads to combination and concentration; he had discovered, in the words of Marx, that "one capitalist kills many;" he had discovered that the competitive wage system caused economic "over-production" which leads to the crushing out of the smaller capitalists and still further combination. And because he knew the laws of social development the Socialist could foretell the course of economic evolution in much the same way as the chemist is able to say what will happen when certain elements are brought together, and was able to predict the coming of combinations and industrial crises and more combinations just as the astronomer who knows the laws governing the celestial bodies is able to predict the coming of eclipses and comets—not with the same mathematical exactitude, yet with the same scientific certainty.

The laws that Socialists were the first to recognize are now obvious and have penetrated even the thick craniums of college professors and political economists. The prophecy which the Socialist voiced now finds daily verification in our newspapers and has become commonplace of oft repeated realization.

But it is only very recently that the trust giants have begun to reach their colossal maturity. Two years ago the formation of the Billion Dollar Steel Trust startled the world. Then came a $400,000,000 merger of railroads in the Northern Securities Company. Next Morgan's shipping combination set the rulers of Europe in a panic. A month ago official announcement was made of the organization of the shipping combination under the name of the International Mercantile Marine Company, with a capital of $120,000,000. The same week saw the end of the "tobacco war" by the amalgamation of the American and British interests in an international and world-wide trust to be known as the British-American Tobacco Company, Limited. As this international Tobacco Trust divides the world among its constituent companies, so the Standard Oil Trust had formerly divided the world's oil trade by an agreement with the Russian oil magnates. And there seems little doubt that the popular outcry against the Beef Trust, which can be more truly called the Food Trust, has only served to change it from a loose agreement among packers to a corporation with a blanket charter. And these half-dozen menacing monsters are only the more conspicuous members of the fearful family to which capitalism has given birth within the last few years, whose every day has seen the coming of some lesser brother of this same titanic tribe.

The following list of eighty-two trusts, compiled by John Moody, publisher of Moody's Manual of Corporation Securities, a recognized authority on financial statistics, includes only INDUSTRIAL consolidations or "trusts" OF TEN MILLION DOLLARS CAPITALIZATION AND OVER, in existence up to September 1, 1902, AND WHICH HAVE BEEN FORMED SINCE JANUARY 1, 1899. The capitalization given includes both stocks and bonds, in cases where the latter have been issued.

In his pamphlet on "The Morganization of Industry," from which this list is taken, Mr. Moody says:

"The foregoing list of 82 combinations or 'trusts' is not by any means a complete list. It embraces only the so-called gigantic combinations which have been forming in the past three and one-half years. A complete list, without regard to date of formation and including both large and small, would probably aggregate 850 different going combinations, and would easily foot up over $9,000,000,000 of capitalization. Including railroad consolidations, such a list would make a total of over $15,000,000,000 outstanding capitalization. A 'trust,' as popularly understood, is a combination of several plants in one form or another. Strictly speaking, however, a 'trust' is simply an agreement (secret or otherwise) between several competing concerns to work in harmony. There are very few such trusts in existence now, they all having given way to the corporate form of consolidation. But in the popular sense, a modern 'trust' is an enterprise which has gained its position and strength through consolidation or combination."

Formidable as this very incomplete list of great corporations appears it does not give any adequate idea of the extent to which the concentration of immense power in the hands of a few has proceeded. For the same men who are stockholders and directors in one company are also stockholders and directors in many others. Many individual capitalists are directors in more than a score of different corporations, so that all these trusts are intertwined in ownership and connected by a far-reaching community of interests and control. Morgan alone controls interests capitalized at a figure much greater than the total capitalization of the entire list of corporations given above. By far the greater part of all the great railroad systems of the country are controlled by the four great groups: the Morgan group, the Vanderbilt group, the Gould-Rockefeller group, the Harriman-Kuhn-Loeb group and the Pennsylvania group. And the same set of men, under the names of various corporations, control and draw profits from railroads, banks, steel, oil, coal, tobacco, copper, and all the other principal industries. Scratch a corporation and you will find a capitalist who is part owner of a score of other corporations.

And this same small class control colleges and churches through their gifts, control the press by direct ownership and advertising patronage, control politicians by campaign contributions and bribes, control both the old political parties and through them the government, because they hold the purse and go into politics to protect and further their interests and maintain the system which is the source of their power and wealth.

THEY HAVE MADE EVERY LAW UPON THE STATUTE BOOKS THAT THEY DO NOT BREAK, AND THEY HAVE BROKEN EVERY LAW THAT THEY DID NOT MAKE AND MOST OF THOSE THAT THEY MADE THEMSELVES.

The trusts have reduced exploitation to a science. Where powerful trade unions prevent them from reducing wages they find ways to increase the intensity of labor and reduce the labor-cost of the product by the introduction of new machinery.

The trusts have increased the price of the necessaries of life and in many cases have successfully maintained monopoly prices, as in the case of the Beef Trust and the Coal Trust.

But the most important result of the trusts is their effect upon the problem of the unemployed. The concentration of industry, like the introduction of machinery, has thrown thousands of both clerical and manual workers out of employment, and the crushing out of the small capitalists has forced many of them into the ranks of the working class to swell the number of those looking for work.

The closer and closer organization of the capitalists has enabled them to make the blacklist of rebellious workmen more effective and enhanced their power in every direction. But at the same time it has forced the trade unions into closer affiliation and is showing the working class the necessity of political action in the political party of their own class.

On the boards of directors of the trusts will be found both Democrats and Republicans and many corporations make equal contributions to the campaign funds of both the Republican and Democratic parties. Not the least relief from capitalism can be expected from either of the old parties, for they are controlled and financed by capitalists and in accepting the capitalistic system of private ownership they are forced to accept and defend its consequences.

The public clamor for relief from the oppression of the trusts has grown so great that the politicians in their competition for votes are driven to make some show of remedies. And what are they? In the Republican party, Senator Hanna says that there are no trusts and moreover that the trusts are good anyway and should be let alone; Roosevelt says they should be regulated in a conservative spirit and proposes "publicity" and a constitutional amendment for that purpose. The Democrats cry "Smash them!" and propose to do so by taking off the tariff to admit foreign competition and by means of anti-trust laws. Some propose to overcome the evils of the trusts by "squeezing the water out of the stock," that is reducing their capitalization to the value of their material capital.

The question as to whether there are any trusts and whether the trusts are very good things may safely be left, without comment, to all who are not in the trusts.

Will "publicity" hurt the trusts? Let the reader look at the above lists of trusts once more and ask himself that question. The doings of the trusts have already had more "publicity" than all the press agents living could supply, but they are still doing business in the same old way. Every child knows that they break the law and rob the people, but this most public knowledge does not prevent them from continuing to do so. But, it may be said, if exact details about the operations of the trusts were known they could be effectively controlled by law. Any bookkeeper could give the books of the trust a most innocent looking appearance. And if the business of the trusts was as an open book to the government that would not harm the trusts, SO LONG AS THEY OWN THE GOVERNMENT.

Is tariff revision a remedy? If the trusts are made to suffer from foreign competition let in by a reduction of the tariff, the workingmen who are employed by the trusts will also suffer—if the sales of the trust is reduced they will lose their jobs and if the profits of the trust are reduced their wages will be reduced. Foreign competition would also hasten the crushing out of the few remaining small competitors of the trusts. The trust cannot be destroyed by tariff revision without destroying the whole industry which the trust represents, for the trust can stand foreign competition better than independent small capitalists could. And, finally, the coming of the international trust, which we now have in several industries, puts it entirely beyond the power of the tariff.

As to a constitutional amendment in order to make it possible for the federal government to get at the trusts, it would be several years before a constitutional amendment could be passed, if at all, first by the required number of state legislatures and then by congress. After this had been done laws would have to be passed under the provisions of the new constitutional amendment, and IF after a number of years such a law was passed IT IS CERTAIN THAT IT WOULD NOT BE ENFORCED BY THE TRUST-MADE POLITICIANS OF THE OLD CAPITALIST PARTIES.

In regard to legislation against the trust it is only necessary to point out that THE TRUSTS NEVER WILL BE CONTROLLED OR REGULATED BY THE PUPPET-POLITICIANS WHO OWE THEIR OFFICES TO THE TRUSTS AND WHO GET THEIR CAMPAIGN FUNDS FROM THE CAPITALISTS.

As to "squeezing the water out of the stock of the trusts," this, like "publicity," would benefit no one but investors who want to know that their money is safely invested and will not be lost in the collapse of an inflated or fraudulently promoted enterprise. When the capitalization of a corporation is increased, i. e., "watered," because the corporation is able to make profits on an increased amount of stocks because of its having a monopoly, such "watering" is quite logical since monopoly has a real value to the corporation above that of its material capital. But the inflation thus practised makes the coming of a financial panic much easier and more severe. SO LONG AS PROFIT IS MADE OUT OF THE LABOR OF THE WORKING CLASS IT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE TO THE WORKERS WHETHER THAT PROFIT IS TAKEN OUT OF THEM IN THE SHAPE OF LARGE DIVIDENDS ON A SMALL AMOUNT OF STOCK OR SMALL DIVIDENDS ON A LARGE AMOUNT OF STOCK. That is a matter which can interest only the capitalists who have the stock and the profits.

"Smash the trusts!" has long been the cry of the radical wing of the discordant Democratic party. This is not only impossible, but would be a bad thing to do if it were possible. It is the cry of the middle class, the small capitalists who are being crushed out by the trusts and wish to go back to competition and small production so that they too may have an opportunity to exploit the working class and get some of the spoil that now goes to the trusts. SO LONG AS HE IS ROBBED, IT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE TO THE WORKINGMAN WHETHER HE IS ROBBED BY A FEW TRUSTS OR A LARGE NUMBER OF SMALL CAPITALISTS. That is a question which interests only those who are robbing him. Competition means war and useless waste in production. The trust represents co-operation in production, it eliminates the waste of competition, secures all the vast benefits of associated effort, and is a vastly more productive system than that of planless competition. For that reason the trust has come and to destroy it would be the same as to destroy a labor-saving machine. The trust is an industrial machine—a labor-saving machine.

But so long as it is privately owned the trust, like all labor-saving machines, is a labor-displacing machine and the saving and the profits go only to the owners. Socialism proposes, not to destroy the trust, but to make it the common property of all the people through a working class government, so that all may work and receive the full fruit of their labor. The trust has brought about partial co-operation in the production of goods; Socialism will bring complete co-operation in production and justice in distribution. PRIVATE OWNERSHIP IS THE SOLE EVIL. PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IS THE ONLY REMEDY.

ALL OF THE REMEDIES PROPOSED FOR THE TRUSTS WOULD BE INADEQUATE IF THEY COULD BE PUT INTO EFFECT AND NONE OF THEM CAN BE CARRIED OUT. None of them touch the real issue—the exploitation of labor.

THE SOCIALIST IS THE ONLY ONE WHO HAS A SOLUTION.

The Democrat says: Destroy the trust. The Republican says: It is all right as it is. The Socialist says: Let the people own the trusts. We will neither go backwards or stand still, but take the next revolutionary step in evolution by making the combination still larger—by getting everyone into it. Just as combination has superseded competition, so Socialism, which is combination on a still greater scale, must supersede the trust, because it is a better system of production, because the capitalist class, having performed its function of organizing industry, has now become useless and all its functions have passed into the working class—the only socialy useful and necessary class, the class whose material interests make it their mission to close the class struggle by inaugurating collective ownership of the means of producing wealth and thus emancipate Humanity from the bondage of wage-slavery and capitalistic oppression.

THE VOTE.

a gain of 11 in one year and of 20 in two years. H. L.

NEW JERSEY.

Hudson County Has Good Increase—Bergen County Wins Official Standing.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 10.—The official canvass of the vote in Hudson County, so far as carried to-day, shows 1,706 votes for Wm. H. Morton, candidate of the Socialist Party for Sheriff, and 879 for Frederick Krafft, our candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, which comprises only half the county.

In 1900 the county gave 1,373 votes for our presidential ticket.

Comrades believe that the party has been cheated of a large number of votes.

CARLSTADT, N. J., Nov. 10.—Bergen County gives 342 votes for Wyatt, Socialist candidate for Congress. Last year we had 187. Carstadt gives 33; last year, 18.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 7.—The Socialist Party has 394 votes in Passaic County, as against 374 last year and 337 two years ago. The S. L. P. has 297, as against 366 last year and 349 two years ago. As compared with 1900, we gain 57 and the S. L. P. loses 52.

The vote for Assemblymen runs a little ahead of that given, which is for Congress, but maintains the same ratio.

ORADELL, N. J., Nov. 6.—Oradell and Peetzburg give 39 votes for the Socialist Party; Riveredge, 5; Pearl River, 17; Etna, 2. All these places are in Bergen County. F. E. B.

CONNECTICUT.

Workingmen of the State Are Emulating Their Northern Neighbors—Results Encourage Socialists to More Thorough Agitation.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—We have returns of the Socialist vote for twenty-five of the hundred and sixty-eight towns of the state. These figures show an increase of 75 per cent. for the Socialist Party. The "union-smashing" S. L. P. loses heavily in the larger towns, where its vote was formerly large, but may make this up by gains in the smaller towns where its real character is not known. As votes were cast for the Socialist Party in a large number of towns where we had none before, we may expect that complete reports will show our vote about double that of 1900.

Our vote in the city of New Haven is as follows:

Wards.	1900.	1902.
First	8	8
Second	38	65
Third	107	165
Fourth	37	114
Fifth	26	21

A Lie Nailed.

The S. L. P. paper prints a statement that "W. E. White, State Secretary for Connecticut, was at the polls, peddling Socialist Party ballots with Republican and Economic League pasters." This is a malicious lie, manufactured entirely, and absolutely without any foundation. W. E. WHITE.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 5.—This city gives 286 votes for the head of the Socialist ticket. Of these, 244 are straight votes. Two years ago we had 86.

The S. L. P. has 81 straight; two years ago, 156 for head of ticket.

J. O'C.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Nov. 7.—The Socialist Party has 23 and the S. L. P. 75 here.

ILLINOIS DOUBLES.

Vote May Run to 25,000—Gain Both in Chicago and in the State.

Through an ambiguous telegram last week we were misled into stating that the vote of the Socialist Party in Chicago was 15,000. In fact the Socialist Party has 11,573 and the S. L. P. 5,137. The Chicago S. L. P., it may be noted, has been suspended by DeLeon's Executive.

The Chicago "Socialist" estimates our party vote in the state as high as 25,000. The vote two years ago was 9,687.

ROCKLAND, Ill., Nov. 9.—It is gratifying to see how Socialism is growing all over the country. Here in Winnebago County the Socialist Party had a county ticket in the field this year for the first time and has made a good gain. In 1900 the county gave 78 votes for Debs and Harriman. Last Tuesday, Comrade Nelson, our candidate for State Treasurer, received 536. We are the second party in the county, the Democrats having 477 and the Prohibitionists 431. Our candidate for the Legislature, John A. Hallden, had 819 and our other county candidates ran over 550. The local Democratic paper says: "The vote for the Socialist ticket was the surprise of the election." We are already at work on plans for the spring election, and shall keep things moving. C. G. B.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 8.—Our legislative candidate, Carr, has 57 votes.

MOLINE, Ill., Nov. 5.—Moline, South Moline, and the Seventh Ward of Rock Island (all in Rock Island County) give 650 votes for the Socialist Party and 111 for the S. L. P. In 1900 we had 228 in the whole county and the S. L. P. had 23. We made a good campaign and made many new Socialists, some of whom failed to distinguish between the parties when they cast their ballots. The Moline "Dispatch" remarks on our large vote and says we drew about two-thirds of our new voters from the Democratic party and one-third from the Republicans.

INDIANA GAINS.

Partial Returns Show that the Socialist Vote is at Least Trebled.

In 1900 the state of Indiana contributed 2,374 to the total of ninety-seven thousand votes cast for the Socialist candidates, Eugene V. Debs and Job Harriman. Our returns for the election just past are very incomplete, but they indicate that the Socialist vote of the state is at least trebled.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 7.—The vote of the Socialist Party here on Tuesday was 1,077. In 1900 we had 160. We consider this a fine increase. M. H. W.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 8.—The vote of the Socialist Party in Indianapolis rises from 213 to 811.

The S. L. P. has 473, as against 280 last year. Most of their gains comes from new Socialists, who do not know the difference between the parties. H. M.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Nov. 8.—This county (Dearborn) gave 36 votes for Debs and Harriman in 1900. Last Tuesday we polled 110 for the state ticket of the Socialist Party, some candidates on county ticket running up to 126. Everybody is surprised. W. S.

COLORADO TREBLES.

Vote of Silver State May Be Quadrupled—Returns Very Incomplete.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 5.—Arapahoe County including Denver, gives 1,260 votes for the Socialist Party, with a few precincts still to be heard from. The S. L. P. has 182.

In 1900 the state gave us 684 and 714 for the S. L. P.

Scattering returns so far received, in every case incomplete, are:

Teller County, including Cripple Creek, 230.

Fremont County, 70.

Pitkin County, 116.

Lake County, including Leadville, 201.

Larimer County, 24.

Garfield County, 53.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Nov. 8.—Mesa County gives 365 votes for the Socialist Party. A hot campaign and we consider that we made a big gain.

San Juan County, seven precincts reported, 198; beat Republicans by 7 votes.

San Miguel County, five precincts lacking, 583.

In 1900 the state gave us 684.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 6.—Full returns for Arapahoe County will give about 2,000 votes for the Socialist Party and 300 for the S. L. P.

WISCONSIN DOUBLES.

Full Returns May Show Still Greater Ratio of Increase in the State.

Scattering votes from Wisconsin show that that state has done its share in swelling the Socialist vote of the country. In 1900 Wisconsin gave 7,995 votes for Debs and Harriman, of which a little over 4,000 were in Milwaukee County and 876 in Sheboygan County. These two counties combined give 12,000; and the smaller cities and rural districts have probably made a still greater proportionate increase.

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., Nov. 8.—Returns for the first seven wards and two precincts of the eighth gives 1,183 votes for Comrade Seidel, Socialist candidate for Governor. Our other candidates range from 1,092 to 1,270.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 6.—Seidel has 10,824 votes in this county, and Saltiel, for Lieutenant-Governor, has 11,743. The votes of Socialist women bring the figures for Evans, candidate for Superintendent of Schools, up to 12,023. We have a plurality in the Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Wards.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov .7.—A few outside points have been heard from. Sheboygan Falls gives 35; Michicott, 34; Kiel, 69; Two Rivers, 133; Plymouth, 62.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 10.—Dane County gives 118 for the Social Democratic Party and 8 for the S. L. P. Two years ago we had 18 and the S. L. P. 3. R. H. J.

VICTORY IN MICHIGAN.

Saginaw Adds Another to List of Socialist Aldermen—Large Increase in Party Vote.

SAGINAW, Mich., Nov. 6.—The Socialist Party has scored its first victory in this city. We have elected Ben R. Cushman as Alderman from the First Ward, with a majority of five votes.

Saginaw gives 801 for the city ticket of the Socialist Party. In 1900 we had 636 in the city.

JONESVILLE, Mich., Nov. 6.—We have 24 votes, as against 8 in 1900.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 6.—This city gives us 600. Two years ago we had 296.

ST. CLAIR, Mich., Nov. 6.—Socialist Party has 36 votes, a gain of 5.

IN PROSPEROUS IOWA.

Heavy Socialist Gains in State to Which Republicans Always "Point with Pride."

Even Iowa, the state to whose alleged prosperity the Republicans always "point with pride," shows a large gain in the Socialist vote.

Two years ago Iowa gave 2,742 votes for Debs and Harriman.

This year, incomplete returns from seven counties and three towns in other counties foot up 3,085. There are ninety-nine counties in the state.

The Iowa "Socialist" estimates this year's vote for the Socialist Party in the state at 8,750. The estimate seems a safe one.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 7.—In Dubuque County we have 784 votes for W. A. Jacobs, candidate of the Socialist Party for Secretary of State.

Polk County, with five of the fifty-nine precincts missing, gives us 480 votes.

Keokuk County, one precinct missing, 34.

Des Moines County 281—a gain of 40.

Woodbury County, including Sioux City, 334; last year, 181.

Clinton County, 130—a gain of 35.

Hocking, Monroe County, gives us 93; Oelwein, Fayette County, 90.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Nov. 5.—A careful estimate places the vote of the Socialist Party in this city at 850. Last year we had 414. We expect a similar gain all over the state. Keep your eyes on Iowa. W. A. J.

In the presidential election of 1902 the state of Iowa gave 2,742 votes for Debs and Harriman and 250 for the S. L. P. Large gains were made in the city elections last year.

LITTLE ROCK, Ia., Nov. 5.—This town gives 9 votes for the state ticket of the Socialist Party and 7 for Congress.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Nov. 7.—The Socialist Party polls here 850 votes, as against 414 last year.

OKLAHOMA.

KINGFISHER, Okla., Nov. 7.—Kingfisher County gave 124 votes for T. S. Smith, candidate of the Socialist Party for Delegate to Congress. In 1900 the county gave us 37 votes. Oklahoma is in line. Now for one grand pull together for 1904. A. E. S.

MONTANA.

Some of our papers have been misled into stating that in Deer Lodge County, Mont., which includes the city of Anaconda, the Socialist Party has elected five of the six assemblymen and several county officers.

The fact is that these men were not, according to the best of our information, candidates of the Socialist Party, but of the Labor Party of Montana. They claim to be Socialists and we shall have to wait to see how well they deserve the name. Frederick Gauger, Leon S. Beaudry, and J. H. Hissey, Timothy C. O'Keefe, and J. H. Schwend are the men elected to the legislature. The Socialist Party had no legislative candidates in Deer Lodge County.

CALIFORNIA.

HEMET, Cal., Nov. 4.—The Socialist Party has 43 votes here, to 62 for the Republicans and 19 for the Democrats.

PORTERVILLE, Cal., Nov. 4.—We have 42 votes. In 1900 we had 6.

OLINDA, Cal., Nov. 5.—Four straight votes; in 1900, one.

RHODE ISLAND.

In Rhode Island the Socialist Party has a small organization, but put no ticket in the field. The Rhode Island organization of the S. L. P. is not in harmony with the national body, having been suspended by the "Professor" some months ago for daring to ask for information he did not choose to give.

The S. L. P. is credited by the press with 1,091 votes for its state ticket and with 834 in Providence for its city ticket. The S. L. P. vote of the state in 1900 was 1,423.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a poltical party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

SOCIALISM AND TRADE UNIONISM

The following resolution was adopted by the Socialist Party in National Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 31, 1901:

"The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, declares that the trade union movement and independent political action are the emancipating factors of the wage-working class. The trade union movement is the natural result of capitalist production and represents the economic side of the working class movement. We consider it the duty of the Socialists to join the unions of their respective trades and assist in building up and unifying the trades and labor organizations. We recognize that trade unions are by historical necessity organized on neutral grounds as far as political affiliation is concerned.

"We call the attention of trade unionists to the fact that the class struggle so nobly waged by the trade union forces to-day, while it may result in lessening the exploitation of labor, can never abolish that exploitation. The exploitation of labor will come to an end only when society takes possession of all the means of production for the benefit of all the people. It is the duty of every trade unionist to realize the necessity of independent political action on class-conscious lines, to join the Socialist Party and to assist in building up a strong political movement of the wage-working class, whose ultimate aim and object must be the abolition of wage slavery and the establishment of a co-operative state of society based on the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—The municipal convention of the Socialist Party of Boston met on Saturday, Nov. 15, at 8 p. m., at 724 Washington street, with ninety-five delegates present. Last year forty-five delegates were in attendance. William Mailly acted as chairman and John Weaver Sherman as secretary.

Comrades Schmidt, Mahoney, Lynch, Worcester, and Marcus acted as credential committee and Comrades Schimdt, Touvin, Spero, Coyne, and Konikow as platform committee.

Boston's City Platform.

The platform as adopted was as follows:

"The Socialist Party of Boston in municipal convention assembled reaffirms its allegiance to the principles of international Socialism as enunciated at the national convention at Indianapolis and the state platform adopted at Boston Sept. 8, 1902.

"1. We maintain that the revolution in the production and distribution of wealth is separating society into two classes—the capitalist class, the present owners of industry, and the working class, those possessing no property in the means of production. As the method of production has been socialized, ownership should also become socialized. Tools used in common should be owned in common. It is the historic mission of the working class to introduce a new and higher order of society by obtaining possession of the municipal, state and national governments, and thereby inaugurate a system of collective ownership of industry.

"2. We maintain that the ownership of industry by the capitalist class gives that class power to dominate the entire social system. Through this power legislative bodies are corrupted, executives prostitute themselves, franchises are shamelessly violated, the sources of education are poisoned, courts of justice are degraded, the laws of sanitation and protection to labor are ignored and trampled upon, the public health is wilfully neglected and imperiled, public employees are overworked and underpaid, the burdens of taxation are inequitaby distributed and the social well-being subordinated to individual profit and gain.

"3. We maintain that the working class is the most important element in society, and as such is entitled to the first consideration in the way of education, sanitation and protection. It is, therefore, imperative that the working class unite to obtain control, not only of the state and national governments, but of municipalities, so that working-class interests be subserved and the interests of contractors, corporations, and trusts subordinated to the social welfare.

"4. We, therefore, call upon the workers, both men and women, and all those in sympathy with them, to vote for the candidates of the Socialist Party, which seeks the amelioration of present conditions, as well as the establishment of Socialism—the collective ownership of all industry.

"In view of the foregoing, the Socialist Party demands:

"1. Public ownership of public utilities, such as street railroads, gas and electric light plants and all other utilities requiring a franchise; no more franchises to be granted; no employee to be discharged for political reasons.

"2. The extension of the public school system to provide ample facilities for every child to secure an education under healthy sanitary conditions; food and clothing to be furnished free to all pupils; public playgrounds, baths and gymnasiums to be provided in every ward in the city.

"3. The establishment of public works for the relief of the unemployed.

"4. Abolition of contract labor on all public works; direct employment at the prevailing scale of union wages.

"5. The extension of the free hospital service to include ward physicians and a municipal drug store.

"6. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of officials by their constituencies."

Mrs. Samantha H. Merrifield, Dr. Antoinette Konikow, John Weaver Sherman, Charles V. Lawler, Louis Marcus, Thomas Hooper, James J. McVey and Stephen O'Shaughnessy were nominated as the party's eight candidates for school committee.

During the convention Patrick Mahoney, candidate for street commissioner, made a stirring address and announcement was made that a woman's auxiliary would soon be organized. An aggressive campaign will be carried on by the party and an increase over the vote in the recent state election is confidently expected.

Mayoralty Candidates.

At the Socialist Party caucuses held last week the following nominations for mayor were made in the cities named: Parkman B. Flanders, Haverhill; Charles H. Coulter, Brockton; Charles Hartshorn, Lynn; Dr. Russell Bingham, Fitchburg; George W. Wrenn, Springfield; W. T. Richards, Quincy; Squire E. Putney, Somerville; John A. Aitken, Cambridge; William C. Lynch, Lawrence; Alfred B. Outram, Chelsea.

Will He Debate?

The State Secretary, by instruction from the Executive Committee, last week, reopened correspondence with Mr. Frederic J. Stinson relative to a debate on Socialism. It will be remembered that Stinson made an attack on Socialism during the state election and upon being invited to discuss the question with a representative of the party stated that he had no vacant dates before election day but that he would gladly meet a Socialist speaker later. Representative James F. Carey has been selected as the party's spokesman in the discussion and it was proposed that the same be held in Faneuil Hall during next week. The State Secretary has been informed, however, that Mr. Stinson is absent from the city and will not return for two weeks.

FROM FUEDALISM TO CAPITALISM

There was a time and not so very long ago either, when in most monarchical countries, the "business man" had to crawl in the dirt before the sacred presence of royalty, and thought himself happy if the monarch even deigned to notice him. This sort of things the "blueblooded" aristocrats considered perfectly natural and proper, and no doubt regarded it as a sort of "eternal law" which established permanently the correct position in society of each class. The little exploiter of a hundred years ago was hardly entitled to any more consideration than the despisted creatures whom he plundered through the new wage system.

In those days the fellow who robbed the laborers under the form of rent was a highly honorable person, while the fellow who did the same thing under the name of profit was a miserable worm of the dust. The principal reason why this view obtained was that the product extracted through rent was greater than than extracted through profit. The old aristocrats were far richer than the business men of those days and consequently far more powerful. That is why the monarch selected them as his friends, companions and advisers, and in course of time they began to look upon this state of affairs as natural and proper. It suited them. And all this while the business man, like Brer Rabbit, "lay low and sed nuffin." He accepted his position in society as it was laid out for him by the other fellows.

But as time went on, these positions began to be gradually reversed. Machinery was invented and applied to production and was constantly being improved. New markets were discovered for the increased profits wrung from wage workers through the new appliances, and profits began to grow large, while rentals grew small. The erstwhile humble business man began to assert himself and reached out for political power, which he got, in installments. The aristocracy tried to hamper him in this, but on the whole they failed. As they used political power for their own class interests they knew right well that he would do exactly the same, and they saw their finish in his increasing power.

So they called upon their tenants and serfs and the other fellows that paid them rent, to help keep Mr. Business man down, telling them that their interests lay with the good old aristocrat. On his side the business man lined up his wage slaves and told them a similar fairy tale and both sides settled down to the struggle.

It lasted for long years. It was fought out on battlefields first, and afterwards in parliaments and legislatures. And for this latter reason the agricultural and industrial workers were given the "right" to vote. Now one side and now the other had the advantage. They both appealed to everything they could thing of to help in the fight. Religion, nationality, property, morality, the family, etc., were employed liberally as catchwords by both sides. Sometimes one gang got the king on their side and sometimes the king played the one against the other and for a time held "the balance of power," as it was called. But all the time machinery was being improved and applied to production; new machinery was invented and new industries started up; new markets were discovered, old ones extended, new countries conquered or annexed for purposes of trade, and profits steadily went up while rents remained the same or decreased. Agriculture gradually gave place to manufacture and those who controlled the means of production in each began to change places. The manufacturer, merchant, banker or other industrial exploiter crept up on the landed aristocrat, passed him, and always quickening his speed, began to leave him hopelessly in the rear.—Chicago Socialist.

THRONE AND ALTAR.

The obvious definition of a monarchy seems to be that of a state, in which a single person, by whatsoever name he may be distinguished, is intrusted with the execution of the laws, the management of the revenue, and the command of the army. But unless public liberty is protected by intrepid and vigilant guardians, the authority of so formidable a magistrate will soon degenerate into despotism. The influence of the clergy, in an age of superstition, might be usefully employed to assert the rights of mankind; but so intimate is the connection between the throne and the altar, that the banner of the church has very seldom been seen on the side of the people.—Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

IS IT TREASON?

Talk of Such a Charge against Schenectady Workingmen.

Use of Militia in Hudson River Valley Trolley Strike Has Done Much to Educate Them—Authorities Will Probably Back Down on Treason Charges.

The trade unions of Schenectady, N. Y., having witnessed and participated in the long fight of the oppressed trolley workers against the law-breaking Hudson River Valley Railway Company, and having seen the militia used by the Republican state administration (without any protest from the Democratic party) to intimidate and defeat the strikers, are taking active measures to carry on the boycott against the road and to enforce the rule forbidding union men to serve in the militia.

This action has roused great indignation among the capitalists of all sorts, and, naturally enough the capitalist press alternates between weak attempts at argument and violent ravings against the unions.

It has seriously been proposed that the leading officers of the unions be prosecuted for treason on account of the expulsion of union members for belonging to the militia. It is hardly likely that this will be tried. It will be remembered that such steps were contemplated against Debs and his fellow workers in the A. R. U. strike of 1894, but that the government thought better of it and punished them only for contempt of court. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." Nothing better could be hoped, in the interest of the progressive labor movement, than that the authorities of this state would be mad enough to attempt a prosecution for treason in this case. The workingmen involved would welcome the test and it would arouse thousands of other workingmen to think for themselves.

Even as it is, however, the strike, the use of militia, and the attitude of the Republican and Democratic parties against the workingmen and of the Social Democratic (Socialist) Party against capitalism, have done much for the political and economic education of the workingmen in that region. As shown in another column, hundreds of men in the district affected cast their first votes for Socialism this month, and many more are already expressing their wish that they had done so.

GENIUS AND COMPETITION.

The competitive struggle never yet produced a noble man. All the real benefactors of the race have either been raised above it, pursuing their investigations in economic security, or they have ignored it altogether by deliberately choosing poverty as the price of their integrity of spirit. That the competitive struggle could have produced a man like Jesus, or Socrates, or Galileo, or Newton, or Mazzini, is unthinkable. Strife of man against man works moral disintegration; the only thing to be won by it is a soiled plume.—Franklin H. Wentworth.

SOCIALISM IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Official Count Shows 22,000 Votes for Socialist Party.

Vote More Than Quadrupled—Twelve Thousand Came from Strike Field—Militiamen's Vote—New Campaign Begun.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—By a vote of 21,910, as now officially reported, the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania on Nov. 4 more than quadrupled its last highest vote (in 1900) of 4,831, and gained official standing on the state ballot. This brings our state into line with the remarkable increase in the Socialist vote all over the United States.

It presents to the public and to the bewildered politicians the significant spectacle of the three leading and most conservative commonwealths of the Eastern states—Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania—the bulwark of conservatism for the whole country and the home of capitalism—standing shoulder to shoulder in a united vote of more than 80,000 for Socialism.

It is no wonder that in the face of this aggressive action on the part of the working people of these three states—for the votes came from the working class—it is no wonder that the managers of the Pennsylvania Railroad Trust, the Reading Railroad Trust, and the Rapid Transit Traction Trust are falling over each other in their haste to announce to the public a 10 per cent. "raise" in the wages of the railroad employees and a 5 per cent. increase in the wage of the traction employees of Philadelphia.

In Pennsylvania's vote, 12,000 are credited by the official count to the anthracite coal regions—where, when the fall campaign closed on the night of Nov. 4, the spring campaign was immediately inaugurated for the local elections.

A very interesting fact is the soldier vote of the Hollidaysburgh company of militiamen from Blair County, amounting to 61 votes for the Socialist candidate, Slayton; 36 votes for the S. L. P. candidate; 11 votes for Pattison, Democratic nominee; and 10 for Pennypacker on the Republican ticket. These militiamen were stationed in the coal regions of Eastern Pennsylvania and from the Socialist agitators and the strikers received their first lessons in Socialism, with the result just recorded.

Since Election Day, charters have been granted by the State Committee to three new locals—Bradford, in McKean County; Wyoming, in Luzerne County; Oswayo of Potter County.

J. M. B.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 17.—Michael O'Neil, Socialist candidate for Governor, is credited on the official returns with 1,052 votes in the state. Two years ago the state gave 780 for the national ticket; four years ago, 262 for the state ticket. C. G. L.

INDIANA.

The New York "World" of Nov. 18 prints a dispatch giving the complete vote of Indiana, as officially reported. The Socialist Party has 7,111, as against 2,374 two years ago. This gives us official standing.

The S. L. P. has 1,776 and the Populists 1,350.

Vigo County, including Terre Haute, gives 335 for Meyer, our candidate for Secretary of State, who headed the state ticket, and 332 for Bishop, our candidate for Congress. In 1900 this county gave us 306.

Clay County gives us 308, as against 161 two years ago.

The increase is general throughout the state, being largest in the districts where the movement was formerly weak, thus tending to equalize the strength of the party throughout the state.

The Indiana comrades are jubilant and new locals are being organized and active work taken up at once.

ILLINOIS.

The Chicago "Socialist" reports that, so far as the official count has gone, the vote of the Socialist Party is found to be much above what was first reported. The vote in Chicago may reach 13,000.

The "Socialist" believes that our vote in the state is trebled. In 1900 it was 9,687.

Among the scattering returns given are: Knox County rises from 142 to 192; Rock Island County from 228 to nearly 1,000; McLean County from 96 to 187; Decatur from 22 to 79; Alexander County from 3 to 19; Quincy 152, as against 68 in the county two years ago; Peoria County from 102 to 340.

IOWA.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 15.—A good many scattering incomplete returns may be given, showing a large increase in the vote of the Socialist Party in this state. Derby rises from 2 last year to 5 now; Altoona from 2 to 11; Alta from 3 to 12; Little Rock from none to 9; Ringold County from 4 to 12; Logan from 2 to 9; Elden from 25 to 28; Appanoose County from 44 in 1900 to 172 last year to 310 now; Milford from 2 last year to 14 now; Lake City from none to 32; Marshall County from 97 to 130; Boone County from 105 to 258; Jasper County from 23 to 62; Madison County from 57 to 116; Wappelo County from 122 in 1900 to 189 now; Mystic from 108 last year to 212. Waterloo from 13 to 101; Burton County from 60 to 77.

Polk County, complete, including Des Moines, gives us 191.

In many places our votes were counted for the old parties or reported as "scattering."

NEBRASKA.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 18.—The official count gives the Socialist Party 5,171 votes in this state. Two years ago we had 823. A gain of 285 per cent. is quite satisfactory.

ALABAMA.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 12.—Frederick Lennon, candidate of the Socialist Party for Congress in this, the Ninth District, has 195 votes in Jefferson County. Some of our candidates ran much higher. Official figures will be given later. This is the first time we have been on the official ballot in Alabama, but it will not be the last. We were not able to make much of a campaign in the county, much less in the state, but did what we could with literature. We shall begin at once to prepare for 1904. We grow slowly here, but it is coming. F. X. W.

COLORADO.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 11.—We must wait the official count to get an adequate report of the Socialist vote in Colorado.

The contest was such a bitter one between the old parties, and the Democrats were so desperate in making their last stand for supremacy that wholesale frauds were committed. In Arapahoe County (Denver) the Democrats stole everything they could get their hands on. Many of our comrades were unable to cast their vote because Democratic repeaters had come in and voted their name.

Many incidents show how we were counted out. In one precinct our Socialist watcher reports 22 votes and only 12 were counted. In another 12 votes and 2 counted. In Cripple Creek district many such cases are reported. There is no doubt that we were counted out of thousands of votes.

The official report will show a total of from 10,000 to 12,000 votes for us as against 700 cast for Debs two years ago—a gain of at least 1,500 per cent. There is no doubt 17,000 to 20,000 votes were actually cast for our candidates.

We almost elected three representatives. The Democrats called Bryan into the state to help them the last few days and placed him where our cause seemed sure of winning; enough were whipped back into line to keep our boys from election.

In San Juan County our candidate for representative secured 416 votes to the Republicans 480 and the Democrats 478. In San Miguel, our comrade, Guy Miller, a miner, polled over 700 votes to the Democratic vote of 900 and the Republicans 450.

We will be the second party in two years and victory is now in sight. We shall give the results more fully when the official figures are in.

The comrades are fired with enthusiasm and are already at work for the great campaign of education that will carry the Socialist gospel to every township of the state. W. H. W.

WASHINGTON.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 10.—The vote of the Socialist Party here rises from 153 to 616. The "union-smashers" fall from 191 to 180. The Socialist Party polls 7 per cent. of the total vote of the city.

The whole county (King), which gave 269 votes for Debs and Harriman in 1900, now gives us 929.

Spokane County raises the vote from 88 to about 400; Whitman County from 150 to about 800; Stevens County from 28 to about 300; Ferry County from 2 to about 100.

In Arlington, where we had 7 votes two years ago we now have 40 straight.

In Echo the Socialist Party has 10, the Republicans 26 and the Democrats 14. We have elected Comrade Thomas Dickson as Justice of the Peace and George Deubel as Constable.

CALIFORNIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 11.—This city gives 1,977 votes for Brower, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor; our other candidates on the state ticket run from 2,136 to 2,681. In 1900 San Francisco County gave 2,035 for Debs and Harriman.

In Oakland Brower has 907 and in the whole of Alameda County, 997. Two years ago the county gave us 828.

Scattering returns show an increase throughout the state. Dos Dolos rises from 5 to 28; Bryant, Fresno County, from 11 to 17; Winters from 4 to 23; Sacramento from 131 to 332; San Diego from 298 to 617; Oxnard from 22 to 51; San Rafael from 52 to 100; Elk Grove from 5 to 41; Riverside from 154 to 656.

The "Advance" of San Francisco claims that the party has raised its vote from 7,572, the figure of two years ago, to about 12,000.

ON REVOLUTION.

"To complain of the enormities of power, to expostulate with overgrown oppressors hath in all ages been denominated sedition and faction; and to turn upon tyrants, treason and rebellion. But tyrants are rebels against the first laws of heaven and society; to oppose their ravages is the instinct of nature—the inspiration of God in the heart of man."—Josiah Quincy.

—The coming Socialist daily will wake the whole working class.

NEW YORK'S VOTE.

Social Democratic Party Will Poll More Than 23,000.

Gains Ten Thousand Votes—The Great er City Gives Sixteen Thousand—State Holds Second Place in Socialist Ranks.

As shown by the detailed reports given below, the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York (identical with the Socialist Party of other states) has polled over 23,000 votes this year.

We gain about ten thousand, or virtually 75 per cent., over our vote of two years ago.

The extraordinary increase in Massachusetts carries that state to the head of the Socialist column in the Union—and New York Socialists do not grudge their Bay State comrades the well earned honor. New York holds second place, with Pennsylvania now as a close third.

New York City gives about 16,000 of this total—a gain of some 6,000 in two years. Satisfactory as this gain is, the outside counties contribute in a still larger ratio to the general increase, and an examination of the vote in detail, both in the various districts of the city and in the various counties of the state, shows that Socialist thought has taken strong root in quarters where it was unknown before.

But one feature of the vote in this state and city may seem unsatisfactory to the comrades of the Social Democratic Party—the fact that the "union-smashing" S. L. P., in spite of its tactics of boss-rule and senseless vituperation and slander, has made a small gain instead of the heavy losses it deserved.

The greatest gains of the S. L. P. have been made in parts of the city and state where the history and character of that organization are least known and where only a general propaganda for Socialism have been carried on. In places where the difference between the two parties is well konwn the S. L. P. vote is practically stationery or has even fallen off—as in the 16th A. D. of Manhattan.

No candid reasoner can fail to understand what this means. The S. L. P. has received several thousand votes from new Socialists—converted partly by our agitation and partly by the mere logic of events—men who know little or nothing of the party organizations and who were naturally attracted by the name of that party unquestionably a better name than that which the election laws have forced us to adopt) and by its better position on the ballot.

We have passed the time, however, when this need seriously disturb us. The vote and organization of the Socialist or Socialist Democratic Party has reached such proportions that the existence of a fake party, while annoying, is no longer a real danger. We know that nearly all of the S. L. P. votes are genuine Socialist votes and that, as we carry on our campaigns with increasing vigor and make the situation clearer to the public, these men will find their right place in the ranks.

Socialism moves on with giant strides, in New York as everywhere else. No would-be disrupters can stop its progress. It is for us to work more strenuously than ever before, more patiently, more persistently, and victory is in sight.

Detailed Official Returns.

Official returns from thirty-three of the sixty-one counties of New York show a gain in the vote of the Social Democratic Party from 11,592 two years ago to 20,794 in the late election—an increase of 9,202 or 79 per cent. These returns include, of course, most of our best counties—as Fulton, Jefferson, Kings, Monroe, New York, Rensselaer, and Westchester; but the increase is general, with the exception of a very few counties, in which we have no organization and have never had more than a score or two of votes. It is probably safe to assume, therefore, that nearly the same ratio of increase will prevail for the other twenty-eight counties which, two years ago, gave us 1,901 votes.

Thus it may now be stated with confidence that the vote of the Social Democratic Party in this state will go above 23,000—possibly to 24,000.

THAT "INCREASE" OF WAGES.

The 10 per cent. "raise" of wages announced by the Pennsylvania, and by several other roads following in its wake, but has called forth many glowing editorials in the capitalist press in praise of the generosity of the employing class. In this connection it is timely to quote a few significant utterances of railway presidents and other bits of connected news, which will throw much light on the capitalists' "generosity."

President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania, in recommending the increase, said:

"The country is passing through an unexampled period of prosperity, and, as far as the Pennsylvania Railroad is concerned, this prosperity is bound to continue for at least two years, if contracts are kept. It is time that our employees BE GIVEN A SHARE IN THIS PROSPERITY. All the railroads in the United States and all employers of labor are contemplating an advance in wages. THE COST OF LIVING HAS INCREASED 20 to 25 per cent., but wages have not increased accordingly.

"This movement is bound to come, and the Pennsylvania may as well lead as follow. We have more business offered than we can handle, and CAN'T SEE OUR WAY OUT of that difficulty UNLESS WE KEEP OUR MEN LOYAL TO THE COMPANY and help them while they help us. I therefore recommend a flat increase of 10 per cent. in wages."

It thus appears from President Cassatt's own words, first, that the increase of wages is really no increase at all, but only a partial restoration; and, second, that this partial restoration is made, not out of any sentiment of justice, but solely because the Pennsylvania wants its men to do extra work for its prosperity.

The Wabash has also made such an increase, and President Ramsey talks very suggestively on the subject. He says:

"It is true that the present cost of living, compared with that of 1895 to 1897, has largely increased, but it is also true that the rate of wages of almost every class of service has been increased from 5 to 15 per cent., and that THE MONTHLY PAY OF EVERY ONE HAS INCREASED, DUE TO THE INCREASE IN WORK WHICH ENABLES EVERY MAN TO MAKE NOT ONLY FULL BUT OVERTIME, and in this way the increased cost of living has been nearly, if not fully, met out of the increased earnings.

"It is evident to any one who is at all familiar with the present condition of railroad earnings and expenses that no permanent increase in wages can be expected without an increase in the rates paid railroads for transportation; ANY INCREASE IN WAGES MADE NOW, if not followed by advanced rates, WILL BE LOST BY THE EMPLOYEES AS SOON AS THE WAVE OF PROSPERITY BEGINS TO SUBSIDE."

"The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

The Railway Kings can be "generous" in "raising" wages part way back to their old standard, when it suits their interest to do so. But they give us fair warning that at the first opportunity they will take back all that they have given.

Equally good is President Ramsey's suggestion that the workingmen have really lost nothing, while the employers have gained greatly, by the increased cost of living. The men have to pay more for food, clothing, fuel, and shelter, it is true. But then, they are allowed to work harder and for longer hours, and thus the difference is made up. It is really very unreasonable of them to expect an increase in wages under such circumstances.

On the same day with this quotation from President Ramsey came a Chicago dispatch as follows:

"Railroads all over the country are preparing to advance freight rates. This, it is declared, will be done to offset the 10 per cent. advance in wages of employeees lately made by a number of roads, and which will have to be followed by all other roads to avert strikes."

Since transportation charges form a part of the cost of all commodities to retail dealers, it is evident that the increase of freight rates will almost immediately result in a rise of retail prices. Thus, the wages having been raised in partial recognition of the previous rise in the cost of living, the cost of living is, in turn, increased so as to make up again for the increase of wages.

Now all this is perfectly natural. There is nothing in it to surprise anyone who has observed and thought for himself about economic questions, instead of accepting the ready-made theories of subsidized college professors and capitalist editors. IT IS ALL QUITE IN LINE WITH WHAT THE SOCIALISTS HAVE BEEN EXPLAINING FOR MANY YEARS.

With the means of production—land, mines, railways, factories, etc.—held as private property by capitalists and operated for wages by propertiless workers, the product of labor belongs to the capitalists and the wages which they have to pay back out of it to those who produce the whole tend to be no more than enough to maintain the lives of the workers and their families. UNDER THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM, WAGES ARE FIXED BY THE COST OF LIVING.

Further, as the introduction of "labor-saving" machinery and the organization of industry creates ever a larger army of unemployed and intensifies the competition of workers for employment, and as the concentration of ownership restricts competition among the owners and sellers of commodities, the condition of the workers tends to become worse in one or both of two ways:

EITHER THEY MUST ACCEPT LOWER REAL WAGES (however measured in money) AND REDUCE THEIR STANDARD OF LIVING;

OR, IN ORDER TO MAINTAIN THEIR STANDARD OF LIVING AT THE REDUCED WAGES THEY MUST WORK HARDER AND FOR LONGER HOURS AND CREATE MORE WEALTH FOR THEIR MASTERS.

This was scoffed at when Socialists said it. Now it is proved by daily experience.

In the face of such facts as we have cited—facts which are paralleled every day in the year—it ought to be evident to every man, and especially to every thinking workingman, that, so long as capitalism continues, the condition of the working class can never be materially improved and is more likely to be materially changed for the worse.

We may refer here, as further illustrating the subject, to the arguments advanced by the Pennsylvania in protesting against the insertion of the eight-hour and prevailing-rate clauses in its tunnel franchise, which we presented last week under the heading, "Tunnel Economics and Politics."

The capitalists argue, in this case: 1. That the workingmen cannot get good wages unless they are prosperous; 2. That they cannot be prosperous unless their employers are prosperous; 3. That the employers cannot be prosperous unless their employees work for low wages.

This argument, absurd as it looks in the bald form to which we have reduced it, and inconsistent as it is with the Pennsylvania's simultaneous declaration that it intends to adopt the eight-hour day and pay the prevailing rate, is yet perfectly sound. Its absurdity is only the absurdity inherent in capitalism.

The fact is, so long as capitalism continues, THE WORKING CLASS IS DEPENDENT UPON THE CAPITALIST CLASS FOR PERMISSION TO WORK AND LIVE.

The difference, FOR THE WORKINGMAN, between capitalist prosperity and depression, is only this: IN TIME OF PROSPERITY HE GETS ENOUGH TO EAT AND HAS TO WORK HIMSELF HALF TO DEATH; IN TIME OF DEPRESSION HE HAS MORE LEISURE THAN HE WANTS AND DOES NOT HAVE ENOUGH TO EAT.

It is against a system which necessarily and inevitably presents to the working class such an alternative as this that Socialists protest.

We point out that if those who use the means of production owned them, they would own their whole product; they would be dependent on no man for permission to live; their leisure and their standard of living would increase together in proportion to the advance of science and invention; PROSPERITY FOR ALL would be realized for the first time and would be the permanent condition, and "hard times" would be a nightmare of the past.

NOT BY BREAD ALONE.

The Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford was teling the other day of the futility of trying to comfort people with Bible texts. "I had an experience early in my career," the doctor said, "which made such an impression on me that it has saved me from many mistakes. Whenever I tried to persuade an Irish member of my flock to pay more attention to his church duties he would make excuse that it took him all his time to earn a living and he would touch my heart by his expatiation upon the difficulty of making money. 'But,' I exclaimed in protest, "man does not live by bread alone. 'No, y'r Riverence,' replied Patrick with ready wit. "Sure an' he needs a bit o' mate an' some vegetables as well.' That answer rises up and accuses me," concluded the doctor, "when the temptation comes to ladle out cant in place of human sympathy and concrete aid."—Idaho Daily Statesman.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

Comrades are again requested to send business communications to the Editor. All such communications should be addressed and all checks and money orders made payable to The Worker, not to the Editor.

Comrade Kanely writes: "My compliments to the writer of the editorial on 'The Place of Wealthy Men in the Party.' It is splendid, without being offensive to the men in question."

The pressure of important news and propaganda matter for publication in the columns of The Worker is so great that it is absolutely necessary for correspondents to heed our request that they use as few words as possible in expressing their ideas. Three or four years ago we had space for two column letters on party affairs. But things have changed since then. Be brief. Please remember, also, that the use of pencil and writing on both sides of the paper are the surest ways of getting your letter sent to the waste basket.

SOME PARTY MATTERS.

Now that the campaign is over and the manner in which it was conducted all over the country is up for discussion we rise to regretfully ask why our Wisconsin comrades took pains to provide, in the immediate demands attached to their platform, that the capitalists who confiscate the product of labor should be paid the "cost" of the railroads, etc., which the working class built for them, when they are taken over by the nation. And if the California comrades are not already sorry for their action in regard to the Union Labor Party. And why the "Undercurrent" printed the political announcements of the candidates of capitalist parties.

While discussing these matters, it is well to note that THE GREATEST INCREASE IN THE SOCIALIST VOTE WAS RECORDED IN JUST THOSE PLACES WHERE THE PARTY WAS MOST UNCOMPROMISING.

'In Omaha the political ostriches who have had their heads in the sand trying to ignore the storm are now looking for a place to light. They have already commenced to plan to get control of the local movement and relegate the pioneer Socialists to the rear."

So says the Omaha "Workers' Gazette," and it sounds a warning that should be heeded. It is time for every Socialist to be wide awake and at work for the cause every day in the week. It all depends on the rank and file. They have to see that every honest recruit is welcomed and instructed and given his place in the ranks, and, at the same time, that no old-party schemers are given a chance to use the party for their evil purposes.

THE TARRANT MURDER AGAIN.

It is now almost exactly two years since the frightful fire and explosion at the building of the Tarrant Drug Company, by which several employees, some of them mere boys and girls, lost their lives.

It was clearly proven, at the Coroner's inquest, that the capitalists in question had flagrantly violated the state laws and city ordinances in keeping large quantities of the most dangerous explosives in a combustile building in a crowded part of the city. The Worker predicted, nevertheless, that no capitalist administration, Democratic or Republican, would bring these guilty profit-grinders to justice.

Democratic District Attorney Gardiner made no attempt in that direction. Under his successor, Democratic-Republican Philbin, a full year after the murder, the proprietors were at last indicted for manslaughter. Another year has now passed and Republican-Reformer Jerome has been strenuously occupying the office of District Attorney for eleven months, and the prosecution has not gone a step further.

The case has now been recalled to mind by a very inconspicuous article in the papers reporting the termination of a civil suit growing out of the Tarrant murder. Here it is:

"The trial of the first of thirty suits against the Tarrant Drug Company, whose building was burned two years ago, has resulted in a victory for the company. The suit of Mrs. Rosa Schuck, on account of the death of her son in the explosion accompanying the fire, was dismissed by Justice Freedman in the Supreme Court yesterday. The plaintiffs named as co-defendants in the suit the drug firms of Rogers & Pyatt and McKesson & Robbins, who, she alleged, had stored high explosives in the building prior to the day of the fatal explosion.

"In dismissing the complaint, after many witnesses had been heard, Justice Freedman said that there was no testimony that fixed the responsibility, and none to prove that young Schuck had been killed by explosives belonging to the defendants."

Of course not. Young Schuck probably died of spinal meningitis or locomotor ataxia, and it was a mere accidental coincidence that he died at the moment when the tons of explosives among which he was working happened—merely happened—to go off. Justice Freedman would consider it preposterops to hold Schuck's employees responsible for his death. Mrs. Schuck ought rather to go and thank the Tarrants for having allowed her son to work in their pleasant little private sanjtarium so long.

The decision of this case, of course, sets a precedent for all the others growing out of the Tarrants' crime and, so far as money damages are concerned, the criminals will go scot-free.

As for the criminal proceedings, we again predict that not one of the capitalists in the case will ever so much as serve ten days in jail as a punishment for their profitable crime. Jerome hasn't time to prosecute them; he is too busy scolding trade unions and pretending to hunt gamblers; and doesn't want to prosecute such respectable gentlemen, anyhow; it is their class that put him in office, and he will be true to his masters. Next year the respectable profit-grinders will put up another Jerome and another Gardiner on the two old-party tickets and the majority of the workingmen will vote one or the other into office, and the Tarrants and all their ilk will know that they are free to put workingmen and girls into whatever sort of death-traps they find most profitable.

We advise our readers to take up last week's issue of The Worker and read again the article entitled "The Law Allows It and the Court Decrees It," dealing with a parallel decision freeing the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway Company from responsibility in a similarly infamous case. These things are worth thinking of.

Your lives, fellow workingmen, and the lives of your sons and daughters in the shops, are in constant danger through the lawless greed of the capitalists. What are you going to do about it? Under the statutes enacted by Republican-Democratic legislatures and under the common law built up by the Freedmans and Gildersleeves and Gardiners and Jeromes, you have absolutely no protection, no redress. Do you not think it is time to elect men of your own choice, out of your own class, to serve as District Attorneys and Judges? You will have a chance next fall, if you will join the Social Democratic Party and vote its ticket.

The "Sun," following the Schenectady "Gazette," prints an alleged "manifesto" of Schenectady Local No. 62 of the Brotherhood of Painters in regard to the militia question, full of errors of spelling, grammar, punctuation, capitalization, and the like. The "Sun" thinks this is extremely funny and thinks also that it is a crushing and unanswerable reply to the workingmen's argument. The "Sun" editorial writer is so tickled over it that he writes a special paragraph calling attention to the item. Of course the "manifesto" is a fake, like most of the anonymous letters against unionism which the "Sun" and its kindred neighbor, the "Times" print. It is easy to manufacture such things if you are only mean enough. But supposing the letter to be genuine and to represent fairly the actual standard of education of the working class, what a frightful indictment it would be of the capitalist system which these papers support.

AS TO RICH MEN, ONCE MORE.

With reference to one of the cases cited in our editorial entitled "The Place of Wealthy Men in the Party," published last week, State Secretary Kearns of New Jersey writes us that our statement "is founded on wholly false and misleading information." He alleges that the comrade in question, in offering to pay the salary of an organizer for the State Committee, did not make it a condition that the man of his choice should be chosen for the position, that he did not, in fact, impose any conditions at all.

Comrade Kearns' letter includes so full a statement of the details of the case as he understands them and would so imperatively involve the publication of further letters from other comrades relating the facts as they understand them, that we feel justified in using only his absolute and unqualified denial of the essential point—the alleged condition attached to the gift. The New Jersey comrades will undoubtedly be able to deal with this individual case and clear up all misunderstandings, sooner or later. The general principle illustrated by the case is all that is of sufficient interest to the party at large to justify our giving much space to it.

It will be noted that we alleged no more than that the offer was understood to be a conditional one at the time it was accepted, however it may have been intended. A careful investigation of the facts convinced us that this statement was strictly correct, and we still believe it to be so.

We pointed out that the good faith of the comrades involved in each of the cases discussed was not at all called in question—that, indeed, their good or bad faith had little or nothing to do with the matter. This is all the more forcibly illustrated by the case in question. If the generous act of a thoroughly well-intentioned comrade can raise such a tempest in a teapot as our New Jersey comrades have got into over this affair, what better proof could be asked of the reality of the danger we pointed out?

We repeat: It is dangerous for the party to become dependent on the contributions of wealthy men. This danger is likely to become greater in the immediate future. It is necessary for us to guard against it—especially for the rank and file to guard against it. It is better to be too strict in our democracy than to be even a little too lax. And for men of wealth who sincerely desire to help the cause there can surely be no offense and probably some help in the advice which we offer: Give what you can or what you will, absolutely without condition and in such a way that no one can suppose a condition to be even implied. It is alleged to be "easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." The phrase may aptly be used to describe the difficulty which one not actually belonging to the working class is likely to experience in following the strait and narrow path of the proletarian revolution.

PARTIAL PUBLIC OWNERSHIP TRIED ON THE DOG.

"Bow, wow, what do you think I'm made of?" I'm getting about tired of furnishing you with a living?" With these remarks Touser bit viciously at a portion of his anatomy which was infested with fleas. This was but the rumbling of the class struggle raging between the dogs and the fleas.

Mr. Flea, noticing that Touser was getting desperate, said calmly: "Now, Touser, old boy, what's the matter with you? Don't you realize that our interests are identical? You cannot get along without me. What would you do if I didn't inject a little ambition in you once in awhile?"

"Of course," said Touser, "I realize that is the same old jolly that you have have been giving me for a number of years, but it is getting rather stale. Now there's my left shoulder, for instance. You have bothered me so much there that I'm in a frightful condition. I tell you, it's got to stop."

"Well, Touser, I'll tell you what we'll do. I and my fellow fleas will withdraw from that left shoulder of yours and busy ourselves elsewhere on your anatomy and allow you to have government ownership on your left shoulder. How'll that be? Are we not benevolent?

"Thank God," said Touser. "Now I shall have Socialism."

The New York Democratic party is declaring for the government ownership of the mines—only one of the means of production, reminds me of the above dialogue between the dog and the flea.—Left, in Chicago Socialist.

CAPITALIST AND WORKMAN.

By Horace Traubel.

I hear you so often saying: "The interests of the capitalist and the workman are one." You are mistaken. The interests of capital and labor are one. In any analysis capital and labor are the same thing. The interests of the capitalist as man and of the workman as man are one. But the interests of the capitalist as capitalist and of the workman as workman are opposed.

We are to get rid of the capitalist and of the workman. That is the job of civilization. We are to have no capitalist and no workman. We are to have man. Man will never come until we have ceased to prefix and suffix him. Man will never come until we have cleared man of the adjective and the adverb. The man must be got free of the phrase. But the man will only get free of the phrase when the fact for which that phrase stands is dissolved.

We will not so much fight or ballot as explain capitalism away. Capitalism did not come by chance. It did not come arbitrarily. It will not disappear by chance or arbitrarily. The same law that brought will destroy it. Having satisfied its brief desires it will lapse in the broader ventures of the ideal.

We will not destroy it by hate. We will destroy it by love. We will love it out of existence. No rascality was ever refuted by hate. But when love appears on the scene every cabal is threatened. Why should I weakly resort to any physical weapon? That would be confession. With all logic, with all reason, with all prophesy, on my side, I do not need the cheap armories of reaction.

Do not deceive yourself. Your capitalism and labor will not pool their interests. As long as interests survive the one genuine interest will not be germinated. We have got to swing all the now alien forces round into unity. That unity will be labor. Not slave labor. Not wage labor. Not the labor which feeds one man and starves another. But that labor which bounteously assures the universal provender.

You have been told that if you do not labor you shall not eat. I do not say so. I say, eat. Eat and loaf. But you will be ashamed to eat and loaf. You will not wish to drone in a busy world. The joy of the world's labor will capture your reluctant spirit. You will wish to come to your meals with your head up. That means that you will come with the confidence of the producer. The producer is the last result. Civilization arrives at complete flower in the producer.

I would be sorry for my soul if it envied you your greed or its usufruct. I would be sorry if I used one unkind word in describing your genesis. You are to be pitied. The man whose dollars you appropriate is not to be pitied. You are to be pitied. You both starve. He only starves in body. You starve in soul. The great army of your lovers, your enemies, will pelt you with roses. You will be glad to abdicate. You will welcome your captors. You will feel that you have endured a siege. And your surrender will be your emancipation.

What nonsense we talk. We dance like boobies the dance of compromise. We dance like boobies the step of the ten per cent. We nest in classes. We discover that some men are better than some other men. And we tell the capitalist that Providence specializes in him. We make our laws round when they should be square and square when they should be round. We effect a civilization of misfits. Then we set down and weep over the result.

But suppose we have at last awoke? Suppose we have learned how to dot the last i? Suppose we are no longer to be cheated with phrases? Suppose we say that work is for the worker and comes back all to him? Suppose we deny that it is right for one man to seize the labor of a thousand men? Suppose we show that the case of the man who seizes and the man his victim could not be the same? Suppose we prove that your capitalist fat and your laborer lean are two persons and not one person and the same? Then your comfort will be gone. For then you will no longer lull yourself comfortably with the catchphrase of the compromiser.

Why shouldn't you work? Why should you expect the crowd to serve you? He who will not serve will not wish to be served. You will learn the lesson of labor. The lesson of labor is not that all shall labor for one but that one shall labor for all.

I do not believe you will sorrow over your lost luxuries. Luxury is a burden. Injustice is a burden. Your real interest is full of light and joy. But the interest you pursue in demand and supply is dead and empty. It would grieve me to hear you weep. But do I not hear the weeping children you have despoiled? So that when you remind me of your misery I remind you of these children. And when you ask me if civilization is not to devise some scheme by which to do equal justice to the capitalist and the laborer I say, yes. For civilization is to wipe out both the capitalist and the laborer. That will be the only equal justice we can expect.

I am sorry for you. But I am more glad than sorry. I have enough gladness to spare. I am so glad we are approaching a time in which man is to be fed and clothed and given a chance to really live that I think my gladness becomes a contagion in whose rapture even your despairs will find release.

We do not propose to rob you. We are going to prevent you from robbing others. We do not assert that you know you are robbing anybody. We are doing what we can to get the truth out in the open where you can see it. When you see it you will understand what we mean by civilization.

I do not wish to own a cent's worth of this world's goods. But I am willing to work. And my title to work carries with it enough to wear and to eat. And my title to food and clothes carries with it the right to loaf. For leisure husbands body and soul. And leisure will precede civilization. And the war we wage is in a low sense your belly against mine. But the peace we are to win in a high sense means the universal leisure.

So I say as I have said: Our interests as men are one. But our caste interests conflict. And the man only, never the caste, can survive such an encounter.

CAPITALISTIC TRANSMUTATIONS.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

"Things are not what they seem," is a saying that was never so truly true anywhere as within the democracy of America. Never was a reputedly great people kept shelling peanuts, writing, orating, playing brass bands and foaming at the mouth about it with such tremendous strenuousness as the citizens of this greater than all former republics. Like acrobats, we keep rolling between our own legs at a huge cost of public sweat; and when the day's rolling is done we stand where we started. Yet all the facts of the day apprise us that there is one ordained step, and only one, to be taken by either of the two giant classes; the step from industrial production to lawmaking for itself. In this giant age and country here is the one step to be made by that one who will be free, and he that fails falls.

It is true we seem to be free to ourselves when we are resting, but he whose affairs are not planted in the Capitol is a slave; that is, if he works; if he does not work he may be only a thief.

The people who play perpetually the patriots' tom-tom of liberty and who are not working men are only playing the fool anyway; for liberty is merely the antithesis of slavery and slavery means always, and only, compulsion to labor. Liberty is altogether a workaday matter pertaining to those only who collaborate economically with their generation. Idlers are neither slaves nor free men, being industrial non-entities and public questions are really not theirs at all.

The great things of our society are not what they seem. That pompous man of wealth and office whose frown makes you wither into a lonely cipher is only a creature into whom the shorn manhood of your labor has passed by theft. If you, the workingman, are not the government he is your thief.

Those geniuses who, we say, make great fortunes rapidly, make nothing. There are no fortunes in the world made by any but you the laborer; they transmute your labor into cash, or some other domination of nose hooks, and thereby hold you, by the aid of state law, to the distinguished task of making their fortunes in wage slavery and delivering the same by ballot. It is true the trust can make a price; but all the trusts off this too trustful world never made a cent of value.

Value in exchange appears among us seeking a match for something that has happened into its piece of matter, making it a desirable thing, a labor difficulty or a want industrially overcome, and so presented to me for change of ownership and mutual accommodation.

It is labor that we exchange. The antecedent labor history of a thing well and economically embodied, calls for an equivalent and gets it in every market. Whatsoever immediately, directly and necessarily led up to the commodity passes into it as social value.

Although the labor force applied at the last stage of a process of economic preparation may appear to be only one link and a somewhat different thing from the previous appropriate exertions focussed in it. Yet for effective consideration and practice it is for a moment all; until expressed in the commodity, when the laborer is demised by that product which is now the staple of capitalism, the objective and subjective of exchange value—the ware of the merchants. The laborer of the world should remember that omnipotent moment just before he crystallizes into trade commodities, and hold back. Each one of these commodities is surely wanted before it can have any exchange attraction; but it is not through a want afterwards discovered and fitted, nor through a chance demand by chance aptly supplied that these things become exchange values; but through the prevision of the social mind—the student of human wants—laboring men were set to work economically, and exchange value is but a later name for that sort of work.

As the mental energy of others leading up to the act of economic production is ended and buried in its own projected commodity by the final labor force; so the laborer himself passes away under his money equivalent, wages, bearing to him the same relation which his commodity bore to all that anteceded it. A golden knife is passed between labor and its products, and so long as that knife cuts, products will circulate away from the producers, and work will wait only on the dollar.

This is the crime of transmutation, labor transmuted into commodity for sale only; the laborer transmuted into dollar for bread only, and the capitalist transmuting all that he cannot profitably use as live capital into more ownership and control of the earth's fixed substance, omitting the sea; not for his own enjoyment, but for the increased power of exclusion. Every thousand dollars, let us say, being transmuted into a state bayonet pointed at the man who tries to run away from the private exploiter to the public domain. Every ten thousand transmutable into an injunction against united or any other intelligent effort of labor at self-defense; every twenty thousand into an appeal judge; every forty thousand into a church of individualism; every hundred thousand into a newspaper factory of public opinion; and nobody knows how much into a senator.

Money; for many very good and sufficient reasons, is the grand crucible for all our transmutations. Artists in money while anchoring their own future in the lands of the people fenced in by state bayonets have the power of keeping everything else on the move. While it seems as if money were circulating it is in reality all other men and things that are circulating in search of their money equivalent. The entrepreneur sits upon the social equator and with a golden finger bids the community to move around the line he tops for its new axis. He there gives birth to the maddest of altruisms; every factory he sets producing for a foreign market, and every laborer to making wares for dollars and usables for x, and he keeps democracy not playing, but weeping at catch-penny from one futile election to another.

Circles, which as entireties differ in dimensions from each other, are nevertheless all the same absolute thing, a circle divisable into 360 degrees; so a day's economic community life is the absolute thing lying at the basis of commercial or live exchanges. Capitalism has got this absolute thing on the run for transmutation into commodities, gold, land, and government.

By the use of machinery three economic elements have been brought to bear on the last objective of industry, the commodity. "Power," that is nature energy made continuous; then rythm, or tempo, that is the sustainment by intervaluation and swing of labor's effort; and third, the consequent saving of most of the labor energy for the last specific acts of skill which express themselves in the finished commodities of live commercial exchange value. Hereby the day's community work, like the larger circle as compared with the sumil, is a greater thing than the old uneconomic day of individualistic labor; but it is still absolutely divisable into parts, which parts become valuables for exchange in the commodity form. In the first instance these appear as differentiated forms of social labor but hastening to find their common expression in the money form.

The socialization of factory labor does not consist of the aggregating of laborers togethering, but of the three economic elements named above; it is not laborers but labor, which out of the one underthrobbing power differentiates at the finger tips of the men in a specialized part of commodity, and fitting all these parts finally together in the marketable whole, the social value, from which value the men who have produced the whole content themselves with making drafts on the basis of old time individuals who are still in the animal kingdom, surrendering the remaining product to the capitalists as surplus value.

The market fund of capitalism is the destitution that buys with labor and the little that always remains of the money wages received after labor has eaten and drank. It is the laborer's surplus which constitutes the space between chattel and wage slavery and for the most part the skill of capitalism is directed against that surplus to transmute it into market money or some barren expense, such as maintaining idle or sick comrades and surplus families, or buying defective and adulterated goods or any wasteful "come agains."

The real balance of the trader is therefore the equal destitution of the masses of workers in all countries; a destitution which compels them to remain on their own class plane paying for their own necessaries by producing them, and also producing articles for the higher life to be exchanged for larger monies on the several social planes above them.

It is the proletarian on the lower plane who produces the values of commerce, the things that he must produce as an industrial dependent, and which others must have as contemporary consumers. Some of these, after the preliminary act of consumption known as purchase, may be stored away and become dead values (sometimes ressurrected like a Stradivarius or a Murillo), but capitalism lives on the laborer whose destitution lashes him from day to day into production of wares on a commission called wages.

The wares thus produced are class wares for transmutation into such governmental forces as shall express the class will of the traders; for however devious the path may be this is the depot of the transmuters.

A great many of the less class-conscious property minds prefer to rest in the first transmutation, and to take their labor out in gold, which is never asked questions, and which makes all wealth, above live consumption, portable, which enables a man to carry his houses and lands across oceans and deserts and which keeps him aloof from troublesome governments. But the truly class-conscious capitalist presses his last and commercially unusable surplus beyond gold into territory with rights of exclusion and beyond territory again into government with a will and a way all his own. One runs away from government to have his will; the other stays and plants his will in the government and all the branch institutions of the country. When capitalism collapses, as it infallibly must, it will thus be entrenched in the ownership of the earth and the parchment control of men who must labor.

An insurance against future mankind for which any revolters must pay compensation is thus laid up by the Mammon of Unrighteousness in the state, and who shall say that all this is not an education for our working people looking towards the future.

Let me summarize a few of these lessons:

Your labor once externalized and separated from you becomes your oppression. How can this be prevented? Let the nation become one laborer; then all its work will be within itself and all its wealth. With no alien capitalism initiating and controlling labor for the production of more capital, and its subsequent criminal transmutations, you have an economic unit known as the Socialist Industrial Commonwealth.

By concentrating your force on the point where capitalism ends, that is the state, which the traders are stealthily transmuting into a private property institution, you can, because you are America's democracy, by a few well directed blows bring the crime and cunning of a century to naught and transform that state into a public property institution; and then a fig for the ransom bonds flourished in the hands of the bandits! Until they can bring back all the dead whom they have robbed and can give maturity to all the blighted lives now in the land which they have smitten, we cannot spell compensation.

Never go to work below the bread line for an interest that is foreign to your own. If so you will always find bread dear enough to keep your nose ground level with your face. In other words, never look for work when you are hungry; that is the proper time to beg; for it is better to be a one day beggar than a life long wage slave.

Never allow the labor of your bones to be made an instrument for dividing and enslaving the human family. It is only the demoniacal profit monger that could transmute to such strangely unholy uses the universal blessing of labor.

Since by your facile folly you have let your master, through you, ride over the human family, join now the Socialist movement, throw off your rider and let us gallop together with you to liberty.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Detroit News.

Students of economic problems have frequently called attention to the probable outcome of the highest development of the system of concentrating capital. The railroads have usually been taken as the best illustration of the tendency, doubtless because the question of transportation is one in which the people are most directly interested, and there would be less objection to the government's taking control of the railroads than of a manufacturing industry. Socialism, as an economic system which would destroy individual effort and competition on which modern society rests, is generally held up as the dream of enthusiasts who would force its acceptance by direct changes without waiting for it as an evolutionary development. Its development by the latter process is, however, not only possible, but even probable, unless there is a radical departure from the methods of business that are now in vogue.

The railroads have been used to illustrate the development because these vast enterprises are now practically controlled by a coterie of half a dozen men. The Vanderbilts, the Goulds, Morgan, Hill and Harriman are the principal owners, and almost the absolute directors of all the prominent railroads in the United States. It has been pointed out that within a comparatively short time this number will probably be decreased, and when the ownership or control of all the railroads passes into the hands of one or two or three men the time will be ripe for the government to take over the roads as the final step in the evolutionary process. Such a move would, it has been held, be the only natural and the only culminating step.

What is true of the railroads is true in varying degrees of other enterprises and interests whose control is centered in the hands of one man, or party of men acting in agreement.

Springfield Republican.

A high Republican official at Washington, commenntng on the election results, is quoted as saying that the Democratic party must become more radical even than it was under Bryan, or it will have to give way to the Socialist party. This may be a correct forecast of coming political alignments in this country; time will show us. Tending to support such view is the strong showing, whatever the special causes producing it, made by the Socialists in the late elections in Massachusetts, New York and other manufacturing States, and the failure of the Democratic party where reorganized on the old conservative basis, as in Connecticut, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, greatly to improve its position in contrast with what the party had been able to do as a radical organization.

The situation is not unlike that which existed politically just prior to the breaking up of the Whig and the rise of the Republican party fifty years ago. Slavery, either as an industrial or humanitarian question, was then the issue forced upon the country, which neither of the two great parties was able to dodge. After much playing for position in relation to that question, the Democratic party finally stood forth in open championship of existing institutions as satisfactory and to be let alone. The Whig party ventured upon the course of approaching the question only in its most superficial aspects. It became the party of expedients, compromises and dodges. Where the need was of a striking at the roots of the evil, the Whig party contented itself with cutting twigs in the branches. The people of the North finally turned upon the party and crushed it, raising up the Republican party in its stead.

The question now forcing itself into American politics beyond hope of dodging passes under the general description of the labor problem. It is a question at bottom not greatly different from the slavery question in its industrial aspect. Both are questions whether the livelihood of all may not better be looked after by the few privileged ones than by all; whether industry shall be organized on a paternalistic or upon a co-operative basis.

Such is the complexion to which the industrial problem of our day is being reduced; and while the party now in power does not openly stand for the paternalistic order or policy of letting things drift as they will, that is what its position of noninterference and modified apology for monopoly amounts to as a practical matter. And as an extreme measure the party goes no further than to propose certain regulative measures which may not regulate at all save in a superficial and inconsequential way.

But the question is with us and is a burning one. The people are thinking seriously about it, and are taking sides whose boundaries tend to run with sinister exactness along the mischievous lines of class. There is obviously no more room for two great parties on the side either of open championship of the present order of things or of palliative applications which do not palliate, than there was in the slavery era of our politics. The opposition party of the day must either become an imitator of the Whig party in relation to this question or it must stand for a deep-reaching treatment of the matter after the manner of the Republican party of 1856. It will imitate the Whigs if it contents itself merely with proposing tariff reduction as an adequate or satisfactory protection against monopoly and privilege; and it will invite the fate of the Whig party. The popular temper and demand indicate that it must present a more comprehensive and radical programme of trust regulation and public control of public service monopoly, or it will be forced to give way to a party which will.

The Socialist vote in the recent election has jumped clear beyond the hundred thousand mark. In 1902 a vote was polled for Eugene V. Debs for president, amounting to something like 96,000. This year the vote has gone away beyond 300,000, and all the returns are not yet in. The same old game as was practised when the People's party was reaching out is being played in the case of the Socialist vote. The Associated Press would give no returns for the third party, and the news had to be picked up by interested individuals and forwarded by freight trains. It doesn't matter much, however, the Socialists are getting there with a lightning express speed, regardless of what the plutocratic Republican and Democratic parties do in the matter of silent conspiracy. It is the only political party which holds out any inducements for the wage-earners of this or any other country.

New Castle Tribune.

Within the past year the subject of Socialism has been seriously discussed by the newspapers of the nation and thinking men have devoted a larger and larger share of their attention to the question which has become a paramount one in Europe and is rapidly assuming great importance in this country. Although the old party press has ignored the political party which has undertaken the Socialist propaganda, the party has grown. From a few scattering organizations two years ago it has now secured a foothold all over the country and the recent elections show that the movement is rapidly becoming too formidable to be longer ignored.

The Pilgrim.

Mr. Walter Wellman, one of the best known and most trustworthy of Washington's correspondents, tells a story apropos of the negotiations for the settlement of the coal strike, which is certainly interesting and not unimportant. It will be remembered that the National Civic Federation, of which Senator Hanna is the head, offered its services early in the contest, as an arbitrator. Its overtures were rejected with some impatience by the operators, who responded to public criticism of their action by giving out statements to New York newspapers in which they declared that the Civic Federation had done more harm than good, and that Mr. Hanna ought not to attempt to mix politics and business. Senator Hanna was wroth, and, according to Mr. Wellman, he called up Geo. W. Perkins, Mr. Pierpont Morgan's most active partner, and told him to serve notice on the coal road presidents that if they gave any more such statements to the newspapers he, Senator Hanna, would call a mass meeting at Cooper Union, and in a speech of an hour's length give the whole history of the coal strike. The threat, which sounds mysterious to uninformed people, was quite sufficient, and the operators have never since criticized either Senator Hanna or the Civic Federation. It would be rather interesting to know exactly what Senator Hanna meant by his threat, and, if he is as seriously anxious to settle the labor problem as he professes to be, it would seem that he should make public his facts, if he has any, bearing upon this problem. At any rate, since the Board of Arbitrators is to consider the coal strike in all its phases, the publication of this anecdote is certainly sufficient to lead them to summon Senator Hanna, which will give him an opportunity to tell all he knows.

The New Time.

Up to the present, union men have acted as a unit in times of strike or industrial war, with a considerable amount of successful results; it is for them to consider now whether or not it is advisable to carry that same principle of unity to the polls on election day. President Gompers of the A. F. of L. has said that the object of unionism is to enable workingmen to obtain "more and more" of the products of their labor. The average workingman is generally a man of hard common sense, and can generally see a point when it is called to his attention Now, we wish to ask him in all seriousness whether he does not think it would be better for him to obtain all the products of his labor instead of more and more; and if so, whether he does not think it would be more to his interests as a union man to vote for a policy which would enable him to get them? Socialism can easily show that under the wage system a man can never get the full product of his labor.

PARTY NOTES.

The National Committee is now going to push the work of organising the South, says the Cleveland "Citizen," and it is probable that a number of speakers will be sent into Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, the Carolinas, and other states.

Discussion meetings are held under the auspices of the Ward 7 and 9 Socialist Club of Boston, every Sunday, at 7:30 p. m., at 724 Washington street. Every one welcome to participate in the discussion. Admission is free.

Under a petty pretext, Comrade J. G. Roth of Wilkes Barre, Pa., has been discharged by the Wilkes Barre and Wyoming Valley Traction Company on account of his activity in the movement. Comrade Roth has not met with success in his search for a new job as he is a marked man with the corporations in the vicinity who are not disposed to "give employment" to Socialists and agitators. By such acts as these the capitalists only fan the flame of class-consciousness and raise up the wrath that is to destroy them. Comrade Roth is chairman of the Luzerne County Committee and one of our best workers in the anthracite region.

At the last meeting of the County Committee of Luzerne County, Pa., it was resolved to undertake the publication of a weekly paper in the interest of the Socialist Party of the anthracite region and North Eastern Pennsylvania, and contributions to the fund opened for that purpose are solicited. If desired, all contributions will be credited as subscriptions. A special meeting of all members of the party who are interested is called for Saturday evening, Nov. 22, at 7:30 p. m., in the Simon Long Building, Wilkes Barre, Pa., for the purpose of thoroughly discussing the subject and formulating definite plans for the publication of the paper.

On Thanksgiving Eve, Nov. 26, the Socialist Party Club of Bloomfield, N. J., will have a "hasenpfeffer supper" and all-night entertainment, at the Labor Lyceum, 99 Myrtle street, which is guaranteed to please all who come. Gentlemen's tickets are 50 cents; ladies', 25 cents. There will be a musical and dramatic program and dancing. The Club holds public meetings, with lectures, every Sunday afternoon, and there is dancing every Saturday evening. Workingmen of the vicinity are invited to attend. Any Socialist speakers who are willing to speak for the Club during the coming winter are requested to write to E. T. Neben, 52 Westcott street, East Orange, N. J.

Frederick G. Strickland, the well-known Socialist speaker, has joined forces with Charles Oliver Jones, an Ohio Socialist, and together they will make a trip through the western country on their way to Aspen, Colo., where they expect to locate after Feb. 1 next. On the way they will make the states of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

Comrade Danahy of Glens Falls writes: "This is a great field for agitation. Am preparing for a systematic course of work this winter." He starts by sending in a dozen new subscriptions for The Worker.

The Pearl River comrades are going to work to organize locals of the Social Democratic party in several of the adjacent towns, and propose that Rockland County shall show a good gain next election.

Seventeen new members were accepted at the last meeting of the 4th A. D., and a committee was appointed to work in conjunction with the other East Side assembly districts in order to strengthen the S. D. P. on the East Side. The next meeting of the 4th A. D. will be held Friday, Nov. 21, at 209 East Broadway.

At the last meeting of the 19th A. D. three new members were accepted. Comrade Emile Abbott was elected Financial Secretary; Comrade Fritschy, Corresponding and Recording Secretary; and Comrade Klauber, delegate to the General Committee. The comrades will at once make earnest efforts to gain new recruits to put the district in a position to carry on a more vigorous propaganda in the future and the old members of the district are asked to come forward and help in this work.

Daniel K. Young will speak on "Socialism and the Business Man" at Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, Sunday, Nov. 23 at 8 p. m.

The presentation of diplomas to those who successfully passed the examination in the local class in the Mills School of Social Economy will take place at Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, on Sunday evening, Nov. 23. Those who have been awarded certificates are: Carl Classen, Joseph A. Dunne, Mrs. A. Hall, Wm. Halpern, Miss Lena Rabinowitz, George Roewer, Otto Seegert and Rae Volkmar. M. M. Bartholomew, E. P. Clarke and C. A. Sprenger passed with distinction. Comrade Leonard D. Abbott will present the diplomas. It is to be hoped that a goodly number will accept the invitation extended to all to be present at the first commencement exercises of a class in Socialism in New York City.

The apron and necktie party of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville last Saturday was a complete success. The attendance was much larger than had been expected, and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the utmost. The club members were pleased at the large number of strangers present, and hope that many of these will become regular members of the club.

The splendid gain made by the Social Democratic party in the Thirtieth Assembly District—from 521 to 939—has filled the comrades with enthusiasm, as was shown at the first business meeting of the district after election, on Wednesday, Nov. 12. There was an unusually good attendance and all were eager to take up the work at once, with the resolution at least to double the vote again next year. Campaign Secretary Ortland reported in detail on the work of the campaign, and plans were then taken up for effecting an organization in every election district so as to reach every voter in the Thirtieth through personal agitation. A special meeting was called for Wednesday evening, Nov. 19, to complete these arrangements. Numerous hall meetings will be held during the winter, the circulation of The Worker will be pushed, and leaflets will be distributed systematically all over the district. Four new members were admitted. Comrades Ortland, Schaefer, Stahl, Wagner and Wolter were elected as new delegates to the General Committee, and Comrades Franz, Koenige, A. Jablinowski, Ramm and Uhl as a committee to arrange a family festival at an early date to celebrate the good results and raise funds for future work. Fifty tickets for the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum fair were accepted and most of them sold at once. The regular meetings of the district organization are held at the W. E. A. clubhouse, 206 East Eighty-sixth street, on the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of the month, and all Social Democrats in the district are invited to join.

Early in January a meeting of all comrades in the Yorkville districts will be held, and the Yorkville Agitation Committee has invited all unions and societies which contributed to its campaign fund to send delegates to hear the report showing what use has been made of the money and what plans have been laid for future work.

At the West Side Socialist Club this Friday evening, Nov. 21, at 8 p. m., John Spargo will lecture on "The Meaning and Message of Socialism," and the following Friday, Nov. 28, Jas. N. Wood will speak on "Socialism and Common Sense." The club meets in Clark's Hall, N. W. corner of Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, second floor, and the public is invited to attend the free lectures given there every Friday evening. Comrade Lemon's lecture last Friday was well attended and four new members joined the club. Members should not fail to attend the business meetings which are held during the half-hour preceding the lecture. At the last meeting it was decided to make the dues twenty-five cents monthly, commencing with Dec. 1, instead of five cents weekly. Comrade Thos. J. Lewis was elected delegate to the Socialist Daily Conference and Comrade Paff was chosen to look for a new hall, as it is expected that the present quarters of the club will prove too small in the near future.

A prominent speaker will deliver a lecture, to be followed by discussion, at the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, Sunday evening, Nov. 23, at 8 p. m., Instructive lectures will be given every Sunday evening.

Branch Glendale of Locals Queens County took in five new members at its last meeting. The branch meets at the Hoffman House, on Cooper near Myrtle avenue. On the first Wednesday of next month, Dec. 3, in place of the business meeting which would regularly occur on that evening, an agitation meeting will be held and a good speaker engaged to tell the people of this vicinity what it has gained at this election.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn holds a social at Kreuscher's Hall, at the corner of Cypress and Myrtle avenues, Saturday evening, Nov. 22. The admission fee is 15 cents. This club has done good work and gives promise of still greater usefulness in the future, and the comrades should make it a point to attend Saturday's social and help the club along. The Young People's Club of Yorkville has been especially invited to attend. To reach the place, take any car to Ridgewood, transfer to Richmond Hill and Cypress cars.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

At the last meeting of the General Committee of Local New York Comrade S. Graff was seated as a delegate from the 16th A. D. Thirty-four new members were admitted. A communication from Comrade Phil H. Smith was read offering his resignation from the Finance Committee. His resignation was not accepted. The Executive Committee was instructed to investigate the Good Times Agitation Committee and report at next meeting. The assembly districts were well represented and most of them reported doing good work. A motion was passed instructing the Executive Committee to issue a pamphlet with a statement of the vote received at the last election, together with such information as is deemed necessary.

A committee of three was elected, consisting of Comrades Lee, Spargo and Wood to be known as the Press Committee, whose duty it shall be to watch the public press for misstatements regarding Socialism and for the purpose of having our principles published whenever possible. The Organizer was instructed to send a communication to the People's Institute, Manhattan Liberal Club, and other organizations informing them that we could furnish them with lecturers.

GLASS SILVERERS.

The Glass Silverers' Union of New York at its meeting last Monday increased its membership to about eighty. It was decided to apply for a charter from the Amalgamated Glass Workers' International Association.

All silvering room employees are notified that a special meeting of the union will be held on Dec. 1, as some very important matters are to be taken up. After that date the admission fee will be $5. For information address H. Vallée, Corresponding Secretary, 73 Paterson Plank Road, West Hoboken, N. J.

FOR THE MINERS.

National Secretary Greenbaum reports the receipt of $38.25 from the Bohemian Societies of Chicago for the Miners' Strike Fund, bringing the total collected through the national organization of the Socialist Party up to $9,006.15.

This fund is now closed and comrades having lists in their possession are requested to cease collecting and to return the lists with any money on hand at once to Leon Greenbaum, 427 Emilie Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR THE DAILY.

On Thursday evening, November 20, at 8 p. m. sharp the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association will hold its first meeting since the close of the campaign for the purpose of taking definite action towards vigorously prosecuting the work in connection with raising the fund for the "Daily Globe."

The magnitude to which the Socialist movement has now grown make a daily Socialist newspaper an imperative necessity. Therefore, the fund for the "Daily Globe" must be raised so as to enable the publication of the paper before next election.

All comrades and sympathizers, as well as all members of the association are requested to attend. Election of officers and three members each to the Board of Trustees and Advisory Board is on the order of business. Comrades, turn out in full force and let this meeting be the best of any ever held by the association.

WM. BUTSCHER, Secretary.

SPEAKERS AND MEETINGS.

The following advice to party members on the management of public meetings, by W. G. Critchlow, in "Social Justice," would, if followed, greatly increase the effectiveness of Socialist meetings and the comfort of speakers:

SPEAKERS.

1. Arrange definite date. Do not advertise until you hear from speaker or manager, approving.

2. Inform speaker (or manager) by mail where to go when he reaches your place, where he is to be entertained, and who will settle with him.

3. If possible, meet him at the train, and have full information as to the fare and time of trains to his next date.

See that some particular person will attend to these matters.

STREET MEETINGS.

Hold street meetings whenever and wherever possible.

After determining to hold a meeting, make it a success.

Get free "notices" and "write ups" in all your local papers, including the labor paper, if any, a few days previous to date of meeting.

Get the comrades to chalk notices on the sidewalks, pavements, fences, barns, etc., in the desired district.

Send out postal cards to those who will be most likely to attend and bring others with them.

Get out some handbills announcing speaker and subject in large bold type and distribute.

Tell everybody about the meeting, being sure that they understand the date, place and time.

Do not advertise too far ahead of a meeting, for it will lose its effectiveness. Push things five to ten days previous.

All comrades should make it a point to be at meeting promptly and before the meeting opens. * * *

If place is dark, have a light (gasoline torch) burning nearby. * * *

Always have some leaflets with local or state ticket on for free distribution.

Local should have a rubber stamp outfit, and have leaflets stamped with local's meeting place and other pertinent notices.

Have some pamphlets (five or ten cent ones) to sell to audience.

Place literature in a pile on a box where it can be seen plainly by the audience.

Place a glass of water handy where speaker can easily get same.

Now you are ready to start the meeting.

Open meeting on time, no matter how few there are gathered around.

Some local comrade jump on the box and introduce the speaker. * * *

Don't talk in the crowd. It annoys the speaker.

Don't stand around with hands in pockets. You can't encourage speaker that way.

Don't keep continually running around the crowd trying to find some trouble. You are making trouble while doing so. * * *

Meetings are for propaganda. See that all comrades lend their efforts to make the meeting a success. Encourage the speaker when he makes a good point. Let him know it. Start enthusiasm in the audience. Keep the meeting alive.

Have your speaker fully informed about your arrangements, including the collection. Have him announce the free leaflets and pamphlets for sale just before closing. When he finishes take the leaflets and distribute to all who will accept. Other comrades take the pamphlets and sell them while circulating the crowd. Sell literature and argue as long as the "other fellows" will stay, then take outfit and return to headquarters to prepare for the next meeting. * * *

Don't forget that the speaker is to be entertained by one of the comrades wherever possible. This saves expense for the local. Be sure to let him know the arrangements you have made for his entertainment.

HALL MEETINGS.

In holding hall meetings more careful preparations for the success of the meeting must be made owing to the added expense of hall and incidentals.

Have good committee of three or five in charge of the arrangements.

Follow the general instructions in the preceding paragraphs as far as possible.

Secure hall ten days or two weeks ahead of date for meeting.

Cards or dodgersean always be used successfully to advertise.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Republican party stands for the BIG CAPITALIST
The Democratic party stands for the LITTLE CAPITALIST.
The Socialist Party stands for the WORKINGMAN.

To Show Its Love for the Workingman.

The Republican party has given $—— to help the striking miners.
The Democratic Party has given $—— to help the striking miners.
The Socialist Party has given over $9,000 and many speakers to help the striking miners.

Campaign Expenses Are Paid from Some Source.

Republican campaign funds are swelled by corporate interests.
Democrat campaign funds are swelled by business interests.
Socialist campaign funds come from workingmen.
TO WHOM ARE THE CANDIDATES OF EACH PARTY INDEBTED?

A River Rises No Higher Than Its Source.

A Republican is elected to serve corporate interests.
A Democrat is elected to serve small business interests.
Socialists will be elected to serve the workingmen.
AND EACH IS TRUE TO THE INTERESTS HE IS ELECTED TO SERVE.

The Republicans would trust the Trust.
The Democrats would bust the Trust.
The Socialists would possess the Trust
And use it for the workers' good.

The Republicans believe in a few skinning the workingman.
The Democrats believe in several skinning the workingman.
The Socialists believe the workingman should STOP THE SKINNING.

The Republican party believes in a Declaration of Impudence.
The Democratic party believes in a Declaration of Dependence.
The Socialist Party believes in a DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.
In which do you believe?
—The Socialist, Seattle, Wash.

SPLIT TICKETS.

The man who votes a split ticket is not a Socialist. There can be no joining of light with darkness. Either the Socialist Party is wholly right or wholly wrong. There can be no middle ground.

Every split ticket voted on Tuesday evidenced a divided mind. The truth cannot be divided. Candidates do not count. The thing the candidate stands for is the unit.

A split ticket is not a vote for Socialism. The Socialist Party does not stand to patch up this dead and rotten system officered and manned by the most corrupt and lawdefying of men ever recorded in history. It says the whole system, from church to newspaper, from priest to politician, from petty constable to national president, is dead, rotten, and a mass of putrifying sores and bruises. It cannot be cured. It must be buried, and that quickly, for it already smells to heaven. Split tickets cannot do it. Divided minds cannot do it. Socialism only can do it, and Socialism only can be expressed in absolutely straight tickets—not a diluted thing, but a revolution.

A vote for a Socialist candidate is not a vote for Socialism—the latter must be elected to power, not the former. Split tickets can't do it.—Chicago Socialist.

"LIFE" ON THE WORKINGMAN.

This is the greatest living curiosity, ladies and gentlemen and my little friends. It is so ferocious that it will go thousands of miles to kill people, and will slaughter its fellows at the command of its masters. * * *

This is the only animal that builds elaborate dwelling places, but does not live in them, and works all the time. You observe how intelligent it looks, but its intelligence is all in its hands, for it produces its own food in vast abundance but does not know enough to take sufficient for itself. It has enormous strength and is incredibly cruel, for it will destroy its young to please those whom it is accustomed to obey.

It spends much of its time in captivity and stuffing little bits of paper, which its master gives it, into a box, and thinks it of the greatest importance which bit it will stuff in. If it knew its power we could never restrain it.

No matter how lean it is, it never kicks as long as the bulls and bears are fat, because it think the country is prosperous. It growls, but it doesn't do anything. (Twist its tail, Mr. Corner.) That's its vox populi.

Its name? It is called Americanus Working Mannus, or the Party voter.—Life.

A TALE OF TWO VOTES.

In Autumn when chill was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in a box together,
Two ballots were cast in together.
They nestled up close like brother to brother,
You couldn't tell one of the votes from the other,
You couldn't tell one from the other.

One was cast by one of the Capitalist Clan,
A rotund old banker with money and land;
The other, by a poor Laboring Man.
The Laboring Man, with spirit and rancor,
Spent most of the Summer denouncing the banker,
But his ardor cooled off with the change in the weather,
And late in the Fall they voted together,
Both voted together!

The Laboring Man had always been noted
For aiding in strikes—except when he voted.
He piled up his gifts to the strike aid collection,
And he knocked them all down on the day of election.
He knocked them all down at election! mellow,
And said: "I admire that hard-working fellow,
He talks against me with a good deal of rancor,
But he votes, yes, he votes every time with the banker,
He votes every time with the banker."
—Ex.

A CRY FROM THE GHETTO.

The roaring of the wheels has filled my ears,
The clashing and the clamor shut me in;
Myself, my soul, in chaos disappears.
I cannot think or feel amid the din.
Toiling and toiling and toiling—endless toil.
For whom? For what? Why should the work be done?
I do not ask, or know; I only toil.
I work until the day and night are one.

The clock above me ticks away the day.
Its hands are spinning, spinning like the wheels.
It cannot sleep or for a moment stay.
It is a thing like me and does not feel.
It throbs as tho' my heart was beating there
O, heart? My heart? I know not what it means.
The clock ticks, and below I strive and stare,
And so we lose the hour. We are machines.

Noon calls a truce; an ending to the sound,
As if a battle had one moment stayed—
A bloody field! The dead lie all around;
Their wounds cry out until I grow afraid.
It comes—the signal! See the dead men rise.
They fight again, amid the roar they fight.
Blindly, and knowing not for whom, or why,
They fight, they fall, they sink into the night.
—From the Yiddish of Morris Rosenfeld.

CHRISTIAN CONSISTENCY.

Among the stories told to the Christian Endeavorers while they were in Boston was one concerning a peripatetic of the barefooted variety and a farmer, who was also a church deacon. The deacon was taking lunch under his own vine and fig tree, and unto him the peripatetic said:

"Sir, I'm very hungry."

"You haven't been shaved," replied the deacon.

"No, but I'm very hungry."

"You're very dirty, into the bargain."

"Yes, but I'm very hungry."

"Well, can you say the Lord's Prayer?"

"No, I can't."

"Will you say it for a piece of bread?"

"I will."

The deacon started in with "Our Father," at the same time cutting off a slice as he enunciated the words. The tramp repeated "Our Father," then suddenly asked:

"Did you say 'Our Father?'"

"Yes. 'Our Father.'"

"Stop just a moment," continued the dirty man. "You mean your father and my father?"

"I do," answered the deacon.

"Then we are brothers," triumphantly proceeded the unshaved.

"We are."

"Then, for our father's sake, cut that bread thicker and cut it quicker."

"Is New Zealand a workingman's paradise?" Not much. Not so long as sweating exists; not until the wage system is thrown overboard altogether. Not while there are bosses and employees. Not while there are workers who have not had the opportunity to receive the first rudiments of education. Not while the wage-earners truckle and crawl and toady to the lawyer, the parson, the land thief, and the money thief; not while a sentiment of jingoism can be fanned to life; not until there are equal rights and equal opportunities for all men and women; not until all have their capacities thoroughly developed by education; not until the Co-operative Commonwealth of New Zealand is established, will our country be a workingman's paradise.—New Zealand Pilot.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 180 local branches with 25,000 males and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $3.00 and $2.50 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and most adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

A BRIEF EXPOSITION.

Socialism Clearly and Concisely Explained by Comrade Forbes.

Taking advantage of the interest aroused by Socialist agitation in Spring Forge, Pa., Comrade S. Innes Forbes of Philadelphia contributed to the local paper the following brief and clear exposition of the Socialist position:

Editor of Spring Grove "Ripplet."

Dear Sir:—There seems to be some misapprehension regarding Socialism on the part of those to whom the subject is a new one, and it is possible that a few words from one who is familiar with it may prove helpful to them in arriving at a clearer understanding of it.

Socialism is the state of society which Socialists perceive is the inevitable outgrowth of the present state of society which they call Capitalism. Socialism is so called because it is preeminently and entirely a social system to be maintained for the well-being of all members of society in contradistinction to the prevailing anti-social system in which the well-being of a small class of capitalists is maintained at the expense and sacrifice of the great class of brain and hand workers who in reality produce all wealth. (The term "capitalist," at the present time, usually denotes a man with many millions of dollars so invested as to yield him rent, interest or profit. From "Bradstreets" and "Dun's Review" the figures show a rapid decrease of small capitalists, indicating their final elimination.) The conviction that Socialism is the inevitable outgrowth of capitalism is founded on the great natural law of the survival of the fittest in the struggle for existence which biologists agree is in operation wherever life exists. In the struggle for existence man was long ago driven by force of economic necessity to associate with other individuals engaged in the same struggle, for he discovered that co-operation or social effort resulted in greater benefits to him than individual or anti-social effort. In other words the social or co-operative principle has proved itself the fittest to survive in society and all anti-social action is foredoomed.

The success of the present system of wealth production is entirely due to the application of co-operation, for it is the combined labor of many workers which results in the enormous wealth produced in the United States. At no time in history has the product of the workers been so great; at no time has their share been so small. (See Roger's "Six Centuries of Work and Wages," and United States Census, 1900.) And the failure of the present system of wealth distribution is entirely due to the absence of the principle of co-operation, for far from our so-called Commonwealth dispensing justice and maintaining the "commonweal" by securing to the producers the whole of their product in equitable shares, it upholds a system of wage-slavery whereby the workers are entitled, on an average, to but 17 per cent. of their product (see wages in United States Census, 1900), and the capitalists are legally entitled to the remainder. (Be it remembered that Abraham Lincoln said "Capital is only the fruit of labor and could never have existed if labor had not first existed.")

The moral and materialistic discrepancy between what the workers produce and what they receive for their product has existed in all "civilized" countries through all times with few exceptions and is the cause of all great social disorders, war, intemperance, prostitution, and crimes of all sorts which are, after all, but boomerangs to a society founded upon a gigantic system of robbery. Because the robbery is unrecognized as such, alters not one whit the fact that it is robbery.

Socialists do not, however, denounce capitalists for this state of affairs; they take an impersonal view of it and point out that it is part of the process of social evolution which, like other parts, will be discarded when the growth of the social organism demands such action. Upon investigation it will be found that the reason the workers receive only a part of the fruit of their toil is because the means by which all wealth is produced are owned by a small class of people. Ownership of all the means of producing wealth then is the key to the whole situation and Socialists, therefore, are in favor of the public ownership of all such means as the first step toward the "Brotherhood of Man." They perceive that as long as the land, machinery, factories, railroads, mines, etc., are owned by one class, which, by reason of such ownership can prey upon the other class, the interests of the two classes will remain antagonistic and a constant struggle between these classes is inevitable. We cannot reasonably expect members of these two opposed classes to "love their neighbors as themselves." Parties engaged in a great struggle have little time for loving their foes.

Let those who condemn stealing, who believe "Vox Populi Vox Dei," (the voice of the people is the voice of God), and who want all men to love their neighbors as themselves, help to establish the Co-operative Commonwealth. Let every man and woman who would "make for righteousness" realize that their place is in the great Socialist movement which stands for justice. Let them "agitate" (Jesus was an agitator), and "educate" and "organize" and let the men vote for the Socialist Party and thus help to inaugurate the "Brotherhood of Man."

S. INNES FORBES.

AS TO EQUALITY.

Socialism has no thought of an equality of individuals, but seeks equality of opportunity. It promises justice, harmony, peace, the common good. Men and women may always be infinitely different so far as Socialism cares, but they must all have a fair and approximately equal chance to amount to something.—Co-Operator.

Counties.	1900.	1902.
Herkimer	170	234
Onondaga	352	367
Ontario	10	16
Totals	532	617

This brings the total Social Democratic vote so far officially reported up to 21,411.)

The thirty-three counties officially reported give 11,491 votes for the S. L. P., as against 9,384 two years ago—a gain of 2,107, or 22 per cent. If this gain is maintained in the other twenty-eight counties, the total vote of the S. L. P. in the state will be increased from 13,762, the figure of two years ago, to over 16,000.

Manhattan and Bronx.

The official count for the boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx is now complete and shows a still greater gain for the Social Democratic Party than was claimed by our watchers at the polls.

In 1900 we polled 6,387 votes in these two boroughs. This is now increased to 10,920—a gain of 4,533 or 71 per cent.

The totals for 1900 and for 1902, by assembly districts are given in the following table:

Brooklyn.

Brooklyn also shows a good increase. The official figures for all of the twenty-one assembly districts are here given:

Assembly Districts.	1901.	1902.
First	51	59
Second	20	37
Third	33	64

Twentieth	695	1,025
Twenty-first	315	559
Totals	2,602	4,382

The figures of 1901 are here used for comparison, because in 1900 the vote was not recorded by assembly districts. The total in 1900 for the borough of Brooklyn was 2,575. The gain for two years is 1,807 votes, or 70 per cent.

Erie County.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Official returns for the city of Buffalo give 444 votes for the Social Democratic Party and 951 for the S. L. P. The rest of Erie County gives the two parties 61 and 72 respectively, bringing the total up to 505 for the Social Democratic Party and 1,023 for the "union-smashers." As compared with the figures of 1900 this is a gain of 104 for us and a gain of 76 for the DeLeonites.

Our lack of organization here is deplorable and it is to be hoped that just as soon as the State Committee gets its breath again after the work of this campaign is cleared up, it will devote particular attention to Buffalo and get things in working order here.

E. C. F.

Onondaga County.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The official count for Onondaga County gives 367 votes for Hanford, candidate of the Social Democratic Party, and 456 for DeLeon, S. L. P.

In 1900 the Social Democratic Party had 352 and the S. L. P. 1,135. We gain 15 votes and the "smashers" lose 679.

In the city of Syracuse we have 315 and DeLeon 354. E. B. S.

Scattering Returns.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 12.—The Social Democratic Party has polled 27 votes in the town of Queensbury, Warren County and 24 in South Glens Falls, Saratoga County. The S. L. P. has 23 and 16 in these places, respectively. There was little or no discrimination exercised by the new Socialist voters as between the two parties. They do not know the difference yet, but they will find out.

P. V. D.

FELTS MILLS, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Out of 130 votes here, 8 are straight for the Social Democratic Party. The "union-smashers" have none.

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Haverstraw and Garnerville give 13 votes for Hanford.

WISCONSIN.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15.—Forty-eight counties in this state so far officially reported give 2,311 votes for Seidel, Social Democratic candidate for Governor. In 1900 these counties gave us 628 votes. These are the smaller counties. Those in which the largest part of our vote is cast—as Milwaukee, Sheboygan, and Racine—are not yet in. It is gratifying to see the Socialist quadrupled in the parts of the state where it was relatively small two years ago.

R. H. J.

KANSAS.

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Nov. 14.—In 1900 this county (Wyandotte) gave 212 votes for the Socialist ticket. In the election just held the Socialist Party has 307 in this city, 14 in Argentine, 12 in Rosedale, and 50 in the rest of the county—giving us a total of 392 votes. This is the straight vote. Some of our candidates polled as high as 484. Socialism is coming by leaps and bounds in this part of the country.

O. U. G.

NEW JERSEY.

FT. LEE, N. J., Nov. 17.—Bergen County gives 343 votes for W. H. Wyatt, candidate of the Socialist Party for Congress. Last year our vote was 199. Our candidates for Assembly have 365 and 367 respectively and for Surrogate 351. The S. L. P. gets 115.

In Passaic County we have 394 for Wyatt, a gain of 20.

Sussex County shows 39 for Wyatt. Last year there were only 7.

We are now recognized as a legal party, having over 2 per cent. of the vote.

LABOR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

An engineer at one of the mines at Johannisburg, South Africa, writes of the labor question there. He says:

"Peace is bringing poverty. The niggers have been reduced from fifty cents to twenty-five cents per day, and won't stand it, and are going home in thousands, with the result that a lot of the mines are shutting down.

"We are the busiest mine on the Rand, and are having the biggest output, and yet we have had to hang up stamps, and are now only running about a hundred stamps instead of two hundred, and to-day many of our men who have been here for seven years are being paid off. Some of the mines are starting men at $1.85 a day, without board and lodgings. In the Dutch days the minimum was $4.50 a day for an engineer, with part board thrown in.

"There is a rumor that an attempt is to be made to wipe out the Basutos and grab their land. The country round about here is being flooded with wastrels. South Africa seems to have suddenly become the dumping ground for the scum of the earth, whose general intelligence is of a much lower order than that of the lowest class dopper Dutchman. I prophesy lively times before very long. Any man who leaves anywhere to come here now is either a pauper or a blethering idiot."

Since the above was written the British government in South Africa has raised the capitation tax on the free male blacks from $5 to $10 annually, and in addition, for the first time, has imposed the same tax on the married black women. The object is to force the men into the mines at the new rate of wages fixed by the mine-owners; in other words, into a slavery in which the employer has no care about the well-being of the slave, as the British government will provide the necessary supply of labor by means of the capitation tax lash.

FOR A' THAT AN' A' THAT.

Is there, for honest poverty,
That hangs his head, an' a' that?
The coward slave, we pass him by,
We dare be poor for 'a that!
For a' that and a' that,
Our toil's obscure, an' a' that,
The rank is but the guinea stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

What tho' on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddin gray, an' a' that;
Gi'e fools their silks and knaves their wine,
A man's a man for a' that,
For a' that, an' a' that,
Their tinsel show an' a' that;
The honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that.

Ye see you birkie, ca'd a lord,
Wha struts and stares, an' a' that;
Tho' hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a coof for a' that;
For a' that, an' a' that,
His riband, star an'a' that,
The man of independent mind,
He looks and laughs at a' that.

A prince can mak' a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, an' a' that,
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Gude faith he manna fa' that;
For a' that, an' a' that,
Their dignities an' a' that,
The pith o' sense, an' pride o' worth
Are higher ranks than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That sense an' worth, o'er a' the earth,
May bear the gree, an' a' that,
For a' that, an' a' that,
It's coming yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the world o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.

THAT SURPLUS.

In his Indianapolis speech Senator Hanna said we must find a market for our surplus. Have any of you workingmen a surplus? Couldn't you use a great deal more of that surplus? Overproduction and poverty! Excellent system.—Chicago Socialist.

WHAT IS SOCIALISM?

A Soap Box Talk.

By Frederick G. Strickland.

Socialism is not a theory but a fact. It is not a reform, but a social revolution now actually coming to pass. As society has of necessity changed before, so it must of necessity change again. In fact, in our methods of industry we have already changed. Fifty years ago the worker had a trade and plied his skill by means of hand implements that he owned. To-day the implement is a gigantic machine or factory that another man, a capitalist, owns. Besides, this machine has robbed the worker of his skill. Now the worker, stripped of his skill, has only a bare pair of hands to sell, and he must sell them at once for his mouth must be fed, and, let us hope, the mouths of his little ones must be fed. The man with the machine can wait. He can wait until the terms of employment are to his liking. He is master of the game. He plays with loaded dice.

And the employer does not pay his laborers. He merely keeps the laborers alive and in condition to work, and allows them to raise children that the stock of laborers may not die out.

The employing class hold the key to the situation. They own the opportunity of the other men to make a living. This ownership involves practically the ownership of the men, but it does not include the responsibility of ownership, for the burden of responsibility is shifted to the workers themselves. They must see to it that the job is found and the employment is steady. They must bear the burden of all accidents. If the employer or the employment is intolerable they must go elsewhere and be engaged by another master.

The bearing of this burden of responsibility is called "liberty" and "freedom." In such a condition of serving and being served, of master and worker, we are all said to be "equals." Between the lord and the serf there is said to be an "identity of interests." It is the same "identity" that may be noted between a cat and a mouse.

But how has it happened that the worker in his "freedom" has been caught in such a slavery? It is because men have not well noted the changed conditions under which they work. Once they were wage-earners only when they were apprentices learning a trade. Now there is practically no trade to learn for the great machine has knocked out the trade, and the wage-earner is a wage-earner because another man, the capitalist, owns the machine.

The capitalist, on the other hand, was once merely a master mechanic, employing other men, as apprentices merely because he knew the trade better and could lay out the work for other men not so skilled. But now they are masters without being mechanics. They do not lay out the work for other men. The superintendent himself is a wage-earner. The capitalist is simply lying on the other man's opportunity to toil. He does not understand the business, except the business of buying and selling stocks, which is an entirely different business. He is a capitalist merely because he owns capital, the machine. Thus is he master of the situation.

The heart of the trouble is this: The tools of industry have changed from little hand implements that the worker owned and used, to a gigantic plant of machinery that a large number of men have to use working together, working co-operatively. Now if the tools, the plant, must be used co-operatively it ought, therefore, to be owned co-operatively, so that the workers may receive, each according to his labor, what they have produced.

Or supppose that we leave matters as they are. One man owns the opportunity of the other men to toil. He gathers the surplus of the many who toil for him. This surplus is no small matter. The very machine he owns has increased tenfold the productive power of the workers. But the owner of the machine, the capitalist, gets this increase, for the most part. Under this arrangement the wealth of the world must go to a few. The large capitalist must crush the small one, because of the superior power of the great capitalist; not because of his smartness but because of greatness.

Finally by means of this process, now going on, practically all of the people will be wage-earners. This means the destruction of the present business system. When the capital is in the hands of the few and practically all the people are wage-earners, there will, of course, be practically no one but wage-earners to buy the goods. But a wage-earner cannot buy back the goods that he makes. Therefore, all the wage-earners cannot buy back all the goods they make. According to government statistics they can now buy only one-fifth of what they make. At the present rate of combining capital, it will be only a few years at the farthest when the surplus that the people cannot buy will heap up until the market is ruined and profit in the business world becomes impossible.

When the plant must close because the capitalist cannot make a profit, we must conduct it ourselves without the capitalist's profit. The only just manner in which to do this is to give to each worker goods according to the value of his toil. Such a change must come or starvation will ensue. The alternative is Socialist or starvation. Will it take the working people long to decide? Or is it true that they will all have to be angels before the choice is made?

But what must we do now? What method may be undertaken to transfer the ownership of capital (machinery) from private to public hands?

The worker has only one power in organized society. He is a voter. He is now throwing this power away, but the power is his. The same power of state that is used to break up, with soldiers and injunctions, his strike against unjust conditions—this power the wage-earner can make his own if he will organize a politics of his own and become the government himself. Now he is hopelessly divided between two parties, both of which are pledged to give him a businesss administration. It is businesss that ails him now. But of far more force is this fact: Back of both dominant parties there is no organization of the voters. The only organization is the "machine." The machine is run by money and the money comes of the capitalist class, as they are practically the only people that have money.

The wage-earners have only one resort. That is, to organize themselves into a movement of by and for themselves and through their own organization become the government. When once the wage-earners are the government the two present conflicting classes will be merged into one class, the workers. Then and not till then the present class struggle will end.

It will then devolve upon the people, the workers, through their government to condemn the private ownership of what all the people have to use, to make such adjustment with the former owners as is deemed just at the time, and to forever afterward conduct socially, collectively, the earth and machinery in the interest of all.

This, then, is Socialism. It is justice brought down to date. It is justice applied to the co-operative form of industry, now hastening to completion. It is the means of escape for lives beaten down and imprisoned by the modern war of commercialism. You should vote for the Socialist Party if you desire to live the life of a free man.

TWO KINDS OF EVOLUTIONISTS.

I went out on a vacant lot
And viewed the tumble weed;
An ugly, useless, scraggly thing,
With most prolific seed.

Said I, "What do you here, vile weed?"
Said he, "Now don't get gay;
Be calm; just wait and watch me
Till I evolute away.

"But if you want to know my use—
I serve to illustrate.
Survival of the fittest,
And I think I do first rate."

"Please tell me what you mean by that.
And why you should survive?"
"I mean these here conditions
Are the ones in which I thrive."

Thus he talked of evolution,
But somehow failed to state
That human evolutionists
Are masters of their fate.

So I answered him quite promptly—
"I'll let you do the 'wait'
While I do some evoluting
That is strictly up-to-date.

"We'll change 'these here' conditions,
And we'll see how long you'll stay;
Just watch how fitly you'll survive
When comes another day."

With a good old plow and harrow
And some water from the hose
I made that desert lot rejoice
And blossom as the rose.

I planted corn and cabbage
And lillies white and tall,
And violets and mignonette
And celery; and all

These useful things did grow apace—
That erstwhile haughty weed
Found all these new conditions
Unfitted for its need.

Therefore it went away to stay,
As all that's evil might,
If human beings only would
Arrange conditions right.

For should that vacant lot revert
To tumble weed at last,
'Twill be because man fails to heed
This lesson from the past.

—Celia B. Whitehead.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The "too" old parties will now fall over each other in their show of friendship towards the dear workingman. The size of the Socialist vote will be the cause of their doing so. The workers are on to them and realize that the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party is more than their friend—it is their party.

Those wiseacres who are wont to say that "Socialism is right, but it will take a hundred years or more to bring it about," will now have to sing another tune.

If we keep on growing at this year's rate it will not take long ere the Reps. and Dems. will forget all their quarrels and become "two souls with but a single thought." The thought can be easily surmised.—How can we, the capitalists, remain on the backs of the workers in view of their awakening class-consciousness?

The paramount duty of those who have been convinced of the correctness of our position, if they desire to see the movement grow, is to join the organization and thus become one of the soldiers in the army of Labor's emancipation.

Now that the election is over we will not hear very much about the trusts from either the Republicans or Democrats who control the law-making bodies. Whatever remedy they may apply, or rather pretend to apply, we Socialists know it will not harm the trusts to any extent. The trusts own both parties; in Democratic states they own the Democratic party and in Republican states they own the G. O. P. As has been stated by Socialists time and time again the only way to remedy the evil is the collective ownership of the trusts by all the people. Neither one of the old parties stand for this. The Socialist Party does.

In view of the fact that we have now more than doubled our vote we ought now make up our minds to go it one better by trebling the fund for the Socialist Daily.

SOCIALISM AND TRADE UNIONISM

The following resolution was adopted by the Socialist Party in National Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 31, 1901:

"The Socialist Party, in convention assembled, declares that the trade union movement and independent political action are the emancipating factors of the wage-working class. The trade union movement is the natural result of capitalist production and represents the economic side of the working class movement. We consider it the duty of the Socialists to join the unions of their respective trades and assist in building up and unifying the trades and labor organizations. We recognize that trade unions are by historical necessity organized on neutral grounds as far as political affiliation is concerned.

"We call the attention of trade unionists to the fact that the class struggle so nobly waged by the trade union forces to-day, while it may result in lessening the exploitation of labor, can never abolish that exploitation. The exploitation of labor will come to an end only when society takes possession of all the means of production for the benefit of all the people. It is the duty of every trade unionist to realize the necessity of independent political action on class-conscious lines, to join the Socialist Party and to assist in building up a strong political movement of the wage-working class, whose ultimate aim and object must be the abolition of wage slavery and the establishment of a co-operative state of society based on the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

TWO IDEALS OF LIFE.

For centuries science and so-called practical wisdom have said to man: "It is good to be rich, to be able to satisfy, at least, your material needs; but the only means to be rich is to so train your minds and capacities as to be able to compel other men—slaves, serfs, wage-earners—to make these riches for you. You have no choice. Either you must stand in the ranks of the peasants and the artizans who, whatever economists and moralists may promise them in the future, are now periodically doomed to starve after each bad crop or during their strikes, and to be shot down by their own sons the moment they lose their patience; or you must train your faculties so as to be a military commander of the masses, or to be accepted as one of the wheels of the governing machinery of the state, or to become a manager of men in commerce or industry." For many centuries there was no other choice, and men followed that advice, without finding in it happiness, either for themselves and their own children or for those whom they pretended to preserve from worse misfortunes.

But modern knowledge has another issue to offer to thinking men. It tells them that in order to be rich they need not take the bread from the mouths of others; but that the more rational outcome would be a society in which men, with the work of their own hands and intelligence, and by the aid of the machinery already invented and to be invented, should themselves create all imaginable riches. Technics and science will not be lagging behind if production takes such a direction. Guided by observation, analysis, and experiment, they will answer all possible demands. They will reduce the time which is necessary for producing wealth to any desired amount, so as to leave to everyone as much leisure as he or she may ask for. They surely cannot guarantee happiness, because happiness depends as much, or even more, upon the individual himself as upon his surroundings. But they will guarantee, at least, the happiness that can be found in the free and varied exercise of the different capacities of the human being, in work that need need not be overwork, and in the consciousness that one is not endeavoring base his own happiness upon the misery of others.—Peter Kropotkin, in "Fields, Factories and Workshops."

SOMETHING DOING.

If a single plutocrat in all the land would spend thirty minutes reading the Socialist exchanges he would conclude that something was doing. Every paper comes loaded with stinging words and strong testimony bearing evidence that a very live movement is on, and an ever-increasing number of men are learning that the only avenue of escape from industrial and economic bondage is the way of Socialism. Organize, organize.—Chicago Socialist.

THIS WEEK.

With a terrible cold in his head,
And eyelids heavy and sore,
An editor sat in his broken chair,
And bitterly, earnestly swore.
A youth had dropped in with a poem,
A man was there with a dun,
And a chap had dropped in to tell him
How the paper ought to be run.
An irate subscriber had told him
His sheet wasn't fit to be read;
While an author carefully promises
He will punch the editor's head.
The foreman was yelling for copy,
And the wind whistled in at the door,
And this, with a few other reasons,
Is why the editor swore.
But the angel that took it to Heaven
Recorded his verdict there;
"The jury finds in the present case
'Twas a justifiable swear."

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

Good News Expected from Massachusetts City Elections.

Capitalist Politicians Are Alarmed and Are Spending Money Freely—Other Cities Besides Haverhill and Brockton May Elect Socialists.

The municipal campaigns in Massachusetts are now in full swing. So far as reported, municipal tickets have been nominated for the elections of December 2nd in Brockton, Haverhill, Fitchburg, Quincy, Springfield and Waltham, and for the elections on December 9th in Chelsea, Chicopee, Lowell, Lynn, Lawrence, Salem, Somerville and Worcester. In all of these the Socialists are carrying on an active campaign and there is every indication of good results on election day.

Of course the principal interest attaches to the elections in Haverhill and Brockton where we are trying to regain our former standing by electing the mayors and obtaining control of the city governments. In Haverhill Parkman B. Flanders is again our candidate for mayor and reports are to the effect that he should be elected with a strong backing in the council and aldermanic boards.

The Haverhill comrades are fighting with their old-time vim. Last week they succeeded in securing facts as to the mal-administration of the water department and on Friday night last at a great meeting in city hall, Comrades Carey and Flanders made an exposure which has stirred the whole city. Along with this is the naturally aroused interest in the movement through the increase in the state and our best political judges predict victory next Tuesday.

In Brockton the re-election of Coulter is practically conceded by all those acquainted with the situation. The tremendous increase gained in the state election for the head of the ticket demonstrated the strength of the party in Brockton and paved the way for success next Tuesday. Here again the Socialists have placed their opponents on the defensive and have been able to attack the last year's administration to great advantage. It is also probable that several aldermen will be elected.

We are able to state on reliable authority that the leaders of the capitalist parties in Massachusetts have placed money in large sums into Brockton and Haverhill to prevent Socialist victories. The sum in each case reaches well up into the thousands and we have it that our opponents in the above named localities have received instructions to spare no expense. Nevertheless, our people are confident of overcoming the influence of such methods and are carrying on a very aggressive campaign.

The State Executive Committee issued an appeal for funds for Haverhill and Brockton, but the response has not been as great as hoped for. This is due mostly to the fact that the comrades throughout the state have not recovered from the expenses incident upon the state election. The Executive Committee, however, realizing the importance of holding our ground in Brockton and Haverhill have voted $50 to each of the cities. If there are any sympathisers who care to assist this fund at this time contributions will be received by the undersigned.

Another city that is claiming attention is Fitchburg. Here the election also occurs the same day as in Brockton and Haverhill and it appears as if the Socialists would elect a mayor there. The Fitchburg "Sentinel," the leading capitalist paper of the city, has conceded such a possibility. The fight is a five cornered one with Dr. Russell Bingham as the Socialist candidate. It is also expected that Thomas Laney will be elected alderman. Laney was the comrade who was imprisoned for defending the rights of his union some time ago and received a large vote in the state election for County Commissioner. Fitchburg is a large manufacturing city and has been called the Pittsburg of Massachusetts.

In Springfield, Comrade Geo. H. Wtenn has been nominated with a strong ticket behind him and the comrades there expect to make a good showing. This optimism also arises from the largely increased vote this month.

In Quincy, Comrade William T. Richards, one of our oldest workers, is a candidate for mayor and all our people are working hard. Just what will be done in the cities where elections occur on December 9th depends somewhat on the results next Tuesday.

Meetings and Speakers.

The Boston comrades are preparing to do a lot of work the next week and to take advantage of the increase made this month. Rallies have been arranged to cover every ward in the city and the schedule so far is as follows:

December 2, Ward 17, Representative Carey. Dec. 3, East Boston, 52 Meridian street, Commonwealth Hall, Representative Carey and John W. Brown; Charlestown, "Dr." H. A. Gibbs and Representative Carey; Neponset, Representative MacCartney. Dec. 4, Ward 8, Representative Carey, J. W. Sherman and local speakers; Wards 13, 14 and 15, Representatives Carey and MacCartney, Dr. H. A. Gibbs, J. W. Brown, John C. Chase and local speakers; Dudley Street Opera House, John C. Chase, Dr. H. A. Gibbs and Mrs. S. H. Merrifield. Dec. 5, Wards 7, 9 and 12, Representatives Carey and MacCartney, John C. Chase, H. A. Gibbs, J. W. Brown, Mrs. S. H. Merrifield and local speakers. Dec. 7, Brighton, Representative Carey and J. W. Brown. Dec. 8, Boylston Station, Jamaica Plain, Representative Carey; Highland District, John C. Chase, Dr. H. A. Gibbs. Patrick Mahoney, candidate for street commissioner, will speak at all the above meetings.

John Spargo's tour begins at Worcester to-morrow evening and he will rest over Thanksgiving in Boston. On Friday he starts again in Fitchburg; on Saturday he is in Brockton with Representative Carey, and on Sunday he will speak in Brighton at Redmen's Hall, corner Washington street and Chestnut Hill avenue. As this is the only meeting held in Boston on Sunday next, comrades are requested to make it a success. On Monday Spargo ends his tour at Springfield.

Organizer Dan. A. White will spend the first three days of this week in Haverhill, and Nov. 28, 29 and Dec. 1, in Boston. He has organized new clubs during the past week in Franklin and Revere.

Representative Carey speaks in Brockton on Saturday next; Quincy on Sunday, and Haverhill on Monday. He will be in Somerville, Dec. 6, Bacon Hall, Hill Building, Bacon Square.

Representative MacCartney will also speak in Brockton on Sunday, and in Haverhill on Monday. He will finish up the Lynn campaign on Dec. 8. John C. Chase will speak in Rockville, Conn., on the 29th; Springfield, Dec. 1, Springfield, Dec. 2. Dr. Gibbs speaks with Spargo in Fitchburg on Friday next. J. W. Brown is in Brockton also next Saturday. Silvio Origo of Springfield will address an Italian meeting in Haverhill next Saturday afternoon.

To-night Representative MacCartney and W. J. Coyne speak in Chelsea and to-morrow night Carey will be the principal speaker in Cambridge, and on Wedesday he will speak in Neponeset with J. W. Brown. Carey is also booked for a meeting in Norwood on Dec. 12.

The Vote.

It appears now that the Socialist Party vote in Massachusetts polled at the recent state election will be nearly 33,500 on the official count. The Boston vote was increased nearly 200 over the report of the newspapers, and the Quincy vote rose on official count from 360 to 560. From this we are justified in expecting the vote to be several hundred higher than originally estimated.

There seems to be an impression that because Carey's plurality decreased from 174 to 97 that his vote fell off. This is not the case. His vote instead increased 31 over last year. His decreased plurality is accounted for by the fact that the Republicans had placed a number of new voters in the district during the past year. Inasmuch as only one meeting was held in Carey's district during the campaign it will be appreciated how firmly the workers there are pledged to Socialism. Chase also carried the district for Governor for the first time in the history of the party.

It is significant that wherever clubs were organized and had carried on an unceasing campaign for some time, there the Socialist Party vote increased the most. Also wherever the literature got out by the State Committee was circulated the most, there the vote also increased. The lesson of this is obvious.

A Campaign Incident.

There was one incident of the state campaign which, while it received no publicity, was illustrative of the fear of Socialism possessed by the leaders of the capitalist parties. It also shows that while the press ridiculed our claims of a large increase that the capitalist politicians were more alive to our importance than they cared to make public. It will be remembered that at the state convention of clubs held in September last, on the day preceding the party convention, the adoption of a new constitution was considered. One draft of a constitution presented contained a clause which gave the Executive Committee power to disqualify from the party platform any speaker who should "attack theological doctrines, dogmas, or advocates violence, free love, or other doctrines in opposition to the principles of Socialism."

Of course this clause should never have been brought into the convention; it had no place there and naturally the convention, as was expected, voted it down. But the press took advantage of the incident and the next day, the party convention placed our position squarely before the public in a resolution which disclaimed any intention of the party to regulate the opinions of its members which do not concern the political and economic movement.

Three days before the state election a circular was sent out from Boston which contained the clause quoted above and emphasized the fact that the convention voted it down. Of course no mention was made of the resolution passed in the party convention. This circular has come to us from different parts of the state, and in each case, it was sent to voters with Irish names with the intention of prejudicing them against the party. Inasmuch as it was a secret circular that did not contain any information as to where it emanated from, except that the envelopes bore the Boston post mark and that it did not even bear the union label, it has been impossible for us to discover its source although the matter was placed in the hands of the police, it being a criminal offence in Massachusetts to issue a political document attacking any party or candidates without affixing the names of the author.

Just what effect the circular had we are unable to estimate; the copies reaching us were received by workingmen who were voting our ticket anyway. There is no dobut that it was sent broadcast throughout the state. As an evidence of the tactics our enemies will resort to, it deserves to be remembered. WILLIAM MAILLY.

THE DAILY GLOBE.

Now Is the Time for Everyone to Help.

Energetic Work on Foot to Raise the Fund Necessary for Starting the Daily Socialist and Trade-Union Newspaper.

The work in connection with the raising of funds for the creation of the daily Socialist and trade-union paper has now begun in earnest, and the Board of Management of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association as well as the Executive Committee of the Daily Globe Conference have begun most vigorously to prosecute the plans which they have quietly studied over and perfected for several months.

Two organizers, Comrades Sol Fieldman and Charles Ufert (if the services of the latter can be procured), will immediately be sent out to "hustle" for the "Globe" as well as for the coming fair. They will instruct the comrades in the towns they visit how to work for the fund and for the fair, and at the same time will gather in pledges from comrades who have as yet not made any as well as all the loose cash in sight.

These organizers will also do propaganda work for the party by holding meetings under the auspices of the locals, thereby educating the workers while interesting them in the important enterprise of a Daily Socialist Trade Union Paper. Comrades in the states of New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts will please be prepared to assist our organizers all they can. To those who have not yet pledged, we urge you to make up your minds before they reach you as to how much you can give for the daily. The other adjacent states will be visited later.

The Fair Committee has also laid out plans which will make the coming Daily Globe Fair the largest and best of its kind ever held under the auspices of organized labor. Comrades everywhere are urged to do their share to make the fair a success from every standpoint by selling tickets and getting donations. Our organizers will tell you all about it when they reach you.

Comrades, we want you all to understand that the "Daily Globe" is to be issued before the next election, and with that purpose in view we call upon every comrade and sympathizer to do all he or she can to help raise the necessary fund.

CAPITALIST INGRATITUDE.

Pennsylvania Militiamen Find They Have Lost Their Jobs.

A Striking Example of the Mad Individualistic Greed of the Capitalist Class—Helps to Educate the Workers.

A recent Philadelphia dispatch throws a strong light on the sense of honor and gratitude felt by the capitalist class. We quote from the New York "Times'" special:

"'It takes a patriot during these times to serve his state as a national guardsman,' said Col. Wendell P. Bowman, commanding officer of the First Regiment, as he glanced over an array of names of First Regiment men who lost their employment because they obeyed the call of the governor of the state to do duty in the coal regions.

"'I have heard of many cases of my men coming home after service during the strike and finding that they had been discharged from their places of employment. It is a bad state of affairs when a soldier comes home and finds his work gone after weeks of toil for the welfare of his government on insignificant pay.

"'The state gives no protection in such cases as these, and now is the time for a general enactment insuring military men of their employment.'

"Col. Bowman has a long list of instances where members of his command returned home to find that their places had been filled."

The "Times" and some other papers wax quite wroth over this outrage—denouncing it almost as indignantly as they denounce trade unions for forbidding their members to enlist in the militia and thus render themselves liable to be used as strike-breakers.

Yet, what should one expect. The whole of capitalist ethics and honor is a matter of dollars and cents; profit is its highest ideal; and "individual freedom of contract" is its shibboleth. Workingmen know how to sacrifice their individual interests for a common cause. Nothing of the sort is to be expected from capitalists, whose whole training leads them to cut each other's throats in business as ruthlessly as they exploit and oppress their employees.

The Socialist can look on with great satisfaction. He sees the trade unionists learning at last that the militia and the state which controls the militia is in the hands of their enemies, the capitalist class. He sees that capitalist class, in its individualistic greed, showing the basest ingratitude to workingmen who have been blind enough to enlist in the capitalist service against brother workingmen. And he sees, as reported last week, workingmen in the militia, brought into contact with strikers and with Socialist speakers, learning to understand the labor question and voting for Socialism. The slowly developing wisdom of the toilers and the mad arrogance of the capitalists work together for the emancipation of Labor.

If things go on in this way we may soon see the class-conscious advocates of capitalism clamoring for a law excluding Socialists and trade unionists from the militia.

TWO VIEWS OF THE FUTURE.

Bishop Fowler of Buffalo, speaking at Troy the other day, declared that the nation is confronting a great financial crisis and that "anyone who stands squarely on both feet to-day may feel the rumbling of calamity."

Bishop Hamilton of San Francisco replied that he was not apprehensive of any such crisis. "The country today," he said, "is in the hands of a dozen capitalists who in a short time take hold of Congress. They control the affairs and as a matter of self-protection will prevent any calamity."

It is a state of affairs for Americans to be proud of, is it not, if a dozen millionaires in control of the government are their only safeguard against calamity?

ANOTHER INJUNCTION.

Cincinnati workingmen get another example of capitalist justice—an injunction against the striking foundrymen, issued by Judge Smith. Never mind, Cincinnati is getting there with a big Socialist vote, and the injunction gun will soon be turned the other way.

—If you are a real Socialist you will not be satisfied with merely voting the ticket. You will join the party organization and help in the work of spreading our principles.

FEDERATION CONVENTION.

Socialist Resolution Lost By Closest Vote on Record.

Progress of Socialist Thought in the Minds of the Workers Shown by Discussion of Hayes' Resolution—The World Does Move.

The progress which Socialist thought is making in the minds of the working class was clearly shown in the narrow margin by which, in the convention of the American Federation of Labor at New Orleans last week, the Socialist resolution was defeated. In no previous convention of the Federation has the discussion been so earnest and so strictly confined to principles, to the exclusion of personalities, and never before did the declaration for Socialism come so near to being carried.

It was on Wednesday that the question came before the convention. Several resolutions had been introduced by different Socialist delegates, and the committee on resolutions, as at Scranton last year, reported adversely on all, submitting a substitute, the same as that proposed and carried at Scranton, which declares that the trade unions are in sympathy with the Socialist movement and advises the members of organized labor to study in their unions and their homes the political and economic questions, but deprecates committing the organization to partisan politics.

The discussion turned upon the amendment to this substitute, introduced by Max Hayes of the printers, in the following words:

"Whereas, Capital is the product of the past labor of all the toilers of the human race, and as wages can never be regarded as the full equivalent for labor performed, and as it is the mission of the trade unions to protect the wage earners against oppression and to fully secure the toilers' disenthrallment from every species of injustice, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this twenty-second annual convention of the American Federation of Labor advise the working people to organize their economic and political power to secure for labor the full equivalent of its toil and the overthrowal of the wage system and establishing an industrial co-operative democracy."

Hayes said in opening that the Socialists were not here to have their party endorsed, but desired to have the class struggle made clear and the principles of Socialism recognized. Victorious or defeated, they would go home and strike and boycott if necessary against capitalism and do one thing more—vote against it. He pointed out the growing power of trusts and monopolies and the inability of the old parties to change the condition. He appealed to the delegates who were regarded as leaders of thought to take a firm and determined stand against the class and parties that oppress the workers.

Delegate Lennon opposed the amendment, declaring that the trade union was the great educator of the working class and had secured more for labor than all the politics that had been played. He contended that a continued building up of the unions would insure further success for the workers, who were divided upon political questions.

Victor Berger said that as the workers exercised and secured political power the more the capitalists would respect them. He pointed to the progress made in Germany and other European countries and said that when the laborers fight the capitalists with the ballot, injunctions and soldiers' bayonets will disappear.

Wilson of the miners moved to strike out all the words after "toil," declaring them superfluous, and Reese, also of the miners, declared that his delegation favored the Hayes amendment in this form. He believed that its adoption would serve to strengthen the great organized movement of the workers and harmonize them politically to go forward to greater achievements.

Delegate Furuseth of the seamen and Vice-President Duncan dug into ancient history to oppose the resolution. Duncan repeated Lennon's claims as to what the miners have accomplished. He spoke over an hour. Harry White also spoke in opposition, claiming that it would be impossible to get the workers together politically.

Wilson of the pattern makers, supporting Hayes' motion, referred to the recent coal strike and showed that, if labor had been in power politically, no militia would have been sent to keep the miners in subjection.

Barnes of the cigarmakers showed how the conditions of industry had completely changed during the past hundred years, from hand to machine production. He pointed out that the workers and capitalists of to-day are similarly situated to the plebeians and patricians in Roman history and the serfs and barons of the middle ages. The plebeians and serfs and the workers to-day had nothing but their labor power in their bodies, while the patrician and feudal barons and capitalists possessed the means of life.

Delegate Wheeler of the carpenters showed how three years ago in California discussion of political questions was barred in unions, while to-day scores of unions have endorsed the principles of the Socialist Party.

Slayton of the carpenters spoke forcibly in favor of the resolution. He brought out the irrepressible conflict between Capital and Labor and declared that, if Capital is to-day the stronger, it is because Labor votes to make it so.

President Gompers at last took the floor against the resolution. He magnanimously explained that he did not object to the discussion of Socialism in the unions, and then he proceeded to a bitter attack upon Socialism and the Socialists. The trade union, he declared, was the only working-class movement in existence. The Socialists tried to belittle the efforts of the Federation to get favorable legislation, but these efforts were not futile, for all that. At this point delegates naturally thought of his annual report, which, as in years past, so far as it dealt with the lobbying at Washington, was one long record of failure.

Finally, he had the assurance to declare that Karl Marx never advocated the Co-operative Commonwealth and that, in his reply to Proudhon, Marx had denounced the Socialists as enemies of the working class.

Gompers' effort closed the debate, which had lasted from ten in the morning till six in the evening.

A motion to table the resolution was overwhelmingly defeated, after which a roll-call showed a vote of 4,344 ayes to 4,744 nays—the closest vote on such a resolution ever recorded in a convention of this body. The Scranton declaration was then re-adopted.

The time of the convention, aside from that spent in affirming and reaffirming numberless boycotts and adopting resolutions begging Congress to do or not to do this or that, was largely devoted to the many conflicts between unions over questions of jurisdiction. Such conflicts naturally arise out of the constant changing of methods of industry. They cannot be avoided and the only hope is to settle them with the least possible friction and the closest possible organization resulting. It must be said that the reports indicate that some progress was made in this direction.

President Gompers' report, so far as it dealt with the increase in the number and membership of affiliated unions, was, as usual, a very cheerful one. The report of the lobbying for bills in Congress, however, was, as in previous sessions, of a sort fully to justify all the criticism that Socialists make of the lobbying policy—the failure of the Eight-Hour Bill, the failure of the Anti-Injunction Bill, the failure of the Chinese Exclusion demand, and so on through a long chapter of failures.

NEW YORK'S VOTE.

Returns Complete for the City and for Forty-four Counties of the State.

Official returns of the Social Democratic vote in the various counties of New York come in slowly. The returns for the city are now complete and several other counties may be added to the list given last week.

NEW YORK CITY.

The vote in Greater New York by boroughs is as follows:

Borough.	1900.	1902.
Manhattan and Bronx	6,387	10,920
Brooklyn	2,575	4,439
Queens	668	1,037
Richmond	110	129
Totals	9,750	16,525

QUEENS AND RICHMOND.

The County and Borough of Queens gives 1,037 votes for the Social Democratic Party, as against 668 two years ago—a gain of 55 per cent. The S. L. P. has 370; two years ago they had 274.

The County and Borough of Richmond gives the Social Democratic Party 129 votes, as against 110 two years ago—a gain of 17 per cent. The S. L. P. vote falls from 153 to 123.

IN THE STATE.

Eight more counties in the state are officially reported since last week's issue of The Worker, and the vote, so far as recorded, stands as follows:

	1900.	1902.
Previously reported, 36 counties	12,124	21,411
Broome	20	21
Cayuga	63	30
Greene	27	74
Madison	69	56
Niagara	27	51
Richmond	110	129
Rockland	32	40
Queens	668	1,037
Totals	13,140	22,849

Making the corrections indicated below for the vote of Monroe and of Kings our total, thus far, is brought up to 22,933 in counties which gave us 13,140 two years ago.

The vote of the Social Democratic Party in Brooklyn as officially declared is a little larger than was reported in The Worker last week, the figures then used having been revised and some errors corrected. The Social Democratic Party has 4,439 votes in this borough, as against 2,575 in 1900—a gain of 72 per cent.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Final official reports give the Social Democratic Party 2,198 votes in Monroe County—27 more than was previously reported in The Worker. We take our place as third party, with an increase that compels respect from the politicians.

The city of Rochester gives us 2,127 and the towns 71. In the city the Seventeenth Ward leads with 598 votes and the Eighth follows with 257. The other eighteen wards range from 17 in the First to 156 in the Fifth.

The "union-smashers" have 864 in the county, 779 of them in the city.

CAPITALIST SOCIETY AND ITS ASININE APOLOGISTS.

"Our great educators," the prostitute preachers and professors, have been giving some remarkable exhibitions of late.

The notorious Rev. Parkhurst has expressed his opinion that if Jesus were alive to-day there is no reason why he should not buy and sell stocks in Wall street and deal in real estate, these things being "eminently respectable." He is able to imagine that Nazarene who, it is written, drove the money changers out of the temple, as a thimble-rigging stock speculator with greedy eyes fixed on the tape of the ticker, his mind full of market quotations and his pockets full of trust stock.

Then Holy Hillis, the Brooklyn pulpit pounder reached the climax of his righteous ravings in defence of the scab and denunciation of organized labor. And the next day President Eliot of Harvard lauded the slimy scabs who turn traitors to their class as "a good type of the American hero."

Such are our great men, our learned men, our American educators. These and their ilk are like the dummies of a ventriloquist—they seem to have a voice of their own but their voice is the vicious voice of the capitalists who feed and own them, the voice of the "smart set" who build their gospel-shops and supply their funds for foreign missions—and foreign markets. These intellectual prostitutes who sell their dwarfed brains for the friendship, and favors, and funds of the robber rich are too vile to be compared with the honest prostitutes who walk the streets to gain a living which our monstrous social system has denied them.

Last month Bishop Potter's new work, "The East of To-Day and To-Morrow" was published, giving his impressions of China, Japan, India, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Phillipines in his trip around the world three years ago. The book is dedicated to J. Pierpont Morgan, and in the lines of dedication Bishop Potter discloses the fact that Mr. Morgan furnished the funds which permitted his Bishop to make the extended journey. The Bishop's words of dedication are:

"To

"JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN,

"Financier, Philanthropist, Friend,

"To whose munificence these opportunities for observation in the East were owing, and whose constructive genius, which upbuilds and never pulls down, has indicated the tasks which await Western civilization in Eastern fields."

Mr. Morgan's Bishop Potter is enthusiastic. God help the heathen when Mr. Morgan's constructive genius gets hold of them, with the help of his missionaries!

All of these pulpit prostitutes make a good deal of loud stage thunder from time to time about the display and corruption of the rich, and squeeze out a few sentimental ears about the miseries of the poor, but whenever any great struggle between Capital and Labor reaches its heighth or whenever the interests of the capitalist class are seriously threatened they are sure to come forward as the apologists of Capital and Capitalism, and prate about the necessity of brotherly love between the robbers and the robbed, whose interests, they say, are identical. And they come in handy all the year round to denounce Socialism and help organize such bunco-games as the Civic Federation.

These parrot preachers and professors all "believe in trade unionism" if the trade unionists will only be good and not strike nor boycott nor object to scabs. If trade unions will only do nothing and thus have no reason for existence, they are ready to give organized labor their full approval. But when the trade unions ACT, when they strike or boycott or ostracize the scab, or DO anything which interferes with the interests of Capital, these pulpit perverts raise their howls of holy horror.

"The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib."

The churches and the colleges of the Eliots and the Hillises are supported by the gifts and endowments of capitalists, and they know full well who holds the money-bag and how to loosen its strings by speeches that please their masters on earth.

They are kept by the capitalists as manufacturers of "public opinion" and professional misleaders of the people; their teachings are directed to keeping the working people in humble submission to their masters, and by those masters they are given the mission to:

"Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert and be healed."

The asinine apologists from the pulpit and the educated asses from the colleges are at all critical times the ready tools of their capitalist masters, the parasite class who constitute our "smart set" at Newport in summer, at Sartoga in the fall and on Fifth avenue in winter.

It is of these people, who are the flocks of the Potter and Parkhurst churches and who send their sons to Eliot's college, that Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville "Courier-Journal" who, as a member of the upper classes, ought to know, has said:

"The term 'smart set' was adopted by society to save itself from a more odious description. The distinguishing trait of the 'smart set' is its moral abandon. It makes a business of defying and overleaping conventional restraints upon its pleasures and amusements. It sets itself above the law, both human and divine.

"Its women are equally depraved with its men. They no longer pretend to recogize virtue even as a female accomplishment. Innocence is a badge of delinquency, a sign of the crude and raw. In London and in Paris and at Monte Carlo in the winter and at Trouville and Aix in the summer they make life one unending debauch.

"The '400' are rotten, through and through. They have not one redeeming feature. All their ends are achieved by money and largely by the unholy use of money.

'Must these unclean birds of gaudy and therefore of conspicuous plumage fly from gilded boughs to boughs, fouling the very air as they twitter their affections of moral supremacy, and no one shy a brick at them and say 'Scat, you devils! ?'

Sir Philip Burne-Jones, the famous English painter, another upper-class gentleman, who was in America this summer, before leaving discussed this same "smart set" as follows:

"Display never was so organized and perfected as at Newport. The overwhelming extravagance of it all is a new thing in the world. It is like the pageant of some splendid barbaric dream. The atmosphere of wealth really is oppressive. It rather numbs one—produces in a man of moderate means a feeling of abject poverty, begets a feeling quite as if one were trailing about in rags, you know. The women, their gowns, their jewels, the splendor of these houses—maybe Rome saw something like it, or Babylon, but surely we have to go back to those fabled days to find anything to liken all this to. It is a tremendous spectacle; it is a colossally sumptuous picture. Their clothes are so overpowering, so aggressive and insistent—a phenomenon. Their souls probably are way down somewhere, wrapped up, hidden away, buried, but one does not easily catch sight of them. It is difficult to get at their real selves because of their clothes, their gorgeous clothes. Oh, I shouldn't care to speak of it from the artist standpoint. Neither do I understand that the display of taste is the subject of it all. As a pageant it is gigantic and will never be rivaled."

And now Arnold White has said that the degenerate debauchery of the London "smart set" could not find a parallel in Sodom and Gomorrah.

This is capitalist society as it exists to-day, reveling the day before a revolution and with the motto of Madame de Pompadour: "Après nous, le deluge."

These are our rulers, and the tribe of Eliot, Hillis, Potter and Parkhurst are their apologists and subsidized sycophants, however much they may occassionally attract notoriety by scolding the little external foibles of their masters.

NOVEL PROPAGANDA.

A Newark, N. J. comrade engaged in business, says the "Cleveland Citizen," has adopted a novel idea to impress upon his workmen the beauties of the competitive system. The pay envelopes in which the men receive their wages have the following imprint:

This envelope contains.....$..... and..... cents. It represents your week's earnings;—under a Purely Socialist STATE, where you would receive the full value of your product, it would contain not less than FOUR times the amount, viz: $..... and .....cents.

What becomes of the difference between what you EARN and what you GET?—well—many Hundred Millions goes to support Titled Personages abroad, and many are used to search the "Gilded Slums" of Europe to BUY more Titles for "Gilded Virtue" at home: More Hundred of Millions are used to arm and equip YOUR CLASS to Coerce Your Class into submission to a Master Class.

"BILLIONS are put into Great Enterprises such as Railroads, Mines, etc, ALL of which is the PRODUCT OF YOUR BRAIN and BRAWN. But not one dollar of which is yours.

"What excuse can you offer your children for forcing them into a world of Poverty and Ignorance when you possess the power to Reverse these conditions? Do you deserve their blessings or Merit their Curses?

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

We had almost forgotten the existence of the Civic Federation, so unexpectedly sudden and complete was the failure of that wonderful body in its attempt to harmonize the irreconcilable interests of Labor and Capital. We are reminded by an official announcement that the corpse thinks it is still alive and will hold an autopsy on itself to determine the question in this city next week.

Among the things for which we have to be thankful is the decision of the railway companies to reimburse themselves for the advance of wages which they have been forced to make by making a still greater proportionate advance in freight rates, thus again increasing the prices of food, clothing, and fuel. This, in turn, will compel us to "hustle" and to become both strenuous and frugal. Let us be thankful.

MR. GOMPERS' EPITAPH.

A hundred years ago, as everyone knows who is familiar with American political history, the party which Mr. Bryan, Mr. Cleveland, and Mr. Hill today honor with their allegiance was known as the Republican party. During the following fifteen or twenty years the name was changed and the same organization came to be known, and is still known, as the Democratic party. Still thirty years later, a new party, opposed to this one, arose and assumed the Republican name.

Fifty years ago, as everyone knows who is familiar with the history of the international labor movement, the word "Socialist" was used to describe a group of theorists, as different from the present Socialist movement as are the Single Taxers or the Philosophical Anarchists or, let us say, the "Reformers." At that day the men who laid the foundations of the modern Socialist movement called themselves Communists. In the course of time the appellation "Socialist" came to be transferred from the one movement to the other, exactly as, in American political history, the name "Republican" came to be transferred from the one to the other of the two great parties of this country.

All this is well known to every man, we say, who knows anything of the history of the labor movement or of political economy. In particular, all this is very well known to Mr. Samuel Gompers.

What shall we say then of Mr. Gompers when we find him quoting a single, detached sentence from a work written fifty years ago and, concealing facts well known to him, seeking to convey the impression that Karl Marx denounced the very movement to which he actually gave the efforts of his life?

Well, we need not say hard things of Mr. Gompers. That Mr. Gompers has been guilty of telling a conscious, deliberate, and inexcusable lie is a fact. But the important fact is not that Mr. Gompers is a liar, but that the conservative—nay, reactionary—element which he leads (or follows and pretends to lead) has been driven, by the logic of events, to the point where it must take refuge in such foolish lies as this in its vain attempt to stem the rising tide of Socialism.

Mr. Gompers has prepared his epitaph. Next year we shall cheerfully nail it up over his tomb.

Mother Jones informs us that the railways, in sympathy with the coal companies of West Virginia, where the strike is still on, are systematically giving trouble to the miners by charging exorbitant freight rates for provisions shipped to them by sympathizers and often sidetracking cars containing provisions and thus delaying their delivery. This only illustrates the class-consciousness of the capitalists, who always know how to stick together in opposition to the workers.

Don't you imagine that the doubling and trebling of the Socialist vote all over the country, together with the growing aggressiveness of the trade unions, which are becoming more and more imbued with Socialist ideas, may have a good deal to do with those "voluntary" wage advances, following so closely after election?

Comrades in various parts of the country frequently send us clippings from local papers, ignorantly or wilfully misrepresenting the principles of Socialism or the acts of Socialists, and ask that The Worker reply to these falsifications. Sometimes it is practicable for us to do so, but in general we would suggest that this can be done much more effectively by local comrades writing letters for publication in the very papers that slander us. A brief and well-written letter is likely to be published, especially by papers in the smaller cities, even if it is in criticism of the paper's conduct, and such a letter reaches just the readers who have seen the original misrepresentation. Comrades should miss no opportunity to use the capitalist press against capitalism in this way.

THE MIDDLE GROUND.

We are permitted to quote from a private letter written by Clarence Smith of Butte, Secretary-Treasurer of the American Labor Union, the following paragraph, which to our way of thinking, expresses the sane and sensible view, as between those who see in every local trouble within the party an occasion either for discouragement or for hasty reorganization and at the other extreme who, in their joy over the increase of the vote, are unwilling to recognize the existence of any internal problems whatever and consider any discussion of such as a revival of De Leonism. Comrade Smith says:

"Of course, there are embarrassing situations affecting the party in different parts of the country, and there are places where the movement is not so straightforward and uncompromising as it ought to be. This has always been the case. I do not find it to be any more the case now than it was six years ago with the Socialist Labor party. The people are coming to understand the class issue more clearly every year and, while some of our men are bound to go wrong, I am convinced that, in this respect at least, the movement will be better able to take care of itself as it grows larger."

He adds convincing assurances that in Montana the whole tendency is toward clearing up such confusion as has existed in some localities and that the movement as a whole is aggressive and uncompromising, as is, indeed, evident from the fact that so large a gain was made for the Socialist Party, in spite of all the attempts made to sidetrack it.

The San Francisco "Advance," in explaining the smallness of the gain made in that city, notes the silence of the capitalist press, which "scarcely even mentioned the police outrages upon our rights of free speech." The Mayor of San Francisco is a union man elected to office by that very Union Labor party whose local ticket the San Francisco comrades supported. This gentleman came to New York to help Tammany Hall elect a Democratic demagogue to Congress and left his police to break up Socialist meetings at home. It would seem as if that little experience might be enough to cure the San Francisco comrades of the idea that it is good policy for us to leave the field whenever a party labeled "Union Labor" chooses to take it.

Congressman Richardson of Tennessee, Democratic leader in the House, announces that the Democrats "stand ready and anxious to assist the Republicans to enact anti-trust legislation." Quite natural. Both old parties are ruled by the trust magnates and there is no reason why they should not stand ready and anxious to help each other in the pretty game of enacting fake anti-trust laws for buncome, in the hope of keeping the votes of the workingmen divided between them and perpetuating the power of capitalism.

Mr. Armour "made" $350,000 on wheat within one week. He did not make the wheat, of course, nor do any useful work in connection with it. Workingmen in the fields and on the railroads did that. Mr. Armour simply "made" the profit. Mr. Leiter, at the same time, "made" $150,000 on corn, and Mr. Armour is preparing to repeat the trick with potatoes. And who pays for it all? You may figure that out for yourself and decide for yourself whether mankind has any need of Mr. Armour and the capitalist class of which he is so good a type.

The latest development of the sympathetic strike is the walkout of coal miners in Indiana on behalf of the mules, who were ill-fed and not properly cared for. It is noteworthy that the capitalist press, generally so violent in denunciation of sympathetic strikes, had no hostile criticism to make in this case. A mule's life is generally admitted to be more sacred than a workingman's.

A steel company in Pennsylvania, running short of coal last week, sent an engine out on the railroad tracks and confiscated several cars of coal belonging to other people. The right of a steel company to do this, or of a railroad company, is recognized by the courts, because the lack of coal would interfere with that sacred process, the making of "legitimate profits." If the workingmen in the tenements of New York should go out and confiscate coal from the fuel yards this winter, to save their families from freezing, they would be sent to jail for larceny. Such is the difference between capitalist profits and workingmen's lives, in the estimation of capitalist courts.

Mr. John Graham Brooks, who hails from that venerable home of culture, Cambridge, Mass., and who is really a very well-meaning sort of a gentleman, tells the mine owners and other capitalists that they "should foster trade unionism as a protection against irresponsible socialism." Just what sort of socialism it is that he considers "irresponsible," he does not explain, but the great trouble with following his advice is, anyhow, that the trade unions themselves seem to be adopting Socialism—straight and unadulterated Socialism, "responsible" or otherwise—about as fast as they conveniently can.

Here is an item from the daily press that at once explains the motive of the "generosity" of employers in giving pensions, bounties, vacation gifts, etc., to employees and illustrates the growing class-consciousness of workingmen:

"Sixty-five apprentices employed by Tiffany & Co., at their factory in Forest Hill, N. J., forfeited their vacation money yesterday by going out on strike in sympathy with the silversmiths and others who are on strike for the nine-hour workday. The youthful strikers also forfeited $100 each which they would otherwise have received when their apprenticeships ended."

Those boys who were willing to make such sacrifice rather than turn traitor to their older fellow workers will be voting the Socialist ticket in two or three years and will make good citizens of the Co-operative Commonwealth a few years later.

Railway Surgeon Hartman of the Michigan Central strenuously insists on the necessity of more rigid and frequent physical and mental examination of engineers, firemen, conductors, and other operating employees, and the discharge of all who are found to be below standard through failing sight, unsteadiness of nerves, or otherwise. This is all very well; but how would it be to suggest the reduction of working hours for these men, whose work is of the most intense and exhausting sort. Repeated investigations of railway "accidents" have shown that train employees are often kept on duty twenty, forty and even sixty hours at a stretch. It surely would not take many such experiences to make a nervous wreck of the strongest man. It is no wonder that railway employees are considered old at forty and that one out of every 136 is killed and one out of every thirteen is wounded yearly—and all to save expenses and make bigger profits.

The Washington "Star" remarks that "election returns show a very general, though not an extraordinary, increase in the Socialist strength." We are willing to concede this. Doubling or trebling the vote in two years is nothing "extraordinary" for Socialists. We intend to go on with it till the day of victory. When, however, the "Star" concludes that the Socialist Party will never rise from third place to first, we fail to see the logic. And when it argues that the old parties, by adopting "public ownership" measures, will take the wind out of our sails, we are glad to see Comrade Joseph Wood replying with an able letter in the columns of the same paper, pointing out the radical difference between Socialism and capitalist public ownership.

Referring to the statement of the Philadelphia "Press" that the Socialist gains are nearly all drawn from the Democratic party, the Cincinnati "Enquirer," Democratic, says:

"The Socialists are a distinct class, and uncompromising in their views. They spring from neither party in particular. They just grow. At a time when the Democratic party, being in the minority in the affairs of government, is urged to take all the isms and fads to its bosom in the hope of getting outside votes without losing a corresponding number inside, the Socialists maintain their separate organization and increase their vote. There is more Socialism in the teachings of the Republican party than in those of the Democratic. Democracy is founded on the eternal principles of simplicity in government and personal and property rights. The doctrine of centralization has encouraged Socialism."

We would rise to suggest that it is not "the doctrine of centralization" in politics so much as the fact of centralization in industry that has encouraged Socialism and makes Socialist victory a necessary step in the world's progress.

And, in passing, we would remark that an inspection of the returns from the mining counties in Pennsylvania would have convinced the Philadelphia "Press" that the Socialist Party draws recruits from the Republicans as well as from the Democrats.

Comrade Rubinow of Newark writes: "I cannot help giving you my compliments for your splendid editorials on 'Rich Men in the Party,' which pleased nearly all the comrades here."

THE CALIFORNIA AFFAIR.

We have received many communications on the California affair, the greater part of which endorse the position taken by The Worker against fusion, even with a union labor party. Of these letters in support of our position we can generally give only the briefest extracts. We give more fully the letters taking the opposite view.

Comrade Wilkins of San Francisco writes: "The idea of fusion with the U. L. P. which prevailed in our two largest cities injured us very materially. The election returns in this state should forever discourage fusion, but the returns from the rest of the country should inspire us all with enthusiasm. I am glad to see your article criticizing the action in California and hope that the party in this state will never again need such a rebuke."

Comrade Eaton of San Francisco writes: "The majority of the Union Labor party are not Socialists. They are very strong, but have been buncoed by Hearst's 'Examiner.' California is a very fertile field. The capitalists have Labor by the throat, and the workers are not, as yet, very intelligent."

Comrade Beals of Oxnard, Cal., writes: "Your article on the California situation meets with the hearty endoresement of all the comrades here and of many others throughout the state. Neither the views of Harriman nor those of Appel meet with anything like general approval. I believe the great majority of the comrades, the state over, stand against fusion with any party, union labor or otherwise. We believe in giving the unions and all laboring men all possible encouragement on the industrial field and in inviting them to come in and take our party whenever they can see in Socialism their salvation from utter and lasting defeat, both political and industrial.

"We are very unfortunate in California in having papers in our two large centers that persist in dragging their local problems to the front, and insisting that they are the problems of the state and in fact of the whole Socialist movement. We are persistently informed that the condition in Los Angeles presents a great crisis in the history of the party. A few Socialists have captured the machinery of the labor unions in that city, and are trying to drag the rank and file after them into the independent political arena. These same Socialists predict a two years' lease of independence to the Socialist Party, while the Los Angeles 'Socialist' crowds the state platform out of its columns to make room for a trade union manifesto.

"The only crisis we are able to see is one peculiar to California. Will the comrades of California submit to such a slap in the face from their servants who have assumed the role of masters or not? We hope not.

"The great need of the Pacific Slope is a great daily, located at San Francisco, controlled by the whole party and not by any particular local. One that will be independent of local bias and prejudice and give an impartial hearing to all important questions of party tactics. One that will not suppress one side of a controversy, while pushing headlong into the other side, one that is not too cowardly to print criticism as freely as it criticises. If you will allow the compliment we need a paper as broad and liberal as The Worker. We need one broad enough and strong enough to hold our lines unflinchingly in the face of Hearst and his 'immediate demands' in 1904."

John P. Brown of Philadelphia says: "In the matter of the action of our comrades in California, in endorsing candidates of the Union Labor party, it seems to me that, the Socialist Party being already in the field, there was no good reason for the formation of the U. L. P., unless it stands for capitalistic principles. If it does, then surely it was a serious compromise of Socialist principles to indorse it. But admitting that it might have been expedient this year (and I do not believe in expediency), surely, in view of the magnificent gains made by the Socialist Party all over the United States this election, there can be no excuse for further compromise by our comrades in California."

Local Fremont, Ohio, sends a resolution adopted by unanimous vote on November 16. After reciting the experiences of the past with various reform parties, the local resolves: "That, while we extend to our comrades on the Pacific Coast our kindest greetings and assure them of our confidence in their zeal in battling for the betterment of mankind, we nevertheless condemn in the most emphatic terms the fusing with any political party. Were the Union Labor party true to its name, union labor would mean co-operation just as co-operation means Socialism. It would be content with the Socialist organization and not attempt to attain the same or similar ends under false pretenses."

"I like your stand on the California mess," writes Comrade Slusser of Cleveland. "I can't understand how Harriman can defend such a course."

Comrade Leonards of Los Angeles asks, "What is the difference between electing workingmen to office on the Democratic ticket and electing them on a union labor ticket with the aid and support of capitalist politicians, such as the newly elected Democratic Congressmen, Livermash and Wynn, who were invited by the campaign committee of the U. L. P. of Los Angeles to help in the local campaign? John Murray, Jr., L. Biddle, and N. Walker, members of Local Los Angeles, were members of this committee and made no protest." He continues: "I, who have supported the U. L. P. as a means toward getting the working class to take independent political action, must certainly refuse to support it further, since it solicits aid from capitalist politicians. Temporary success does not spell working-class victory. The idea of immediate interest, the hope of 'getting something now' for the working class, should not destroy the foresight of Socialists and lead them to sacrifice the future interest of their class." He further calls attention to the fact, as shown in the columns of the Los Angeles "Socialist" that the platform adopted in the city convention of the U. L. P., on the strength of which many of the comrades gave their consent to the virtual fusion, was afterwards modified by the campaign committee, and that it was used in one form at meetings arranged by Local Los Angeles and in the other form at other meetings—the argument in support of such action being that the original platform was "a very poor vote-catcher, that there were not enough Socialists to elect the ticket this year, so it was necessary to cater to non-Socialist voters."

Comrade Strobell cites some facts in favor of the Union Labor movement as at least a partial justification of the action of our California comrades. He says: "It seems to me what we want first of all is to understand fully the whole situation. I believe it centers around the endorsement of U. L. P. candidates by capitalist parties. I believe there is full provision made in our constitution by which antagonism may be avoided where the class-consciousness of such action on the part of workingmen is apparent. The following clipping taken from the 'Union Labor News' of Los Angeles of November 1, may help to form an intelligent opinion:

"'The Union Labor party intends to paddle its own canoe. It will not fuse with either the Democratic or Republican party, nor will it indorse the candidates of those parties.

"'In an endeavor to create the impression that an 'understanding' exists between the Democratic and the Union Labor parties, the recent Democratic city convention nominated candidates already upon the Union Labor ticket—John S. Bruner for auditor, and Legrand Friel, for city engineer. Mr. Bruner objected to being made a tail to the Democratic kite, as the following caustic letter shows.' (To save space we take the liberty to summarize Mr. Bruner's letter by saying that it was a perfectly frank and absolute refusal of old-party endorsement.) "Mr. Friel probably was not as quick as his colleague in getting in his answer, and the Democratic ticket was filed with his name on. The U. L. P. City Committee met and its action was significant:

"'After discussing the matte rthoroughly, the committee decided, by unanimous vote, to substitute another name in place of Mr. Friel's. However, in justice to Mr. Friel, it should be stated that he has not been subjected to one word of criticism for having been nominated by the Democrats after having secured a nomination from the Union Labor party, as he was in no wise conected with the scheme to divide the Union Labor party.'

"It seems certain to me that any continued political action along working class lines must keep clear of entanglements with capitalist parties. Otherwise the movement dies discredited. It can only live along Socialist lines, and after a campaign or two there will come a time when state or national backing will be found necessary, which can only be found in the Socialist ranks.

"Our party holds now such a position that all such independent movements will naturally gravitate towards it and we can afford to wait their reasonable development with patience and good nature."

Jakob Bolin grows somewhat warm in condemning us for presuming to take up the matter at all. We print his letter in full, especially because it so well illustrates the fatal tendency of those who are always on their guard against excessive strictness to set up a man of straw, and then go through the exhilarating process of knocking him down again. We have not, of course, at any time, asked our California comrades to "obey orders" or "branded Harriman as a traitor," or anything of the sort. Comrade Bolin says:

"Is the co-operation of Socialists with organizations more or less clearly related to them a matter of principle or of tactics? If it is a matter of principle, if those who so co-operate are not Socialists, whatever their earnest opinions may be, then there are no Socialists in Germany, very few in France, none in Belgium, none in Denmark, none in Sweden and Norway. In every one of these countries there has been more or less close co-operation between the Social Democratic and certain radical bourgeois parties. If it is a matter of principle, then up with the standard of Daniel De Leon. Read everyone out of the party who does not follow the parole from headquarters. Down with Harriman! What does it matter that he has shown himself a loyal Socialist in years past? Brand him as a traitor.

"But if it is a matter of tactics merely, and I contend that that is just exactly the position we ought to take, then we must be permitted to have our different opinion on it, and those on the scene must always be considered the best judges of what they ought to do. We may sit here and criticize the action of the California Socialists, but should we not acknowledge their greater opportunities to know what they are about? By all means do not begin again to impugn the motives of those having different opinions. I for one absolutely refuse to assist in establishing a new socialistic hierarchy. I believe in the democracy of our movement. I believe that each local, or at least, each state, should decide these matters for themselves. Party discipline is necessary, but 'following orders' will always be inimical to our best interests. Trust those who are Socialists by heart and brain. Don't try to cajole them or force them into doing your bidding. Treat them as men of intelligence. Only men of intelligence are fit for the civilization to come. If our California friends believe it consistent with Socialism to endorse trade union candidates, let them do it. If the question comes up in New York, you may vote it down, if you please. But with the action of Socialists in California we should take merely an advisory position, and this only when we know the facts."

Comrade Critchlow of Dayton, O., writes: "I wish to compliment you on the stand that you have taken and are supporting as relates to the fusion movement in California. This is the proper stand and how anyone can become so narrowed in his views as to advocate the dumping of the militant Socialist Party into the trade union movement is more than I can understand. To me the Socialist movement is not made for any class of workers, but instead recognizes the fact that the interests of all wealth-producers is the same and calls upon them all to unite under the banner of the Socialist Party. A trade union party cannot ever hope to succeed in this country, for it has its opposition from the rural districts while the Socialist movement is ably and rapidly uniting all the workers under one common banner. The St. Louis comrades are wondering why they got so few votes among the 40,000 organized men in that city. 'It is to laugh' to hear such a statement and read in the next few lines that they are controling the central body by brute force, so to speak. The officers and leaders of the trade union are but the reflection of the membership, and when the Socialists get in the saddle without a Socialist membership behind them it is only to arouse all the prejudice among the rank and file. If the tactics of the St. Louis comrades are correct why in the world don't they advocate getting into office on the old-party tickets with their socialistic notions concealed, a la Rigelow of Ohio. Then when they see they are not making any progress they begin to holer 'fusion,' 'dump the whole Socialist movement into the lap of the trade unions,' etc. Some sweet day the St. Louis comrades will wake up and find out that the way to get socialism is by propagating among the rank and file; then, and not till then, when the Socialists are elevated into prominent places in the trade unions, they will have support."

THE LEAST OF THESE.

By Horace Traubel.

Inasmuch as you do it to the least of these! Put the theological Jesus where you choose. But do not imagine that the human Jesus can be outlived. The human Jesus was very modern. He was a democrat. He deferred nowhere to institutions and aristocracies. And when you read that pharse, "the least of these," you go with Jesus to the limit of democracy. For it is your ability to provoke a universal justice that makes you a democrat. No philosophy can make you a democrat. No adept employment of statistics can make you a democrat. When you live democracy you are a democrat. Nothing less confers upon you the human prerogative.

It is easy to do reverence to good clothes and a big dinner. It is easy to do reverence to official and ecclesiastical power. It is easy to do reverence to the famous. But you may do all these things and yet be against democracy.

Democracy takes you to the reputed least and lowest. Democracy puts you in jail a prisoner. Democracy works you with the chaingang. Democracy puts you in the mines. Democracy toils the skin off your fingers. Democracy treadmills you till you are deaf, dumb and blind. Democracy tries you by all the terrors of experience. Democracy is not on easy street. Democracy puts you in minorities. Democracy loads you with chains. Democracy assails you with poverties. Have you thought democracy kept you in velvet? Democracy sleeps you on hard beds and wakes you on rough roads.

Yet you will learn to love the drudgery of democracy better than the leisure of exploitation. You will find that drudgery transmutes itself into joy and that exploitation dissipates itself in grief. For you must prepare the way of democracy. And the passage will be a tedious one. And you will often want to give up. But keep on is better than give up. And though you can discover no reasons for keeping on you will keep on in spite of reasons. And then will come democracy.

Democracy will expect your open arms. And democracy will see that you make no exceptions. Democracy does not draw lines. Democracy does not receive one man and reject another. Democracy is not this affair that we call the United States. It is a unity of states not yet accomplished. Democracy is not a coal miner carrying a boss, a boss carrying an operator, an operator carrying the stock exchange. Democracy is not in your palace or your hut. It is something which goes by neither name. We call these American communities free. But who is free, from the top loafer to the bottom slave? Who is free? Who dares talk out the truth? Who dares live out the truth? Yet we think we are free. We make the world sick spelling out that damnably iterated word. We have been so wrong with the word we have missed the substance.

The least of these. There you have the whole doctrine. The humble job. The simplest child. The workers who do the abhorreat errands of society. I often see you bowing and scraping to the great. But why should your soul play flunkey to any circumstance? There you are, hat in hand, waiting for a master's door to open. Put your hat on your head. Clap it down fast. Go your way. When you can return to the master unawed it may be safe for you to risk. If you are to get down for anybody get down to the man who does the work. Dismiss your coach. Go into the trench. You worship the man with the clean hand. But the time must come when the dirty hand will take all the honors.

The least of these, he said. What is that queer humor in my blood which makes me dishoner myself by shrinking from the men from whom all the beauty of the world is derived? The men who tear up and perfect the street? The men who come grease-stained from the factories? The clean hand in our civilization is the dirty hand. The dirty hand is the clean hand.

We speak of forms of labor that are superior and inferior. As if there was any inferior or superior in labor more than in men. Anything well done is superior. Anything ill done is inferior. In this civilization we do not give labor a chance to do its work really well. Therefore we have no superior civilization. Our civilization is inferior. Our civilization is a barbarism.

To democracy there is no essential down or up. There is no most or least. All is on the level. Not a dead level. A live level.

To democracy every workman is of the same stock. There is no caste. And all men are workmen. For until all men are working we have not our democracy.

To democracy there is no commonplace. All common things are illustrious. For democracy makes good its professions in the noblest consummations of love. Love is common. But democracy is this much better than what you are to-day calling civilization—it gives love a chance to love. To-day we are compelled to fight instead of love for our lives. That is, for our livings. Give love half a chance and your democrat will appear. And your democrat will appear not as the exceptional blossom but as the abundant flower.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Industrial Advocate, Pittston, Pa.

Almost every day since the recent election the organs of the Republican and Democratic parties have been commenting on the vote of the Socialist Party in Pennsylvania, and evince much surprise and chagrin as to the largeness of the vote polled. Many and varied are the reasons urged for the result, but none of them have as yet placed the credit where it properly belongs. The major portion of the capitalistic party press attribute the result to the recent anthracite strike, and the unsatisfactory condition of labor generally, but all fail to realize that the true cause for the advance in Socialism is that the toilers of this great industrial commonwealth are awakening to the true status of affairs politically. The workingmen are fast becoming educated to the standard of doing a little thinking for themselves, instead of permitting it to be done by political shysters, as in the past. The workingmen have, in the past, cast their votes for the Republican and Democratic parties, relying on the parties' promises to enact legislation that would alleviate labor's condition. The past of both the old political parties is strewn with the wreckage of promises made to the ear and broken to the hope by politicians who have climbed into office on the back of labor. When the election is over and the corporation hirelings have secured their jobs through false pretense, the mask is thrown off and labor realizes again that the thoughtless working man has been swindled. Labor can expect nothing from political parties that are dominated by corporate influences and whose election expenses are paid from the profits squeezed from labor.

The hope and triumph of the Socialist Party lies in the advanced thought that is taking possession of the labor organizations of the country. No public speaker can now command the attention of an audience who fails to advance a logical remedy for the sole absorbing problem which stands forth in all its nakedness demanding an immediate solution. The intelligent men of organized labor are awakening to the fact that the strike and boycott are fast losing their power in vanquishing the enemy. Collective ownership not only appeals to the laboring man, but the small business man is now admitting that the principles of Socialism in operation is the only cure for the political disease that is rotting every prop and pillar that supports the fabric of the world's civilization.

The Labor Advocate, Reading, Pa.

The Socialists came out of the recent political fight with banners flying and already are laying plans for an active campaign at the coming spring election when they say they will put a full ticket in the field. The "Advocate" warned both of the old parties that a large vote could be expected as it had taken the pains to personally acquaint itself with the facts several weeks before election. Had the vote cast been larger it would not have been surprising, as the party had more than double the number of votes pledged to it which never turned up at the polls at all or when in the booth went back on their promise and voted their party ticket. Neither the Republican nor Democrat managers placed any credence in their gaining any such numerical strength and "supposed" that the vote cast at best would not exceed five hundred. Such a miscalculation proved to be a very serious blunder in one party's reckoning. If the managers profit by experience then they must realize that in the coming contest the Socialist vote will be an equation they cannot eliminate from the contest. Instead of it being a spasmodic development of unusual strength it may prove to have been the mere sprouting of the mustard seed which possibly will suddenly attain such a growth as to completely upset party calculations.

The Socialists are really a greater menace now for the two old party candidates than before. Of the twelve hundred voters who cast their ballots for that ticket there is an unfluctuating quantity of several hundred. This number has been increased by the missionary work done by the older members, every one of whom if he does not possess the up-to-date trickery to land votes, has a battery of Socialistic argument in favor of the cause. It is safe to say that there is not an equal number of men in either of the two old line parties who can match an equal number of men with them to talk the principles of their party as the Socialist does his. Moreover, the Socialist is a tireless campaigner. He in nearly every instance earns his livelihood by the sweat of his brow. Noon time finds him arguing with a knot of fellow employees in shop and mill in his efforts to proselyte new recruits. At night he is discourcing his favorite theme or is reading up some of the latest literature on the subject and he goes forth again the next day with his arguments reenforced to disseminate the propaganda of Socialism. Such tireless energy cannot fail to have results, especially when any one of the old parties make a weak nomination. It is then that the former, but now disgusted partisan lends a willing ear to Socialistic doctrines and he casts his lot with them.

If he is not fully persuaded then he may not vote at all. In either event it has been a loss of a vote to the old parties. Once he has tasted the sweets of independence and finds himself free of the party bit, he soon learns to shout the Socialistic slogan which has been so potent in the past. "It is far better to vote for something you want and not get it than cast your ballot for something you don't want and get it."

Literary Digest.

A Socialist Sunday school movement, which has been firmly planted in Great Britain for some years, is described in the Boston "Congregationalist." The headquarters of the movement is at Glasgow. In that city there are eight schools, and a half-penny magazine called the "Young Socialist" is issued. Socialist Sunday schools also exist in London, Liverpool, Bradford and other cities. A little text book of sixteen pages has recently been published, presenting Socialist doctrines in language suited to the minds of children. By these publications the children are taught to hate capitalism, to strive against the "evil giants" of oppression and exploitation, and to help to unite all nationalities and races in the same impulse of brotherly love.

Boone (Ia.) Independent.

The Socialists of this county made a substantial gain, which is more than can be said of any other party. Labor sees the dawning of a better day when its advocates realize that only through the ballot can they find emancipation

AN UP-TO-DATE FABLE.

One morning a Buzzard sat dozing on the limb of a Dead Tree, when a Hawk happened along that way and paused to make a few remarks. "Well, of all the Hobo Fowls I ever met," observed the Hawk, "you are Entitled to first Prize for unadulterated Laziness."

"Get out, you old Croaker," rejoined the Buzzard. "What Authority have you for Entering me in the Lazy Stakes?"

"Why you just sit around on a High Limb and sleep while Waiting for Something to Die and provide you with a Square Meal," replied the Hawk. "Now, when I get hungry I don't sit down and wait for a Funeral to come along. I sail in and Catch something Fresh—"

Just then a Bluejay lit on a near-by Bush and began to Rubberneck. The Hawk, thinking it was the Last Call for Breakfast in the Dining Car, made a dash for him, but the Bluejay dodged and the Hawk collided with the Trunk of a Tree and dashed his Brains out.

Whereupon the Buzzard yawned, spread his Wings and sailed gracefully down to Enjoy a Hawk Lunch. When nothing remained of the critical Hawk but a few feathers and bones the Buzzard flew back to his Perch on the Dead Tree, winked his Off Eye and proceeded to doze again.

Moral—In trying to Provide for Themselves the Overstrenuous often Provide for Others.—Chicago News.

The strenuous Mr. Roosevelt might take the lesson to heart—were it not that a self-seeking politician has to try to fool the people to get re-elected as well as to please Mr. Morgan and his class in order to be re-nominated.

THANKSGIVING.

Now is the time, O sinful men,
To offer up Thanksgiving
That those who own the earth still let
You serve them for a living.

—George A. Clanton, in The Whim.

THE GOOD TRUSTS.

"There are good trusts and bad trusts," said the hopeful man.

"Yes," answered the cheerless citizen; "but the bad ones are accumulating so much profit and power, that I'm afraid it won't be long before the good trusts are led into temptation."—Washington Star.

PARTY NOTES.

The members of the National Committee are voting on the election of a member of the Local Quorum to succeed L. E. Hildebrand, resigned, and also on the question whether the annual meeting of the National Committee shall begin on Jan. 15 or Jan. 29. The former vote will be closed Dec. 5, and the latter Dec. 13.

A tour through the South among the trade unions and the locals of the Socialist Party is being arranged for Comrade John C. Chase by the Labor Lecture Bureau. Comrades in the southern states are requested to send suggestions and applications for dates to Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary, 427 Emilie Bld'g., St. Louis, Mo.

The Socialists of Malden, have nominated Oscar C. Hulseman for mayor, and those of Chelsea have chosen D. J. Scully.

"It is getting lively around here," writes Comrade Beaumont of Cambridge, Mass., in ordering a lot of McGrady's pamphlets for agitation. "Our local has increased its membership in the last two years from twelve to thirty-seven and we shall give you more frequent calls for literature in the future."

Comrade Sweetland, Socialist candidate for Congressman-at-large from Connecticut in the late election, challenged his Republican and Democratic opponents, Lilley and Cummings, to debate with him during the campaign. They were both "too busy," of course, to waste any time in argument. They were attending to "practical politics." Democrat Cummings acknowledges having spent over a thousand dollars in trying to get elected, while Republican Lilley got the place at a cost to him of $5,386.65. Comrade Sweetland's campaign expenses were $9.70—$4.25 to the State Committee and the rest for literature. See the difference?

A switchman in East Hartford, Conn., writes: "The Socialist Party has 23 votes in this place. Two years ago we did not have one. You can see what The Worker has done here. I think most of the votes came from the switchmen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford." He sends in four subscriptions with the good news.

The Hoboken comrades are encouraged by the increase of the Socialist vote in their city from 187 to 297. A new club has been started and a still greater increase is expected next year.

State Secretary Critchlow of Ohio, deserves the highest praise for the energy and the orderly and business-like methods which he takes in his work. Doubtless very much of the splendid gain made in that state is due to his services in building up the organization. His frequent reports and communications to the locals are models in clearness and conciseness of wording as well as in the neatness of the typewriting and mimeographing, which insures their being read and understood. His financial report for October shows receipts of $248.63 (including $75.95 for dues, $56.08 in donations, $73.11 for literature and supplies), expenditures of $226.80, and a cash balance on Nov. 1 of $39.18. Four new locals were granted charters during the month—Cuyahoga Falls, Niles, Elyria, and East Liverpool.

"The Indiana comrades are enthusiastic," writes Comrade O'Neal of Terre Haute, "and are now in the campaign of 1903." In the same tone write our comrades from every state. The vote in Indiana, by the way, as officially reported, is 7,134, instead of 7,111, as we stated last week.

"It is a glorious increase we have made for the young party which, I am sure, will become the ruling power throughout this great land," writes Comrade O'Dea of Whitinsville, Mass., in ordering a set of party pamphlets. "I hope I shall live to see the day when the country will be free from the power of the Republican and Democratic parties, for as far as I can see they are both no better than slave-drivers in the first degree." We hope you will live to see and enjoy it many years, comrade. It is not now long to wait.

New York State.

Comrade Schwartz of Syracuse writes that a considerable number of the votes cast for the S. L. P. in Onondaga County were intended for the Social Democratic Party. It is certainly unfortunate that the election laws compel us, in this state, to use a name which does not at once signify to the new voter that this is the party of Socialism. "In spite of this handsship," says Schwartz, "the union-smashers will never again receive more votes that the Social Democratic Party in this county. We have now a good organization of English-speaking workingmen. The S. L. P. organization has dwindled into insignificance and now consists virtualy of the dozen men who were their candidates this year. They have lost thirty members during the last year, including several good speakers—expelled, suspended, or driven to resign. Even the small vote they got this year (hardly a third of what they had in 1900), they got on the strength of the work of other years. We need fear them no more."

Comrade Fieldman addressed a meeting arranged by Local New Rochelle, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 18, at Irish Benevolent Hall. Eight of the audience succumbed to Fieldman's logic and later in the evening were admitted to membership which is now near the forty mark. A committee is looking after a suitable place in which to establish headquarters, from which the movement here will be directed systematically. The large Socialist vote here has the politicians all twisted. An offer has been made by one prominent in the Democratic party to fuse with them in the next campaign. After they know us a little better such offers will cease.

New York City.

At the last meeting of the West Side Socialist Club, Comrade Sol Fieldman spoke in place of Comrade Spargo as originally announced. The hall was filled to overflowing with a very sympathetic audience and three new members were secured. The club decided to order 25 copies of The Worker per week for free distribution. Hereafter the business meeting will be held immediately after the lecture and discussion, instead of before it. The lectures begin promptly at 8 p. m. This Friday evening, Nov. 28, Jas. N. Wood will speak on "Socialism and Common Sense," and on the following three Friday evenings Algernon Lee will deliver a course of very instructive lectures on "Social Evolution," "The Capitalist System," and "The Tendencies of Capitalism." The club meets in Clark's Hall, northwest corner of 25th street and Eighth avenue, second floor, and strangers are particularly welcome.

The 1st, 3d and 5th A. D. will meet on Monday, Dec. 1, 8 P. M., at Comrade Schoenberg's restaurant, 150 Spring street. Every member is requested to be present.

The Bronx Borough Agitation Committee is getting out small books containing enrollment and registration lists of every election district, and district captains will be appointed when the books are ready. Five thousand cards stating our place and date of meeting, with a short definition of Socialism and a special offer of pamphlets published by the Socialist Literature Company, are also being printed. An indoor agitation meeting will be held about the middle of January in the 22nd Election District of the 35th Assembly District, this election district having given us a larger vote than any other. Almost all old and new debts have been paid and the Bronx has a comparatively handsome sum with which to begin work. Subscription lists are coming in slowly; if comrades wish us to make our semi-annual report in accordance with our by-laws, they will have to bestir themselves. The next general meeting of the Bronx is called for Monday, Jan. 5, 1903. The advisability of continuing the Borough Committee may be seriously discussed at this meeting as some comrades favor its dissolution. Comrades should investigate the subject before the general meeting that time may not be wasted, nor hasty action taken.

At the last meeting of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville a discussion was held on "The Condition of the Working Class Under Capitalism and the Remedy." Three new members were admitted. At the next meeting the club will discuss the attitude of the S. D. P. towards the trade unions.

The Socialist Literary Society has increased its membership greatly since election and the greatest enthusiasm prevails. The Society has hired additional rooms to accomodate its members, at the headquarters, 241 E. Broadway. The rooms are open every day and evening and workingmen and women of the East Side are invited to call.

Comrade O'Hare of Kansas City, addressed a well-attended meeting of the Brotherhood of Silversmiths of New York City. The reasons he gave why every workingman should join the union of his craft were so convincing that all those present who had not joined did so at once.

The West Side comrades held a well attended meeting last Sunday at 342 W. Forty-second street. It was decided to hold a business meeting on the third Sunday of each month, 9 A. M., at the same place. F. Harth was elected Treasurer, Comrade Solomon Recording and Financial Secretary, and H. Pick Corresponding Secretary.

A special meeting of the 30th A. D. was held at 206 E. Eighty-sixth street, on Wednesday, Nov. 19, Comrade Wagner presiding. The organization of election districts took place, after which the district decided to make the next a discussion meeting, the subject being, "The Mission of the Trade Unions and the Work of the Comrades." It was decided to hire Old Homestead Garden for our festival on Jan. 11, and have everything strictly union. A thousand tickets and five thousand throw-aways will be printed. It was further decided to engage Comrade Baumeister to arrange for musicians, also to have Comrade Hanford to address the guests.

"Socialism and Human Nature" is the topic on which Sol Friedman will lecture at Colonial Hall, Sunday evening, Nov. 30. All who are interested are invited to attend. Admission is free.

The social of the Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn last week was very successful. A number of young men who attended are expected to join the organization soon. The meeting place has been changed to Franz' Liberty Hall, 180 Irving avenue.

THE SPEAKERS CLUB.

The Speakers' Club is to be reorganized and the first meeting will be held Thursday evening, Dec. 4, at the Labor Lyceum. The purpose of the club is to develop and train Socialist speakers. A plan of work for the winter has been arranged, and will be discussed at the meeting next Thursday. A series of debates will be held and instructive talks will be given the young speakers by some of our old campaigners. Every Socialist in the movement is needed to speak for the cause; anyone who is not physically incapacitated can become a speaker if he determines to do so; and all who want Socialism enough to work for it should take advantage of this opportunity.

——For information about the Socialist Party in New Jersey address the State Secretary, H. R. Kearns, Arlington.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

At the last meeting of the New York General Committee, H. L. Slobodin and H. R. Wallace presiding, the following delegates were seated: 10th A. D., D. Whitehorn; 22d A. D., H. A. Steinbock; 24th A. D., Br. 2, I. Planser; 30th A. D., Stahl, Wolter, Ortland, C. Schaefer, and Wagner; 33d and 33d A. D.'s, H. King.

The organization of a Jewish branch in the 10th A. D. was referred to the district.

It was decided, if arrangements can be made with the proprietors of the hall, to postpone the entertainment planned for Feb. 12 at the Grand Central Palace, in order not to come into conflict with the Quarter-Centennial of the "Volkszeitung."

The City Executive Committee reported the expenses of the parade of Nov. 1 as $394.

The proposition of the C. E. C. that it publish a leaflet monthly, to be distributed in large quantities for agitation, was defeated in this form and, instead, the State Committee was requested to publish such leaflets. In connection with this Comrade Slobodin related that during the late campaign the State Committee had issued 1,500,000 pieces of literature.

A Lecture Committee, consisting of Comrades Spargo, Edlin, Slobodin, Lee, and Boudin, was elected, to cooperate with the districts in arranging lectures. This committee and the Organizer were instructed to provide for a series of lectures on scientific Socialism in one of the small halls of Cooper Union.

A committee from the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association was given the floor and asked the earnest assistance of the local in arranging the proposed fair as a means of raising the fund of $50,000 for the Socialist daily. It was voted to call on all districts to elect delegates to the Daily Globe Conference and take an active part in the work.

A resolution in regard to the arrest and conviction of the two Anarchists, MacQueen and Grossmann, in Paterson, was referred to a committee consisting of Comrades Dr. Halpern, Boudin, and Slobodin, who will report at the next meeting.

A special meeting of the General Committee will be held on Dec. 6 to discuss the California affair and to acquaint the newly elected member of the National Committee with the views of the local on the subject. The Organizer was instructed to procure needful information.

The semi-annual report of the Organizer will be a special order, following admission of members, at the meeting of Dec. 13.

FOR ASSEMBLY DISTRICT OFFICERS.

To the Assembly District Officers of the S. D. P. of New York City.

Comrades:—In accordance with instructions of the General Comittee of Local New York, S. D. P., the Finance Committee earnestly requests you to attend a conference of the Recording, Corresponding and Financial Secretaries and Treasurers of the assembly district oraginzations, on Saturday evening, Nov. 29, 8 P. M., at Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving the financial condition of the local. Please bring a list of the membership of your district showing the standing of each member to date.

WM. J. F. HANNEMAN,
Secretary.

KINGS COUNTY COMMITTEE.

At the last regular meeting it was decided that all profits obtained from the sale of literature at the Labor Lyceum fair should be applied to the Labor Lyceum fund.

In order to make the borough meeting to be held in connection with the Daily Globe as great a success as possible it was deemed advisable to postpone the meeting until after the Lyceum fair.

In place of the present plan of district organization under the supervision of the Board of Organizers, a motion was made to abolish the Board of Organizers and have the County Committee organize all districts where no organization exists. After considerable discussion the motion was lost, but a subsequent motion was carried to have the County Committee take care of the unorganized districts.

The Secretary was instructed to draw up a circular to be sent to the enrolled voters as soon as the city record of enrolment can be obtained.

Comrade Butscher was given the floor to report on his work in connection with the canvass of the Brooklyn vote. He received the thanks of the committee and his bill was ordered paid.

BROOKLYN LABOR LYCEUM.

On Thanksgiving Day the comrades of the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum Association open a grand fair to celebrate the completion of the new building which takes the place of the one destroyed by fire two years ago.

The new Labor Lyceum stands on the same site as the old one, at 949-957 Willoughby avenue, but it is incomparably a better building than that which formerly served as the headquarters for the labor organizations of Brooklyn. From Thursday, Nov. 27, to Thursday, Dec. 4, inclusive, the fair will continue, and all workingmen and friends of the movement are invited to come with their families and friends, to inspect the new building and join in the festivities. Tickets cost but 10 cents.

NOTICE FOR ESSEX COUNTY.

A general meeting of the members of the Local Essex County (Newark, the Oranges, Bloomfield) will take place on Monday, Dec. 1, at 8 p. m., in the headquarters, 124 Market street, Newark. Matters of great importance for the future development of our local will come up for discussion. Comrades, you are urgently requested to attend this meeting. Socialist sentiment has grown in our locality as rapidly as in others, but, our organization being weak, we did not and could not crystallize this sentiment into a large vote. Unless we perfect our organization and start our next campaign right now, we shall remain behind next year as well.

D. RUBINOW, Secretary.

IN MICHIGAN.

The Michigan State Committee is arranging for a vigorous "soap-box campaign" to begin as soon as the weather gets right for outdoor speaking next spring. The entire state is to be organized into circuits by counties or along lines of railroads. These circuits will include every town of over 300 people, where one or more comrades can be found who will agree to take care of speakers and help them on to the next station on the circuit.

Heathen lands, where there are no known Socialists, will be reached by skirmish from the nearest stations. A corps of speakers will be enlisted for these outdoor meetings.

By this means expenses are made very light. No hall rents, bills, billposting, or brass bands are necessary, and the audiences are larger than usually attend meetings held in halls. Speakers can reach appointments without long distance travel, the territory can be systematically covered and speakers, committees, and comrades will know exactly where they are at all the time.

Comrade C. J. Lamb of Dryden, Mich., has been appointed by State Secretary Menton to go ahead with the organization of these "soap-box circuits," and he wants to establish a "soap-box station" at every town. Michigan comrades who want occasional meetings next summer might do well to correspond with Comrade Lamb.

COMRADE O'HARE'S TOUR.

Comrade Frank P. O'Hare is engaged in an agitation tour on his way to the Mill's School at Kansas City, Mo. Sol Fieldman of New York, who was announced to make the tour in company with O'Hare, decided to remain in New York and Comrade O'Hare is filling the dates. He has already held a number of successful meetings at various cities on his route, and will speak at the following places on the dates given: Nov. 28, Bucyrus, O.; Nov. 29, Delaware; Nov. 30, Columbus; Dec. 1, Springfield; Dec. 2, Xenia; Dec. 3, Dayton; Dec. 4, Hamilton; Dec. 5, Cincinnati; Dec. 6; Columbus, Ind.; Dec. 7, Anderson; Dec. 8, Marion.

"LIFE" ON ELECTION.

The election has two principal functions, viz.: To disturb business and to turn the rascals in.

It is exceedingly simple in its working, complications not setting in until later. The party in power having obtained all, and frequently more than was dreamed of in the beginning, its claims to permanence are disputed by another party. If the latter party succeed, this is called rotation in office. Rotation in office means that the pensions will increase and the people, as usual, be disappointed.

An election is always held in the fall of the year, to commemorate man's first sinning. The saloons, however, are not closed long enough to make the calamity a national one. The persons elected are usually a national boss, a president, and part of the House of Representatives. It would not do to elect the whole of Congress at once, as it takes a little time to acquire legislative ignorance enough to pass all the unnecessary bills introduced.

The necessary concomitants to an election are the financial interests, the power of the press, the machine, and the party voter. The financial interests direct the proceedings, the power of the press furnishes the noise, the machine audits the contributions, and the party voter does the rest. There is another ingredient called the people, but they don't count.

There are three principal elections: national, state, and municipal. National elections are held for the purpose of providing the new set of officeholders with unearned increment, state elections for the benefit of the insurance companies and street railways and the bosses who wish to enter the Senate, and municipal elections to give reformers a chance to show what they don't amount to.—Life.

STANDARD OIL PROFITS.

The Standard Oil Company has just declared its fourth dividend for the current year—20 per cent. having been paid in March, 10 per cent. in June, 5 per cent. in September, and now another 10 per cent. This makes $45,000,000 taken from the products of the workingmen in American directly by this single company in a single year, and distributed to a little group of people who have nothing to do with the production of oil, but who own the land, machinery, and other means of production necessary for carrying on the industry.

"Directly," we say; for the amount paid to the stockholders in dividends in any company is far from being the whole amount taken from the workers and given to the capitalists. Besides dividends there are interest on bonds, rentals, exorbitant salaries to officials, and a thousand sorts of "pickings and stealings."

SHIP TRUST THROWS MEN OUT OF WORK.

A Baltimore dispatch says: "A number of the employees of the Atlantic Transport Company will be discharged as a result of the merger of the transatlantic steamship lines. A large force of clerks was employed in the home offices of the company in this city. President Baker, of the Atlantic Transport, who is also a director in the new consolidated company, said that while a reduction of the clerical force had been decided upon, the exact number of men to be dropped had not yet been determined. He also said that the reduction was a necessary sequence of the consolidation. It is understood that some of the minor official positions have also been abolished and that the salaries of others retained in important clerical positions will in several instances be reduced."

Reduction of wages and discharge of men is a necessary result of consolidation under private ownership, because the very purpose of such consolidation is to reduce expenses and so to increase profits. Socialism means consolidation for the benefit of the workers. In proportion as, through better organization or the use of better machinery, it becomes possible to carry on an industry with less work, the hours of labor would be reduced or the remuneration of the workers would be increased, or both.

Senator Hanna has said, and the result of the late election bears him out in it, that the conflict of the future is not between Republicanism and Democracy, but between Republicanism and Socialism. The Republican party stands for private trustification with such results as are shown in the dispatch quoted. It is for the workingmen to choose between this and the Co-operative Commonwealth.

A GOVERNMENT OF LIES.

The "Volkszeitung" recently republished an article from the "Labor World" of Tokio, Japan, in which it was noted that some ships for the United States navy are being built in Japan. A Brooklyn comrade, citing this fact in a speech, was challenged to prove it. He wrote to the Secretary of the Navy at Washington, asking whether it was true that ships for the American navy were being built in Japan. The honorable official replied with due formility that no contracts had been let by this government for the building of ships there. Our comrade supposed that the "Volkszeitung" had been misinformed, but thought it worth while to write to the Tokio "Labor World" for further information. He thus learned that, while the ships are actually being built at the Uraga dock in Japan, the contract was let to a firm at Shanghai, China, and then sublet to the Uraga firm. Thus it appears that the Secretary of the Navy indulged in the schoolboy trick of telling an actual lie under the guise of the verbal truth. What shall we think of a government that has to resort to such expedients? Only this, that it is utterly base and contemptible, as a capitalist government must needs be.

HANNA NO TRAITOR.

Mayor Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, Democratic candidate for congressman-at-large from Connecticut, was the principal speaker at the "rally" recently held in New Haven. In the course of his speech Mayor Cummings mentioned Mark Hanna. An outburst of denunciation from the more violent partisans present greeted the senator's name, one man in the gallery bellowing epithets expressive of a wide range of villainy, ending with "traitor." Mayor Cummings raised his hand in protest. "Mark Hanna deserves no such title," said he smiling. "He is the last man in the world who would betray a trust."—New York Times.

RIGHT SHALL RULE.

Short is the triumph of evil,
Long is the reign of right;
The men who win by the aid of sin,
The nation that rules by might,
The party that lives by corruption,
The trickster, the knave, the thief,
May thrive for a time on the fruits of crime,
But their seeming success is brief.

Sneer, if you will, at honor;
Make virtue a theme for jest;
Reflect on the man who strives as he can
To seek and to do the best;
Make goodness a butt for slander,
And offer excuse for vice;
Proclaim the old lie, the corruptionist's cry,
That every man has his price.

Yet know that the truth shall triumph,
That evil shall find its doom;
That the Cause of Right, though subdued by Might,
Shall break from the strongest tomb;
That Wrong, though it seems to triumph,
Lasts only for a day,
While the Cause of Truth has eternal youth
And shall rule o'er the world for aye.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 22,000 members and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership by payment of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

"NO EVIDENCE."

So Says Jerome in Moving Dismisssal of Tarrant Indictment.

Not an Isolated Case—Reform District Attorney Follows Example of Republican and Democratic Predecessors in Shielding Capitalist Criminals.

The Worker, last week, commenting on the dismissal of one of the damage suits brought against the Tarrant Drug Company and other capitalists responsible for the explosion in which seven working people were killed two years ago, said:

"The decision of this case, of course, sets a precedent for all the others growing out of the Tarrants' crime and, so far as money damages are concerned, the criminals will go scot-free. As for the criminal proceedings, we again predict that not one of the capitalists in the case will ever so much as serve ten days in jail as a punishment for their profitable crime. Jerome hasn't time to prosecute them; he is too busy scolding trade unions and pretending to hunt gamblers; and doesn't want to prosecute such respectable gentlemen, anyhow; it is their class that put him in office, and he will be true to his masters."

Sooner than we expected, only two days after our last issue appeared, came the fulfilment of our prediction, announced thus in the daily press:

"On motion of District Attorney Jerome, Judge McMahon of the Court of General Sessions yesterday dismissed two indictments for manslaughter in the second degree, which were pending against Thomas F. Main and William V. V. Powers, wholesale chemists, who formerly comprised the firm of Tarrant & Co., at Warren and Greenwich streets.

"The building where they had their place of business blew up on Oct. 29, 1900, on which occasion almost an entire block of buildings was demolished and seven persons killed, while many more were injured. The explosion was caused by too much chlorate of potash being stored on the premises.

'The explosion,' said District Attorney Jerome, 'has been the subject of much civil litigation, and on no occasion has the responsibility been fixed or the case even sent to the jury. There is no evidence in my office on which these men could be convicted, and they should never have been indicted in the first place.'"

It was shown in the Coroner's inquest and again before the Grand Jury that the Tarrant Company had, for itself and for other capitalists in the trade, stored an immense amount of chlorate of potash, besides large quantities of alcohol, oils, sulphur, and other inflammable and explosive substances, in a combustible building, where a large number of men and girls were employed, in a crowded part of the city. This was shown to be in violation of even the very inadequate laws and ordinances covering the subject. Yet, Mr. Jerome says these men, through whose lawless action seven workingmen and working girls lost their lives, "ought never to have been indicted," and that he has "no evidence on which they could be convicted."

And this is the same Jerome who let the officers and directors of the New York Central go free and secured the indictment of Engineer Wisker for the tunnel horror.

Not an Isolated Case.

This is not an isolated or exceptional case. Readers will easily recall the instances of the John D. Ireland building, which collapsed in course of construction, and the similar affair of the Fordinsky building, in each of which a number of workingmen were killed. In one of these cases the moral responsibility was fixed upon the employers by evidence showing that the workmen had foreseen the danger and had warned the contractors; but this very fact, under the rulings of capitalist courts, was turned against the victims, as proving them guilty of "contributory negligence."

The Windsor Hotel fire is another case in point, for there would have been little or no loss of life had the proprietors spent a little money in providing fire-escapes as required by law.

These are only a few of the greatest of the fatal disasters of the last few years, traceable directly to the criminal greed of capitalists, who save expenses and increase their profits by endangering the lives of their employees and their tenants.

Official Accomplices of Crime.

During the corresponding period we have had five District Attorneys—Democrat Fellows, Republican Olcott, Democrat Gardiner, Democratic-Republican Hybrid Philbin, and Republican-Reformer Jerome; part of the time we have had a Tammany Democrat, part of the time a Citizens' Union Republican as Mayor. These Republicans and Democrats, Tammany men and Reformers, have shown the most remarkable unanimity in the administration of justice. If a union picket has been accused of threatening or insulting a scab, all the power of the law has been vigorously invoked to secure his prompt conviction and punishment. But when a landlord, a contractor, or a factory-owner has deliberately sacrificed the lives of employees and tenants for his profit, a mere feint of prosecution has been made at the start, the trial has been delayed till public indignation has subsided and until witnesses have been got out of the way, and then the District Attorney has moved the dismissal of the charge, regretfully declaring that "there is no evidence in his office on which he could get a conviction." In a word, they have made themselves official accomplices of the crimes committed by the class that chose them for office.

And so it will continue to be, so long as workingmen, whose lives and whose sisters' and daughters' lives are at stake, continue to divide their votes between two sets of candidates nominated for them by the capitalist class.

——The capitalist says he works. So he does. He works the workers.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Three Decisions by Appellate Division of Supreme Court, Showing That Workingmen Are Counted as Mere Commodities Under Capitalism.

In the two preceding issues of The Worker we have noted the decisions of the Supreme Court of this state releasing the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railway Company and the Tarrant Drug Company, respectively, from all pecuniary responsibility for the lives of employees lost in their service and through their negligence.

Three other decisions rendered within the last fortnight by the Appellate Division deserve to be recorded.

In the first case a man was run over and killed by a car belonging to the Union Railway Company. The trial jury awarded damages of $15,000 to the widow and orphans. On appeal of the company, the Appellate Division reduces this verdict to $10,000, on the sole ground that $15,000 is an excessive estimate of the value of the life of a husband and father who was getting only $12 a week.

The second case is that of a six-year-old boy who was run over and killed by a heavy wagon. The jury here awarded damages of $200 to the father. In this case it was the plaintiff who appealed, on the ground that the verdict was inadequate. Judge Ingraham dismissed the appeal, holding that the killing of the child involved no pecuniary loss to its parents and that the verdict is therefore adequate. The victim was the son of an Italian workingman.

In the third case a jury had awarded damages of $30,000 to a little boy who lost both legs through being run over by a street car. The defendant, the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, appealed, and the court set aside the verdict on the ground that the trial judge ought to have instructed the jury that the child was guilty of "contributory negligence."

All three decisions confirm the Socialist statement that, under capitalism, the life of a member of the working class is considered only as a commodity, like that of a horse or a cow. So long as workingmen cast their votes for corporation lawyers nominated by capitalist politicians as candidates for the bench, this theory will be maintained. Socialist judges would take a different view of the matter.

ANOTHER LABOR LAW NULLIFIED BY COURT.

A dispatch from Baltimore, Md., states that "Judge Ritchie of the Criminal Court has decided that the so-called 'sweatshop' law is unconstitutional. There are 25,000 persons directly and indirectly affected, and about $20,000,000 invested in the manufacture of clothing in Baltimore. The case came up on a demurrer, on the ground that the law infringed upon the rights of the citizen to free use of his property, under the declaration of rights. The court says:

"'The prohibition against the manufacture in every tenement or dwelling house of any of the articles in question except by the family, and by the family except on the conditions prescribed, impairs the right to the free and profitable use of property, whether occupied by the tenant or owner, thereby reducing its value, and interferes with the right to pursue any lawful occupation, not injurious to others, in one's own home, and unless this sweeping prohibition is demanded by the public health it cannot be sustained.'"

The city of Baltimore has been notorious for its sweatshops. It was hoped that this law would give some little protection to the clothing workers and improve their miserable conditions, but this decision, in line with so many other decisions of courts overthrowing labor laws on the ground that they interfere with "free contract," puts an end to this hope and gives the sweaters full license to coin profits out of the poverty and disease of the workers.

REVOLUTION, NOT REFORM.

There is, in the political world, an element that needs to be considered apart from the ordinary political parties. With the word "Reform" for its watchword, it seeks our support upon the ground of "practicality." These "Reformers" promise "something here and now," and urge our acceptance of the half loaf which is proverbially better than no bread. When we examine closely the pretensions of these people we shall find that they have emasculated the word which they call themselves by, till it is no longer recognizable. They do not mean when they call themselves "Reformers" that they believe in re-forming, or making anew, but rather in patching up the old. Is there any use in this sort of thing? Why, if we are convinced of the fundamental wrong, should we seek anything short of its removal? As a well known French dramatist has said, when we realize that the conditions of life and labor of the poor—long hours, excessive toil, poor food, unsanitary workshops and homes, are responsible for the ravages of tuberculosis, there is no wisdom, but folly, in concentrating our energies on putting up signs warning people not to spit on the floor! Realizing our right to the whole of the world's wealth, and the cause of our non-possession of an adequate supply of the means of life, why should we concentrate our efforts upon getting an old-age pension of a dollar and a quarter a week for all workers over sixty-five years of age—an age which comparatively few workers attain—instead of dealing with the basic wrong? That is not the way of "practical" men. When men invite us to "begin the solution" of the social problem, by municipalizing telephones, we decline on the ground that we are practical men. A doctor who prescribed worm powder for consumption, or court plaster for cancer, would be quite as wise and as "practical" as most of our so-called "Reformers." No, we want what William Morris calls "a world new-builded," not a patching and stitching of the old.—John Spargo, in "Where We Stand."

——When the workers own the factories and mines and railroads they won't have to strike for a little larger share of their product.

MORE THAN A MERE PROTEST.

Growth of Socialist Vote a Positive Sign of the Times.

William Mailly Replies to George Fred Williams—We Gained from Both Old Parties, Because Both Stand Square Against Labor's Interests.

George Fred Williams, the leader of the "radical" Democracy—what may be called the Hearst Democracy—of Massachusetts, shortly after election gave vent to some very caustic criticism of the late Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. Gaston, and the other conservative Democrats who are in control of the party there. He attributed solely to their influence the failure of that party to carry the state, and had even the assurance to treat the trebling of the Socialist vote as being nothing more than a rebuke to Gaston—this in spite of the fact that the Socialist vote was doubled, trebled, or quadrupled in other states, even where the "radicals" were in full control of the Democratic party, as in Colorado and Montana.

William Mailly, State Secretary of the Socialist Party in Massachusetts, made an able reply to Mr. Williams, which we quote in full. He said:

"It is a matter of regret that a man of Mr. Williams' ability and unquestioned honesty cannot see the folly and impracticability of further attempting to regenerate the Democratic party. While his charges against Mr. Gaston may be true, yet their very truth is evidence that the day of the honest progressive in the Democratic party is gone.

Democratic Party Played Out.

"Parties are only the expression of certain economic conditions, and with the development of the trust system and the consequent displacement of the middle class follows naturally the disintegration of the Democratic party. Without a definite aim or settled policy it cannot retain a permanent place in American politics, and all efforts seeking its rejuvenation or perpetuation must result in failure.

"The action of the last Democratic state convention was consistent with the movement the country over to bring the Republican and Democratic leaders together into one capitalist party. In all the speeches delivered during the recent campaign there was no difference in principle evidenced by the Democratic and Republican speakers. It was the same in New York, Pennsylvania and other states where questions of great public moment were subordinated to petty hair-splitting and disgusting personal squabbles.

"The one party to present a rational program and sane policy was the Socialist Party, which makes for the marshaling of the working-class forces for the social ownership of industry. It was quite logical, therefore, that the Socialist Party should poll a large increase in votes, not only in Massachusetts but in every state where we had a ticket in the field.

Drew from Both Old Parties.

"Mr. Williams goes behind the election returns when he claims that the increase in the Socialist vote 'was merely a protest against plutocratic control of the Democratic party.' If he will investigate the poll he will find that the Socialist Party cut into the Republican vote in some localities as severely as into the Democratic vote in others.

"Each party suffered because workingmen are learning that both are false, untrustworthy and present no definite solution to existing industrial conditions.

"The vote for Socialism given last election by the workers of Massachusetts cannot and will not be reversed. One might as well try to stem Niagara with a toothpick. Mr. Williams and all others interested might as well understand that now as later.

Why We Gained.

"The Socialist Party advanced because we were organized and prepared to reap a partial harvest of years of agitation. And our work goes right on. The organization of clubs grows in strength and possibilities daily. We have youth, a clear understanding of economic principles, a deep-rooted, unquenchable faith in the working class and a great ideal made possible of fulfilment through industrial evolution, and it is written that Socialism shall win.

"Mr. Williams is too late. His cry against Mr. Gaston and the present leadership of the Democratic party is as sad as it is futile. It will fall upon deaf ears. The workers have already heard the clarion call of Socialism and nothing less can attract or satisfy them now.

"Mr. Williams returns to the political arena to conduct an inglorious combat with a straw man, while the Socialists are organizing and preparing to overcome the real enemy of progress and humanity, represented by the system of private ownership of industry, which is defended and upheld by Republican and Democratic politicians alike."

STEEL TRUST PROSPERITY.

A statement issued by the Steel Trust this week shows its "earnings" for September and October to have been more than $24,000,000—an increase of two and a half millions over the figures for September and October of last year. The net current assets on October 1 were more than $124,000,000—an increase of $33,000,000 in the year. Evidently, the country is prosperous, but a lot of the employees of the Steel Trust have been offered the option of reduced wages or a lay-off. And this is perfectly consistent with capitalist prosperity.

OHIO'S BIG GAIN.

Vote of 1900 Is More Than Trebled.

Socialist Party Is Now Officially Recognized with Third Place on the Ballot — Gain Due to Close Organization.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 21.—The Socialist Party has more than trebled its vote in the State of Ohio in the last two years. In 1900 we polled 4,847 votes for our national ticket and 4,650 for Secretary of State. The latter office headed the ticket this year and our candidate, Max S. Hayes, received 14,270 votes—a gain of 9,620 votes, or 207 per cent.

The following table shows the vote for Secretary of State in 1900 and in 1902 by counties. The counties marked with a star have locals of the Socialist Party—there being in all forty-two locals and eight branches in thirty-four organized counties.

Totals	4,650	14,270

In 1900 six counties gave us no votes. In 1901 five did likewise. In 1902 every county in Ohio cast votes for the Socialist ticket.

In 1901 we polled 7,359 votes for Governor. That was an unusually warm campaign and the State cast a very large vote. This year, with a largely decreased State vote, we poll 14,270, nearly doubling over last year.

In 1901 the S. L. P. polled 2,994 for head of ticket. In 1902 it decreased to 2,983, or 11 votes less. They lost exactly 1,100 votes in the five large cities and made nearly all of it back in the rural districts, where our supporters made mistakes and voted their ticket, not knowing the difference.

We are now the third party in Ohio and will hereafter go on the ballot in third position without any nomination petitions. The emblem of the party will be at the head of the ticket. This is what we have gained.

The table is a study in itself. The organized counties show votes for every blow that was struck. Some of the small organizations worked but little and the vote shows this as well. This proves conclusively that organization counts and we must organize the entire state before one more year.

ENGINEERS' BALL.

The Eccentric and Standard Engineers, Local No. 20, held a very successful entertainment and ball last Saturday at Murray Hill Lyceum, for the benefit of the widows' and orphans' fund. The program, which was supervised by Jas. L. Berry of the Actors' Protective Union, was a good one, the crowd filled the hall, and everyone seemed satisfied.

MONTANA.

In our issue of Nov. 16, in correcting the erroneous statement made by some party papers that the Socialist Party had elected five members of the Legislature and several local officers in Deer Lodge County, Mont., we fell into an error on the other side. We said:

"The fact is that these men were not, according to the best of our information, candidates of the Socialist Party, but of the Labor Party of Montana. They claim to be Socialists and we shall have to wait to see how well they deserve the name. Frederick Gauger, Leon S. Beaudry, J. H. Morrissey, Timothy C. O'Keefe, and J. H. Schwend are the men elected to the Legislature. The Socialist Party had no legislative candidates in Deer Lodge County."

The error is in the intimation that these men were the candidates of the so-called "Labor Party" of the state, which was engineered by disappointed Democratic politicians. The Deer Lodge County people had no connection with this fake, they supported the Socialist state ticket, adopted the platform of the Socialist Party, did not endorse any capitalist candidates, but, on the other hand, did not use the name of "Socialist Party" and were not affiliated with the party organization. The men elected all declared themselves Socialists before election.

Further, since the date of our previous report, this county organization has given up its separate organization and have become members of the Socialist Party of the state.

The Worker gladly makes this correction and expresses its hope that the comrades in question will make such a record as Socialists in the Montana Legislature that it will never again be thought expedient, there or elsewhere, to avoid the use of the party name.

CALIFORNIA.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 17.—In this county (Santa Clara), Comrade Brower, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, gets 209 votes. Other candidates on the state ticket run from 167 to 253. In 1900 the county gave 210 votes for our national ticket.

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 20.—The official canvass for Alameda County gives the Socialist state ticket an average of 1,202 votes. Brower, at the head of the ticket, got 1,009. In 1900 we had but 828.

We had the Union Labor party here with its Democratic alliance, but the Socialists nominated a straight county ticket and made a good gain for the state ticket also, in spite of the influence of the example set by San Francisco, just across the bay.

In San Francisco, where the comrades withdrew from the local field in favor of the U. L. P., our candidate for Governor got 43 votes less than our national ticket had in 1900. Here, with a total vote less than one-third as large, he got 181 more than the national ticket in 1900. The logic of election results gives a black eye to the fusion plan.

WISCONSIN.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 24.—Official figures for the whole state show 15,957 votes for Seidel, our candidate for Governor. This more than doubles our vote of two years ago, which was 7,095.

The S. L. P. gets a slight increase, chiefly through our activity, rising from 524 to 787.

NEW JERSEY.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 25.—The vote of the Socialist Party for Congressional candidates is as follows: Second District, 199; Fourth, 415; Fifth, 415; Sixth, 777; Eighth, 742; Ninth, 813; Tenth, 879; total in eight districts, 4,575. In these districts the S. L. P. has 1,848.

In 1900 we had 4,609 in the whole state, and the S. L. P. had 2,074.

MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, Md.—Comrade Mareck, Socialist candidate in the Third Congressional District, in this city, received 499 votes, as against 396 in the same territory last year. Owing to the hard provisions of the new election laws we were unable to nominate candidates in any other districts.

SOCIALISM AND MORALS.

Often, when I avow myself a Marxian Socialist, I am rebuked on account of my "barren materialism." "You can not afford to ignore the moral aspects of this problem," said a man who is a church deacon to me.

"I agree," I answered.

"If you Marxian Socialists should ever succeed," said a doctor of divinity to me the other day, "the young would receive no moral instruction. And what would a world without morals be like?"

"Hell, as at present," I answered.

"You must have the love of Christ in your heart; that is the only way to solve the social problem," said a stout, pot-bellied assemblyman at a meeting where I spoke.

"That ye love one another is the love of Christ," I answered.

I saw little children of ten years of age drag themselves, oh so wearily, from the factory owned by the man who is a church deacon: "'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me,'" I said.

The doctor of divinity spoke next day to a company of boys and urged them to become soldiers. He bade them go forward in the name of Christ to do their fellows unto death. "'I am come that ye might have life'," I murmured, and before me was the vision of a cross.

In the state assembly the stout, pot-bellied assemblyman voted nay upon a measure demanding the abolition of child labor, and then voted yea upon the granting of a million dollar franchise to a corporation. I turned away with loathing. "'Love worketh no ill'," I cried.

In the Italian city of Reggio Emilia the Socialists were victorious; I thought of the children and of the words of the doctor of divinity.

"What will they do for the children?" I asked.

And the answer soon came: "They have given care to the physical needs of the children, to their minds, and to their moral well-being. They have given them these commandments to guide them aright:

"Love thy schoolmates, for they will be your co-workers through life.

"Love knowledge, the bread of intellect; cherish the same gratitude toward the teachers as toward thy father and mother.

"Make every day thou livest the occasion for some good and beneficial deed; always sow the seeds of kindness.

"Honor good men and true women, esteem all men as equals, bend thy knees to no one.

"Do not bear hatred to anybody; don't insult people. The word revenge shall not be in thy vocabulary, but stand up for thy rights and resist oppression.

"Do not be a coward. Stand by the weak and respect and love justice.

"Remember that all goods of this world are the product of labor. Who ever takes the good things of this world without giving their equivalent in labor robs the diligent of their just dues."

My heart was glad as I read these commandments. "Reason and righteousness are one." I said.—[John Spargo, in the "Socialist Spirit."

EFFECT OF CHILD LABOR AND FEMALE LABOR.

In general, wages must be high enough to keep the workingman in a condition to work, or, to speak more accurately, they must be high enough to secure to the capitalist the measure of labor-power which he needs. In other words, wages must be high enough, not only to keep the workingman in a condition to work, but also in a condition to produce children who may be able to replace him. It follows that the industrial development has a tendency that is most pleasing to the capitalist, to wit, to lower the necessities of the workingman in order that his wages may be lower in proportion.

There was a time when skill and strength were requisites for a workingman. The period of apprenticeship was then long, the cost of his training considerable. Now, however, the progress made in the division of labor and the system of machinery render skill and strength in production more and more superfluous; they make it possible to substitute unskilled and cheap workmen for skilled ones; and consequently, to substitute weak women and even children in the place of men. Already in the early stages of manufacture this tendency is perceptible; but not until machinery is introduced into production does the wholesale exploitation commence of women and children of tender age—an exploitation of the most helpless among the helpless, who are made a prey of shocking maltreatment and abuse. Thus machinery develops a new and wonderful quality in the hands of the capitalist.

Originally, the wage-worker, who was not a member of the family of his employer, had to earn wages high enough to defray not only his own expenses, but those of his family in order to enable him to propagate himself and to bequeath his labor power to others. Without this process on his part, the heirs of the capitalists would find no proletarians ready-made for exploitation.

When, however, the wife, and, from early infancy, the children of the workingman are able to take care of themselves, then the wages of the male workingman can be safely reduced to the level of his own personal needs without the risk of stopping the supply of fresh labor power.

Over and above this, the labor of women and children affords the additional advantage that these offer less resistance than men; and their introduction into the ranks of the workers increases wonderfully the quantity of labor that is offered for sale in the market.

Accordingly, the labor of women and children not only lowers the necessities of the workingman, but it also diminishes his capacity for resistance in that it overstocks the labor market; owing to both these circumstances it lowers the wages of the workingman. —Karl Kautsky, in "The Proletariat."

——Have you seen that watch offer? If not, look it up in this paper.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and, diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

WHAT OF THE CHILDREN?

Last week the Children's Aid Society of New York held its anual meeting. The report of the Secretary, C. Loring Brace, is very interesting.

During the last twelve months, this organization alone last aided over fifty-five thousand children.

In his report the secretary claims that "to-day no poor CHILD in New York need be homeless on the street nor be forced to steal or beg for a living, nor want a meal, IF HE GIVES ANY EVIDENCE THAT HE IS WILLING TO WORK FOR IT." (The emphasis is ours.)

Evidently then our social conditions are such that thousands of children cannot have opportunity to play, to enjoy their childhood, to be educated, and to grow up into full physical and mental development; the best that can be said is that they can have a meal if they are willing to work and the charity organizations find it out.

The Children's Aid Society has established a farm school at Kensico which accomodates eighty boys and there these eighty are treated so well that, says the secretary: "Very quickly the suspicious, sour lad WHO HAD BEGUN TO BELIEVE SOCIETY WAS HIS ENEMY discovers that THIS IS A BEAUTIFUL WORLD after all, and MOST SURPRISING OF ALL, he has found a home and friends."

Very surprising, too, is it not, that the child who has so much trouble to find a home and friends who will let him work for his meals, should believe that society is his enemy! Perhaps the child is right, as society is constituted to-day.

The society has "provided situations AT WAGES in the country for 24,861 older BOYS AND GIRLS."

Speaking of the society's industrial training schools, the secretary says: "These many departments of manual training....are useful to the children, as is proved by the fact that the boys and girls obtain better wages and more rapid promotion in the factories and shops. Our school work is limited to the primary grades for the reason that the children go to work at the age of thirteen. As a consequence we have developed MANUAL training in the primary grades far beyond the public schools either in New York or elsewhere. The exhibitions of manual training in the central office of the Children's Aid Society which have been given from time to time in the past have called forth great praise from specialists on the subject, who have been amazed that so much can be done among SUCH VERY YOUNG CHILDREN."

It would be interesting to know now many of the patrons of the Children's Aid Society draw dividends on the stock of corporations employing child-labor. It would be interesting to know how many of them draw rents from the foul tenements where children are surrounded by vice, dirt, and ignorance. The social system that enriches these men by the unpaid labor of the workers pauperizes the working-class parents and leaves their children a heritage of poverty and ignorance, which makes them little outcasts at the mercy of capitalism, seeking for a chance to work, beg, or steal. The capitalists who profit by the system which produces these results are very charitable gentlemen—they give back part of what they have taken away to help the poor and rescue the children. And when the children are enabled to get work they displace men and more families are pauperized; and for every child who is "rescued" the same old system turns out a score of new little paupers and outcasts—the products of the system of robbing the workers which enriches the charitable gentlemen. The idea of the charity organizations is to make good, competent little wage-slaves out of the children who come their way—that is the best that can be done as long as the system of wage-slavery and capitalism continues. The society points with great pride to the fact that some of the children which it aided have now become manufacturers and business men—which means that these fortunate ones are now making more paupers out of other men themselves. As fast as charity can aid one child outcast, capitalism has produced a dozen new ones. But until we have justice, charity is the only alternative. The capitalists continue to expend millions in charity. If all charity were immediately discontinued the misery and starvation would be so great that there would be an immediate uprising. Charity is the only safeguard of their safety, the only way to feed the unemployed, the only attempt at a solution of the problems which capitalism produces which is possible so long as capitalism exists—so charity becomes the ideal of the capitalists.

The necessity for charity is the proof of injustice. Because the workers do not get the product of their labor, because they are robbed of their product by those who own the means of production with which they must work, they become objects of the charity of those who are enriched by their exploitation and their children have to go to work at a tender age or become outcasts.

And what becomes of the little ones? They begin work in the cotton mills of the South at the ages of seven and eight. They are working at dangerous machines in the canning factories of California, they are toiling out their young lives in the slaughter-houses of Chicago, they are growing prematurely old in the breakers of the Pennsylvania coal mines, they are breaking down their tender bodies and killing their young nerves in the glass works of New Jersey, in the factories of the Tobacco Trust, in the sweatshops of New York. From the Gulf to the great lakes and from coast to coast the children are tortured and slowly murdered for profit, and the men whose work they are doing are looking for jobs.

A writer in the Chicago "Record-erald," in an article on child-labor, asks the reader to:

"Step into the shadow of a convenient archway and watch the army of the brawn of American manhood pass by—as the whistle has blown the close of another day's labor—the faithful toilers whose labor can move all human things in giant strides upward; whose stayed arm can throw all the world into stagnation. Hats off, then, as they come for appreaching us are the pillars of the republic, those who by their labor reap health, by their health reap contentment, by their contentment open the source of every man joy.

"And here, out onto the dirty roadway through the frowsy doors they come. And at the sight of them die all our gathered thoughts of admiration, and in their place come bitterness and pity and shame.

"For the night toilers here are not men at all, but women, and girls, and little children. Had we seen the women alone, white and hollow-eyed as they are, the thing would have been enough to shock us. Had we seen none but the tall, thin, frail girls just reaching womanhood the appalling conditions that had brought about such a sight might have seemed incomprehensible.

"But when out into the chill night stagger the little, hopeless, helpless creatures whose forms and faces mock the name of childhood, what can we do for the first few moments but turn white and sick and stand dumb before the revelation, or curse the iniquity that takes a baby life, squeezes it dry of love and hope and ambition, of heart and of brain, and gives to it, in token of the generosity and the prosperity of our great merchant princes—5 cents an hour and an early grave. * * *

"It is not an easy thing to contemplate the future of the little ones who are chained to the drudgery of the workshop * * * when these shall in turn become the mothers of the race * * * and conjure up the mental, moral and physical aspect of their offspring.

"The number of children at work in factories in Chicago under the age of sixteen years is now nearly 19,000, and of these the proportion of those actually under fourteen is estimated to be fully two-fifths. In other words, Chicago manufacturers make use of 7,600 boys and girls under fourteen years old in the manufacture of preparation of their product for market."

But neither the manufacturers nor the charity organizations get all of the children. You may see them in Park Row any night huddled over the gratings from which steam arises trying to get a little warmth and waiting all night to be first on the street with the morning papers. You may find them in the Children's Court, a special court which New York has provided for the trial of child criminals, and there you may hear them tell how they stole because they were hungry. Those that the capitalists do not get grow up to fill the prisons and the houses of prostitution.

MORE THAN FIVE PER CENT. of the children born in New York are brought into the world with the aid of The Society of the Lying-In Hospital, which Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has just given a new hospital.

And when these children grow older they are confronted with the alternatives of wage-slavery, beggary or crime.

The "Alkaloidal Clinic" (Jan., 1902), discussing statistics drawn from a New York City Health Board report, says:

"Assuming first that human beings are really important and valuable creatures, and that the prosperity of the nation and city depends on the active, intelligent men and women who inhabit them, the fact looms up largely that any cattle rancher or breeder of live stock would be ashamed to confess such mortality among his animals as marks the stupid living and doctoring among humans. The report mentioned shows that in the period covered in New York, 1,418 human beings died. Among these 775 were males and 643 females.....One thousand four hundred and seventy-five new American citizens were born during the same period. Apparently there was gained by birth 57, the difference between the births and the deaths. But of the 1,475 new babies, 122 were born dead. False conditions of life, ignorance of mothers, brutality of untaught fathers, and inherited disease. Six hundred and forty-six children died before they had reached the age of five. That means simply wholesale murder of children, due to ignorance, lack of good doctors among the poor, lack of decent food, abominable tenements, and other causes which would fill pages. Four hundred and fifty-six died under one year of age. Thirty-two per cent. of all those human beings that died, failed to endure their surorundings for one year. This horrible death rate among babies is too sad, too criminal, to be discussed with patience.....Most of this useless sacrifice of innocent life was due to the old familiar causes—poverty and ignorance."

Charity may often mean well, charity may help individual victims of this social condition, charity is a necessity as long as this condition lasts, but as charity can never abolish these conditions which are ever growing worse, how miserably futile and impotent it is even when honest and well-meaning. Charity organizations never consider the cause of misery and destitution for the reason that in that cause is to be found the source of profit of those who provide charity.

The cause of the poverty of the working class which drives their children to early toil or the care of charity organizations is the private ownership of the means of producing wealth which enables the capitalist to take from the workers the larger share of their product in return for the privilege of working.

The Socialist movement is organized by the workers themselves to capture the powers of government in order to make the means of producing wealth the collective property of all, and thus secure to the workers the full product of their labor.

When those things with which all men must work are owned by all men in common, when work shall be done to satisfy human needs and not to make a profit for a capitalist, when the progress of invention and manufacture are used for the benefit of the race instead of being used to enslave children and enrich capitalists, when all men shall have opportunity to work and receive the full product of their tool—in short, when we have Socialism, then, and not till then, will poverty, charity, and slavery of men, women and children disappear. C. L.

LOUDER THAN WORDS.

Dear little thin hands, famine-wasted fingers,
Holding on to dreary life that struggles to be free;
Hands where not a tender curve of baby roundness lingers,
Lift yourselves, that all the world the wan reproach may see,
That all the world's gay, thoughtless heart may break such sight to see.

Dear little pale lips, where no mother's kisses
Leave the print of mother love to sink into the heart,
Lips that could not tell me aught of childhood's tiny blisses,
Cry aloud your loneliness that all the world may start,
That all the world of pleasant ease at grief like yours may start.

Dear little tiny eyes, weighed down with weeping,
Opening every day to ills that harder grow to bear,
Eyes where gladness never shines in waking or in sleeping,
Look reproach that all the world may come to know and care,
That all the world of listless souls may understand and care.

Dear little bent forms, in your narrow alleys
Hidden from the searching sun that longs to make you well,
Forms that never run and leap in grassy groves and valleys,
Stand before a startled world that knows not where you dwell,
That all the world may shudder at the places where you dwell.

"TIMID" CAPITAL.

"Capital," says the "Quarterly Review," "avoids tumult and disputes and is of a timid disposition." That is very true, but not the whole truth. Capital abhors the absence of profit, or a very small profit, as much as nature abhors a vacuum. With sufficient profit, capital becomes daring. Ten per cent. certain, and it can be had everywhere; 20 per cent., and it becomes lively; 50 per cent. positively rash, for 100 per cent. it tramples all human laws under foot; 300 per cent., and there is no crime which it will not venture to commit, even at the risk of the gaiolws. If tumult and disputes are profitable it will encourage them both.—Karl Marx, in Capital.

——The Social Democratic Party of New York is the same as the Socialist Party of other states. The difference of name is due solely to provisions of the election laws. Do not confuse this organization with the so-called "Socialist Labor Party," or "union-smashers."

IN MONTANA.

State Labor Council Issues a Ringing Address.

Following Instructions of State Labor Convention, It Calls on Workingmen to Support the Socialist Party and to Reject All Compromise—Defiance to the Copper Kings.

The States Trades and Labor Council of Montana (corresponding to what are commonly called state federations of labor in other states) has put itself definitely on record in an excellent address to the working people of the state issued just before election.

The state convention of this body, held last summer, prepared the way for such action by adopting what is known as

"Resolution No. 4."

The text of this resolution, referring to the action of the Denver convention in the preceding month, was as follows:

"Whereas, The two National Conventions of the Western Federation of Miners and the Western Labor Union, recently held at Denver, have laid down certain well defined principles and rules of action which shall govern the rank and file of organized labor throughout the West in the solution of the economic and political problem confronting labor to-day; and,

"Whereas, The two foremost organizations have in positive and unmistakable terms declared themselves in favor of Socialism; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the Ninth Annual Convention of the Montana State Trades and Labor Council, take this, our first opportunity to approve of and concur in the action taken by these two Denver conventions, and that we, though recognizing that we have no control over any individual member or union, recommend to all unions affiliated with this Council to adopt the economic as well as the political field as a clear and distinct policy, in harmony with the spirit and letter of these Denver conventions, and to make them effective by a vigorous policy of education along the lines of political economy."

And in view of the above resolution the following action was taken:

"Resolved, That the executive officers be instructed to prepare an address to the people of Montana on the essential purposes of organized labor, as it relates to the political, economic, and legislative situation."

This instruction was not carried out so quickly as might have been wished, some of the members of the Executive Board probably having been influenced by a hope that the state "labor party" then organizing would turn out to be a genuine party of the working class. When it became evident, however, that Copper King Heinze was the ruling power in this so-called labor party, the Executive Council hesitated no longer, but issued an address on the lines indicated, which was circulated as widely as possible. The time was too short, however, for it to have its full effect at the polls, but it is still being circulated in immense numbers and the effect will undoubtedly be seen at the next election.

Personnel of the Signers.

The address is signed by William Enler, President of the Council; O. M. Partelow, Secretary; D. F. Staten, Treasurer; Thos. F. Murphy, member of the Executive Board; Henry Reinhart, Chairman of the Educational Board, and John Morrissey, a member of the last-named board.

John Morrissey, it may be noted, is one of the five labor members elected to the Legislature on the Socialist platform, though not under the Socialist name, in Deer Lodge County (including Anaconda), who have since election formally affiliated themselves with the Socialist Party.

Address to the People.

The full text of the address is as follows:

"New occasions teach new duties. A crisis has been reached in the history of the labor movement of America, and the labor unions have been forced by the very logic of events to enter the political arena to capture the powers of government as the only means by which final justice can be secured.

"Until now the working class has struggled against the ever-increasing tyranny and oppression of capitalism only upon the industrial field, leaving the powers of government in the hands of their capitalistic masters.

"As a result, capitalistic legislatures have passed laws entirely in the interests of the capitalist class; the courts have issued injunctions against labor; the president and governors, elected by capitalistic parties, use their power to crush our laboring brothers and oft times shoot them down in cold blood; and brutal Pinkerton detectives are kept on the trail of labor unions to assist a merciless commercialism in its efforts to intimidate and tyranize over the laboring classes.

"Fighting at Terrible Odds."

"So far the labor unions have fought their battles upon the economic field, using only the weapons of the strike and boycott. We have fought at terrible odds and at terrible cost. Henceforth it is determined to carry the fight onto the political field, where the poorest laborer wields a weapon, the exact equal in power to that of the mightiest capitalist, namely, the ballot.

"But, having determined upon political action, we are beset by innumerable perils. Every political party is proclaiming more loudly than ever its friendliness and allegiance to labor. Every party seeks our votes. It is, therefore, of supreme importance for the labor unions, just entering this new epoch of history, and adopting this new method of struggle, to avoid the political snares which its old enemies will surely lay to entrap us.

"We therefore reiterate with renewed earnestness and emphasis the spirit of the declarations of the American Labor Union, and the Western Federation of Miners, at Denver, and reaffirm by the Montana State Trades and Labor Council at Livingston, calling especial attention to the following:

For the Socialist Party.

"First: That it is independent political action which is the only hope of the working class; that we must stand together in a political party distinct from and opposed to all capitalistic parties; and that fusion and compromise of all kinds whatsoever must be shunned as the very trick by which capitalism will seek to divide our vote, disintegrate our movement and fasten its ruthless tyranny upon us and our children after us. The Republican, and Democratic, and Fusion parties are every one controlled absolutely by great capitalistic interests that seek our votes only that they may continue the present wicked system that plunders the working class.

"Second: That there is but one program and one party in the world today that stands uncompromisingly for labor and its rights, namely, the Socialist Party of America; and that therefore every union man and every laboring man should stand unflinchingly for that party and vote its ticket.

"The petty social reforms offered by the old capitalistic parties will not relieve the laboring class. The collective ownership of the material means of production and distribution, the abolition of the wage system, the elimination of unearned incomes, and the Co-operative Commonwealth—this alone will relieve labor.

"We therefore call upon laboring men everywhere to study the platform of the Socialist party and the program of Socialism, and vote for them alone."

Everything points to the growth of a powerful and intelligent Socialist movement in Montana, a movement that cannot be weakened, divided, or misled by the corrupt devices of a Clark nor the false pretences of a Heinze, Montana may be expected, at the next election, to take its place among the states casting the largest and most solid vote for Socialism.

GOOD FOR HOGAN.

The Baltimore "Sun" reports that at a union Thanksgiving meeting held in the United Brethren Church of Baltimore, in which ten congregations united in the service, the Rev. J. C. Hogan was asked to read the President's Thanksgiving proclamation. He read until he came to this statement: "Rarely has any people enjoyed greater prosperity than we are now enjoying."

Here Mr. Hogan stopped, and said:

"You will excuse me if I pause long enough to say that it would be a violation of my conscience to allow an error, a half truth or a misstatement to pass without detection and notice on an occasion like this. I refer to this statement: 'Rarely has any people enjoyed greater prosperity than we are now enjoying.'

"That is strictly true so far as the blessings of the Almighty are concerned, but on the man-made side it is not true. The last census report says that the average annual wage of skilled and unskilled labor combined is only $350, which is less than $1 a day. The pay for labor in Baltimore is $1.25 a day, and on that sum a man is expected to keep a family, pay rent and grow prosperous! And you all know that right here in our community we have abundance of child slavery in the mills. How much of prosperity each of you have can easily be discovered by figuring out how much better off financially you are now than you were a year ago to-day.

"This very day the Salvation Army and other organizations will try to supply charity dinners to thousands and tens of thousands of fellow-beings in all the large cities throughout the United States who are willing or under the necessity of accepting a pauper dinner. We should not forget nor overlook these facts. With these qualifications I will resume reading the President's proclamation."

We do not know what foolish things the Rev. Hogan may have said in the past about the labor question—most ministers have said a great many foolish things about it—or what he may say in the future, but he certainly spoke truth this time.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Official Report of the Socialist Vote.

Closing Rallies of the Municipal Campaign—A Resolution Condemning the Action of the San Francisco Comrades Being Voted on.

BOSTON, Mass., December 1.—The official announcement of the vote cast in Massachusetts at the election on November 4 shows that out of a total vote of 308,689, the Republican candidate for Governor polled 196,276; the Democratic 159,156; the Socialist, 33,629; Socialist Labor, 6,079; Prohibition, 3,588. Last year the total vote was 324,526, showing a total increase in vptes of 74,163. Of this the Republicans polled 10,467 increase; the Democrats 44,174; the Socialists 22,958; while the Socialist Labor decreased 2,819, the Prohibitionists 1242. The Socialist Party thus received about eight and one-half per cent. of the total vote; the Socialist Labor Party a fraction over one and one-half per cent. Three per cent is required for official standing.

All the candidates for state offices on the Socialist ticket ran ahead of the candidate for Governor, the vote being as follows: Adams, for Lieutenant-Governor, 40,709; Buckland, for Secretary of State, 36,159; Taylor, for Treasurer, 34,589; Packard, for Auditor, 34,948; Attorney-General, Fenner, 34,883. This disproves the claim that the Socialist vote for Governor resulted from dissatisfaction with the Democratic nominee.

The vote for congressional candidates is as follows; First District, Koehler, of Adams, 1,250! Second, Wrenn, of Springfield, 2,779; Third, Gibbs, of Worcester, 1,005; Fourth, Mullen, of Clinton, 2,739; Fifth, Wilkinson, of Methuen, 1,133; Sixth, Littlefield, 2,679; Seventh, Turner, 2,811; Eighth, White, of Somerville, 1,634; Ninth, McVey, 1,581; Tenth, Sherman, This disproves the claim that the So-Koehler, of Adams, 1,250; Second, 3,506; Eleventh, Cutting, 2,230; Twelfth, Hayward, 2,683; Fourteenth, Skinner of Brockton, 4,300. The Socialist Party nominated in thirteen out of fourteen districts and polled 30,399 votes. The Socialist Labor Party nominated in four districts and received 2,141 votes.

For Councillors: First District, Bloomstrand, 5,120; Second, Bates, 6,041; Third, Wolfer, of Somerville, 4,833; Fourth, Lynch, of Boston, 6,216; Fifth, Gordon, of Beverly, 5,542; Sixth, Richardson, of Lowell, 3,872; Seventh, Kelly, of Warren, 4,013; Eighth, Neumann, of Holyoke, 4,041. In the eight districts the Socialist Party polled 39,578 votes. The Socialist Labor Party did not nominate.

The highest vote for Senator polled on the Socialist ticket was that of Carlton S. Beals, of Brockton, in the Second Plymouth District, who has 2,927 to his credit, running 1,100 behind the Republican and over 1,300 ahead of the Democrat. Drew, of Hanover, in the First Plymouth District, came next with 1808, running 600 ahead of the Democrat; Bellefeuille, of Haverhill, in the Fourth Essex District, followed with 1787 votes and Galvin, of Boston, in the Second Suffolk, with 1781; Greene, of Leominster, in the Third Leominster District, polled 1,179. Galvin was only 240 behind the Republican candidate. The Socialist Party nominated in thirty-four of the forty districts; total vote 35,433. The Socialist Labor Party nominated in four districts and polled 903 votes.

John Spargo's tour in Massachusetts ends to-night in Springfield. His lectures were successful, the Brockton meeting being one of the largest ever held in the city and was preceded by an immense parade. MacCartney and Brown also spoke.

Reports from Haverhill and Brockton indicate that there will be good news from those places to-morrow. The state committee has been able to forward some financial help, much of which has come from New York through the assistance of Comrade M. Winchevsky who sent $47.47 as the result of an entertainment gotten up by himself, Comrades Dutman, Kean, McHugh and others.

The closing rallies of the municipal m-cfiac o, M acfie 4e -so o;E w mM campaign will be held as follows:

Saturday, December 6, Somerville, Bacon Hall, Hill Building, Union Square, Representative Carey; Lowell, Jackson Hall, John C. Chase.

Sunday, December 7, Roddy Hall, Market street, Brighton, Representative Carey, John W. Brown.

Monday, December 8, Boylston Station, Jamaica Plain, Representative Carey; Highland District, John C. Chase, Dr. H. A. Gibbs, Mrs. S. H. Merrifield and Patrick Mahoney.

Lynn, Laster's Hall, Representative MacCartney, John W. Brown, Charles H. Coulter. The Lynn meeting will be preceded by a parade starting at Socialist headquarters, 85 Monroe street, in which comrades in Boston, Salem, Beverly and surrounding cities and towns are invited to participate.

Organizer White gives his time this week to Salem, Lynn and Boston, closing the campaign at East Boston next Monday night.

Comrade William J. Coyne, who made such a good race for Representative in the Brighton District, has been elected delegate from the local division of railway conductors to the national convention to be held in Pittsburg in the near future. Coyne has become quite well known among the conductors through his contributions to the national organ and he will carry his contest for Socialism into the convention.

The local branches of the Boston club are considering a resolution referred by the Central Committee condemning the action of the Socialist Party in San Francisco for its alliance with the Union Labor Party.

Since writing my last letter, I have learned on good authority that the secret circular sent out to stir up religious prejudice against the Socialists was promulgated by the Democrats—which was to be expected.

(Special Dispatch to The Worker.)

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 2.—Coulter, Socialist candidate for Mayor, carries Brockton by eleven hundred plurality. Flanders, Socialist candidate for Mayor of Haverhill, defeated by fourteen votes.

Brockton vote for Mayor: Coulter, Socialist Party, 4,367; Republican, 3,267; Democrat, 533. Also three Socialist aldermen elected out of seven and eight councilmen out of twenty-one.

Haverhill vote for Mayor: Republican, 2,352; Socialist, 2,338; Democrat, 1,663; Berry, Deleonite, 20. Socialists will demand a recount. Two councilmen, school committeeman and assistant assessor re-elected. Ward five gives increased majority.

Returns from Fitchburg, Springfield and Quincy show Socialists decreased on Mayor, but vote for aldermen held up average of Chase's vote for Governor in November.

THE ELIMINATION OF THE SMALL STORE.

The number of retail stores of all kinds in Boston was greater in comparison with the population in the year 1875 than has been the case since, there having been then one store to every 125 of population. In 1890 the ratio was one to 149 of population and in 1895 one to 142.

Of the 4169 employees in 1898 in department stores, 2114, or 50.71 per cent., had been previously employed in separate retail stores; and of 417 heads of departments, 48 had been proprietors of such stores before filling their present positions. Of the remainder, 347 had not been so employed and 22 did not answer the question.

In 1898 there were in the city of Boston a total of 3947 small retail stores and 19 department stores. The department stores conducted a total of 417 departments. Thus they practically controlled about 10 per cent. of all business, although constituting only one-half of one per cent. of the total establishments.

The foregoing figures are taken from the report of the state Bureau of Labor of the state of Massachusetts and are therefore official. Since 1898 the department stores have no doubt made still greater inroads upon the small dealers. What is true of Boston is equaly so of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and in fact every other large city in the country. In cities of the size of New York and Chicago the development towards the department store is even more advanced.

Thus we have another instance of how the great army of the working class is being augmented through capitalist concentration, not only on the industrial field but in the commercial sphere as well.

This once more emphasises the correctness of the socialist position. Capitalism is doing away with private property with rapid strides. The expropriation of the bulk of the people will soon be complete and the expropriation of the handful of capitalists by the masses of the expropriated—the working class, is the next step to be taken. This is the historic mission of the working class, to be carried into effect by the Socialist (Social Democratic) Party. The late election is proof that the work is well under way and that the working class is getting ready to demand their own—the full product of their toil, which we can only have by substituting the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution in place of the privately owned capital of to-day. Speed the day!

THE INTERNATIONAL TRUST.

"Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 28.—A financial paper announces that the glass works of Courcelles have passed under the control of a Pittsburg company."

This brief dispatch marks one more step in the international organization of capital. With the American Glass Trust controlling Belgian glass works, the Standard Oil Company dividing the world-marked by treaty with the Russian petroleum capitalists, the American Tobacco Trust owning factories in Austria and absorbing the British combine, the Steel Trust and the Edison and Westinghouse companies running iron and steel mills and electrical works in Russia, the Belmonts getting concessions for mines and railways and cotton mills in China—how ridiculous it is for Republican and Democratic politicians to talk of "curbing the criminal trusts" by revising the tariff.

As Bebel put it in a speech in the Reichstag, there are but two nations in the world to-day—the nation of the workers and the nation of the capitalists. They are necessarily at war, the world over, and peace can come only by the victory of the working class and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth.

GLASS SILVERERS UNION.

At the last meeting of the Glass Silverers Union of New York twelve new members were admitted, which makes a total membership of about ninety. Thirty-two shops out of thirty-four are represented in the union. The next meeting will take place Monday, Dec. 15, at 85 West Third street.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

Every member of the Social Democratic Party in New York should make it his business to attend the general meeting of the local for discussion of the California affair on December 6, and the meeting for the daily on Monday, December 8.

For mechanical reasons, election returns from several distant states and details of the Socialist vote in nearer cities and towns are unavoidably omitted from this issue. Next week The Worker will contain a summary of the Socialist vote throughout the nation.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

The next issue of The Worker, that of December 14, will contain, among other matter, four features which will make it of especial value as a propaganda paper.

The first will be a condensed summary of the vote polled by our party in the late election as compared with that cast in 1900—the vote of the nation by states, that of this state by counties, and that of this city by boroughs and assembly districts. This matter will be printed in a prominent place and in such form as to be readily comprehensible to the casual reader.

The second will be a carefully prepared reply to the Hearst Manifesto, "Labor—Democracy's Natural Ally." As Mr. Hearst is already vigorously preparing his presidential boom and attempting to muster all the forces now vaguely in sympathy with the Socialist movement under his standard of confusion and reaction, it is important that the Socialist Party should begin at once to meet his insidious attack with systematic and intelligent argument.

The third feature will be an article on the relation of the Socialist Party to the trade union movement. This article will be addressed alike to Socialists who are members of trade unions and to union men who are not yet Socialists, treating the quotation from a basis of fundamental principles and showing just what the Socialist Party asks and what it does not ask of the unions, of what the party conceived to be its duties to the union movement, and of what should be the conduct of Socialists as members of the unions.

This issue will also contain a brief statement in regard to the party name and the difference between the Socialist Party (or, as it is called in New York, the Social Democratic Party) and the Socialist Labor Party.

The fourth special feature will be an essay entitled "What Socialism Really Is," which will be a brief but comprehensive summary of all phases of the Socialist position. This will be especially suited to those who have read some propaganda literature but need to have their ideas of scientific Socialism clarified and systematized. It will also serve as a good introduction to the study of Socialism. This article will afterwards be published in pamphlet form.

Organizations and comrades wishing to get a supply of the issue of December 14 for distribution should get their orders to this office, if possible, before December 10, in order to ensure prompt delivery.

THE WAY TO MEET PARTY PROBLEMS.

We quoted with approval, last week, a part of a letter from Comrade Smith of Montana, commenting in a general way upon the internal party questions now confronting us. We cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of taking such a clear and sane view of these questions as was shown in the words of the extract refererd to.

It is not to be denied that we have grave problems of party policy, organization, and discipline to deal with. We have always had such problems, in one form or another, and it is to be expected that we shall have them arising in new forms in the future. It is inevitable that there should be wide divergences of opinion on such questions; it has been so in the past history of the Socialist movement, here and in Europe, and presumably it will continue to be so in the years to come. We could not wish it to be otherwise. Not only has the party survived differences of opinion and mutual misunderstandings, often growing even into bitter discussions—not only has it survived these things, but it has grown in numerical strength, grown in self-reliance and clearness of purpose, grown enormously in influence, through and by such experiences, especially through and by the responsibility repeatedly thrown upon the rank and file to exercise their independent judgment in the decision of such questions. "It is difference of opinion," we are told, "that makes horse races." It makes more than that. It is chiefly by exchanging, comparing, attacking or defending, and so sifting out and correcting their divergent opinions that men have made all their intellectual progress. If there should ever be complete unanimity in the ranks of the Socialist movement, the movement would then have reached the limit of its development and would be ready to die.

Speaking of the party questions now before us, we have particularly to recognize a tendency, in many places and in various matters, to laxity of organization and discipline and of party policy—an excessive laxity, as we believe—which is partly, no doubt, in the nature of a reaction from the excessive discipline—or, rather, the abuse of discipline—which prevailed in the larger portion of the movement four years ago. This tendency is not, however, merely a reaction; it results partly from the great increase in the numerical strength of the party organization, the large number of new and inexperienced comrades who have come into our ranks. Partly, also, it arises out of new conditions surrounding us, resulting from the growth of our vote and from the development of capitalism and of the general labor movement.

All three of these causes—reaction from a former extreme of rigidity, the presence of a large number of inexperienced men in our organization, and the temptations and menaces presented by new external conditions—have apparently worked together in producing the present situation in California which is now being so widely discussed.

Too many of our comrades take one or the other of two widely different but almost equally false positions on this and similar questions.

Many, even of those who do not approve of the action taken in California, yet deprecate any general discussion of the affair, urging that the decision must be left entirely to the comrades immediately concerned and that their decision, whatever it be, must be accepted by the party as a whole without protest or criticism; some of them loudly cry "intolerance," "narrowness," De Leonism," if anyone dares to call in question the wisdom of the California comrades. The actual motive of those who take this "laissez faire" position, as revealed whenever they offer serious argument instead of epithets, is pure timidity—fear that, if such questions are freely discussed, some comrades may leave the party or become inactive, some sympathizers may be deterred from joining us, some votes, perhaps, may be lost.

On the other hand, there are some—by no means so many—who will brook no delay, who are unwilling to consider the possibility that the California comrades may have been partly in the right or, at least, partly excusable, who are unwilling even to give them an opportunity to right their mistakes for themselves, but who clamor for the immediate application of the most severe measures of party discipline or for a complete change in the form of organization of the party. And their motive, as with those who go to the opposite extreme, is pure timidity—lack of faith in the rank and file, fear that, if the smallest deviation from party principles is not summarily punished, the whole party will "fall from grace."

Each of these extremes tends to intensify the other, and both are equally far from the spirit that carried the party so well through the extraordinary crisis of 1899 and the "unity" troubles of the following year. The Worker takes this occasion to appeal to its readers—comprising, undoubtedly, the majority of the party members and a much larger number of sympathizers in more or less close touch with the party—to avoid alike the mistake of apathy and the mistake of impetuosity, to bear this responsibility as Socialists (sometimes a painful one) by taking an active part in considering and deciding internal party questions as well as in carrying on propaganda outside, and, on the other hand, to keep cool through it all, to preserve their sense of perspective and proportion, not to forget the high aims of the movement in their careful consideration of its methods.

For us, we have implicit faith in democracy and in the ultimate good feeling and good judgment of the many. Had we not, we should sink into pessimism. We know that each one of us often, sometimes many or even all of us, will make mistakes. The only men who make no mistakes are dead men. While men live they can discover and right their mistakes. The movement lives beyond us all, and both in and above all of us; and if the movement is a right one, in harmony with the laws of evolution, as we are sure it is, it will outlive and correct very many mistakes and profit by the experience.

We have heard men say that such-and-such a man or such-and-such an event "has put the movement back ten years" and that such-and-such a proposed action would be fatal to the movement. Against these apprehensions we set the words of Marx, who, when asked, "How can you be so patient, seeing how slowly the work goes on and how many fools we have to deal with?" replied, "Ah, if you had been impatient as long as I have you would be patient, too."

The true Socialist is never discouraged. He knows "the sweet uses of adversity" and "takes Fortune's buffets and rewards with equal favor." He fears nothing, because there is nothing for him to fear. He says with Galileo, "The world moves, nevertheless." He knows that it will move after he is dead or though he should try to stop it, and yet he never forgets that he can and must help it to move aright. So he works away, tireless and cheerful, neither growing careless when things go well nor fretful when they go ill, sure always of the success to which he is contributing.

It is this attitude of mind, so common among experienced Socialists, resulting from our philosophy and our historic mission, that fills the capitalists with wonder, that compels them to respect the movement in proportion as they hate and fear it, and that enables the movement to advance steadily in spite of all overt or covert opposition. It is this attitude of mind, accordingly, that we would especially urge our comrades to develop, that the problems before us may be solved with the minimum of delay and of friction.

WHAT TO DO IN THE CALIFORNIA MATTER.

All the information that we have received tends to confirm our opinion, expressed in our issue of November 9, that the San Francisco and Los Angeles comrades have made a serious mistake (whether judged by ultimate results or by the standard of immediate political expediency) and have seriously violated Socialist principles—or, if some may quarrel with that phrase, have seriously departed from fundamental Socialist tactics—in entering into a virtual fusion with the Union Labor party, exchanging their support in local contests for the support of the U. L. P. in the state election.

The increase of our vote in California has evidently been much below the normal ratio for this year in the country at large. This may be taken as proving that the adoption of the fusion policy has seriously—though, no doubt, only temporarily—disorganized the Socialist movement and deprived it of that aggressive, uncompromising, revolutionary character which is the greatest source of its strength.

The failure to make a large gain in the vote may be taken as proving more than this—proving that the Union Labor party did not have the power of cohesion to carry out the pledge of its state convention, that it was not really a party at all, that what moral strength it had was given it by the influence of the Socialists in it or in sympathy with it, and that its organization was actually controlled, on the whole, by capitalist politicians.

Perhaps the experience need not be regretted. The party at large will have learned a lesson by it, and that good may more than counterbalance the harm that has been done locally. If the experiment had not been made this year in California, it would probably have been made next year in some other state, perhaps at a more critical moment.

The lesson of this affair, as of many others, more or less similar, may be summed up in these words: THERE IS NO SHORT CUT TO SOCIALISM. We have to get votes for the Socialist ticket, indeed. But we can get more votes for the Socialist ticket by going straight ahead making thorough Socialists than in any other way; and even if we could get any considerable number of votes in any other way they would not be worth getting.

Completely as we must condemn the course followed in California, we do not indulge in any sweeping condemnation of the comrades concerned in it. Perhaps none of us can be sure that, under exactly the same circumstances, we might not have fallen into the same error.

Still less are we inclined to join in calling upon the National Committee to revoke the California state charter and reorganize the party in the state, or to undertake any similar drastic measures. The matter will undoubtedly be taken up and fully considered at the annual meeting of the full National Committee in January. But we see good reason to believe that very many of the California comrades, even of those who supported the fusion policy, have come to see that it was a mistake; we see good reason to hope that, by the time the National Committee meets, the party in California will be well on the way toward righting that mistake for itself and inaugurating a vigorous campaign on the strictest Socialist lines. Doubtless there will be a good deal of hot fighting in California before this is done, but we think it will be done. Without for a moment questioning the right and duty of the national organization to intervene, should such intervention be found necessary in order to restore the state movement to its right lines, we would advise that no hasty action be taken, that every reasonable opportunity be given the California comrades to set their house in order for themselves.

Least of all would we join in the demand rather imperatively raised in some quarters for a hasty and radical change of the form of party organization. But this is a matter that requires fuller discussion, and may be deferred for another issue.

WAYLAND'S METHODS.

The Seattle "Socialist" publishes a letter from a prominent comrade, written from the Pennsylvania strike field, stating that after freight charges of $3.85 had been paid on literature received from Wayland's "Appeal to Reason" office, when the literature was opened it was found to consist of pamphlets entitled "God is Love and Man's Life Endless," and treating of spiritualism. The comrade states that the literature was forthwith "dumped into the swiftly flowing Lehigh." The "Socialist" gives a facsimile of the title page of the pamphlet and an extract from it. These pamphlets are literature paid for by the "Appeal to Reason" Anthracite Strike Propaganda Fund of over $1,000 which Wayland's readers contributed. The worthless pamphlets thus got rid of were printed at Ruskin Colony when Wayland was in that community.

The inexplicable publication of the S. L. P. emblem in the "Appeal" before election also confused the minds of voters and injured the cause wherever the paper was distributed.

Wayland persistently advises his readers to carry on the iniative and referendum propaganda independent of the Socialist movement—a position which cannot be consistently taken by anyone who believes that the emancipation of the working class can only be accomplished by a class—conscious political party of the working class. In the last number of the "Appeal" Wayland advises his readers to join in the iniative and referendum agitation of Shibley's Non-Partisan Federation.

COMPENSATION.

Hail to my lost self-hood! for it is lost.
I shall never be able to write the books or make the pictures I desired to give to the world;
I found not opportunity, and so my higher development is lost,
But I shall find compensation in struggling for better conditions for those who come after me.
The faces of glad children and of emancipated workers shall be my pictures,
And the joy of a new-born earth, with the poverty and tragedy gone, shall be my books;
Then the glad world, made glad through my loss, shall truly write my books and paint my pictures.
It is enough. I rejoice in the joy and opportunity soon to be.

THE CALIFORNIA AFFAIR.

In the words used last week in introducing Comrade Strobell's comments conveyed the impression that he defended or aproved the action of the California comrades, we wish to correct that impression. Such was not Comrade Strobell's position, nor did we wish to make it appear so.

Comrade P. J. Cooney of Brooklyn, formerly of Montana, writes: "To find Job Harriman countenancing fusion is indeed a sad revelation, especially when we examine what the result has been—the election of two men who received Democratic support. It is strange indeed that anyone cannot see that the 'foggy' workingman is just as much a danger to the Socialist movement as the man with middle-class instincts."

Comrade Nolan of Herkimer, N. Y., writes: "We want no fusion of any kind. We need more party-owned papers and better education of the rank and file, so that they will not be swayed by any prominent leader who may happen to appear. I hope the party in California will break away from this labor party. If not, then I hope to see their state charter revoked and the party start again with whatever men will stand for our party alone."

A San Francisco comrade whom we do not feel at liberty to name, not having his explicit consent, though he would probably make no objection should we do so, writes: "We are in a fair way to straighten things out in this city and then we are going to start to straighten things out in the state, and I feel sure that California will stand against state autonomy and fusion at the next national convention."

Comrade W. J. White, of Newcastle, Pa., writes: "Your stand on the situation in California is O. K., and the rank and file have no greater question facing them than the one of racing after some will-o'-the-wisp that promises votes. While we want votes we do not want them at the cost of principle. Let us be Socialists first, last and always."

"Riverside, Cal., Oct. 31, 1902.

"To the Acting S. E. C. and all Socialists of California—

"Comrades:—Local Riverside of the Socialist Party hereby desires to call the attention of the acting S. E. C. and all Socialists throughout the state to the fact that as the appointment of the acting S. E. C. is illegal and without authority, that it is not qualified to submit any referendum to the party or to canvas the vote and declare the result thereof.

"Therefore, we demand that you take no further steps in the matter of the constitution framed by the late San Francisco convention as any result of such action will only add to the present chaotic condition of the Party in this State. Such constitution adopted in such manner would not be the constitution of the party, will be without authority and will not be accepted by any genuine Socialist in the state.

"Adopted unanimously at a regular meeting of Riverside Local, Oct. 30th, 1902, and ordered sent to Acting S. E. C., the party papers and all locals of the state.

"Whereas, the Los Angeles "Socialist" has failed to publish the resolutions adopted by Riverside Local on October 12th and do not reply to a registered letter on the subject sent by Local Riverside, and

"Whereas, it appears that they will refuse to publish any resolutions derogatory to the acts of the late San Francisco convention,

"Therefore, be it resolved that Local Riverside requests all locals throughout the state to communicate direct with Local Riverside in reference to the subject of the resolutions of October 12th and also the above communication.

"Adopted unanimously by Local Riverside, Oct. 30th, 1902."

F. M. BORDEN,
Corresponding and Financial Secretary.

Comrade Borden writes:

"These resolutions set forth the deliberate judgment of Local Riverside, endorsed by a number of other locals unanimously, absolutely devoid of any prejudice or bias, and they simply cite facts in which the 'wayfarer tho' a fool need not err.' Our opponents do not dispute a single proposition contained in those resolutions. Instead of those resolutions you publish communications, first from one who evidently cares nothing for principle, but simply wishes to vindicate a local quarrel (I refer to Comrade Apple), and second, one from Comrade Harriman, who, with his associates, simply wishes to control the state organization to further their own local ends. I desire to say that the situation in California is more serious than you realize. All we ask is that you treat us fairly by publishing our side of the case."

"Whereas, Section 6, Article 3, of the constitution of the Socialist Party of California provides that 'In case of the resignation or removal of the whole or part of the State Executive Committee, the local at the seat of the Committee shall fill the vacancies as provided under Section 3 in this Article;' and

"Whereas, The appointment by the San Francisco convention of a State Executive Committee was entirely without authority and a serious usurpation of authority; contrary to all the principles of Socialism:

"Therefore, Be it resolved, by Local Riverside at a regular meeting of the Local, that it is the duty of Local San Francisco to proceed immediately to the election of a State Executive Committee as directed by the Constitution of the party in Section 3, Article 3, and that Local Riverside earnestly requests Local San Francisco to take this course to save the party from scandal and disruption.

"Whereas, Section 4, Article 4, of the Constitution of the Socialist Party of California, provides that 'All acts of the State convention shall be submitted to the Locals for approval by a general vote.'

"Therefore, Be it resolved, by Local Riverside of the Socialist Party of California, that the late convention which met at San Francisco had no right or authority to annul the old constitution made and ratified by the party and make a new one and to immediately put it in force before it had been ratified by a referendum vote of the party.

"And be it further resolved, That a rebuke should be administered to the leaders of the party by the members for this violation of the most cherished principle and safeguard of the party and that the most effective way to administer this rebuke is for the locals to refrain from voting on the constitution framed and put in force by the San Francisco convention.

"The reason advanced by Local Riverside for this procedure is this:

"If the party leaders should wish to put through any scheme which they believed would not be sanctioned by the membership of the party, all they would need to do would be to call a convention, amend the constitution, put this amendment into immediate effect, put off the referendum vote far enough to give them time to accomplish their nefarious designs and then snap their fingers and laugh at the party membership.

"We do not urge the taking advantage of a simple technical point; it is a serious violation of principle and Socialists cannot afford to tolerate anything of that kind.

"The attempted fusion of the Socialist Party and the Union Labor party of Los Angeles in the coming election may or may not have been the motive for this unseemly haste in abrogating the old constitution and putting in force a new one; the dangerous principle remains the same and should be rebuked in unmistakable terms, otherwise the same thing will be done again with perhaps far more serious consequences.

"All of which is respectfully submitted by Riverside Local for the serious consideration of the Socialists of California.

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions and explanation be sent to the acting State Executive Committee, National Committee, party press and locals of California.

"Carried—Twelve voting for, three against."

F. M. BORDEN,
Recording and Financial Secretary.

CAPITALISM CAUSES PROSTITUTION.

"The starvation wages paid to young women in stores, factories, restaurants, etc., compel many of them to earn money elsewhere and when they are thrown upon their own resources unequipped by any training to earn their living the temptation is very strong to barter away their virtue for what may seem to them adequate money rewards. .....Prostitution is very largely the effect of the unfortunate circumstances of these poor girls, and the material for brothels is largely recruited from the stores, the factories and the sweatshops where they must work many and weary hours for cruelly small pay."—James F. Scott, M. D., in The Sexual Instinct.

POVERTY CAUSES INTEMPERANCE.

Rum is at once the refuge and the snare of want, destitution and sorrow. ....Exhausting toil under unfavorable circumstances as regards heat and confinement pre-disposes to drink, as in the case of foundrymen, workers in rolling mills, stokers and the like..... Monotony of occupation, as in the case of cobblers, tailors, bakers, printers, etc.; especially when associated with close, ill-ventilated, work rooms and long hours of toil, exerts a strong predisposing influence:.....Bodily weakness and inability to cope with the daily tasks imposed by necessity impel great numbers of persons of feeble constitution, especially among the laboring classes to the abuse of alcohol.—Dr. James C. Wilson, in Pepper's System of Medicine.

ECONOMIC CAUSES OF INSANITY.

Dr. Charles F. Folsom, in his treatise on mental diseases in Pepper's System of Medicine (vol. v., p. 116), tells us that insanity is greatest where the concentration of poulation brings with it extremes of poverty and wealth. "In the struggle for existence, however, physical strength no longer wholly wins the day, but also those faculties which involve great mental and bodily strain in mines, factories, crowded tenements, counting rooms, offices; in the eager, excited over-study for prizes or rank in over-heated, badly ventilated schools, and, indeed, in every walk or life..... Degeneration due to the reproduction of poor stock is intensified by intermarriage. Luxury, idleness, excesses, syphilis, debility, drunkenness, poverty, disease and over-work produce vitiated constitutions in which varying types of insanity appear in various nations and climates."

THE WASTE OF WAR.

Counting only the armies of the six great powers on a peace footing, they amount to nearly three million of men; and if we add the men permanently attached to the several fleets, we shall have considerably more than three millions of men in the prime of life withdrawn from productive labor and devoted, nominally to defense, but really to attack and destruction. This, however, is only a portion of the loss. The expense of keeping these three millions of men in food and clothing, in weapons and all the paraphernalia of war; of keeping in a state of readiness the ships, fortifications and batteries, of continually renewing the stores of all kinds; of pensions to retired officers and wounded men; and whatever other expenditures these vast military organizations entail, amounts to an annual sum of more than one hundred and eighty millions sterling. Now, as the average wages of a working man or his annual expenditures—considering the low wages and mode of living in Russia, Italy, Austria and the other Continental States—cannot be more than, say, twelve shillings a week, or thirty pounds a year, an expenditure of 180,000 implies the constant labor of at least six million other men in supporting this monstrous and utterly barbarous system of national armaments. If to this number we add those employed in making good the public or private property destroyed in every war, or in smaller military or naval operations in Europe, we shall have about ten millions of men withdrawn from all useful or reproductive work; their lives directly devoted or indirectly to the Moloch of war, and who must therefore be supported by the remainder of the working community.—Dr. Alfred R. Wallace, in The Wonderful Century.

—"Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God," it has been said. Opposition to class rule is loyalty to mankind.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

New Orleans Times-Democrat

What will be remembered as easily the most interesting—and we had almost said the most alarming—feature in the convention of the American Federation of Labor of 1902 was revealed Thursday afternoon when the convention by a vote of 4,744 to 4,344 rejected this resolution:

"Resolved, That this twenty-second annual convention of the American Federation of Labor advise the working people to organize their economic and political power to secure for labor the full equivalent of its toil, and the overthrowal of the wage system and establishing an industrial co-operative democracy."

Although defeated, the resolution is especially significant by reason of the great number of votes recorded in favor of its adoption. Out of a total of 9,088, the pro-Socialists lost by the exceedingly slender majority of 400 votes. In other words, the American Federation of Labor, as it is to-day constituted, is almost evenly divided on the question whether or not Socialism should be indorsed. To be exact, 47.68 per cent. of the Federation is in favor of, and 52.32 per cent. is opposed to, Socialism.

These statistics are of themselves sufficient, to make labor leaders throughout the country pause and reflect whither they are tending. The speeches made in the convention of last Thursday were overwhelmingly in favor of indorsing the Socialistic movement. Delegate Barnes compressed into two sentences the creed of the pro-Socialist advocates. "Let us tell Mr. Morgan," said he, "that, to use his own words, there is nothing to arbitrate. We want your (his) mines and your (his) railroads for the people of this country." Delegate Layton said that "the time had come when supplication should cease and action should begin." "The greatest power of the union, or laboring man," said he, "is the ballot. It should be used and used for the attainment of the workingman's ambition." The note sounded in these two speeches was echoed in the remarks of other delegates; and but for the vigorous speech made by Mr. Gompers the Federation would unquestionably have thrown the weight of its influence in favor of "the overthrowing of the wage system and the establishing of an industrial co-operative democracy."

In straight-flung words, Mr. Gompers pointed out that Socialism had more than once been opposed to trades unionism; that the socialistic spirit was essentially the spirit of negation, and that the Federation should shun Socialism as it would leprosy. "Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "Study Socialism! Why, we have graduated from it long ago." This was Mr. Gompers' position; and by taking it promptly he stemmed the tide of Socialism that was running high in the convention and contrived to defeat the resolution. It required no little courage and no little capacity to do what Mr. Gompers did, and his attitude and conduct can hardly be too highly commended. The victory won by him was, however, dearly bought. Above the smoke of the battle one fact looms large in the public eye, namely, that in a deliberate body of representative American workingmen 47.68 per cent. are in favor of Socialism in the United States.

Toledo Times.

The defeat at New Orleans of an attempt on the part of the Socialists to get control of the American Federation of Labor will be taken by many to mean that the Socialist movement is not as threatening as it seemed to be. It would naturally be expected to be strongest among a mixed body of representative workingmen, who are supposed usually to stand rather for the discontent of the classes they lead than the normal mood of the great body of these classes. However, the result at New Orleans shows a great gain for the cause of Socialism, and indicates that before very long the preachers of this faith will dominate this, the greatest labor organization of modern times. The fact that this comparatively new political propaganda was able at a convention of representative workingmen from every part of the United States and from every branch of toil, to muster more than forty-five per cent. of the votes is significant of developments which cannot but be regarded with great anxiety. It doesn't necessarily mean that Socialism is to overwhelm the country, for the doctrines it proclaims must ever have a limited adherence. It does mean, however, that the sentiment for Socialism is one with which the country must soon earnestly reckon, and it might as well get itself ready for that time.

There are not wanting other evidences of even a more striking character that Socialism is forging to the front and is making very remarkable gains in strength, not only among the laboring classes, but among all classes. The vote at the recent November election presented striking evidence of this fact. In Toledo the votes of the Socialist Party, which by no means include all the Socialists, showed a gain of more than one hundred and fifty per cent. In Ohio, these gains were generally indicated, chiefly in the centers of population. In Massachusetts, which is counted to be the most intelligent state in the union, the growth of the Socialist vote was so large as to be called phenomenal.

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

Congressman Samuel L. Powers, in a recent address on the results of the November elections made several noticeable remarks on the strength of the Socialistic vote. Mr. Powers is a Representative of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and says the Bay State Socialists, without any leading issue to call out their full strength, piled up a vote of 40,000. A party which has attained the proportions of 40,000 votes in the three years since it was first organized, constitutes a factor of the political situation to be taken seriously into account. Apart from the numerical strength shown by this new element of our politics, Mr. Powers seems to attach a good deal of importance to the character of its members.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Socialism which turns up strong in Massachusetts, is not exactly a thing to be laughed at, notwithstanding the overwhelming overthrow of the fakir Tom Johnson in Ohio in the election a few days ago.

The Independent.

Besides being confined to the two political parties aforementioned, the Socialistic movement in the United States bids fair to honeycomb the trades unions. Only last week at the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor at New Orleans nearly half of the delegates voted for a resolution in favor of Socialism. The Fabian movement in this country has practically died out and Communism and Bellamyism are now a matter of history. Even Populism as a distinct political force has had its day. Political Socialism, however, is growing among all classes, except the farmers and capitalists, and if the American Federation of Labor should ever renounce its past and present policy of working along economic lines to the exclusion of politics, the Socialist movement would then receive such an impetus as might disorganize the present great political parties of the nation.

Pittsburg Dispatch.

The fact that at the convention of the Federation of Labor a motion to embark that organization into politics on a Socialist platform was defeated by a margin of but 400 out of 9,000 votes is widely alluded to as indicating the growth of Socialist ideas. It is a very strong indication in that direction and it is corroborated by the fact that in the late elections the Socialists vote was much stronger than ever before.

THE ILLUSION OF INDIVIDUALISM.

Underlying all these traditions and prejudices there is a particular metaphysical theory—a metaphysical theory which takes hold of those persons especially who are fondest of abjuring all metaphysics; and the disease is in this case the more dangerous since they do not know when they have it. The chief symptom of this metaphysical complaint is the belief in the abstract individual. The individual is thought of, at least spoken of, as if he had a meaning and significance apart from his surroundings and apart from his relations to the community of which he is a member. It may be quite true that the significance of the individual is not exhausted by his relations to any given set of surroundings; but apart from all of these he is a mere abstraction—a logical ghost, a metaphysical spectre, which haunts the habitations of those who have derided metaphysics. The individual, apart from all relations to a community, is a negation. You can say nothing about him, or rather it, except that it is not any other individual. —D. G. Ritchie, in Principles of State Interference.

THE RIGHT OF MINORITIES.

As to the right of minorities, it may be enough at present to point out that the most important and valuable right of a minority is the right to turn itself into a majority if it can—i. e. the right of freedom of speech and freedom of association, not the impossible right of the member to exist apart from the organic whole. History shows us that a minority with intelligence, energy, and faith in their cause may hope with a fair chance for ultimate victory, if their cause is really the cause of humanity. One hundred men are more than ten, and ten than one; but the genius and earnestness and contagious enthusiasm of one and the strong coherence of ten will outweigh in the end the isolated apathy of many thousands.

It is the very chief advantage of democracy over oligarchy that, while it establishes the power of the majority, it puts that majority potentially in the hands of those who have ideas and are able to make them spread. For the wise statesman of a free country is not the man who has a mere private theory of his own and imposes it on a passive and subject class, but the man who sympathetically comprehends the vague wants, the unformulated aspirations of the half-blind, half-dumb many whom he serves by leading. As a leader he is in advance of others, not because his ideas are not theirs, but just in so far as he can understand and express what they only feel.—D. G. Ritchie, in Principles of State Interference.

ADVANCE AGENTS OF CIVILIZATION.

There is not a race to which the missionary has gone that is not a destroyed race—not that the missionary has done it, but he has opened the door to the robber and the murderer. He came to the American Indians, and that race has been robbed of its possessions and run almost extinct. He went to Africa, and the negroes were made slaves and foreigners already possess the Dark Continent. He went to the Philippines, and for profit the cannon, the saloon, the brothel and the "water cure" followed him. He went to China and for profit that people were made a race of opium eaters. He passed the Chinese wall, and with him went the armies of occupation of the white powers, to loot. He entered India, and the treasure of that country is carried to Europe, while her own people starve by the millions. His followers have made the name of Christendom a by-word and hissing among humanitarians whose eyes are wide, the broad earth over. The preacher's good intentions have been turned, by the system he supports and that in turn supports him, into deeds of hell.—The Social Thought.

—You don't mind paying from ten to twenty-five cents a week for capitalist papers which give you only the other fellow's side of the news. Why not spend one cent a week, 50 cents a year, on a subscription for The Worker, which gives you the workingman's side?

PARTY NOTES.

Local York, Pa., is gaining steadily in membership and working hard to increase the circulation of The Worker and distribute other party literature.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Socialist club of Boston women was held at the residence of Dr. Antoinette Konikow, 330 Shawmut avenue, Boston, on Wednesday, Nov. 27. A second meeting will be held at the same place on Sunday, Dec. 7, at 4 P. M. All woman interested are invited to attend.

A comrade in the anthracite region writes that many miners who wish to subscribe to The Worker can't do so "for the simple reason that the miners are too poor at this time. One half of the miners deal in grocery and meat market with a power of attorney from pay to pay. A good many have not seen fifty cents for five or six months." Such is the condition of the men who keep the firesides of the nation warm. The unbroken strike of almost a half-year's duration under such conditions shows what stuff these men are made of.

The Quincy (Mass.) Socialist Club has created a permanent fund to be known as "The Worker Postal Fund" for the purpose of a continuous propaganda and the increase of the circulation of The Worker in Quincy, and starts its work by sending for fifteen subscription postal cards. A good example to the wise is sufficient.

The Philadelphia comrades are having good audiences at their public meetings since election, the comrades are in the mood to work, and they expect to keep things going without any cessation.

The Socialist Party of Pennsylvania has a tremendous task before it, to educate the hundreds of new men who have joined the party in the last half year and to follow up the tremendous gains made at the polls with propaganda work that will result in continuing that gain in the next election. But the comrades realize the responsibility, and that means that every nerve will be strained to meet it.

New York State.

The Rochester comrades are starting a special campaign to push the circulation of The Worker in that city. A hundred comrades in ten of the twenty wards will each take charge of a list of twenty-five voters; The Worker will be sent free for four weeks to each of these 2,500 men, who will afterwards be visited and requested to subscribe. It is expected that at least half of the number will become regular subscribers and that the result will show in next year's vote.

At the last joint meeting of Local Buffalo it was resolved to consolidate the branches into a single body and the following officers were elected: Organizer, Louis Slotkin, 18 West Eagle street; Recording and Corresponding Secretary, Henry Moses; Treasurer, Thos. Fitton; Financial Secretary, Edward C. Fliege; Literature Agent, Benjamin Schaffer, and a County Committee consisting of seven members. The local meets every Sunday afternoon at the headquarters of the East Side Social Democratic Club, 439 William street. The County Committee meets every Tuesday evening at the same place. The German and Polish comrades are especially invited to attend the meetings and take part in the work.

At a meeting of Local New Rochelle held in Music Hall, Tuesday, Nov. 25, the committee on headquarters reported that they had secured a hall at 10 Mechanic street which will be opened on Tuesday evening, Dec. 9, and remain open every night thereafter. Five new candidates were admitted to membership. Some time in the latter part of December or early in January a reception and dinner of the comrades of Westchester County will be held in New Rochelle.

The County Committee of Orange County, New York, S. D. P., met at Marx Hall, Highland Falls, on Nov. 30. According to reports from comrades from the western part of the county, our party lost a considerable number of votes owing to a mistake of the election officials. Comrade Dennis was instructed to communicate with the proper authorities and investigate the matter. The vote in this county and especially in the city of Newburgh was not what we had expected to be the result of so much work and so many sacrifices as had been made, especially by comrades in Highland Falls and Balmville. It is to be hoped, however, that much of the seed distributed this fall will bear fruit later. A meeting of representatives from all the locals in this county will be held in Marx Hall, Highland Falls, on the first Saturday in January, at 8 P. M. Every local is requested to send no less than two delegates to the meeting. Friends and sympathizers are also invited to be present.

New York City.

At the West Side Socialist Club on Friday evening, Dec. 5, Algernon Lee will deliver the first of a series of three instructive lectures on "Social Evolution," "The Capitalist System," and "The Tendencies of Capitalism." Members of the club should make special effort to draw a large attendance to these lectures. The club meets in Clark's Hall, northwest corner of Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, second floor, every Friday evening, and strangers are especially welcome. Hereafter the lectures will begin promptly at 8 P. M., and the time for the answering of questions and the discussion will each be limited to a half hour in order to leave time for the business meeting which is held after the speaker closes the discussion. At the last meeting two new members were admitted, and the club is in a flourishing condition.

A mass-meeting of the 30th A. D. will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 10, at Kreether's Hall, 1754 Second avenue, at 8 P. M. for the purpose of publishing the result of our vote and some other very important questions. Prominent speakers will address the meeting and music and fire works will complete the celebration.

At the last business meeting of the 12th A. D. of Brooklyn, it was decided to hold a lecture on Socialism at Concordia Hall, 335 Prospect avenue on Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8 P. M. The Workingmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society meeting in the same place donated $5 to make the meeting a success. Leaflets announcing the meeting will be distributed in the neighborhood of the hall and every reader of The Worker living near the meeting place is requested to attend.

As a result of the recent campaign so vigorously waged in the Eighth A. D., a Social Democratic Educational Club has been organized which now numbers one hundred and four members. This club will carry on a systematic agitation, organize election districts and get acquainted with every citizen and provide them with literature throughout the year. At the third meeting enough money was raised to get rooms and furnish them. Rooms have been rented at 84 Orchard street. Dr. Girdansky delivered a lecture last Friday evening at 83 Forsyth street and next Friday Comrade Panken will speak at the same place.

The Socialist Club, at Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Brooklyn, will open its course of lectures on Sunday evening, Dec. 7, with a lecture by Peter E. Burrows, "How It Happened."

A borough meeting of Kings County will be held Dec. 16 at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum.

At the last meeting of the 6-10th A. D. it was decided to hold a lecture or debate after every business meeting, meetings to open promptly at 8 P. M., and lecture or debate to commence at 8.30. Comrades O. Sattler, B. Korn and W. J. F. Hannemann were elected a Committee on Lectures and Debates. The next meeting will be held Friday, Dec. 12, and every member is urged to attend promptly and to invite his friends to come at 8.30 to hear the lecture. At the last meeting five new members were admitted. It was decided to consent to the organizing of a Jewish branch in the 10th A. D., a joint meeting to be held once a month and the election of delegates to the General Committee to be held jointly.

The Speakers' Club will meet every Thursday evening at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street.

All lecturers are requested to send their addresses to Organizer James N. Wood, 64 East Fourth street, stating how often they are willing to lecture.

At the last meeting of the General Committee sixty-four new members were admitted.

PARADE FUND.

Comrades and organizations throughout the city are requested to make further donations to the Parade Fund. The deficit is considerable and must be met. The splendid showing made by us in the election returns was in some part due to the impressive demonstration at end of the campaign. Forward donations to J. N. Wood, 64 East Fourth street.

——Every union is based upon the sound principle that in union there is strength. THE EFFECTS OF PROGRESS UNDER CAPITALISM.

It is an absurdity and a crying abuse that the improvements of advancing civilization, the product of human development in its entirety, should only benefit those who, thanks to their pecuniary position, are able to make their own, while on the other hand thousands of industrious workmen and mechanics learn with anxiety and alarm that human intelligence has made a fresh discovery, by which twenty and forty times as much can be accomplished as by hand, and that they consequently have the prospect of being turned out of doors as useless and superfluous.

Thus an event that ought to be a source of satisfaction to all rouses the keenest enmity, and was not unfrequently, in former decades, the cause of factories being stormed and machinery demolished. The same enmity exists to-day between men and women as competitive workers. This is equally unnatural. Consequently we must endeavor to found a society in which all the means of production are the property of the community, a society which recognizes the full equality of all without distinction of sex, which provides for the aplication of every kind of technical and scientific improvement or discovery, which enrolls as workers all those who are at present unproductive or whose activity assumes an injurious shape, the idlers and the drones, and which, while it minimizes the period of labor necessary for its suport, raises the mental and physical condition of all its members, to the highest attainable pitch.—August Bebel, in Woman, Past, Present and Future.

——If all workingmen were as steady and liberal in supporting the labor press as they are in buying "extras" of the capitalist papers that lie about them in time of strike, labor organizations would be better represented and more respected.—The Carpenter.

——One way to work for Socialism is to circulate Socialist literature. Try Lee's "Labor Politics" (ten for 20 cents) and Hanford's "Railroading" (ten for 25 cents). Get your friends to read them.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT.

Organizer Roth Writes of Past Campaign and Coming Campaign in the Heart of the Pennsylvania Coal Fields.

Reviewing the campaign in the columns of the Erie "People," Organizer Roth of Luzerne County, Pa., writes in part:

"The late campaign was a remarkable and eventful one. It was really the first great effort to elect Socialist candidates in Luzerne County. During the past six months the different localities were kept constantly agitated by speakers of the various languages sent and maintained by the state committee. The Socialist publishing houses throughout the country have flooded the county with literature paid for by comrades outside the anthracite region. Financial aid from the outside was necessary because most of our comrades were on strike or affected by it.

"A number of disagreeable incidents occurred during the campaign. Our active workers were frequently insulted and abused; our literature wasted and announcements destroyed; our meetings were broken up and speakers arrested; and the party discriminated against in every possible manner by the political, industrial, military, judicial, editorial, and ecclesiastical hirelings of capital. But I am proud to say comrades have borne it all nobly, and we are now beginning to reap the fruits of their labor and patience. Comrades, our duty now is to gather, organize, systematize and discipline our scattered forces. While the enemy is feasting and thereafter sleeping over their supposed victory, let us not be idle, but fortify ourselves so as not to lose any of the ground we have gained, but on the contrary be prepared for a further advance and if possible, in the next battle carry the works of the enemy. Remember that 'in time of peace we should prepare for war' and 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.' The Socialist campaign does not end until the Co-operative Commonwealth is established.

"Let us have in view an ideal county organization. First place our existing locals upon a solid footing; then let us make it our object to organize Socialist clubs in every voting precinct in the county, beginning with those which polled the largest Socialist vote; then let us organize ward, borough and township and city committees, composed of delegates from the different clubs and whose duty it would be to manage the spring campaigns and look after the interests of the party in their respective political divisions. I would also recommend that the county committee appoint a chairman or organizer to represent the party in every unorganized city, borough and township.

"Next to organization comes education. It is not enough to get men to vote our ticket or join our organization. In order to be able to depend upon them we must thoroughly educate them into class-conscious Socialists. As means of education, lectures should be arranged for as frequently as conditions will permit; as much literature as the comrades can afford should be distributed; Socialist books, buttons, etc., should be sold; and above all, as many subscriptions as possible should be secured for the party papers. * * *

"As we grow stronger, our enemies from without will decrease in number. However, I want to caution you against the enemy from within. The enemy from within will send spies and disruptors into our midst. Be careful who you take into your organization. If you are not sure that an applicant is O. K. refer his case to an investigating committee before you act upon it. We must keep our party clean at any cost.

"Our party strongly urges every Socialist to join the union of his craft or industry, and after he has joined do his duty and take his part in the economical battles of labor against capital for improved conditions. It is in the labor union that the Socialist must get in his work. It is here that educational work and a good example will achieve splendid results. * * *

"Comrades, in closing I want to say that there is plenty for us to do. Let us take hold with a vim and do all that is in our power to bring the day of emancipation nearer. Don't look to see what the other fellow does; do your part. If he neglects his duty don't you neglect yours. From now on let us give every minute we can spare, every cent we can spare, every energy we can spare to the movement toward the Co-operative Commonwealth."

MINNESOTTA.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 24.—Sixty-four of the eighty-two counties give 2,346 votes for Nash, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, whose name appeared on the ballot without the party name. The Socialist Labor Party candidate, who, of course, got many of our votes under the circumstances, has 2,188 in these counties.

Our other state candidates who appeared on the ballot under the party name have about 9,000 in these counties.

The other counties will add about 2,300 to these figures.

NEW JERSEY.

In reporting the Socialist vote in New Jersey last week we inadvertently omitted that of the Seventh Congressional District, which was 335. The total given for the eight districts in which we had candidates was correct—4,575.

Essex County gives the Socialist Party 1004 for Sheriff, with our other candidates ranging from 1,036 to 1,144. Last year the county gave 709 for Vail for Governor. Newark gives 952 for McIntosh, our candidate for Mayor. Our Congressional candidates in the county polled 1,077, together. The Socialist Labor Party has 786 for Sheriff.

——Socialism would mean prosperity for all who were willing and able to work and for those unable to work whom the others would willingly support. Under capitalism, in the best of times, prosperity is for a few only—and those the ones who do no useful work.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $4.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 13 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

SOCIALISTS IN MUNICIPALITIES.

Special Committee of the Party Makes a Preliminary Report On Suggested Lines of Activity.

(The following is a preliminary report or report of progress of the Municipal Program Committee, established by vote of the last national convention of the Socialist Party. It will be of especial interest at this time, as a number of Socialists have been elected to municipal office during the last year and many others will undoubtedly be elected during the next few months.)

At the Indianapolis Convention it was decided that the National Executive Committee be authorized to appoint a sub-committee on municipal activity, this committee to have only advisory powers and to have as one of its functions the formulation of a municipal program for Socialist bodies. Almost exactly a year ago the National Committee elected the following comrades to serve upon this committee: Victor L. Berger, Job Harriman, Emil Liess, John C. Chase, with the undersigned as Temporary Secretary. Communication was at once opened between these various comrades and steps taken to carry out the will of the convention. As all the members of the commitee were actively engaged in other work in connection with the Socialist movement progress has been rather slow.

From time to time the assistance of outside comrades was requested and among those who have co-operated in the preparation of the program up to the present time, and who are now acting as members of the committee, are Comrades Corinne Brown, Seymour Steadman and Philip S. Brown. Effort has been made to keep in communication with the people who have been elected to municipal offices by the Socialists in different parts of the country, and it is hoped that if any such who have not been written, see this that they will address the Secretary at once, as their co-operation is much desired.

The "Suggested Lines of Social Municipal Activity" which are given at the close of this article are to be considered simply as a sum total of the various suggestions that have been thought worthy of consideration by one or more members of the committee. They were compiled after careful comparison with a large number of municipal programs in this country as well as those of the European Socialist parties. Whatever may be said of its defects or merits, it is probably the most complete outline of municipal activity yet gathered together and should furnish material for intelligent discussion. It is probably not approved of as a whole, by any single member of the committee, and still less is it to be considered a special recommendation of the committee, and, least of all, does it partake of the character of a proposed platform for Socialist municipal bodies. Such platforms may evolve from it in the future, and it is hoped that it will be of assistance in the formation of such platforms in various cities.

So far as I am personally concerned, I am of the opinion that a municipal platform could be best made up of a plain revolutionary demand for the overthrow of class rule and a statement of the need of the application of collectivist principles in municipal activity. This would constitute the platform proper and would be about the length of those now ordinarily adopted. In addition to this an elaborate program of probable action could be prepared based upon the suggestions given herewith. This should be accompanied by an explanation that would need to be a rather extensive document, discussing and explaining the various provisions adapted to local needs and show how these form a part of a complete revolutionary program. This was the position which I took at the Indianapolis convention with regard to our national platform, and I have, as yet, seen no reason to change my mind. I say this, because there is a persistent misrepresentation of the attitude taken by those who oppose "immediate demands" in the form in which they now appear in the majority of our platforms.

But whatever else may be said there is urgent need of further intelligent discussion of Socialist and municipal affairs in this country. It is certain that a large number of Socialists will be elected to municipal positions within the next few months. At the present time there is no general idea of what the Socialist position is on municipal affairs. There is great diversity of attitude on what are really fundamental principles. I am not one of those who believe that municipal action can be reduced to anything like complete uniformity throughout a country presenting as diverse characteristics as does the United States. But there are certain principles and lines of action which apply everywhere, and these should be worked out. It seems to me that in this connection the Belgians offer us the most valuable example. The Belgian Socialists have organized a League of Municipal Councilors with Comrade Emil Vinck as its Secretary. They hold regular conventions and have evolved considerable literature on the various questions arising. It would seem possible that something of this character might grow out of our present committee. Such a body has absolutely no authority to enforce its decisions save what comes from the better knowledge which it is able to bring to bear on the questions. It affords an opportunity for the exchange of ideas and the accumulation of information on subjects which are of the greatest importance.

Perhaps these suggestions may be taken in connection with those which follow as the basis of a discussion in the Socialist press. Without further discussion the matter which has been evolved by the committee is given herewith.

A. M. SIMONS.

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

There is no large lie in the world without its little heroes, and there is no folly too foolish for a man with an appetite for heroism to swallow. The ranting, roaring, profitable old lie that we have no classes in America; is, to be sure, a strictly professional lie, told with drums and trumpets to the gallery; but told with a wink and laughed at when the lights are out. Yet some men fall victims even to it; aye in the boss liars' own families some believe it. Therefore J. G. Phelps Stokes has taken the veil, as it were, and gone to live in the Eldridge Street Settlement House, New York, to prove that we have no classes by living downstairs. Without a dollar in his pocket Mr. S. would learn more on this subject right there in Eldridge street in one week than he will be able to teach in twenty years.

It is in the nature of things that after a man becomes great, through the newspaper world of America, we are destined to see the labor side of his greatness very soon, and it is usually the side that has the cold shoulder on it. The first is so, because all realities in society must soon take on the labor question, and the second is thus because no one is held up long enough by the newspapers to become great until he has graduated in some of the inner circles as a friend of Capital. Do you remember how Gomez and Palma of Cuba were diligently glorified by the papers. Do you doubt that their pulse had long been in the hands of the Wall street doctors. Both of these fine old patriots are now ready to shoot down their own countrymen as Capital versus Labor.

I am not impressed very much with those contrasts of civilization showing how it is on the Fifth avenue side of the social picture, and how it isn't on First avenue. This is an early stage of social revelation which no longer holds any greater surprises for me than the surprise that Socialists are any more surprised at such things. Who in heaven's name wonders that a man should faint at the sight of Mr. Gould's turkey on Thanksgiving Day. He was terribly starving, and the papers wondered at it. Rather let us wonder at the splendid efficiency of our newspaper machinery which has kept all out of sight but that one; and let us marvel at our splendid corps of charity scavengers which swept all our complaining hunger out of sight and hearing for that one day to let our lords dine and be thankful.

A friend who is a very laborious man, wants to know, before joining the Socialist Party, whether there is not danger of his being imposed upon by lazy comrades under our new order of social democracy. Now it seems to me that the problem would no longer be dealt with from his end of it; the laborious man would no longer be allowed to impose upon the rest of his fellows those slave habits which he has acquired of working ten hours every day in the shop all the year round and five or more in his own home. The lazy man will have no show under Socialism simply because we shall all want a turn at resting, and it will be our common interest to let no one man laze so as to become a monopolizer of the right to rest. The most dangerous habit of the human race has been that of continuous working. Nature never called for it, and it is only esteemed a virtue among slave masters. Men's instinct has always struggled against it. Slaves must learn to rest and masters learn to work under Socialism—the democracy of duty.

This lazy man question is not so frivolous as it sometimes looks; and when it crops up in our meetings it deserves respectful attention, for, I think, there is good Socialist thought at the back of it. There is only one thing resented all the time everywhere and by everybody in human experience; and that is the physical doing, initiated by others, that we do not want to do, and the forced continuance in such a doing. By far the biggest part of human history is included in that imposition, protest and resistance. The one thing always and everywhere required, the one thing every man possesses and over which, by a great racial instinct, we eternally stand on guard is our labor power. This universal necessity and difficulty of society therefore becomes the source of all value. This fine old human gut, is the sine qua non to be persuaded. What must be done to get it? The answer to this is value. The lazy man will therefore, as a person, pay dearer for everything than his fellows, and it is therefore the lazy man's anxious question at our meetings.

The Pennsylvania Strike Commission is getting just where we expected it to get. Entrenched behind dollars and the acquired skill of many years of alternate wheedling, bulldozing, and deceit, the railroad companies have sat down to wear out the patience and probably ruin the men on the Commission. These companies by process of perpetual appeal have so used the judicial benches of the country for years; and this inquiry will be merely turned into a sort of rump criminal court for the trial of labor unions; until the Commission and the public are sickened, and any old settlement will be a public relief.

The "independent" companies are playing the role which capitalism seems to have assigned to independence since the great declaration of that name, that is, to get the best of everybody in your own way or any other fellow's way that gets more. We know that the meanest employer and the most impecunious worker finally set the pace for wage paying and for hard labor. The independent operators set the pace for oppression, while the railroads set the pace for profit. This is how the operators of mining for money have arranged their division of labor between themselves. A group of seedy and desperately aggressive small capitalists living on the spot, making up for deficiency of capital by a mixture of frontier brutality and rude deceit, they play alternately the lion for themselves and the jackal for the larger interests in slave mining.

It would certainly be a grave mistake for the railroad presidents to antagonize the independent mine operators, it would be almost as foolish as if the Republican party were to drop the Democrats and attempt to run capitalist politics alone; for no great public oppression can be run without this bluff of two parties. "No need of better as long as yours goes," says Baer to Markle. The independents always stand for labor's worst, to deliver every blow and to minimize every concession, because out of less capital to get equal profit demands more oppression. Thus the middle class man in commerce and these operators are the same old nuisance turning up in every economic conflict as dirty trumps on the devil's side. Give us more Morgans, therefore, and less Markles, that the conflict of capital and labor may be truer.

If ever Mayor Low of New York City arrives at the grand consummation for which all successful American tradesmen devoutly long, and becomes a recognized member of a distinct and distinguished native grown aristocracy with trimming and things to match according to the models set by good society in other lands, he will be looking for a crest and a motto. For his crest I suggest the industrious and nimble flea vaulting; and for his motto the Scripture phrase, "Lo here and lo there," for Low never stands long enough in any one position on any public question to enable the New York housewife to catch him, but he is always within easy range of his next bite for capitalism.

Suppose President Eliot really cared a fig about the moral aspects of the struggle between the boss-plus-scabbery and labor-plus-unionism would he not promptly see and recognize the fact, that the lighter and more shiftless the man the less likely he is to join a union? Would not any moralist see at a glance that the persons who cannot see their way to spending that spare dollar of theirs on aught but a passing pleasure, do not come into the unions? Who but the degenerate rhetorician would look for his heroes among the scabs engaged in preventing the new emancipation? No real moralists will look for labor heroes among scabs, while the thoughtful, far-seeing, self-denying men of the unions are yet to be found. But all this is part of the class war; we expect no less and we shall get much more.

It is gratifying to observe the fatuous blindness with which the swell mob of the United States in their campaign against labor are driving all sorts of artists into the unions and through them into Socialism. First they educate our children away from us in order to supply fresh brains to their class; then they insult and starve them back to us, with the education and also the class-consciousness so necessary to make leaders of the proletarian movement. Mascagni's orchestra troubles are not important but pregnant little things.

It is re-assuring to those who were becoming apprehensive of the tendency to benevolent weakness, so long manifested by this government in its treatment of the Indians, that the noble red man has at last been egged, cheated, preached and prayed into wage slavery. The last free blanket and the last free ration is in sight. "This has been done solely with a view to his moral elevation," says the official gentleman in the Indian office; for the Philistine is such a deep in-the-grain hypocrite that he could not cut a man's throat without a moral preamble setting forth the advantages of the murder to both parties. After a century, or so, it is hoped that the self-supporting red man may rise in the scale of humanity perhaps as high as New York's wage weaklings, so scornfully denounced by District Attorney Jerome. But whether the Indians rise or fall we have got them where we wanted them, into the labor market, where no pen of any Fenimore Cooper, by the wildest fancy, can ever more write them noble red men; although they may become Socialists, and, who can tell, they may become noble men also in an era of justice and humanity.

From a professional point of view it was perfectly right that Professor Eliot of Harvard should make himself known to the parents of present and future collegians as a friend of the scab. "To whom shall I send my son but to the friend of my friend to be educated," says Papa. The scab has been the builder of the fortunes of most of the papas who have funds to send their sons to college. On the other hand, it is perfectly right for Eliot, having straightened things with pop, not to forget the voting cattle. So he now sails out with the assurance that we also loves the unions. It is wise to be wise.

The fear of hanging the wrong man who has money is now become so great in New York that it will soon be impossible for any but some poverty-stricken murderer to reach the distinction of being electrocuted. But, then, it should be remembered that the cold-blooded, pre-meditated murders take place, for the most part, within good society; and that people who cost their friends so much to educate should not be lightly dispensed with. As no divorce laws can ever stop adultery while property dominates love in marriage; so can capital punishment never prevent murder while property before life is the end of the law.

The gentlemen of France are pathetically complaining that France is committing suicide, because the married folk of that country are not contributing children enough to the home slave market. By France, the "gentlemen" this time mean the common people. But the common people of France, on their side, think that instead of committing suicide they are only preventing murder, for the bourgeois republic of France to-day is as remorseless in the sacrifice of life in the mines and factories and armies, as are the most advanced gentlemen of England or America.

It is not often that a whole army gets a pension in a foreign country and from the very foe that it is supposed to be fighting. Poor old General Booth at first started out on the streets of London to beg for God and to fight the devil; but he winds up in the most bedevilled cities of America by getting municipal grants for his troops, even from the Mayor of New York and worse. It is rarely that the enemy gets such a chance as this of proving that he is not the enemy; but where dollars and cents are to be had Booth has always been a very accommodating man, even to the devil. He is probably the most brassy incarnation of collection-box morality that the middle class of England has yet turned out, and what can we think of the men who appreciate him.

"How America Got Owned," would be a nice title for a new true history of our country, which would show how little, in the way of manhood or morals, there has been in the property evolution that gave the proletarian his master. Some rich old rotteness long slumbering on the Senatorial benches representing Nebraska is just coming to light in this connection. Dietrich and Millard are only two Senators caught dirty-handed in filching public lands through soldiers' widows and orphans. Oh, when and where shall high men cease to give us shame.

THE WORLD WE LIVE IN.

But what I object to is this economic chance-world in which we live and which we men seem to have created. It ought to be a law as inflexible in human affairs as the order of day and night in the physical world, that if a man will work he shall both rest and eat, and shall not be harassed by any question as to how his repose and his provision shall come. Nothing less ideal than this satisfies the reason. But in our state of things no one is secure of this. No one is sure of finding work; no one is sure of not losing it. I may have my work taken away from me at any moment by the caprice, the mood, the indigestion of a man who has not the qualification for knowing whether I do it well or ill. At my time of life—at every time of life—a man ought to feel that if he will keep on doing his duty he shall not suffer in himself nor in those who are dear to him, except through natural causes. But, as things are now, no man can feel this. And so we go on pushing and pulling, climbing and crawling, thrusting aside and trampling under foot; lying, cheating, stealing; and when we get to the end, covered with blood and dirt and sin and shame, and look back over the way we've got to a palace of our own, or to the poorhouse (which is about the only possession we can claim in common with our brother-men) I don't think the retrospect can be pleasing. . . . We can't put it all on conditions; we must put some of the blame on character. But conditions make character; and people are greedy and foolish, and wish to have and to shine, because having and shining are held up to them as the chief good of life. We all know they are not the chief good; perhaps not good at all; but if some one ventures to say so, all the rest of us call him a fraud and crank, and go on moiling and toiling to the palace or the poorhouse. . . . . We don't moil and toil for ourselves alone. The palace or the poorhouse is not merely for ourselves, but for our children whom we've brought up in the superstition that having and shining is the chief good. We dare not teach them otherwise for fear they may falter in the fight . . . and the children of others will crowd them out of the palace into the poorhouse. If we felt sure that honest work shared by all would bring the honest food shared by all, some few of us, who did not wish our children to rise above their fellows—tho' we could not bear to have them fall below—might trust them with the truth.—W. D. Howells, in Hazard of New Fortunes.

THE ELIMINATION OF WASTE.

The history of progress is the record of a gradual diminution of waste. The lower the stage the greater is the waste involved in the attainment of any end. In the lower organisms nature is reckless in her expenditure of life. The higher animals, more able to defend themselves, have the fewest young. When we come to human beings in society, the state is the chief instrument by which waste is prevented. The mere struggle for existence between individuals means waste unchecked. The state, by its actions, can in many cases consciously and deliberately diminish this fearful loss; in many cases by freeing the individual from the necessity for a perpetual strugle for the mere conditions of life, it can set free individuality and so make culture possible. An ideal state would be one in which there was no waste at all of the lives, and intellects, and souls of individual men and women.—D. G. Ritchie, in Principles of State Interference.

In men, whom men pronounce as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I hesitate to draw the line,
Where God has not.

UNDER CAPITALISM AND UNDER SOCIALISM.

The nature of products as wares under the capitalistic system makes consumption dependent on the purchasing power of the population. Now, this purchasing power is limited in the case of the vast majority that is insufficiently paid for its labor, and whose work ceases altogether as long as it no longer represents surplus value in the shape of profits for the employers. Power of purchasing and power of consuming are therefore two very different things. Millions require new clothes, shoes, furniture, linen, meat and drink, but they have no money, and accordingly their requirements—that is, their power of consumption, remain unsatisfied. The market is overstocked and the people hungry. They are willing to work, but they find no one who will buy their work, because the capitalist can earn nothing by the transaction. "Canaille, you can die, go to the dogs, become vagabonds, or criminals; I, the capitalist, cannot help it." And the capitalist is quite right from his point of view.

The new society will do away with this contradiction. The new society will not produce "wares" with the intention of buying and selling, but it will produce requisites, to be used and consumed, this being the only object of their production. The power of consumption will therefore be no longer limited by the purchasing power of the individual, but by the productive power of the community. As long as the means of production and the time of production suffice, every desire can be gratified; satisfaction becomes the only limit of the consuming power of society.

As, therefore, there are no "wares" in the new community, neither will there be any money. Money is the representation of wares, and yet at the same time a ware itself; it is the social equivalent of all other wares. But the new society possesses no wares, only objects of society, of use, whose making requires a certain amount of social working time. The working time which the making of an article requires is therefore the only scale by which its social value can be measured. Ten minutes of social work in one branch are exchangeable for ten minutes' work in another, neither more nor less. For society is not intent on earning; its task consists only in effecting the exchange of articles of equal quality and equal use-value among its members. If society finds for instance that three hours' work a day is necessary for the production of the requisite quantity of goods, it will appoint three hours as the length of the working day. If society increases and the methods of production are so far improved, that all requisites can be made in two hours, then the working day will be fixed at two hours. If, on the other hand, the majority demands the gratification of higher needs than those which, despite the increase in number and the greater productivity of labor, can be provided for in two or three hours, it can lengthen the working day to four. Its will is its paradise.

It will be easy to calculate how much social working time each single product requires. The relation of part of the working time to the whole is fixed accordingly. Any kind of certificate, a printed piece of paper, gold or brass is a receipt for the time spent in work, and enables the possessor to exchange this token for articles of the most various kinds. If he finds that his requirements are less than those covered by that which he receives for his work, he can work a correspondingly shorter time. If he prefers to give away his superfluity, no one can prevent him; if he is foolish enough voluntarily to work for another who spends his time in cultivating the dolce far niente and prefers sharing the earnings of his neighbor to working himself, it is his own concern. But no one can compel him to work for another, and no one can deprive him of a part of his claims for the work done. If a suit of clothes in fine cloth costs twenty hours of social labor, and he prefers to have one for eighteen, he can do so. And so on, and so on. We see every one will be able to satisfy all legimate desires, but not at the expense of others. Every one will receive from society the equivalent of his labor, neither more nor less. —August Bebel, in Woman, Past, Present and Future.

PROPERTY VS. PROPERTY.

Solon opened the series of so-called political revolutions by an infringement on private property. We pass over the means by which this reform was accomplished in the year 594 B. C. or thereabouts. Ever since, all revolutions have been revolutions for the protection of one kind of property against another kind of property. They cannot protect one kind without violating another. In the great French revolution the feudal property was sacrificed for the sake of saving bourgeois property. In Solon's revolution the property of the creditors had to make concessions to the property of the debtors. The debts were simply declared illegal. We are not acquainted with the accurate details, but Solon boasts in his poems that he removed the mortgage columns from the indented lots and enabled all who had fled or been sold abroad for debts to return home. This was only feasible by an open violation of private property. And indeed, all so-called political revolutions were started for the protection of one kind of property by the confiscation, also called theft, of another kind of property. It is absolutely true that for more than 2,500 years private property could only be protected by the violation of private property.—Frederick Engels, in The Origin of The Family, Private Property and the State.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and dimiaishing the rates to the consumers.
2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.
3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.
4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.
5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.
6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.
7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

REPORT OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY VOTE.

IN THE NATION.

The Socialist Party Has Gained at Least 133 Per Cent. in Two Years—Increase All Over the Land—Figures for Twenty-five States.

Although it is not yet possible to give a full and accurate report of the vote polled by the Socialist Party (called in New York the Social Democratic Party) in November, throughout the nation, we can give a general idea of what has been accomplished.

We elected, on Nov. 4, three members of the Massachusetts Legislature, five members of the Montana Legislature, an alderman in Saginaw, Mich., and several minor officers. Last week we elected two mayors, three aldermen, ten councilmen, and some minor officers in Massachusetts cities.

In general, our increase was so widely and evenly distributed over the country that it does not yet show itself in victory at the polls. This is very satisfactory, for it means that our growth is steady and solid and that when, in another two years, we shall make another such forward step as we have this time, we shall carry a large number of places simultaneously and shall be sure of holding them.

The following table gives the vote of the Socialist Party, in 1900 and 1902, for the twenty-five states which we are now able to report.

States.	1900.	1902.
Colorado	684	7,360

Totals	78,804	208,338

(The star prefixed to the names of five states in the table indicates that the figures given for 1902 are not official, but represent a safe estimate.)

Fourteen other states, in the election of 1900, gave us 18,826 votes. In some of these we had this year only Congressional tickets in a few of the districts, so that no comparison can be made; from others we have no approximately full reports.

To sum up, we may say that the vote of the Socialist Party has risen in two years from 97,640 to at least 227, 164 and probably to about 240,000.

Our gain is at least 133 per cent.

It may be added that in Colorado at least 5,000 of our votes were undoubtedly counted out, as the law there gives no protection to minority parties; in Missouri and some parts of Pennsylvania many of our votes seem to have been stolen; and the same thing has doubtless happened to some extent in other states.

Third Place on Ballot.

The S. L. P. receives 15,886 votes, as compared with 13,762 in 1900. The Prohibitionists have 20,490 votes. Thus the Social Democratic Party advances from fifth to third place on the official ballot and the "union-smashers" go back from fourth place to fifth.

It will be observed that in the table given above comparison is made with our gubernatorial vote in 1900. In the table of states we use our presidential vote in New York as in all other states for comparison. The presidential vote of the Social Democratic Party in New York two years ago was 12,869, and that of the S. L. P. was 12,662.—

NEW YORK CITY.

Social Democratic Party Gains in Every Borough and Assembly District and Polls a Total of 16,432 Votes in the City.

Brooklyn's Vote.

In giving the vote for Brooklyn (identical with Kings County) we use only the total for 1900, because in that year the vote was reported by wards, not by assembly districts. The following table shows this year's vote of the Social Democratic Party in Brooklyn by assembly districts:

OKLAHOMA'S VOTE.

NEWKIRK, Okla. — The Socialist Party, according to the complete official count, casts 1,963 votes in the territory, taking third place. We have voters in every county, 20 in Beaver County being the lowest and 308 in Woods County the highest.

Two years ago our vote in the territory was 815, that being the first time the Socialist Party entered the political field here. Our gain is 1,148, or about 141 per cent. Thus Oklahoma does its share in swelling the Socialist vote of the nation.

IN COLORADO.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 3.—The official returns for Arapahoe County, Colo., including the city of Denver, give 1,835 votes for the Socialist candidate for Governor, our other candidates ranging from 1,792 to 1,988. This is about 50 per cent. higher than the estimated figures given the week after election, and is nearly three times the vote given the party in the whole state two years ago. The S. L. P. has 276 for Governor, other candidates on that ticket ranging from 248 to 346. Our vote is thus seen to be much more nearly solid than that of the "smashers," indicating that they probably got many split votes from half-way Socialists who knew little or nothing about the two parties.

It is impossible as yet to give the vote for the state. It may be estimated at from 8,000 to 10,000. Undoubtedly many more were cast, but the old parties do the counting and we may be glad if half our votes are officially reported.

——A strike at the ballot box cannot be enjoined by a federal judge.—Miners' Magazine.

CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The official count shows the vote of the Socialist Party as follows, by counties: New Haven, 1,459; Hartford, 561; New London, 79; Windham, 26; Litchfield, 24; Tolland, 254; Fairfield, 443; Middlesex, 11; total, 2,857. The S. L. P. gets 963. In 1900 we had 1,741. W.

ROCKVILLE'S CITY VOTE.

ROCKVILLE, Conn.—In the city election last Monday the Socialist Party had candidates in three of the four wards and polled a total of 158 votes. In the state election on Nov. 4 the town of Vernon, of which Rockville is a part, gave us 166.

The vote of the Socialist Party in the city election is nearly 20 per cent. of the total, the Republicans having 277, the Democrats 343, and the S. L. P. 24.

WYOMING'S VOTE.

LARAMIE, Wyo.—The official count of the vote in the state of Wyoming shows that H. Breitenstein, the candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, received 552 votes. The other candidates on the state ticket ran from 473 to 604, except Comrade Groesbeck, for Justice of the Supreme Court, who got 1,700, owing to the fact that the Democrats had no candidate for the office.

This is the first time the Socialist Party has had a ticket in Wyoming. The organization is young and, of course, no satisfactory campaign could be made. In the next state election we may expect to treble or quadruple the vote.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE FEDERATION.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 5.—At the first session of the New Hampshire State Federation of Labor, held here during the past week, a resolution was introduced recommending to affiliated unions the study of Socialism. The Committee on Resolutions reported favorably, but an amendment was carried on the floor of the convention, substituting the words "social problems" for the word "Socialism."

If the resolution, even as amended, is carried out in good faith, Socialists will have all they ask—an opportunity for fair discussion—and it will then be their own fault if the principles of Socialism are not made clear to the organized workers of the state.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

DOVER, N. H.—In the city election our candidate for Mayor gets 217 votes. On Nov. 4 our candidate for Governor had 196. A year ago we had 84 for Mayor. This gain is made in spite of the fact that we have the open ballot in the city elections; if we had the secret ballot our vote would have reached 300. The comrades are enthusiastic. D.

FRANKLIN, N. H.—The Socialist candidate for Mayor gets 280 votes, as against 519 for the joint candidate of the old parties. Everyone is surprised at our gain.

——You don't mind paying from ten to twenty-five cents a week for capitalist papers which give you only the other fellow's side of the news. Why not spend one cent a week, 50 cents a year, on a subscription for The Worker, which gives you the workingman's side?

FOR THE DAILY.

Volunteers Are Wanted to Work for the Fair.

Tickets to be Distributed and Sold, Prizes Collected, and Much Other Work—Ladies Are Enlisting—Report of the Fund.

The Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association held its monthly meeting at Labor Lyceum on Monday, Dec. 8, when considerable business was transacted relating to the coming Daily Globe Fair to be held at Grand Central Palace from March 28 to April 5, 1903.

Among other things, the secretary reported that donation books were ready for distribution. Every comrade is urged to get one at once and begin colelcting donations for the fair.

Within a week the Fair Committee will have a regular office establishment in working order, where all business in connection with the fair will receive attention. All comrades who succeed in obtaining prizes are requested to immediately forward them to the fair office, of which we shall give further details next work.

One hundred thousand fair tickets are also ready for sale and distribution and secretaries are requested to obtain a supply at once for their respective districts. Work must be begun now as the Fair Committee intends, with the help of the comrades, to dispose of the entire number of tickets before the fair opens.

We need a large force of active comrades who will stand ready to work for the fair in whatever capacity they can best serve, and all who wish to see the Daily Globe issued in time for the next campaign are requested to volunteer their services and notify Comrade Butscher to that effect.

The Daily Globe Fair is to be the grandest attempt of its kind the workingmen of this section of the country have ever attempted, and in order to insure success in every department a large force of active workers will be required. Enlist now and help in the work to the fullest extent of your abilities.

On account of the Association being unable to secure meeting rooms in the Labor Lyceum on the first Monday in the month, a motion was put that the constitution be amended, changing meeting night to the second Monday. This amendment will be voted on at the next meeting of the Association.

The Ladies at Work.

Many ladies of the Social Democratic Party have decided to work for the fair and have organized a club for that purpose. They will do useful work for the Daily Globe Fair by selling tickets, colelcting donations and prizes, etc., and desire the co-operation of all lady members and sympathizers of the party.

They intend to form other ladies' clubs in different cities in the vicinity of New York and for the purpose of arranging matters properly a conference will be held at the rooms of the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, on Monday evening, Dec. 15.

Women's clubs and societies in sympathy with the Socialist movement and organized labor are invited to send two delegates each to this conference. Also all ladies of the party, or those in sympathy with it, are invited to attend and join. Mrs. Dr. J. Halpern, 250 East Broadway, is the secretary.

Comrades who have made pledges for the fund are requested not to neglect the regular payment of installments. The Secretary should not be obliged to spend his time in collecting on pledges. He has plenty of other work to do. All payments are to be made to the Secretary, William Butscher, who has an office at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street.

IN ROCHESTER.

The Year Will Close With a Week of Pleasure — Seven Nights' Bowling Contest, Followed by New Year's Eve Ball — Work of Education Going Steadily On.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 7.—The last week of the year will be devoted by the Social Democrats of Rochester to a round of pleasure and social intercourse which will serve the double purpose of recreation for those who participate and of providing funds for the hot campaign which is going to be carried on here.

There will be a seven nights' bowling contest, Dec. 24 to Dec. 31, inclusive, beginning each evening at 8 o'clock, at Kaufman's bowling alleys, 345 St. Paul street north. Ten cents for three balls will be the charge and prizes to the value of $50, including four watches and many other articles, will be awarded. On New Year's Eve, Dec. 31, will follow a good entertainment and ball at the same place.

While pleasure is thus being provided for, the work of education is not being neglected. The Sunday afternoon lectures and discussions of the Labor Lyceum, held in the City Hall, are attracting much attention, and the Social Democrats are doing their share to make the sessions interesting and instructive. The program for the next few weeks is as follows: Dec. 14, "Killing the Trusts," Philip Jackson; Dec. 21, "What is Anarchy?" Salvatore Vella; Dec. 28, "Trade Unions and the Socialist Movement," George Suter; Jan. 5, "John Ruskin, Our Modern Prophet," J. M. Dana; Jan. 12, "Child Labor in the North," S. McAuliffe; Jan. 19, "Sidney Lanier, the Man and His Work," Rev. Clarence A. Barbour; Jan. 26, "The Workingman Afraid of Himself," Prof. George Waldron.

Besides this, a class in social economics has been organized for those who wish to make a careful study of the subject. Comrade Jackson will take charge of the class, which will meet every Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock, in the Social Democratic Reading Room, 95 Main street. All who are interested will be heartily welcome.

Everything points to a continuance of the rapid progress which Socialism has been making in Rochester and the comrades are looking to the future with high hope.

HAVERHILL'S VOTE.

Examination of Returns in Detail Shows that the Socialist Vote Was Generally Solid, While that of Old Parties Split on Personalities.

The Haverhill "Gazette" says of last week's city election that "there was a great deal of independent voting all over the city, tickets were split all to pieces, and in many cases the personality of the candidates made big differences." The Socialist vote, it is admitted, however, showed an exception to this rule. Our candidate for Mayor, Parkman B. Flanders, ran somewhat ahead of his ticket, but hardly more than is accounted for by the observed fact in all elections that a considerable number of negligent citizens of every party vote only for the head of the ticket. Flanders' vote was 2,338. The seven aldermanic candidates (who, in Haverhill, although nominated by wards, are voted for throughout the city at large) received from 2,070 to 2,169 votes, so that our highest and lowest vote on the general ballot varied by only 268 votes—much less than the usual range of variations in Massachusetts city elections.

The Republican vote for Mayor was 2,338, the highest Republican vote for Alderman was 2,906 and the lowest was 2,690. The Republican range of variation was thus 328.

The Democratic vote for Mayor was 1,663 and the Democratic vote for Alderman ranged from 823 to 1,162—giving a variation of 846.

It is also a suggestive fact that where the Republican candidates for Aldermen ran especially high, the corresponding Democratic candidates ran low and vice versa. This would indicate that where Republicans or Democrats scratched the ticket they did it each in favor of the other party rather than in favor of the Socialist ticket.

GRAND CONCERT.

Remember next Thursday evening, Dec. 18, the grand concert at Cooper Union, for the benefit of Local New York. Tickets at all party headquarters; 10, 25, 40 and 50 cents and $1. See that the hall is filled.

FRAUD IN HAVERHILL.

The Republicans Illegally Count In Their Candidate

Board of Registrars Counted for Watson Enough Blanks to Overcome Socialist Plurality—Case Goes to Supreme Court.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Dec. 6.—The eyes of all Socialists have been turned toward Brockton this week. Haverhill rejoices in the Brockton victory, but has no occasion to apoligize for herself. Of all the strenuous campaigns ever waged here, that just ended was the hotest. But, indeed, it is not ended yet.

As things look now, Parkman B. Flanders, Socialist, will be Mayor of Haverhill in January, but we have to fight for it, to checkmate Republican fraud.

The result of the vote as reported by the precinct officers gave Watson, the Republican candidate, the election by 14 votes. Yesterday a recount was held at our demand. Our representatives found that the Board of Registrars were counting blank votes for Watson, and they continued to do so regardless of our protests. The result was that they counted us out by giving Watson a lead of 12 votes, Flanders gaining three and Watson one.

In order to make it plain how these votes were miscounted, the following copy of the manner in which the names appear upon the ballot is given:

MICHAEL T. BERRY, Socialist Labor.
PARMAN B. FLANDERS, Socialist.
CHARLES KELLY, Democratic.
HENRI R. WATSON, Republican.	X

The voters are supposed to mark an X opposite the name of the candidate they wish to vote for, but in the case of the ballots in question—15 or 20 in number—the X was marked opposite the blank space underneath the name of Watson. This blank space is reserved to voters to write the name of a candidate, if they do not choose to vote for any of those that appear on the ballot. The Board of Registrars decided that these ballots were intended for Watson, and so counted them, in spite of a decision rendered by the Supreme Judicial Court declaring ballots so marked should not be counted for any candidate.

The decision of the Supreme Court in the case referred to (O'Connell vs. Mathews, and others, 177 Mass., 518) has been reported as follows:

"The second ground on which the petitioner alleged the said recount to be erroneous and illegal, was that there were 17 ballots which were counted as blank, as to the vote for Mayor, and which should have been counted for the petitioner. The ground for this contention was that the petitioner's name was at the bottom of the list of candidates for Mayor on the official ballot, and that next below it was a blank space, as provided by law, in which the voter might write the name of some person other than the names printed on the official ballot, and that on the said 17 or more ballots a cross was made in the square on the right of and opposite to the blank space and in the square next below the square which was directly at the right and opposite to the petitioner's name, and the petitioner averred that each of said crosses so made by the voters was intended as a mark opposite to his, the petitioner's name; and that it was erroneous and illegal to reject said ballots, or to count them as blanks, and that the same should have been counted for the petitioner.

"As to the 17 ballots with crosses against blanks, the statute clearly intends that the cross shall be against the space for which it counts, sections 194 and 224. The physical arrangement of the ballots bears an unmistakable meaning, and, whatever may be conjectured in cases like this, it is impossible to treat the crosses as if it had been put in a different square.

"Petition dismissed."

It will be seen that the case is exactly parallel and the ruling very clear. We do not see how the court can fail to decide for Flanders.

The State Executive Committee has voted to give all the assistance in its power to the Haverhill comrades to pushing the matter, and it may become necessary to ask for financial assistence from the comrades at large in order to carry the case through the courts. Were it not that we believe Flanders entitled to be declared elected Mayor of Haverhill, we would not incur the trouble and expense in pushing the case. We hope, however, to expose the methods of our opponents when they are in desperate circumstances, even if we do not accomplish anything else.

BOSTON, Dec. 7.—In the thirteen cities where elections were held last Tuesday, the Socialist vote was 14 per cent. of the total number of votes cast. In the state election our per cent. of the total was only nine per cent., showing an increase of five per cent.

The Massachusetts comrades find it necessary to appeal for financial aid in carrying the Haverhill election case to the Supreme Court and pushing it to a conclusion. The state and municipal campaigns have left the party with but small funds on hand and money for this purpose must be had at once, or it will be too late. This case is one that should interest every Socialist. We must teach the enemy a lesson. Send contributions, large or small, immediately, to the State Secretary, William Mailly, 907 Winthrop Building, Boston, Mass.

IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—In consequence of the extremely cold weather the vote cast in to-day's city election was the lightest in years. We cannot yet give definite figures for the Socialist vote, but it is certain that we more than hold our percentage of the total as compared with the state election of Nov. 4.

In Chelsea our candidate for Mayor, Comrade Scully, polls 809. Chase, for Governor, had 633 in November.

W. M.

GIVE US A FEW MORE.

"CLEVELAND, Dec. 5.—Judge Ford of the Common Pleas Court to-day granted a perpetual injunction against the Walters' Union and the United Trades Council, restraining its members from picketing or distributing handbills to would-be customers at the restaurant of John Mulholland, on Superior street.

"The injunction is sweeping in nature and practically affects every union man in the city. Mulholland refused to employ union waiters, and the latter began a boycott against him by passing cards to prospective customers, declaring Mulholland to be unfair to union labor."

It was such object lessons as this, supplied so liberally by state and federal judges, that caused the workingmen of Cleveland and the vicinity to increase the Socialist vote last month from 902 to 2,199. Keep on, Your Honors; keep on, by all means, and we shall soon vote you out of office and your capitalist employers out of power.

OUR PRECIOUS INDIVIDUALITY.

The giant corporations of the world are engaged in a system which, if continued, will cause men to lose their identity. The great manufacturing establishments are rapidly displacing names with numbers on their pay rolls. The convict loses his identity in the penitentiary, and the employer proposes to carry out the same system, so that the fellow who tolls will forget his name and be unable to even trace his genealogy. "The dignity of labor," when spoken of by the politician on the rostrum, will soon be met with hisses and derisive laughter.—Miners' Magazine.

"LABOR, DEMOCRACY'S NATURAL ALLY."

Two Years Too Late the Most Radical of Democrats Learns a Now Useless Lesson.

Under the headline, "Labor—Democracy's Natural Ally," within a few days after election, William Randolph Hearst, newly elected to Congress on the Tammany ticket, printed in his various papers a sort of pronunciamento, which may be considered as opening his campaign for the Presidency.

This article is probably familiar, by this time, to all of our readers. We need not, therefore, quote from it in detail.

In this declaration Mr. Hearst makes a bold bid for the leadership of the Democratic party, for the place that Bryan seems to have lost and that Tom L. Johnson failed to qualify for. He does not wait for a convention to draw the platform, but proceeds to lay down the lines upon which, as he thinks, the Democratic party can put him in the White House.

His argument, briefly, is this: The Republican party is in alliance with the trusts. The trusts support the Republican party and the Republican party in power serves the trusts. Therefore, the Democratic party, in order to succeed, must establish a similar alliance with the labor unions.

Two sentences give the key to Mr. Hearst's idea.

His idea of the just demands of labor is this: "The struggle of labor is for A FAIR SHARE OF WHAT IT PRODUCES."

His idea of practical Democratic politics in the present situation is this: "If the Democrats would succeed they must establish with THE LEADERS OF LABOR the relationship which the Republicans have established with the leaders of the trusts."

Let us give Mr. Hearst due credit. He is a bold man and has made a bold bid for victory—only he is a little too late. Mr. Hearst will not be the next president of the United States. Senator Hanna was right when he said that "the fight of the future will not be between Republicanism and Democracy, but between Republicanism and Socialism."

Two years ago, if any Dmeocrat in such position and with such power in his hands could have dared to take the ground that Mr. Hearst has now taken, there would have been serious danger that the Socialist movement might have been temporarily sidetracked and even that the Democrat might have won, with the result of seriously confusing things and putting off the final settlement a few years.

If, two years ago, any Democrat COULD have dared to take such a position, we say. This is the fatality that pursues the Democrats, as it pursues every party that represents a dying class and an outworn system, every party of trimmers and compromisers. They learn the truth. But they never do it until too late. They never pluck up courage to attempt to seize an opportunity till the opportunity has gone by.

We have made history rapidly in these last two or three years. The workers are thinking as they never thought before, more earnestly and more clearly than the most sanguine could have expected. It is no wonder they are thinking. They have good teachers—a Steel Trust and an Ice Trust and a Meat Trust and a Railway Trust and a Coal Trust. Under such masters the workers have been learning much faster than Mr. Hearst thinks.

Even two years ago, it was quite "radical" to say that the workers ough to have "a fair share of their own product." Now, even Mark Hanna will strenuously declare it. The veriest fool or coward can utter such words now and attract no notice.

We have got beyond the "fair share" stage. We have got to the stage where the thinking workers, the independent and aggressive workers, the ones whom it would be worth Mr. Hearst's while to attract are saying, "We want THE WHOLE of our product, and WE ARE GOING TO GET IT."

That is why the Socialist vote grows—because the Socialist Party dared to stand for this idea BEFORE it became popular.

And Mr. Hearst's ideas of politics are quite in keeping with his outworn economics.

He hopes to capture the rank and file of the workers by establishing with their leaders the same relations that the Republicans have established with the leaders of the trusts—i. e., relations of bargain and sale.

That idea is not original with Mr. Hearst. Boss Croker and Corporation Counsel Hill and Copper Kings Clark and Heinze in his own party were ahead of him; but Mark Hanna and the Senator from the New York Central and the Senator from the United States Express know the trick equally well.

It was a good trick—in its time. It is still serviceable, but getting risky.

When the rank and file have begun to think right, you cannot make them go back and think wrong by "establishing relations with their leaders."

The Socialist Party has nothing to fear from Mr. Hearst. It will not seek to "establish relations with labor leaders." And it will not need to "establish relations" with the rank and file. That is already done. In the future, as in the past it will champion the cause of the whole working class; and the working class will understand. It will not prattle empty phrases about "a fair day's pay" nor consent to any "sharing" of the workers' product. It will still insist that the only fair pay for the workers is the full value of their product and will continue to point out to them how they can get that fair pay and put an end to the present system of "dividing up." That is why it will win.

McGRADY RESIGNS.

Will Not Recant His Socialist Views.

Kentucky Priest Who Has Spoken and Written for Socialism Gives Up His Pulpit Rather Than Submit to Dictation in Regard to His Economic and Political Opinions.

"CINCINNATI, Dec. 7. — Father Thomas F. McGrady of St. Anthony's Church, Bellevue, Ky., announced to his congregation this morning that he would retire from the church. This action is taken because of his pronounced Socialistic views. He says that to retract any of his writings would stultify him before the public and would be against his conscience.

"Father McGrady intends to remain in Bellevue, and will continue the advocacy of Socialistic doctrines. Bishop Maes has refused to make any statement, and Vicar General Brossart says he has not heard whether Father McGrady is to be excommunicated or not."

The forgoing dispatch appeared as a "special" in the New York "Times" on Monday. We have as yet no direct information on the subject.

It is to be supposed, if the report be well founded, as we incline to think that it is, that it does not mean that Comrade McGrady has withdrawn from the church, but merely that he has resigned his position as a priest.

Since he began his open advocacy of Socialism, Father McGrady has been subjected to severe attacks from several other clergymen of the same church, and by some high prelates, and it has been surmised, though he has made no public statement on the subject, that great pressure has been brought to bear upon him by the church authorities to induce him to keep quiet on the labor question or confine himself to harmless and meaningless platitudes like those of Bishop Spalding or the Protestant Bishop Potter of New York. Comrade McGrady seems not to be of a "suppressible" temperament, however, and the event announced in the dispatch has been generally expected for some time.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 7.—Father McGrady, who resigned from the priesthood to-day, will speak in Music Hall (the largest in the city, holding five thousand people), on Wednesday evening, Dec. 17. At this meeting he will state his reasons for giving up his position. E. V. P.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT.

The Worker heartily seconds the recommendation of the "Volkszeitung," that the city organization of the Social Democratic Party inaugurate a movement to demand of the city government that it take immediate and strenuous measures to relieve the fearful hardships now prevailing among the working people because of the high price of fuel.

Hundreds of thousands of working people in this city are shivering in their wretched homes; thousands of babies and sick or aged workingmen and women are in daily danger of dying for lack of warmth—all to secure the capitalists' profits.

Low and Jerome and their friends in office are not disturbed about this. They and the people of their class have coal. They will not act or think or care unless we compel their attention by arousing their fears.

Let Local New York of the Social Democratic Party call upon all the labor organizations of the city to join it in a tremendous demonstration, to demand that the workers who have made the city have coal to keep them warm, no matter where it comes from, no matter what it costs the capitalists in increased taxes.

We can do this. We alone can do it effectively. Let it not be neglected. Now is the time to act.

We have ceased to wonder at the systematic falsification of facts relating to the Socialist movement perpetrated by the Associated Press. We see "a method in its madness." We are not surprised to see that, the Social Democratic Party having received 23,400 votes in the state of New York, the Associated Press gives us less than 20,000 and that, the "union-smashing" S. L. P. having polled less than 16,000, the Associated Press gives it over 25,000. The Associated Press knows what it is about, perhaps. And perhaps the leader of the S. L. P. knows equally well. However, the truth will come out. Much as the capitalists controlling the Associated Press might like to boom the S. L. P., they can hardly prevent the Social Democratic Party from taking third place on the ballot in this state next year.

A number of the capitalist papers of New York are finding great comfort in saying that, while the Socialist vote as a whole increased in the state, it fell off in some counties. They neglect to say, however, that, wherever there was any considerable falling off, it was the S. L. P. that lost. As to the vote of the Social Democratic Party, we may call attention to some of the figures. We lost votes in fifteen counties, it is true; but the best of these counties (Madison) gave us only 69 votes two years ago; the whole fifteen gave us but 386 out of our 13,493 votes two years ago, and our total loss in these counties was but 135; on the other hand we gained in forty-two counties, and the total of these gains was 10,042. The capitalist papers speak especially of Socialist losses in Erie, Oneida, Onondaga, and Oswego counties; in Erie, as a matter of fact, the Social Democratic Party gained 105 votes, or 26 per cent.; in Oneida we gained 33 votes, or 28 per cent.; in Onondaga we gained slightly; and in Oswego we lost but 8 votes. This will show how much reliance can be placed on the "news" of the Socialist movement printed in the capitalist papers.

THE PRESIDENT ON LABOR.

President Roosevelt has, in form, departed from the traditional way of treating the labor question in presidential messages. In a message of less than the usual length, he has given much more than the usual space to this subject. The number of words he devotes to it is really quite formidable. But, alas! when we have read the passage through, we find that there are words and nothing more.

Considering the extent to which Roosevelt's intervention in the coal strike was used as a campaign argument in the late campaign we might have expected of him, even as a politician, that he would make some sort of definite recommendations—ridiculously inadequate, no, doubt, but at least somewhat tangible.

Nothing of the sort do we find—not one solitary recommendation does he make, unless the reference to the proposed department of commerce be considered as coming under the heading of the labor question.

It will be worth while for workingmen to preserve for future reference the portion of the message supposed to deal with the relations of labor and capital, and we therefore spare the space to reproduce it. It is really worthy of a careful reading, if only as a splendid example of "the use of language to conceal the absence of thought." President Roosevelt says:

"How to secure fair treatment alike for labor and for capital, how to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employee, without hampering and cramping the industrial development of the country, is a problem fraught with great difficulties and one which it is of the highest importance to solve on lines of sanity and farsighted common sense as well as of devotion to the right. This is an era of federation and combination. Exactly as business men find they must often work through corporations, and as it is a constant tendency of these corporations to grow larger, so it is often necessary for laboring men to work in federations, and these have become important factors of modern industrial life. Both kinds of federation, capitalistic and labor, can do much good, and as a necessary corollary they can both do evil. Opposition to each kind of organization should take the form of opposition to whatever is bad in the conduct of any given corporation or union, not of attacks upon corporations as such nor upon unions as such, for some of the most farreaching beneficent work for our people has been accomplished through both corporations and unions. Each must refrain from arbitrary or tyrannous interference with the rights of others. Organized capital and organized labor alike should remember that in the long run the interest of each must be brought into harmony with the interest of the general public, and the conduct of each must conform to the fundamental rules of obedience to the law, of individual freedom and of justice and fair dealing toward all. Each should remember that in addition to power it must strive after the realization of healthy, lofty and generous ideals. Every employer, every wageworker, must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor so long as he does not infringe upon the rights of others. It is of the highest importance that employer and employee alike should endeavor to appreciate each the viewpoint of the other and the sure disaster that will come upon both in the long run if either grows to take as habitual an attitude of sour hostility and distrust toward the other. Few people deserve better of the country than those representatives both of capital and labor—and there are many such—who work continually to bring about a good understanding of this kind, based upon wisdom and upon broad and kindly sympathy between employers and employed. Above all, we need to remember that any kind of class animosity in the political world is, if possible, even more wicked, even more destructive to national welfare, than sectional, race or religious animosity. We can get good government only upon condition that we keep true to the principles upon which this nation was founded and judge each man not as a part of a class, but upon his individual merits. All that we have a right to ask of any man, rich or poor, whatever his creed, his occupation, his birthplace or his residence, is that he shall act well and honorably by his neighbor and by his country. We are neither for the rich man as such nor for the poor man as such; we are for the upright man, rich or poor. So far as the constitutional powers of the national government touch these matters of general and vital moment to the nation, they should be exercised in conformity with the principles above set forth.

"It is earnestly hoped that a secretary of commerce may be created, with a seat in the cabinet. The rapid multiplication of questions affecting labor and capital, the growth and complexity of the organizations through which both labor and capital now find expression, the steady tendency toward the employment of capital in huge corporations and the wonderful strides of this country toward leadership in the international business world justify an urgent demand for the creation of such a position. Substantially all the leading commercial bodies in this country have united in requesting its creation. It is desirable that some such measure as that which has already passed the Senate be enacted into law. The creation of such a department would in itself be an advance toward dealing with and exercising supervision over the whole subject of the great corporations doing an interstate business, and with this end in view the Congress should endow the department with large powers, which could be increased as experience might show the need."

Not even the sainted McKinley could have said less in so many words. The strenuous Teddy is learning his lesson well.

Think of it: To say nothing of innumerable other strikes, lockouts, and boycotts, with injunctions against unions and arrest of union men, all over the land, we have had this year a strike of one hundred and forty-seven thousand coal miners against a little coterie of mine owners; this strike has lasted almost six months and was hardly ended (or suspended) when the President began to write his message; it has involved terrible hardship for the men engaged in it and for their wives and families, and it has stirred the sympathies and called forth the willing sacrifices of hundreds of thousands of other workingmen of all trades; the President himself has taken an ostentatious part in "settling" the strike, and during the conferences held in his room the Coal Kings have shaken their fists under his nose and demanded in insolent terms that he mind his own business; the questions involved in the strike are still unsettled, although the men are again at work, and there is at least a strong possibility that the conflict may be re-opened next year; meanwhile, at the moment the message was sent to Congress, the sudden coming of winter weather had brought keen suffering to millions of people, because of the high price of coal. In the face of all these facts, the President has nothing more to say than that we ought to have "wisdom and broad and kindly sympathy between employers and employed."

Think of it, again: Congress has before it an Eight-Hour Bill, an Anti-Injunction Bill, and many other bills of more or less importance, bearing directly upon the labor question, which have been introduced at the request of and petitioned and begged for by the American Federation of Labor. On not one of these measures does the President dare to make a solitary recommendation.

The only approach to a recommendation is that relating to the proposed department of commerce. Does President Roosevelt think that he will solve the labor problem by creating a cabinet position and a few comfortable jobs to be used as rewards to conservative labor leaders, men who neglect the interest of their organizations in order to cultivate "broad and kindly sympathy" with the workers' enemies?

Doubtless this is what the President thinks, so far as he thinks at all on the subject. The increase of the Socialist vote in November and the vote on the Socialist resolution at the New Orleans convention of the American Federation of Labor might have taught him something. But—we may say fortunately—"Bourbons forget nothing and learn nothing." It is only the people who learn.

WHY HAVE WE NO COAL?

Cold weather has come. Hundreds of thousands of workingmen, all over the country, are enduring great hardships and, in the case of the children, the aged, and invalids of the working class, are in positive danger of their lives, because of the high price of fuel. It is well that the workers should think now, think hard and long, so that they will not forget within a twelvemonth, as to the causes of this fuel famine.

Who is to blame? It is very well for such men as Baer and Eliot and Hillis and Hewitt and Jerome to throw the blame upon the miners who stood idle for six months. But workingmen of the various trades will not join in that verdict. They have had their struggles, too. They know what a strike means. They know that a hundred and fifty thousand men do not stay on strike six months without good reason. But if the miners are not to blame, who then? Obviously the responsibility, if it is to be put on any men, must be put on Morgan and Baer and Markle and all the rest of the owners of the mines, the men who have it in their power to allow or to forbid the miners to work and to dictate the terms at which they may be permitted to produce the fuel that all the people need.

On the Coal Barons, on the capitalist class in general which supported them, and on the capitalist politicians who used the power of government to protect them—on them, and them alone, rests the responsibility for the suffering which the coming of winter now brings to the workers of the country.

But, after all, it is not so important to say WHO is to blame as to say WHAT is to blame.

It does little good, nor is it altogether fair or reasonable, to make this a question of personal condemnation, of imposing blame upon the capitalists and their agents, as men.

Baer and Stone and the rest of them are probably not much more greedy and cruel and faithless than the average of men. Men's conduct depends chiefly on the social system in which they live and the position which they occupy in that system. The conduct of the capitalist, whatever his personal inclinations, cannot, in the nature of things, be otherwise than greedy and cruel and faithless. It is only by such conduct that he can maintain himself as a lord of industry; and if he fails to exercise those evil qualities which contribute to capitalist success, he will not benefit the workers, but will only give place to some competitor less handicapped by ideas of kindliness and honor.

What we have to look to is not the men, good or bad, who are to blame that we have no coal, but to look to the social system which gives those men the power and the motive to interrupt industry, to drive the workers to desperation, and so to deprive all of us of one of the prime necessities of life.

It is the capitalist system that is to blame—the system of private property in means of production socially produced and operated, the system which makes private profit the sole motive power of the industrial world—it is this system that is to blame. And if we would guard against the recurrence of such conflicts, involving such terrible and widespread suffering as now prevails, and which are sure to recur under capitalism, now in one industry, now in another—if we we would guard against this growing danger, we have to think, not of petty reforms or changes in the mere personnel of government, but of the radical change of the industrial system which will remove their cause.

In a word, the cold weather should make workingmen think seriously about Socialism—and it will.

The French parliament is contemplating the abolition of all titles of nobility. This is an outrage, a violation of sacred rights of property, and Mr. Roosevelt should intervene on behalf of the American citizens—or, at least, the American ex-citizenesses—who are interested. Think of poor Anna Gould, who, by the exercise of industry, frugality, and business sagacity, honestly acquired the title of Countess Castellane. And now a wicked government proposes to confiscate the title and make her plain Madame! If this sort of thing is to be allowed, there will be no incentive to effort left to the people of Newport and Fifth Avenue.

WE AGREE AND DISAGREE.

The Brooklyn "Eagle" reports a part of a lecture by Leonard D. Abbott at a meeting of one of the Brooklyn districts last week. Commenting on the President's message, Comrade Abbott said:

"It is remarkable with what a large portion of the President's message Socialists can agree, without holding the same reasons for so doing nor arriving at the same ultimate conclusions. We might, for the sake of being agreeable, consent to his statement that 'never before has material well being been so widely diffused among "our" people,' though the advance of thirty-three per cent. in the cost of living, without a commensurate advance in wages, leaves this open to serious question. The questions, also, of the injurious effect of this well-being of 'our people' upon the well-being of the people of other nations, and how soon their consequent ill-being will react upon us, are worth thinking of. However, whether the statement of His Majesty be true or not, it is certainly true that never in the history of the world has labor produced so abundantly and never has it, with the wages received, been able to buy back such a small percentage of its products. In other words, never has the capitalist class so successfully exploited the wage-earning class, the figures of Labor Commissioner Wright showing that labor is enabled to regain only one-fifth of its product.

"We agree with His Strenuous Excellency that there must be incentive to 'individual energy' and that 'this is in no wise inconsistent with power to act in combination for aims which cannot so well be achieved by the individual acting alone.' Further, that 'our aim is not to do away with corporations (meaning concentrated industries); on the contrary, these big aggregations are the inevitable development of modern industrialism' Mr. Roosevelt must have been reading Karl Marx, else the prophecy of the latter has been so nearly fulfilled that a capitalistic President, even though lacking the ability or the courage to reach the conclusion of the logic of Marx, adopts his fundamental premises.

"We agree again with Mr. Roosevelt, that, 'a fundamental basis of civilization is the inviolability of property,' but we believe also that it is only by investing the collectivity with the ownership of land and capital that this end can be accomplished, for certainly the wage-worker's property in his product is not held inviolable so long as four parts out of five are absorbed by means of private ownership; with its stock watering, tariffs and other forms of genteel robbery. It all comes to the question of what can be properly regarded as private property."

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

It is hard to know whether our magistrates make greater fools of themselves when they have a bad motive or a good one. There is a poor widow woman with a boy to look after and provide for while she is at work in one of the big department stores. The boy takes to thieving and lying (he is the son of a U. S. recruiting sergeant, so the latter habit may have been inherited), the mother whips him with a rope; the Gerry Society man therefore takes away the child from her and has her arrested. The magistrate, good man, is so indignant over the whipping that he refuses bail and throws the woman into prison over Thanksgiving Day, and, of course, loses and she her place. Now, because this poor woman is not wiser than all of our civilization; because she does not know how to do better than the wisdom of all our laws combined; because she follows the same course in penology as the sainted Brockway of Elmira; because she gave the very same thing to the boy that the highly indignant moral magistrate does to her, viz.—punishment; she is branded as wicked. Which of ye judges will tell and show this woman what she should have done. No man among you knows.

The man who represents Colombia at the court of President Theodore, Washington, D. C., may be a good Republican of the old school, but evidently he is a back number for Washington, inasmuch as he has allowed the constitution of his country to stand between the capitalists of his country and a good deal with the capitalists of another country. This constitution forbids the conveyance away of sovereignty over any part of Colombian territory. That phrase was overcome by conveying something else called "perpetual control." Now, because Concha could not see the difference he has obtained the grand bounce. Our commercial statesmen were the first, of course, to make the remarkable "discovery" that Concha's constitution did not specifically forbid the use of this new phrase. What a splendid instrument for perpetual fraud in the hands of a ruling class is a constitution? There is manifestly no end to the art of discovering things it has not specifically forbidden. Fancy our own poor old document meeting its modern self in a lonely place, how they would stare at each other!

The fierce desire of the capitalists, of all minor shades, to have that canal, through lies thick or lies thin, is in itself some reason for the workers to pause and consider that canal. In all probability since capitalism blows so hot about it, we, for the present, may blow cold. No peoples hitherto separated are to be brought in touch by the new ditch; it has nothing like the moral possibilities that partly condones the cutting of that terrible cemetery for Egyptian laborers, the Suez Canal. On the other hand, it is sure to require, as a diplomatic corollary of its existence, the annexation of the territory now the subject of that jocund phrase, "perpetual control." The canal means war with the Latin races, a stirring up of religious and national animosities without meaning, and, therefore, fierce as hell. And the working classes will have to do the fighting and to suffer a long mental misdirection away from the class struggle in addition to the horrors of war.

The ghost of Hamlet's grand-child will be permitted to stalk over the stage in view of an admiring public sometime during the next session of Congress. It may stalk, it may even talk, but the anti-trust bill of Senator Cullom will never do more. To manifest the hopes of good Republicans concerning what Hamlet's grand-child might have been if it hadn't died in a miscarriage will be something. If ever Cullom's bill gets out of committee, the miscarriage is ready for it all right. Still, for political purposes the ghost may walk.

The key of the situation in every capitalistic country is possessed by that man who sees in the Chambers of Commerce and the innumerable other unslumbering combines of sinister dollars an all the year round league of war directed against the right or the ability of labor to strike against, or resist, its own subjugation. France today is like a great game board where the devices of all these money conspirators are converging on the strike of the stokers and firemen at Marseilles. Not being a Protestant country, the leaven of hypocrisy has not yet so generally descended from clergy to people there, as with us; and so they are still able to call a spade a spade though they only see a war between rich and poor. The same crowd who besought our own government on behalf of suffering humanity to knock down the coal miners are trying that same dishonorable trick on the French legislature against the stokers. But so far the Minister of Commerce declares against taking sides with the companies (openly) and for recognizing the right of labor to strike. These words are all right; anyway, they are much clearer than our official words on a similar occasion. Whether cleaner or not, let next week tell. But be assured of this—to reduce labor to slavery is the program of capitalism everywhere; and there is nothing in the French government, or our own, but capital. The best, therefore, that labor can expect will be a truce of expediency.

The billionaire combine known as the Kansas Beef Packers, is the only band of American gentlemen patriots who have forgotten their political catechism and are about to appeal before the Supreme Court with a plea of general hard times as an explanation of their conspiracy prices. This nation is about as clear as mud as to whether high prices mean good or bad times; so it is likely that a muddy decision will follow. President Harrison once declared that "cheap coat meant cheap man," therefore, dear meat means fine men. Hurrah for America and the packers who maintain our dignity in the stockyards.

Bishop Brewer of Montana declares that Christian men should go into politics and get possession of the legislative halls, executive chairs and government offices all over. This seems no more than fair seeing that politicians have taken possession of all the bishoprics, altars and pulpits.

How simply and truly the class struggle theory of society covers all the facts of political life in every country! The whole of bourgeois, clerical and clay-eating Junkers of Germany are willing to cast all constitutional rights to the winds, and to put their necks into parliamentary halter, to call back the Jesuits or any old thing if they can thereby throttle the Socialists. Now what dreaded interest is that for which Socialism stands and against which so many evils are ready to unite to the point of parliamentary extinction. Why labor, of course. If the working class rise they must fall. Away with constitutional government, away with party distinctions and theological squabbles, and welcome anything that will take away from them the menace of labor saving itself from their clutches. Anything to keep their slaves, for without slaves they are only men.

As the head of the property class militant (called the state), the Emperor of Germany is to-day as willing as our old friend Henry VIII. to place himself at the head of a reformation movement; a go back, such as would re-Romanize democracy out of the empire, if it ceases to be a bourgeois democracy, or threatens to become a democracy of labor; and, as far as its heads and their purposes are concerned, there would be as much religion in the one reformation as in the other.

If the modern family were such a blessedly sweet arcadian affair as our property cant cracks it up to be; let it not be forgotten that the people and principles that build up one family on property lines break up, and render impossible, more happy marriages than ever the poor starved heart of human nature will tell—though any clear-headed person may appreciate the vast measure of sordid and desolate love it makes outside the homes of the working people, who alone can marry for love in our times, though poverty afterwards bids them mourn for their love. But they are not the only people who live to be sorry for their marriages: a recent Postoffice order forbidding man and wife to hold office at one time is followed by a general break for the divorce courts up at Washington. Oh, ye gods, how those Socialists break up the family!

Lieutenant Cornelius Vanderbilt has just passed what the newspapers assure us was a strict examination for promotion in the regiment of uniformed office boys known as the N. G.'s of New York. His Highness astonished the examining board with his proficiency (Highnesses always do), especially in telling how he would mass and mobilize troops at and from various points of the state. His acquaintance with the Vanderbilt system of railroads and where the company would require guns to put down strikers was good. It was all a con amore science to Cornelius. I wonder when will the public conscience be ashamed of the incongruity and treason of placing troops under the command of public offenders like the Vanderbilts.

This government has been threatened by the sentimentalists with all sorts of deterioration, including moral deterioration, through its mingling with the semi-barbarous people of the Philippines. Up to date, however, the barbarians have distinctly the credit of raising us morally several notches above the pure ethics of commerce. What, for instance, will the elevated corn cornerors of our native land think of such a descent into paternalism as that of our strictly business administration there, literally going into business to buy rice cheap under cover so as to prevent strict American principles from taking advantage of the recently threatened famine and of starving the people. Whence comes this change of heart, this work of grace? Is it by expansion into savage lands that we are at last destined to be taught humanity, or is this only a gentle hand feeling for the jugular?

Can it be possible that after all her chances the former Miss Gould gave herself away, matrimonially, for nothing. There surely must be a screw loose in the heredity machine if this has happened. What a wail will go up from the daughters of Wall Street if the proposition now mooted in the French parliament to re-abolish titles really comes to law. Fancy the little Count What-you-call-him, now husband to the daughter of Jay Gould, without a title. What would you call him?

In order to dispose of those billions of surplus home products which the wide-awake Yankee is too sleepy to demand and too creepy to run for at the ballot boxes, we have been placed under constraint to convert China's millions to our Christianity and the Chinese silver currency into our own blessed gold currency at a depreciation of a quarter on the dollar and more on the man. To put it mildly, we have paralyzed the heathen Chinaman who finds himself up to his cue in debt to us without ever having dealt with us, at all. A gospel attested by such a miracle as this ought to capture the Chinaman body and soul; and—well, it has captured his body; but his soul, like John Brown's, is still marching on.

A collection of books and pamphlets dealing with labor and social problems has been purchased by a public library in Chicago for its reference department. This the capitalist commentators of the daily papers declare to be quite an innovation in library management; but they say, with a sigh, Labor has assumed such proportions of late that there is a demand for such reading. Labor has not assumed any new importance; it is as kicker and voter that he calls this new attention to himself.

It is amusing to see what "softies" our upper class people are, and what sums of money even hard-headed business people are willing to pay a man for tickling them, when they could tickle themselves to the same purpose for nothing. Here is Jules Huret from France tickling the thick-skinned members of our Alliance Francaise with a yarn concerning his great interviews with Socialist leaders in Europe, and his great discovery that the common Socialists are not Socialists, but only discontented people, and the big Socialists are still all patriotic Germans, Italians, Frenchmen, etc., ready to take up arms against each other like the rest of us. Some tickling is dangerous; as the old author of Valentine Vox shows in the case of Goodman, who was kept crazy by feathering the soles of his feet.

It may seem strange that the Secretary of the Treasury in his financial report deems it germane to the finance business to deal specifically with the secret service of the government and to put in among his growing columns of dollars a recommendation for "the investigation of secret associations which are maintained in all the seats of industry," and which the Secretary says are anarchistic. On dit. If you know they are anarchistic, W. S., why these grants of money for secretly investigating them? If such societies are maintained in all the centres of industry, why is it we have so few assassinations? If the Secretary does not know any more than his "think," is he not seeking to set up a Vidocq regime of spies in the labor unions? If there be anything at all but black reaction in this suggestion, why should it come from the dollars rather than from the brains and patriotism of the nation? It is truly nothing more than a war between the moneykind and the mankind of the world, and Shaw is only in command of the American detachment of moneykind. As to the anarchists, I doubt if there be enough of them anywhere outside of Wall Street with sense enough to associate for anything. Anarchy is but the capitalists' Pecksniffian name for Socialism. Through that door they hope to stab progress in the back.

So tenacious is the capitalistic mind of the doctrine that what they want is: that they not only sell watered stock on the basis of all they expect to get out of it, and charge interest on the imaginary principal in the water, but handle that imagination like real estate. The Pennsylvania Railroad now seeking its big franchise, declares that if the Aldermen don't grant it they will seek "relief" from the legislature. Relief from what? From being opposed, from being hindered. Opposition is a nuisance from which to be relieved!

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

The Comrade.

Independent labor parties have sprung into existence wherever Socialism has become a power. They have flourished or declined just according to our attitude toward them. Where we have tried bargaining and "alliances" they have prospered at our expense, where we have pursued the even tenor of our way, they have declined and the workers have realized Socialism—plain, unadulterated Socialism to be their only hope. Socialism stands for the working class as a whole without "ifs" or "buts." The trade unions embrace only a minority of the working class, Socialism appeals just as much to the workers outside the unions as to those within. If the unions having discovered that the strike and the boycott are inefficient, through our propaganda, decide to take up the political struggle, but, failing to comprehend fully, lose sight of the end, and mistake the means for the end, that is to be deplored. But it is not for us to go with them in their wanderings. Even if they win temporary and superficial successes, we must see to it that our light burns clear and bright and to it, sooner or later, they will turn. When they become Socialists they will join us and suport us and there will be no "fusion" and no "trading." Meantime, short of that, no fusion is possible which does not involve a sacrifice of principle upon our part. While continuing to show the unions, at every opportunity, our entire friendship, and cheerfully aiding them in all their struggles, we must not think of truncating one jot or one tittle of our principles. The Californian comrades have set a dangerous precedent. Fortunately, it has not proven very alluring in its immediate result.

Miners' Magazine.

Clark and Heinze, the two political giants of Montana, spent with prodigal hand untold sums of money to capture the judiciary of the state. Many of the working people who attained prominence in the circles of organized labor were used by both multi-millionaires to hide the cloven foot of their rascality. Men who lead in the councils of unionism were selected by these two moneyed stalwarts to aid in their battle for political supremacy. The man identified with a labor organization who, through mercenary considerations, committed treason against his fellow men by aiding the depraved Clark or the unscrupulous Heinze to seat a representative of the legal profession on the Supreme bench of Montana, would have scabbed the job of Judas Iscariot when he betrayed Christ.

Laramie Times.

"What can be done about it?" asks a writer—a woman—in one of our current weeklies in regard to the awful condition of child labor existing in some of our eastern and southern states. "What can be done about it?" And then she goes on to say that some of these states have prohibitory laws, and it is no use attempting to arouse public sentiment against it, for it is already strong to the point of frenzy. What can you do about it? Nothing, absolutely nothing, so long as children's life blood may be turned into gold; so long as children's shrouds yield the price of rich fabrics; so long as children's lives are the medium for the purchase of wealth and honors. You call for justice, but there is no justice; wrong and cruelty are the price of all your social system prizes. You call for mercy; your social system strangles it in its bearing.

But there is no use in going into hysterics about child labor. There is no use in cursing the men who grind children's lives into gold. There's no use in shedding crocodile tears over the premature graves of innocence. It is not well to put the premium high on these things and then rage at the men who grasp at our prizes. It is far better to abolish the profit that those who deal in children's lives realize from the traffic than to curse them for collecting the wage we, as society, offer.

New York Evening Post (Mugwump).

Burke wrote that he did not "wholly condemn the little arts and devices" of public men, since they "diffuse occasional gaiety over the severe brow of moral freedom." It would be a severe brow indeed which refused to relax at the sight of Mr. Roosevelt hurling chunks of his now somewhat familiar gospel at the head of Congress. With fresh zest he falls upon that old enemy of his, "the weakling"; for the thousandth time he notifies us that the "creed of despair" is not for him. A good thing two or three times, was the Greek rule for repetition, but President Roosevelt will evidently never let up on that "weakling" while breath remains. "We have iron in our blood," he asseverates. Agreed! Agreed! But, pray, don't make the iron enter our soul by haranguing us about it on every occasion. The President is to be praised for cutting down his message below the usual portentous length; but he could easily have substituted for the first column a simple, "See my speeches and books, passim." It is well to be strenuous, but there is such a thing also as being monotonous. * * *

We are bound to believe that Mr. Roosevelt's heart is in his policy of regulating Trusts, yet even here he is singularly vague and inconclusive. He does not specify a single definite evil or name one precise remedy. It is true, he refers Congress to the recommendations of his former message—which were, in a general way, publicity and national supervision—but they are pretty well forgotten by this time. Nor is the memory of them likely to be sharpened by the President's careful balancing now on both sides of the question, and his final recommendation—in language as ridiculously evasive as that which President McKinley used about the Trusts, and which they read and then went off chuckling—that Congress pass "a law reasonable in its provisions and effective in its operations." That will not frighten anybody. This entire part of the message will, in short, be taken as an effort to qualify and minimize the President's previous deliverances on the subject of Trusts. Attorney-General Knox's speech at Pittsburg was worth a dozen of it for directness, lucidity, and vigor.

[And Knox, but lately counsel for the Steel Trust, can safely talk, because the trust magnates well know that he will not act.—Note by The Worker.]

Albany Evening Journal.

A question interesting to political leaders is, Which of the two great parties suffered from the gain in the Socialist vote? The large Democratic vote in Greater New York, some say, indicates that there, at least, the Socialists drew largely from the Republican ranks. The Democrats polled their full vote and more too, while the Republican loss was over 25 per cent. In many up-state counties, regarded as Republican counties, the Socialists gained, but so did the Republicans. In Erie county, where the Republicans showed up in good form, the Socialist increase was slight. It would be a stretch of the imagination to say that the Socialists drew more from one party than from the other, outside of Greater New York, and for that district the problem is somewhat befogged by the fact that there were many stay-at-home Republicans below the Bronx.

Pueblo Courier.

The national law makers farce comedy aggregation is again holding the boards in Washington. In addition to the many old gags which have delighted (?) the dear public for so many years, there are a few dozen new ones in the shape of anti-trust measures which will serve to amuse the newspapers during the greater part of the engagement. These will, of course, keep the public quiet for the time being, and as there is no danger that they will remove any cuticle from the anatomy of the great corporations, they will let the play proceed. And Jones (meaning, in this case, the dear, dear, dear people) he pays the freight.

SOCIALISM AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

The government ownership of public utilities will fail to charm or fascinate any member of the Socialist Party. Government ownership with the powers of government in the hands of the capitalist class would fail to solve the economic problem. The people must first capture the powers of government before capitalism can be dethroned. When the great mass of the producing classes are in full possession of the sovereign power, the means to sustain life will come into their hands as naturally as water runs down hill.—Miners' Magazine.

PARTY NOTES.

Comrade Schunberg, of North Chelmsford, Mass. writes to Secretary Butscher of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association as follows. "Enclosed find money order for $9.15 subscribed by Socialists around here for the Daily Globe. We wish that every comrade in every town would do the same. We need a daily paper to fight the big law-breakers and to establish the Socialist movement. Hope the subscriptions will come from everywhere." There are a thousand little towns in the country that could follow this example. Let us hear from them.

Local Ashtabula, O., at its last meeting voted to establish a "Worker subscription bureau," with centrally located headquarters where a supply of subscription cards will be always on hand. Comrade Calaway was put in charge and started things up at once by ordering a supply of yearly and half-yearly cards, and a bundle of this issue of the paper.

Ex-Mayor John C. Chase of Haverhill will lecture on Socialism in the Opera House at Hartford, Conn., Sunday evening, Dec. 14. A rousing big meeting is expected, which will stir up the workingmen of Hartford to think and act for themselves more vigorously than they ever have before.

The International Association of Car Workers is organizing rapidly in the New England states and especially in the shops of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway system. A strong local has been organized recently in New Haven and has already a majority of the car workers in its ranks. This rapid growth is largely due to the activity of Socialist Party members who will soon have the railroad shops at New Haven completely organized.

At the next regular meeting of the American Branch of Local New Haven, the attitude of the Socialist Party toward "union labor" parties and the recent action of the party in California will be the subject disussion. All members should be present at this meeting, Saturday evening, December 13.

Algernon Lee will lecture at the Socialist Party headquarters in Newark, N. J., at 124 Market street, Sunday evening, Dec. 14, on "Socialist Politics and Old Party Politics." Admission is free and all comers are welcome.

The Philadelphia dailies, especially the "Ledger," are full of discussions on Socialism these days—editorials against the movement and letters in reply to the editorials. In the "Ledger" of Dec. 7 Comrade Swift has a forcible letter exposing some of the editorial fallacies. This sort of work is well worth while.

Comrade Dorne of Rome writes, "Our comrade, Rev. A. L. Byron-Curtiss caused quite a sensation by reading a paper on 'Socialism and the Church' before an association of clergyman. The paper caused a warm discussion, and one tried to bring him to trial before the bishop for blasphemy or heresy or some thing of the sort. But after reading the paper, the bishop not only repudiated the charge, but gave the paper his hearty approval. The paper, together with some of the correspondence and discussion, will probably be published in 'Wilshhire's Magazine.'"

Terre Haute comrades are hard at work. Headquarters have been established at 311 Ohio street and weekly meetings will be held. Comrades Strickmand and Jones, of Ohio, will spend five days this month, speaking for local Terre Haute.

The Idaho "Socialist," weekly, which has been in existence only about six months, will double its size with the first issue in January. The eighteen hundred Socialist votes cast in Idaho last month—our first campaign in the state—justify the comrades in expecting rapid progress.

Wisconsin will be one of the next states to send Socialists to the Legislature. Two of our Assembly candidates in Milwaukee were defeated by only 100 and 71 votes, respectively.

New York State.

On Monday evening, Dec. 15, Sol Fieldman will speak to the workingmen of Peekskill at Labor Hall. Local Peekskill is in excellent condition and is preparing to carry on a systematic propaganda of Socialist ideas.

In our issue of Nov. 23 we inadvertably gave the Social Democratic vote of Albany County as 123 in 1900 and 75 this year. The figures were just reversed.

Comrade Fieldman's tour of the state, which was to have begun this week, has unavoidably been postponed for a few days. We can assure the locals which he is to visit that any efforts they can make to bring out good audiences for Comrade Fieldman will be well spent.

New York City.

There is to be a debate on Socialism between E. R. A. Seligman, Professor of Political Economy at Columbia University, and Comrade H. Gaylord Wilshire on January 16, at Cooper Union. The debate will be held in the large hall under the auspices of the People's Institute.

At the West Side Socialist Club, Clark's Hall, N. W., corner of Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, this Friday evening, Dec. 12, Algernon Lee will deliver a lecture on "The Capitalist System," the second of a series of three lectures in exposition of Socialist philosophy and economics. Lectures on Socialism are held by the club every Friday evening, at 8 p. m., and strangers are cordially welcomed. Lectures in the near future by Comrades Abbott, Spargo, Mrs. Fraser, Krafft, Ufert, and Lemon have been arranged for. At the last meeting of the club it was decided to form an auxiliary literary society for the reading and discussion of Socialist literature.

The new club rooms of the New York Socialist Literary Society, at 241 East Broadway, will be opened Sunday evening, Dec. 14. Comrades and sympathizers of the whole city and vicinity are invited to attend. Good speakers will address the audience and after the speeches there will be a social and package party.

The General Committee of Local New York meets at the Labor Lyceum Saturday evening, Dec. 13.

The Kings County Committee meets at the Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Saturday evening, Dec. 13.

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 16, at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949-955 Willoughby avenue, will be held a general meeting of the comrades of the borough of Brooklyn. All should be present by 8 o'clock.

John Spargo will lecture in the rooms of the Socialist Educational League, 933 Second avenue, Sunday evening, Dec. 14. "Labor Politics and Socialism" will be his subject. Admission is free. Good music.

At the meeting of the 20th A.D., held on Dec. 4 at 421 First avenue, Comrade Gibbs was chosen as Recording Secretary. Comrades Kendall and Gibbs as delegates to the Daily Globe Conference, and Comrade Cramer as delegate to the General Committee. The district will hold an entertainment on New Year's Eve at the Labor Lyceum; admission will be 10 cents. A committee was chosen to find a hall for lectures. The next business meeting will be held Dec. 17 and all Social Democrats in the district are invited to attend and join the party organization.

Two new members were admitted at the last meeting of Local Richmond. Comrade LeGrand was chosen as Organizer. It was decided to arrange a series of lectures on Socialism to be held at the Labor Lyceum, Roff street, Stapleton. A delegate to The Globe Conference was elected and the local pledged $20 for the fund. Plans were also made for the Commune festival in March.

The Bronx Borough Agitation Committee held a special meeting on Nov. 28 and a regular meeting on Dec. 2. The term of the present members expires with the end of this month and the branches are called upon to elect their delegates for the ensuing term. On Jan. 5 occurs the regular general meeting of all comrades in the Bronx and it is hoped that every one of the hundred and ten members will be present, so that the work of the new year may be started with vigor and good spirit. A number of campaign fund lists are still outstanding; they should be turned in at once, so that all old accounts may be settled. On Thursday, Jan. 15, a propaganda meeting will be held in the twenty-second election district of the 35th A. D., of which further notice will be given. The Progressive Workingmen's Societies of the Bronx will hold their regular spring festival for the benefit of the borough campaign fund. The splendid gain made this year in the Bronx only shows how much more can be done next year if every comrade does his duty, instead of leaving all the work to a few members. Solid organization, with good officers and unremitting work by all members will be sure to bring inspiring results next fall.

At the last meeting of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville a number of young men of the club volunteered to act as ushers at the concert of Local New York in Cooper Union on Dec. 18. The club accepted an invitation to asstst at the "christening" of the new Downtown Young People's Club; the progress of the Yorkville club will be reported there. The discussion of the evening was on the attitude of the Social Democratic Party toward the trade unions.

One of the new features of the Social Democratic movement in the city is the beginning of a series of German "family evenings," at the Labor Lyceum, due, by the way, to the enterprise of Comrade Taenner. The series was begun last Sunday with great success and all German-speaking Socialists and working people are invited to attend every Sunday evening at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street. At each gathering there will be a short lecture or informal talk on some topic of intelligent interest, together with musical and other entertainment of a high character, and an opportunity will thus be given for social intercourse among the numerous progressive working people of the downtown districts which will doubtless be both very enjoyable and very advantagous to the movement.

At the last meeting of the 16th A. D. five new members were enrolled. The committee having charge of the sale of The Worker reported the sale on the average of fifty copies a week. After election we started with but twenty-five. Comrade Reich reported that on Thursday, Dec. 25, Comrade Lissauer is billed to lecture before the district organization in German; his subject will be reported next week. Comrades who have not yet voted on the election of a National Committeeman should attend the meeting of the district on Thursday evening, Dec. 11, at 8-10 Avenue D, Lafayette Hall.

Dr. G. Fish Clark and E. D. Knappen will be the speakers at the Brooklyn Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Sunday evening, December 14.

The 1st, 3d and 5th A. D. will meet on Dec. 15, at 150 Spring street, at Comrade Schornberg's restaurant, at 8 P. M. Important business to be attended to and every member is requested to be on hand promptly, as Comrade Schornberg closes early.

THE CALIFORNIA AFFAIR.

At the general meeting of Local New York last Saturday, called to consider the action of the Socialist Party of San Francisco and Los Angeles in fusing with the U. L. P., after lengthy discussion two resolutions were adopted, one dealing specifically with this affair and the other dealing with the general attitude of the Socialist Party towards trades unions engaged in independent political action.

The first resolution, which was proposed by Comrade Slobodin, is as follows:

"Resolved, That Local New York, in general meeting assembled, unqualifiedly and unreservedly disapproves the tactics of fusion in practice and compromise in principle adopted and pursued by the California Socialist Party during the late elections and still pursued now, and urge the California Socialist Party to revise its methods and place itself in accord with the non-fusion and uncompromising principles and tactics of the Socialist Party of the United States."

The second resolution, moved by Comrade Hillquit:

"In view of the recent occurrences in the state of California, Local New York of the Social Democratic Party hereby makes the following declaration of its attitude towards trade unions engaging in independent political action, and recommends the said declaration for adoption by the National Council of the party at its next annual meeting.

"To accomplish its own emancipation, labor must conduct its struggles against the oppression of capital on the economic and the political field with equal efficiency.

"The economic struggles of the workingmen concern their immediate and separate interests, and are most efficiently conducted by organizations of separate trades, independently or in conjunction with each other. But the political struggles of the workingmen concern the general and ultimate interests of their class, and can only be conducted successfully by a national party of labor, with branch organizations in the various states and municipalities, trained in political battle, and standing for the ultimate abolition of the entire wage system as well as for all measures of temporary relief of labor conditions.

"And while the two kinds of organizations are parts of the same labor movement and require the most cordial support and co-operation of each other for their mutual success, the special mission of each should be limited to its proper sphere of activity.

"The Socialist Party of the United States has shown itself fully capable of waging the political struggles of the working class in this country, and with the co-operation of the trade unions, it has every prospect of bringing about the political supremacy of the working class in this country within a time not far distant. When, therefore, trade unions as such organize for political action in opposition to or independent of the party, adopting different platforms, and at times compromising with the political foes of their class, they impair their own usefulness as an economic factor as well as that of the Socialist Party as a political factor, and injure the interests of the labor movement as a whole.

"We, therefore, call upon the trade unions of this country, in their own enlightened interest, to support the political struggles of the Socialist Party instead of putting obstacles in the way of its progress by forming rival local organizations, and we call upon all subdivisions of the Socialist Party to maintain their positions as the political organizations of the working class in their respective localities, and not to yield that position to any other political parties of labor or otherwise, nor to fuse or compromise with such parties."

STATE COMMITTEE.

Session of the State Committee of the Social Democratic Party of New York, Nov. 25, 1902. Present; Dr. Chas. Furman, James N. Wood, Henry L. Slobodin, I. Phillips, Herman Reich, Emile Neppel; absent: Chris Bub, Leonard D. Abbott and Godfrey Lehner, without excuse; excused, Bowerman. Correspondence received: Rochester, ordering supplies; Schenectady; Wellsville; Pearl River; Johnstown, ordering stamps; Watertown; Ohio State Committee; National Committee; Connecticut State Committee; Herkimer; Denver, Col.; Philadelphia; Wm. T. Brown, financial report and bill; Comrade Alex. Jonas, financial report and bill; financial reports received from Locals New Rochelle, Rochester, Cold Spring, Ft. Edward, Utica, Rome and Peekskill; printers' bills tendered by Comrade Publishing Company and Geo. J. Speyer.

The following comrades have accepted the nomination for National Committeeman from New York: Morris Hillquit, John Spargo, Wm. T. Brown and Theo. F. Schorr. The following comrades have declined the nomination; Leonard D. Abbott, Frank Sieverman and Alexander Jonas. Ordered that the names of candidates be submitted to a general vote to be closed on Dec. 25.

On motion it was ordered that in pursuance of the state constitution of the Social Democratic Party, the Locals of the City of New York be called upon to elect a City Committee: Local New York, to elect seven delegates; Local Kings, five; Local Queens, two; Local, Richmond, one. The delegates to meet as a temporary City Committee at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, on January 3, 1903, 8 P. M., and to decide upon the number of delegates from each Local and on the powers and functions of the City Committee.

A committee appeared from the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association stating that the Association desires to share with the State Committee the services and expenses of Comrade Sol. Fieldman as state organizer and agent for the New York "Globe," the coming Socialist daily newspaper. On motion it was ordered that Comrade Sol Fieldman be engaged as state organizer for a short period, his services and expenses to be shared by the Association for the Socialist Daily.

On motion the state secretary was instructed to get estimates for agitation booklets for New York state. Ordered that the Auditing Committee be requested to audit the financial books of the State Committee. On motion the state secretary was instructed to prepare a report of the last campaign.

HAVERHILL COMMENT.

Republican Mayor-elect Henri R. Watson (elected by a plurality of 14 votes over Parkman B. Flanders, Socialist candidate), discussing the result of the city campaign in the Haverhill "Gazette," says:

"I think that the result is disappointing to the Republican friends who fought with me. I expected a larger vote, and can see that I did not get it because of the advent of Mr. Kelly" (the Democratic candidate). "I won because some of the Democrats voted for me, and a good many Republicans were saved by their desire to beat the Socialists. Republicans must see from this result that they cannot experiment with other candidates, even in city elections. I have my friends to thank, both in and out of the party."

Comrade Flanders, being asked to express his view of the result, said:

"I am pleased with the showing made by our party. It has been a splendid campaign, one of the best, and I am satisfied."

It is the general feeling of Socialists that, even though the recount demanded may verify the present report of the vote (which is by no means certain), we may be well satisfied with the result. The Republican and Democratic parties in Haverhill, as in Brockton, are being slowly but surely forced together and the lines drawn between Socialism on the one side and capitalism on the other.

The Republican "Gazette" recognizes that the Socialists have good ground for satisfaction. Editorially the "Gazette" speaks as follows:

"The Republican candidates for Mayor and Aldermen of the city for the coming year have been elected and the attempt to once more place the city in the Socialistic column has been defeated. Naturally enough the victory is a matter of congratulation among the successful candidates and their friends, but to the great majority of the party, and to any one who is concerned in maintaining the reputation of the city as a conservatively governed community, there is something more than the spirit of exultation in the consideration of the election figures. A plurality of 14 votes in a total vote of 6,400 is a small achievement for a party which in a vote of 5,800 at the state election secured a plurality of nearly 1,200, and indicates that something is wrong. Where the fault lies and the means of remedying that fault, it should be the duty of the Republican party in this city to search out.

"The election returns are confirmatory of the position of the 'Gazette' throughout the entire campaign—that the Socialist Party is still to be considered a dangerous factor in municipal politics, and that as the direct opponent of Socialistic principles in city, state or nation, the Republican party must be looked to for the contest, and that men who subscribe to Republican principles owe it as a duty to be loyal to that party and its nominations. Not one word of criticism of the Democratic candidate for Mayor has been uttered and the vote which he received is a handsome tribute to his personality and the respect which his fellow-citizens have for him, and undoubtedly there were in the city hundreds more who would gladly, under other conditions, have marked their ballots for him, but who read the signs of the times so plainly as to understand that such action meant the election of the Socialist candidate, and for that reason refrained and voted the Republican ticket. Hundreds of Republicans failed to read these signs or, regardless of their portent, took the chance, and the narrow margin of Republican plurality to-day indicates the desperate character of the chance they took. Whether it will teach a lesson or not time only will tell."

—The Social Democratic Party of New York is the same as the Socialist Party of other states. The difference of name is due solely to provisions of the election laws. Do not confuse this organization with the so-called "Socialist Labor Party," or "union-smashers."

THE SOCIALIST PARTY AND THE TRADE UNIONS.

The Duty the Party Owes the Unions and What It Can Rightly Demand of Them.

What relations should subsist between the Socialist Party and the trade unions? What is the duty of the Socialist Party and of individual Socialists toward the unions? What, on the other hand, does the Socialist Party have a right to ask of the unions?

These are questions that must be answered, for the two movements are here to stay; both are growing in strength and developing in spirit and policy; they are made up of members of the same class and, in their different ways, deal with the same problem; they must hold close relations of some sort, either harmonious and mutually helpful or discordant and injurious to both.

In our attempt to answer these questions we address ourselves both to members and sympathizers of the Socialist Party, whether they are trade unionists or not, and to trade unionists of every shade of political opinion. We believe that the answer which we shall present embodies the accepted opinion of the Socialist Party upon this subject, as developed by years of experience.

The Common Ground.

The Socialist Party has its sole reason for existence in the division of society into classes, the exploitation and oppression of the working class, and the necessity for its emancipation. Neither of the old parties openly stand for the interests of any one class; they pretend not to recognize the existence of classes; each of them claims to represent the interests of all the people. But facts are stubborn and do not disappear because men deny their existence. The class struggle is a fact; and the very parties which, in their ante-election professions, refuse to see it, in their post-election practices, give the most striking illustrations of its force; they pretend to represent all the people in order that they may win political power, with which to serve a part of the people at the expense of the rest. The Socialist Party takes no such false position. It claims to represent only a part of the people—the more numerous and the only useful class—as against the small and useless class of exploiters whom the old parties serve.

The Socialist Party, then, is an organization founded on working-class interest and having as its object the advancement of the interests of the workers as against those of the capitalists.

The trade unions in general have, in the past, refused to admit in words the existence of the class struggle between capitalists and workers; some of them still do not clearly recognize it; we often hear labor leaders (even honest ones) talking in the same strain with old-party politicians about the "brotherhood of Capital and Labor" and declaring that the object of the unions is not to fight the capitalists but "to establish harmony between employers and employed." But the acts of the unions fortunately belie their words. Just as the old-party politicians, denying the existence of classes, faithfully serve the capitalist class, so the unions, denying the conflict of class interests, yet put forth every effort and often make heroic sacrifices in fighting for the interests of the working class against their employers. It is not words that count, but acts; and the action of the unions, in demanding reduction of working hours or increase of pay or improvement of the conditions of labor, against the will and the interest of the employers, and in fighting for these objects with such weapons as the strike, the boycott, and the label—such action proves that the only reason for their existence is in the antagonistic interests of the working class and the employing class.

The trade unions, then, like the Socialist Party are organizations founded on working-class interest and having as their object the advancement of the interests of the workers as against those of the capitalists.

Our Duty to the Unions.

This being the common ground—and, as we shall show, the whole of the common ground—of the two movements, what is the duty of Socialists, as a party and as individuals, toward the unions?

It is the duty of Socialists as individuals—as has been declared in our last national convention—to join the unions of their various crafts, where such exist, and to act in good faith as members.

It is the duty of the party to lend its support to the unions in their struggles—its financial support when necessary and feasible (as it has done, most energetically, in the late miners' strike), and at all times its moral support, which is often still more valuable. The national, state, and local platforms of the Socialist Party, its papers and pamphlets and leaflets, and the utterances of its candidates and other spokesmen all help to fulfil this obligation.

This much we owe to the unions simply because they are organizations of our class; this much they have a right to demand of us; and wherever the party organization or any of its members fail to do these things they fail of doing their full duty as Socialists.

Our Separate Tasks.

But while the Socialist Party and the unions have this common ground, they are far from being identical. Both their purposes and their methods are different, though not antagonistic. Each has its work, which the other cannot do, and each must leave the other free to perform its special function.

The specific purpose of the unions is to carry on the battles of the working class in detail under the conditions of the capitalist system. So long as capitalism lasts the workers will be overworked and robbed and oppressed. Trade unions cannot put a stop to this. But they often can and do somewhat lighten the burden of toil and somewhat reduce the degree of profit-robbery and somewhat check the oppressors' insolence; the gain, though small, is worth fighting for. Still oftener they succeed in defending the workers from a lowering of their condition, which would take place were there no union. And, perhaps more important than all, they train the workers in the habit of feeling and thinking and acting together, the invaluable habit of organization.

The means and methods for carrying on this daily struggle are industrial or economic, not political—the strike, the boycott, the label, the working-card, the benefit funds. In order to use these methods with the maximum of success it is desirable that every workman in a trade should belong to the trade organization, and no distinction can be made on account of politics any more than of race or religion. A union which should admit only Republicans or only Democrats or only Socialists or should exclude either of these or discriminate between them would assuredly not succeed as a trade union.

To sum up: The unions fight for immediate and partial improvement of the workers' condition by purely industrial methods which require for their successful operation that all workingmen shall be taken in without distinction of political belief.

The specific function of the Socialist Party is to fight for the complete emancipation of the working class from exploitation and class tyranny. This can be accomplished only by the overthrow of the capitalist system and the building up of a Co-operative Commonwealth. This is a far larger aim than that of the unions. It is a different but not a conflicting aim.

To say that the Socialist Party must act always with this final aim in view is not to say that it can do nothing for the immediate betterment of the workers' condition; on the contrary, as it gains partial control of the powers of government or even before it has gained any victories at the polls (through the fear which its growth inspires), it can and does do very much to advance the immediate interests of the working class; and it does this the more effectively in proportion as it guides itself by the light of its one ultimate purpose.

The methods which the Socialist Party uses for this great battle are distinctly political methods—education in economic and political science, organization of those who accept its principles, and political campaigns for the purpose of putting the powers of government in the hands of men pledged to carry those principles into effect. In order that these methods should be used with success it is necessary that all who believe in the principles of Socialism should be politically united; no distinction can be made on any other ground. If the party should exclude members or divide its forces on other questions—even on questions which may legitimately be considered by trade unions—it would assuredly not succeed as a political party.

To sum up: The Socialist Party seeks the ultimate complete emancipation of the working class, through the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, and fights for this end by educational and political methods which require that no qualification but sincere support of Socialist principles be recognized.

The Limit of Our Duty.

In view of this difference in purpose and method between the two movements, what are the limits of our duty to the unions? What have the unions not a right to demand of us?

They have no more right to demand that the Socialist Party shall subordinate its political efforts to their industrial battles than the party has to demand the reverse of them. It is the duty of the Socialist Party to teach Socialism and get votes for the Socialist ticket, and every other consideration must be subordinate to these.

The unions have no right to demand that the Socialist Party take a position on one side or the other in their internal questions. If they ask it, we have no right to yield. It is neither the right nor the duty of the Socialist Party to involve itself in conflicts of jurisdiction and the like among or within the unions. Such interference, as shown by experience in the past, is harmful to both movements. Such questions can be solved only by the unions themselves. The Socialist Party should give its support to unions—and to any workingmen, organized or unorganized—as against the capitalists, but not to one union as against another.

We speak here of the party, as such. With the individual Socialist it is a different matter. It is the duty of each Socialist to join the union of his trade; and he is there in duty bound to take a position on union questions. He should act there, fearlessly and energetically, for the highest good of his class, which will include the highest good of his craft.

Nor are Socialists bound to refrain from public discussion of the policy of the unions. Provided such discussion is based on principle and is carried on in an intelligent manner, provided it is fraternal criticism and advice, not flattery nor abuse nor attempted dictation, it is helpful to both movements.

In a word, the Socialist Party does not seek to dictate to the unions in their affairs nor is it willing to be dictated to by them in its own affairs; it shuns entangling alliances; it desires that the two movements should be carried on independently in order that they may be carried on harmoniously.

What We Demand.

What, on the other hand, does the Socialist Party ask of the unions? Two things, we think, we have a right to demand.

First. The unions on their side must remember the different purposes and methods of the two movements. They would rightly object did the party seek to form rival unions. With equal reason, the Socialist Party objects if the unions seek to form a new party. In the nature of things, as pointed out before, the union must include men of all political beliefs. A party can include only men who agree in political belief. The union which attempts to be also a political party, therefore, must either cease to be a real union or fail to be a real party. The Socialist Party must maintain its right to the political field as strictly as it withholds its hand from the industrial field.

Second, The unions are the great primary school of the working class. Experience shows that it is impossible, as reason shows that it would be unwise, to prevent the discussion of political questions there. There is politics in every union in the land. It is well that it should take the form of open discussion, not of secret intrigue. We have a right to ask, therefore, that the unions give an opportunity in their meetings for free discussion of political questions and that Socialists be given exactly the same chance as the advocates of other parties.

Only Way to Win.

This brings us to the final point—a word of counsel to Socialists in the unions.

Aside from your duty as union members, your one duty there as Socialists is to make more Socialists.

You cannot do this by intrigue nor by tricks of parliamentary law nor by any means except convincing argument and good example.

It is not going to do the party any good to "capture" a union; it is likely to harm both the union and the party.

An "endorsement" is not worth the paper it is written on unless it is the cheerful expression of the honest conviction of a majority of the members.

The Socialist Party does not want anything but what it can get in good faith; nothing gained otherwise will help it in the least; and any temptation to gain apparent victories by other means should be sternly put aside.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the election laws, it is obliged to use the name Social Democratic Party. Its emblem in this state is the Arm and Torch.

This party should not be confused with the so-called Socialist Labor party, which has but two reasons for existence—to foster dissension in the Socialist movement and to attack and slander the trade unions.

Many votes intended for the Socialist Party (or Social Democratic Party in New York) have been cast by mistake for the "union-smashing" S. L. P., on account of the similarity of names. We call on our readers to bear in mind the difference and to convey the information to others.

MORE LABOR LAWS ARE KNOCKED OUT.

"Whom the gods would make destroy they first make mad." The courts, whose infamous decisions against the workers have done so much in the past to educate the latter, and make Socialists of them, are still at their work. This week brings news of two more "labor laws" declared unconstitutional—one in Ohio, the other in Indiana.

The Chicago "Citizen" tells the story for Ohio. It says:

"The eight-hour law in Ohio was knocked out by the Supreme Court, Tuesday.

"The law was enacted April 16, 1900, and was the result of many years of agitation on the part of the organized workers of the state.

"The test came in the case of the city of Cleveland against the Clement Bros. Construction Co., which concern was building a sewer and employing its men more than the legal eight hours per day. The city sought to enforce the penalty of $10 for each day that the law was violated, an aggregate of $320. The Circuit Court, about a year ago, ruled in favor of the defendants and the case has been hanging fire ever since.

"The Supreme Court on Tuesday held that 'No part of the contract price can be withheld on account of violation of the eight-hour act.'

"We have said before and repeat that the interpretation and enforcement of law depends upon the class interests and instincts of those in power. If workingmen elect capitalists and their agents, they must expect that constitutions and laws will be interpreted by and for capitalism. If workingmen elect persons who stand for their class interests they will win their cases, and not before."

The Indiana case is reported by the Chicago "Socialist" as follows:

"A decision of the Indiana Supreme Court has declared the 'pluck me' store law unconstitutional and invalid. The law against these stores had been passed by the last Indiana legislature, and is now knocked out in the plea that it is 'class legislation.' Its provisions dealt exclusively with coal miners and 'merchants,' as the agents of the coal company that do the plucking are termed, and it was contended that the law placed the 'merchant' at a disadvantage compared with other exploiters to whom an assignment of wages might be made. So the eternal and inalienable right of all classes of exploiters to pluck the proletariat has again been vindicated. The latter is fair game anyhow, and should not complain so long as he votes for the system which has as its basis his continual plucking, and then files an objection against one special brand of plucker."

We learn slowly, indeed, but we do learn. In a couple of years, at the present rate, we shall begin to elect Socialist judges, and then we shall get decisions of a different sort.

—The Worker stands for straight Socialism, and against fusion or compromise of any sort. Party locals should see that new comrades subscribe to The Worker, that they may become clear and class-conscious Socialists.

—We wish to double the circulation of The Worker in the next six months. Will you help us?

THE DYING STATE AND THE STATE TO BE BORN.

By Franklin H. Wentworth.

> The election frauds in Philadelphia are an annual occurence, but this year they reached an unusual climax of the picturesque. The Fifth Ward outdid itself, for, having cast only 1,067 votes in 1900 for President McKinley, it gave 5,173 to the noble Pennypacker. As an example of ballot-box stuffing this is held, in Philadelphia, as a record-beater. —[Springfield Republican.

The American people have arrived at that point of moral degeneracy where they look upon indisputable proof of ballot-box stuffing with a smile, and their greatest newspapers dismiss the subject with a satirical or amusing paragraph.

The American people calling themselves Republicans or Democrats and professing to believe in representative government, stand idle and impotent while their ballots are treated as useless paper and their sacred privilege of franchise is dragged in the mire. Their manhood is not of a quality to right wrongs; it is too flaccid and flabby to avenge grossest insult.

It is a sign of death; the American Republic is dying.

Those ingenious persons of the political division called Democrats, who point to the Philadelphia putrescence as Republican, and therefore not of their doing, are invited to turn to Colorado where persons of THEIR label in Democratic districts held back the returns until they found out how Arapahoe county (Denver) voted. They counted on so deftly magnifying Democratic returns as to overcome any Republican plurality shown by Denver. The Democrats wanted to get the offices, and the capitalists' money that goes with them, away from the Republicans, who stand frankly for boodle and plutocracy and hence better deserve them. The only thing which prevented the success of the Democrats in this their highly moral effort was that in certain districts where the Socialist Party vote was big enough to be considered THEY DID NOT DARE TO TAMPER WITH IT.

Democrats stole the ballots of Republican voters in Democratic districts and Republicans stole the ballots of Democratic voters in Republican districts. This is legitimate in capitalist politics, and as both parties do it they have nothing to fear from each other.

BUT BEHIND EVERY VOTE OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY THERE IS A MAN, AND THERE IS SOMETHING IN MANHOOD WHICH TERRIFIES THE SCOUNDREL AND KEEPS HIM FROM HIS INSTINCTIVE INDULGENCES.

The present economic system has eaten out the moral fibre of its votaries. Those who uphold it have no longer any determinate stock of either intellectual or spiritual virility. The state of political decay—the dying state—has within itself no dynamic with which to arrest its dissolution.

One hundred years ago so insolent and undisguised a fraud as this of Philadelphia would have aroused the American people to a frenzy, for then their faith had not been emasculated: they were capable of intellectually conceiving that a menace to their ballot in one place menaced it at every other, and they treasured the ballot as something which had been bought with blood.

Now, to-day, when they are traduced and their ballots stolen, they stand as vulgar dupes of still more vulgar political tricksters—tools of their economic masters—and impotently smile at their own debasement. Their chiefest ethical impulse lifts them only to a dull indifference.

AND YET THE DAY IS ALMOST HERE WHEN THEIR INDIFFERENCE TO THE USE OF THE BALLOT IS TO SERVE AS THE EXCUSE FOR THEIR DISFRANCHISEMENT. HERE AND THERE, THERE IS CREEPING INTO THE PRESS AND INTO CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE THE SUGGESTION, COMING FROM PERSONS IN HIGH PLACES, THAT THE BALLOT IS A FAILURE.

Such an opinion may in the face of conditions to-day be an honest one.

In 1879 Henry George, the greatest spiritual nobleman whom America has yet produced, wrote:

"Given a community with republican institutions, in which one class is too rich to be shorn of its luxuries, no matter how public affairs are administered, and another so poor that a few dollars on election day will seem more than any abstract consideration; in which the few roll in wealth and the many seeth with discontent at a condition of things they know not how to remedy, and power must pass into the hands of jobbers who will buy and sell it as the Praetorians sold the Roman purple, or into the hands of demagogues who will seize and wield it for a time, only to be replaced by worse demagogues."

The conditions Henry George pictured in 1879 are to-day partially realized, and it is a feeble vision which cannot see their complete realization in America in the near future.

From such a realization to disfranchisement and arbitrary rule is but a step. Many a well-meaning but unphilosophical person discouraged by public immorality would turn with relief to a dictator who would guarantee "good" government.

Then the past would have to be fought all over again, as those who believe progress is only a circle instead of a spiral, actually think it will.

In the world to-day, however, and increasing in America with leaps and bounds, is the sentiment of Socialism.

So far as we know no such concept has ever figured in any preceeding civilization; it is unique in history. Its influence on human life may therefore be unique.

The political rottenness which never can develop, from within, the vitality to clean itself, and which, in every preceeding republic, has been cleaned from without by military dictatorship: may at this stage be cleaned by Socialism, a higher kind of social organism.

The world may after repeated republican failures, be now ready to take the step progress indicates as imperative.

If it is not, then we will have to try again, another century or cycle.

One thing, however, seems to emerge from the chaos of present political confusion.

This is that the vote for Socialism will get itself counted.

The very feebleness of political expression in the old parties, indicated by indifference in registration and to ballot-box frauds, makes the Socialist vitality appear as a very positive force. And it IS a positive force.

IN THE SOCIALIST MOVEMENT ALONE RESIDES TO-DAY THE DYNAMIC FORCE WHICH IS TO PRESERVE THE BALLOT TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

To the Socialist the ballot is sacred. It is the key with which he is to unlock the future. He will not allow it to be taken from him, and in defending his own right he will defend the right of all.

Out of the heart of the proletariat is blazing the Promethean fire which is to purge away the rottenness of of Philadelphia and all future Philadelphias, and build the city of the pure, glad common life.

THE TWO KINDS OF INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

At the annual meeting of the Baptist Social Union at the Hotel Savoy, Dec. 4, the two speakers of the evening were Rev. Dr. Johnson, pastor of Mr. Rockefeller's Fifth Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. Owen R. Lovejoy, pastor of the Congregational church in Mount Vernon. The closing paragraph of Comrade Lovejoy's address on "The Coal Strike," as reported by a representative of The Worker, was significant. He said:

"A single word on the future of labor. I may introduce the word by an utterance from the great statesman, Henry Clay, spoken in defence of slavery. 'The true solution of the contest for all time between labor and capital is that capital should own the laborer, whether white or black.' There are three possible conditions of labor: First, slave labor; second, wage labor; third, free labor. Clay tells us that under the first there is perpetual peace. We know that under the second there is perpetual war. The moral intelligence of the race forbids a return to the peace of slave labor. An increasing number of sensible people are dissatisfied with the conflict of wage labor. Having taken the two steps in our industrial development, may we not be justified in attempting the next step, and applying to our industrial life that principle which we have been seeking to apply to our political life—the principle of democracy—thus making labor free?"

BROCKTON COMMENT.

The Republican candidate in Brockton, Mayor David W. Battles, who was overwhelmingly defeated by the Socialist candidate, Charles H. Coulter, is still more blue. He declares: "This election shows that the majority don't want an honest man over them."

Mayor-elect Coulter, naturally, feels highly pleased. In discussing the victory, he says incidentally:

"For the first time in the history of Brockton a considerable number of union men has been elected. Of the candidates-elect, nine of the eleven Socialists carry union cards and the other two would if their occupation were such as to give them opportunity for uniting with any of the crafts. Brockton will demonstrate to the nation in the coming year what union workingmen, through the Socialist Party, can accomplish."

The Brockton "Times" says, in its news columns:

"It was an awful waking up for the Republicans. State election, with its Socialist gain, told the Republicans that the Socialist brethren were up and doing. The Socialists claimed they would make the Republican majorities look small at city election. The Republicans, spurred on by very necessity, waged a vigorous campaign. The most effective party organization that could be assembled was put into working order and the old party cause seemed to gain as the campaign progressed. Toward the last the Republicans declared they had worked up to strength whereby they could look toward victory. A narrow defeat was the worst anticipated on the head of the ticket. The old working majority in the city council was deemed safe."

THE RIGHT TO LABOR IS JOY.

Out on the roads they have gathered, a hundred thousand men.
To ask for a hold on life as sure as the wolf's hold in his den.
Their need lies close to the quick of life as the earth lies close to the stone.
It is as meat to the slender rib, as marrow to the bone.
They ask but the leave to labor, to toil in the endless night.
For a little salt to savor their bread, for houses water tight.
They ask but the right to labor and to live by the strength of their hands—
They who have bodies like knotted oaks and patience like sea sands.
And the right of a man to labor and his right to labor in joy
Not all your laws can blot that right, nor the gates of Hell destroy.
For it came with the making of man and was kneaded into his bones.
And it will stand at the last of things on the dust of crumbled thrones.

THE REAL LABOR PARTY.

The truth which the Socialists have been preaching for many years, that the laborers must act independently and unitedly in the political field has at last been accepted and labor is awakening everywhere to the fact that it must invade the political arena and capture political power if it is to effectively resist exploitation.

But now that the need of united action at the polls by the working class is recognized, there is a tendency to neglect the no less important truth that such action must be based upon certain well established principles if any good is to result to the workers. "Striking at the ballot box" does little good unless the proper things are struck for.

The Socialist Party offers a means of making the political efforts of labor effective. In the first place there can be no disputing the fact that the Socialist Party is from start to finish a "Labor Party". Its membership, platform, principles, organization, officers, literature, everything are determined, controlled and directed by and for the laboring class. At every point it knows no interest save those of labor. Nor is it the organ of any narrow faction of the working class. It lends assistance to every batle waged by organized labor wherever it may be fought. The over $9,000 which it gave from its scanty resources to the striking coal miners, where other political parties with overflowing treasuries gave nothing, is but an example of this fact. In every effort made by labor to better its condition the Socialist Party is always found on the side of the worker and against the exploiter. The Socialist Party stands with the workers during the whole year in their economic strugle and then does not desert them on the crucial day at the ballot box.

But the claim of any party to represent the interest of the laborers does not depend upon its membership or its name so much as upon the principles for which it stands. The principles of the Socialist Party are those which the best minds of the labor movement all over the world long ago decided were essential to the liberation of the wage worker. It recognizes the fact which is stated in the preamble to the constitutions of nearly every trade union in America, that labor is the source of all wealth, and demands that the necessary steps be taken to enable labor to retain all it produces and to control the process of prodcution. The only way this can be secured is through the colective ownership by the laborers, of the land and machinery with which they work in the production of wealth. These facts have now become so thoroughly recognized as true that any party that should truly represent the laboring class would be compelled to simply duplicate the statements and positions already taken by the Socialist Party in its platforms and public statements.

It is thus evident that as to make-up and principles, the basic essentials, the Socialist Party is eminently fitted to be considered as THE party of the working class. But when it is compared with a party which does not yet exist, or in other words, when the question is presented as to whether the workers shall lend their energies to support of the Socialist Party or shall assist in the formation of a new one, very many more and great advantages appear on the side of the Socialist Party.

A new party will find it necessary at the very beginning to spend a large proportion of its energies in perfecting the details of its organization. But the Socialist Party, especially in the city of Chicago, is already thoroughly organized, with one or more branches in every ward, and is even now pushing the work of precinct organization in many of the wards. It has evolved a plan of organization which has been tested by long experience, involving the use of the iniative and referendum in the highest degree, so that every portion of the Party is completely subject to the control of the rank and file.

The recent rapid growth of the Socialist movement has made the Socialist Party an official party, in Chicago. This does away with the laborious and costly work of securing signatures, which must be performed by any new party.

Any labor party which would be organized in this city apart from the Socialist Party would be simply local and would disappear together with the fruits of its work, as soon as political lines were drawn on a wider scale in state or national elections. The Socialist Party on the other hand, has a complete national, and indeed an international organization, reaching into almost every state and with official standing in a large number of states, with three members in the Massachusetts legislature, and minor officers in various other localities, whose actions have always been in strict accord with the interests of the laborers.

The Socialist Party is to-day well equipped with literature, both periodical and otherwise, written by the ablest minds of the labor movement of the world. Its press has been tested by time and has always been upon the side of the workers at every point. It has among its membership hundreds of the best speakers and workers of the labor movement and its national organization enables it to concentrate these upon any local field where the need may be greatest.

From every point of view therefore the Socialist Party fills every posible demand for a labor party. It is controlled by and composed of laborers; it is founded upon the principles that time and wide experience have shown to be those best fitted to secure the interests of the laborers; its organization is democratically controlled in accordance with the principles of the labor movement, and it posesses literature, speakers and press, together with all other elements of permanency and effectiveness, and a wide-spread, cohesive organization such as is absolutely essential to any decisive action in the political field at the present time.—Chicago Socialist.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

LABOR IN THE SENATE.

Slim Chances of Labor Bills at Washington.

Eight-Hour Bill, Whose Passage By House Was Heralded as a Victory by Gompers, Sure to Die in Senate.

When Congress began its present session it was announced on all sides, as a matter of course, that no important legislation would go through. It was a safe prediction, and the lawmakers at Washington show no inclination to throw doubt upon it.

It was especially stated that the various "labor bills" that had come up from the House to the Senate at the last session would follow the usual course—either slumber peacefully in committee pigeon holes and die with the session or else be brought up under pressure, wearisomely discussed, and either defeated or so amended as to make their passage impossible.

That this was to be the program was made still more evident by the President's message, in which Labor received an abundance of fatherly advice about "moderation," "harmony," "law and order," and the like, and not one recommendation was made on any of the labor bills.

The most important of these bills is that establishing the eight-hour day in all government work, direct or by contract. The passage of this bill by the House was heralded by President Gompers as a signal victory for the lobbying policy of the Federation, notwithstanding similar bills had twice passed the House in previous years and been killed in the Senate, and that the same trick has been played with scores of other labor bills in Congress and in state legislatures.

The New York "Times" last Monday printed a Washington "special" as follows, clearly foreshadowing the result:

"What the Senate will do with the Eight-Hour bill is a topic of political conversation here at present. This bill has passed the House three times, but was never brought before the Senate for a vote. One of the counsel for the government contractors remarked the other day that the House passed the bill for two reasons—first, because that body feared the labor vote, and, secondly, BECAUSE IT FELT SURE THE SENATE WOULD NOT ACT AFFIRMATIVELY UPON IT.

"Among conservative members of the Senate the bill is regarded as a dangerous piece of class legislation, and this element will endeavor to prevent action at this session. Senator Proctor of Vermont has been quoted as saying he is determined to defeat the bill if he has to speak against it every day during the remainder of the session."

It is easy to see what will happen in this Congress—and in every Congress until the workingmen quit lobbying and begin to elect Socialist Congressmen, representatives of Labor who cannot be trifled with.

COAL MINING ACCIDENTS.

In his report on the production of coal in 1901, now in press in "Mineral Resources of the United States, 1901, United States Geological Survey," Mr. E. W. Parker presents the statistics of fatal and non-fatal accidents which occurred in the process of mining coal in eighteen states and territories during 1901.

In these eighteen states and territories the total number of lives lost in 1901 was 1,467 and the total number of men injured was 3,643. The number of tons of coal mined for each life lost varied from 426,094 in Maryland to 49,424 in Indian Territory. The average number of tons mined for each of the 1,467 lives lost in these eighteen states and territories was 188,668. In Pennsylvania the number of tons of bituminous coal mined per life lost was a little more than double the amount mined per life lost in the anthracite mines in the same state. Maryland had the largest tonnage per life lost, while the Indian Territory has the largest percentage of deaths for the tonnage mined.

Of the eighteen states and territories one makes no report of the number of men injured, and seven, or more than one-third, make no report of the number of wives made widows, and ten, or more than one-half, make no report of the number of children made fatherless. Indiana, Montana, Tennessee, and Virginia, producing in round numbers 15,000,000 tons of coal in 1901, made no reports of coal mining accidents.—Mines and Minerals for—November 1902.

Nearly all the accidents in these mines could have been prevented and these lives saved by the installation of proper safeguards and machinery, but under the capitalist profit system this is seldom or never done. It would not pay to do so; human lives are cheaper than safeguards and machinery. These cost money, but if the lives of a hundred men or so are snuffed out in a mine, there is another hundred at the pit mouth next morning offering themselves to fill the places for a daily wage, which is equal to the cost of subsistence. Beautiful system this, isn't it? It will be totally different when the people themselves own the mines.—The New Times.

——The Social Democratic Party of New York is the same as the Socialist Party of other states. The difference of name is due solely to provisions of the election laws. Do not confuse this organization with the so-called "Socialist Labor Party," or "union-smashers."

FROM THE OTHER SIDE.

The National Association of Manufacturers, through its president, David M. Parry of Indianapolis, has issued a second circular to the employers of the country, which makes good reading for workingmen, especially in view of the great increase of the Socialist vote all over the country. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Sirs:—I desire to call your attention to the significant growth of the National Association of Manufacturers. During the months of June, July, August and September, the most difficult months of the year for new business, our association has made a gain of 225 new members. This striking increase is the result of the profound belief that is growing in this country that there must be a close union among manufacturing employers, or in a few years we shall be so enmeshed in hostile legislation that our power to advance will be practically destroyed.

"There are now pending before Congress two bills, either one of which is a serious menace to the manufacturing interests of the United States. These bills are the anti-conspiracy and eight-hour measures.

"The first, imported to this country from England, has been favorably reported in the Senate. It means that your establishment may be 'picketed' out of existence in case of labor trouble.

"The second is intended to be an opening wedge for a general eight-hour day throughout the United States. This bill provides that any manufacturer contracting with the government shall not be permitted to work his employees over eight hours without subjecting himself to a fine of $5 for each and every employee for each calendar day. This monstrous measure has passed the House three times without one word of debate. If forced through the Senate this session it will be followed by similar bills in each of the states. This is the labor program.

"What are the manufacturers of the United States to do about this? Are we to sit still and do nothing? Or shall we meet organization with organization? I consider organization our only salvation. What is your opinion? If 500 men in your shop appeal to a Congressman to vote for a certain bill, what is your voice against the 500 unless you have organization? Shall there not be in this country one great, compact organization of diversified manufacturing interests, which shall stand together as a man against the encroachments of organized labor? Is it not time to bury all feelings of clashing commercial policies and get together on a platform upon which we all can stand? Is not our first duty self-preservation? All other questions that press us can in the end be disposed of by the exercise of wisdom, fair play and firmness of purpose.

"I SAY TO YOU THAT THE TIME HAS COME IN THE UNITED STATES WHEN WE HAVE REACHED THE PARTING OF THE WAYS. YOU ARE EITHER TO HAVE THE MASTERY OF YOUR OWN BUSINESS OR YOU MUST TURN PART OF ITS ADMINISTRATION OVER TO YOUR EMPLOYEES. Organized labor claims 1,700,000 members. Each member pays six cents yearly for the maintenance of a powerful lobby at Washington to secure the passage of measures opposed to your interests. The total of this fund measured by the simplest arithmetic is $102,000 per year. What fund have the manufacturers for defense of their interests? None. Shall this continue?

"The National Association of Manufacturers has no ax to grind except that of the protection of employers. No officers of our association receives a dollar in salary except the secretary. The presidency means a personal expense to me of $5,000 a year. When the danger signal is flashed the members of the legislative committee hurry to Washington, paying their own expenses.

"We are fighting your battle. Yet, to carry on the fight successfully, we must grow in strength and power. We must have money for postage stamps, literature, rent, and to pay salaries of some thirty employees of the association, who earn money by the severest work. Do you not feel that you should help us?

"In inclose a subscription blank filled out to myself. It requires your signature. I shall consider it a personal honor if you will sign it and return to me. Whether you come with us or not, please let me hear from you."

In a further communication to an Indianapolis paper President Parry, in discussing the eight-hour bill says:

"THE BILL SIMPLY MEANS THAT MEN ARE TO BE PAID 20 PER CENT. MORE FOR THEIR LABOR THAN THEY EARN."

It is hardly necessary to comment on this interesting document. We print it because it is worth while for workingmen to know what their bosses are thinking and doing.

Of course, Mr. Parry knows as well as Mr. Gompers does that the two labor bills referred to will not pass the Senate, that they were allowed to pass the house on that distinct, though quite understanding. He is only "throwing a scare into his pals" on that point. He knows that the workers get nothing by lobbying. But he uses this bugaboo of "hostile legislation" as a pretext for urging closer organization of employers, actually to fight the workers on other lines.

Mr. Parry says that "we have reached the parting of the ways." Our question to the workingman is: Don't you agree with him on that? And don't you think it is time to leave the tortuous ways of capitalism, that lead through strife to misery, and try the broad and easy path of Socialism, where men may journey together through life in peace and prosperity.

McGRADY'S CASE.

Resigned His Pulpit Rather than Recant Honest Opinions.

Kentucky Priest Maintains, as Does the Socialist Party, that Church Has No Right to Dictate in Politics and Party No Right to Dictate in Religion.

In regard to the resignation of our comrade, Rev. Thomas McGrady, from his position as pastor of St. Anthony's Church (Catholic) at Bellevue, Ky., announced last week, we are not yet able to give full particulars, but may add something to what was then stated.

It is an acknowledged fact that the sole reason for Comrade McGrady's resignation was the attempt of the higher authorities of the church to dictate his opinions or utterances on economic and political matters.

Father McGrady has for some time been very active as a writer and speaker for Socialism. He has taken the ground, the same that is taken by the Socialist Party, that religious and political matters must be kept separate, that the party has no right to interfere with the religious opinions and the church no right to interfere with the political opinions of its members.

He has been repeatedly warned and admonished by his superiors in the church to discontinue his public advocacy of Socialism, but he has steadily refused. At last, in order, apparently, to bring matters to an issue, Bishop Maes of the Covington diocese called on him to submit a statement of Socialist opinions, as held by him, for the Bishop's judgment. In response he submitted eight propositions covering the subject and demanded a reply, which was not given.

In announcing his resignation from his pulpit he said that Bishop Maes ignored his letter, and for the reason that if he condemned the propositions he would thereby condemn the teachings of the church for the first four centuries, and if he approved them he would subscribe to Socialism.

Bishop Maes, in a recent letter, demanded that Father McGrady retract his praise of Zola, Renan and other Socialist or radical writers, and to this Father McGrady replied that he had used the names of those men to show that men of vast intellectual acumen had been Socialists and went on to show that under the ruling of Bishop Maes no Catholic could praise the Declaration of Independence, because it was written by an infidel, and that a Catholic might be excommunicated by going so far as to say that Thomas Jefferson was a great man. He said that to retract any of his writings would stultify him before the public and would be against his conscience. "I desire to protect myself from the charge of idiocy," he said, "and my memory from everlasting ignominy."

STATE COMMITTEE.

Session of the New York State Committee, S. D. P. of New York, Dec. 9, 1902. Present: Comrades Emile Neppel, James N. Wood, I. Phillips, Herman Reich, Chas. Furman, and Henry L. Slobodin. Absent, excused: H. C. Bowerman, Leonard D. Abbott; absent without excuse, Chris. Bub and Godfrey Lehner.

Correspondence: Highland Falls, N. Y., asking for a speaker; Governeur, N. Y., reporting lapse of the local; Rochester, N. Y., asking for supplies; Peekskill, N. Y.; Port Chester, N. Y.; Catskill, N. Y.; Rome, N. Y.; Ohio State Committee. Reports on vote for National Committeeman received from Rome, Highland Falls, Wells, and Peekskill. Financial reports received from Rome, Peekskill, Onondaga, and New Rochelle. A communication received from Comrade Santiago Iglesias, asking that a committee be appointed to investigate charges of conduct unbecoming a Socialist. Secretary instructed to answer that New York State Committee has no jurisdiction.

On motion, it was ordered that Comrade Fieldman's tour be postponed until the Secretary completes his report.

The official returns of the vote show that the Social Democratic Party received 23,400 votes, but reports from various parts of the state indicate that at the last moment of the election day many Socialist votes were stolen and counted for Odell, whose plurality was only 9,000 in a total vote of 1,400,000. Further investigations were ordered.

The financial report was read and it was ordered to be published after it has been audited. It shows that the State Committee has many obligations to meet. The campaign fund of the State Committee was all eaten up by the speakers' expenses, and money had to be loaned to pay the printing bills. The printing of leaflets and pamphlets cost over $1,000. About 1,500,000 pieces of literature were printed and distributed nearly all on credit to the locals. If the locals will all pay their bills for literature taken from the State Committee, we shall have a surplus in the campaign fund. Now we have a deficit and the creditors press us for the payment of the bills. The State Committee appeals to the comrades of the party to meet their obligations.

We also urge comrades and friends for the return of the subscription lists, with whatever was collected.

DEMOCRATS BREAK FAITH.

Child-Labor Bill Is Killed in Georgia Legislature.

Pledges Made Before Election Are Thrown to the Winds—Georgia Politicians Know the Tricks Used at Washington and Albany.

Since the wicked "labor agitators," led by the still wickeder Socialists, have exposed the horrors of child slavery in Southern cotton mills (as well as in various Northern industries) there has been a great deal of talk to the effect that the Democratic party, which has absolute control of all the Southern cotton manufacturing states, would take up the question and do away with the disgraceful conditions existing. That is to say, there was a great deal of such talk before election.

A bill was introduced in the Georgia Legislature to limit child labor. Five weeks ago The Worker reported an interesting scene in that body, in which Mr. Houston, the author of the bill, charged that there was a deliberate scheme to sidetrack and defeat it. On the statement made in the press that a favorable report on the bill would be made by the Committee on Education, to which it was transferred after this scene, The Worker said:

"We shall believe in that favorable report when it is made, not before. We shall believe in its sincerity if the bill passes both houses and is signed and enforced by the Governor. We do not expect to see that until there is a good Socialist vote cast in Georgia.

"It is safe to predict that the Child-Labor Bill now under discussion will pass one house and be quietly killed in the other. That is the way the Republican and Democratic politicians do things in Washington and Albany, and those in Atlanta probably know the trick."

We have not had to wait long to see our prediction sadly verified. Monday's "Post" prints a "special" as follows:

"ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 13.—The Legislature of Georgia has adjourned without taking any final action on the Child-Labor bill. The measure was set for a special order on one day towards the close of the session, having received a practically unanimous report from the Committee on Education. When the bill was called up there was a bare quorum present, MANY OF THE SUPPOSED FRIENDS OF THE MEASURE BEING ABSENT for various causes. Seeing that it would be impossible to pass the bill with such a small house, Mr. Houston of Fulton, its author, moved that it be tabled. This course was taken, and owing to the press of business at the heel of the session, it was impossible to get up again. The next session will be held in June, 1903, when another effort will be made to put the measure through."

And then the same farce will be gone through again. We repeat: We do not expect to see an effective child-labor law enacted and enforced in Georgia until there is a good Socialist vote in the state to scare the old-party politicians.

THE SOCIALIST VOTE.

We are able to give returns this week for South Dakota and for Washington. In last week's issue of The Worker we gave an estimate for the latter state; the present figures are official.

So far as now reported, twenty-five states and one territory which in 1900 gave us 78,973 votes have this year given us 210,715. Thirteen other states in 1900 gave us 18,657; for these states we have as yet no authentic reports this year.

PIERRE, S. D.—The vote of the Socialist Party in South Dakota in the November election was 2,738. In the election of 1900 we had but 109.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 6.—The official report of the November election shows that this state gives 4,739 votes for the Socialist Party, or barely less than 5 per cent. of the total. Two years ago we had 2,006, or considerably less than 2 per cent. The S. L. P. falls from 806 to 834.

The result indicates that we have rightly forecast the trend of events. The Democratic party has lost heavily, falling from 44,833 to 32,544, and the Republican vote is slightly increased, rising from 57,456 to 59,017. The Democratic party is out of date and is passing away; the Republican party stands as the accredited representative of capitalism, the great enemy we have to overcome; the Socialist Party, small as yet, but with its eyes straight to the front, moves steadily and rapidly on to victory.

GLOBE, Ariz., Dec. 6.—We do not yet know the full vote of the Socialist Party in this territory, but can give partial figures. Gila County gives Dr. Neissl, our candidate for Delegate to Congress, 58 votes; Graham County, 98; Yavapai County, 80; Yuma County, 58; Pinal County, 22; total so far reported, 316. The total will reach about 400.

Two years ago the party had not entered the field in Arizona. Last year we had 27 votes in Gila County.

Later.—The official canvass in California gives the Socialist Party 9,592 votes for Governor. In 1900 our vote was 7,572. We gain official standing. Our increase is 27 per cent.

This brings up our total in twenty-six states and one territory from 86,565 to 220,307.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

Make a Christmas Gift to the Daily Globe.

Thousands of Articles Should Be Donated this Week to Be Sold or Given as Prizes at the Fair to Be Held in March.

Next Thursday is Christmas Day. At this season most people, Socialists included, observe the old custom of making some gifts as tokens of love and remembrance to those whom they hold dear.

There is one coming friend of the Socialist movement and of the working class that should hold a place close to the heart of every progressive workingman. That friend is the "Daily Globe"—the newspaper which is to fight the battles of Labor against the venal capitalist press. A Christmas gift to the "Globe" will be a most appropriate observance of the day.

A grand fair and labor exhibition is to be held at Grand Central Palace in March for the purpose of raising funds for the establishment of the new daily. Thousands and tens of thousands of prizes and articles for exhibition and sale at the fair are desired and all should be donated by those who wish to see the "Globe" soon enter the field. The time is not far off. The Fair Committee is at work and has a place ready for storing all such donations. Each reader of The Worker can afford to give some article, not necessarily an expensive one, but something fitted to take a place in the booths at The Globe Fair; and if all do this, a great deal will have been accomplished in a single week toward assuring the success of the undertaking.

Bring or send all donations to the Secretary, William Butscher, at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, New York City.

Comrade Butscher is also ready to issue fair tickets to organizations for sale, to receive payments on pledges or contributions to The Daily Globe Fund, and to give any information that comrades or sympathizers may desire on the subject.

The Secretary has been so busy this week that he finds it necessary to postpone till the next issue of The Worker the usual acknowledgment of receipts for the fund.

RESULT IN BROCKTON.

Fuller Details of the Victory Won By the Socialist Party on December 2—Democrats Hold Balance of Power.

The successful Socialist candidates in Brockton in the recent election were:

For Mayor—Charles H. Coulter, who received 4,367 votes to 3,275 for Republican Mayor Battles (running for re-election) and 533 for Brown, the Democratic candidate—a plurality of 1,092 and a clear majority of 559.

For Aldermen—Frederick B. Studley in the Third Ward, who received 708 votes to 554 for the Republican and 77 for the Democratic—a plurality of 154 and a majority of 77; William H. Clifford in the Fifth Ward, who received 423 votes to 382 for the Democrat and 288 for the Republican—a plurality of 47; and James Cox in the Sixth Ward, who received 589 votes to 397 for the Republican and 205 for the Democrat—a pulrality of 192.

For Councilmen—E. C. Carlson, G. A. Monk, and Patrick Peterson in the Third Ward, who received 655, 690, and 646 votes, respectively; Adelard Ledoux and A. J. Kearns in the Fifth Ward, who received 370 and 399 votes, respectively; A. T. Claney, T. F. Lynch, and S. J. Smith in the Sixth Ward, who received 543, 509, and 473 votes, respectively.

For School Committeemen—J. P. Barlow and Mrs. Annie P. Bosworth, who received 2,979 and 2,956 votes, respectively.

The new Board of Alderman contains three Socialists, three Republicans, and one Democrat. The new Common Council consists of eight Socialists, nine Republicans, and 4 Democrats. In the School Committee there are two Socialists and one Republican. The Democrats thus hold the balance of power in each branch of the City Council and in joint session. In the outgoing city government the Republicans had clear majorities in both branches, besides having the Mayor and School Committee.

As compared with last year, the total vote for Mayor is increased by 545 votes. The Socialists gain about 1,800, the Republicans gain about 250, and the Democrats lose nearly 1,500. The vote throughout was fairly solid and divided on party lines, from Mayor to School Committee. The Democratic party would seem to be entirely out of date in Brockton. A considerable proportion of its former adherents have come to the Socialist Party, the conservative and aristocratic Democrats have gone into the Republican ranks, and a Democratic ticket was still put up by the politicians, not with any hope of success, but simply to hold those voters that could not be swung to the Republican line and prevent them from joining the Socialist column.

Haverhill Election Case Not Yet Tried.

Facts Undisputed and Court Must Decide on Plain Question of Law—Socialist Gains in City Elections—News of Party Work—Fuel Famine Making People Think.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—The Haverhill election contest came up in the Supreme Judicial Court last Wednesday, but was deferred until Friday, when it was again postponed until to-day. The death of the brother of Mr. Williams, Flanders' counsel, has again deferred the case, but it should be considered very soon.

The matter has been simplified by the Republicans admitting the facts in the case, as presented by the Socialists, and the only question now to be settled is that of law. The Board of Registrars of Haverhill contend that the courts have no jurisdiction, the decision of the board being final. The court will have to decide whether the board has the right to declare elections as the members may see fit. If they have, then the voters of any city have no legal resort against the decision of any board.

Great interest in the case has been aroused through the aggressive action of the Socialists, and even if the courts shoud decide against us, the object lesson will do good for Socialism.

Gains in City Elections.

The municipal elections of the past two weeks resulted in satisfactory returns for the Socialist Party. Last year we had candidates for mayor in fifteen cities, this year in nineteen. The aggregate vote for the Socialist candidates for mayor in the fifteen cities last year was 7,381; this year, in the same cities, the aggregate vote was 11,729; and the four additional cities—Everett, Lowell, Salem, and Somerville—gave 1,283, making a total of 13,012. In Boston there was no mayoralty election, the head of the ticket being street commissioner.

The following table is given of the municipal elections last year and this to show the growth of the party:

Propaganda Work.

A tour of Massachusetts during the last three weeks of January is being arranged for Franklin H. and Marion Craig Wentworth, of Chicago, and the principal cities and towns will be visited.

Discussions on Socialism are held every Sunday evening at 724 Washington street, Boston, under the auspices of the Ward Nine Club. Meetings are well attended and interest growing. Next Sunday Patrick Mahoney will lead the discussion upon trusts.

The Stimson-Carey debate will be held in Faneuil Hall on some day between Jan. 7 and Feb. 1, the date not being definitely settled yet.

A speakers' club will be organized during the next two weeks under the direction of the Boston Central Committee.

Comrade Chase will not start upon his Southern tour until Jan. 15, and until that time he is prepared to fill dates for speaking in the New England states. Dates can be arranged through the State Secretary, Wm. Mailly, 907 Winthrop Building, Boston.

Patrick Mahoney, the recent Socialist candidate for street commissioner in Boston, was elected President of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97, on Election Day, by the largest majority ever given any candidate. The contest was a warm one, Mahoney being bitterly opposed on the grounds of his Socialist opinions.

Party members are voting for National Committeemen, Comrades Geo. R. Keene and James F. Carey of Haverhill being the two candidates. The vote closes Jan. 1.

The Fuel Famine.

There has been a great deal of suffering in Boston through the fuel famine and the stories told on all sides are heartrending. The weather has been exceptionally cold and unless relief comes the result is problematical. The people are growing desperate, the relief committees and charity associations are showing their incompetence and indifference as never before. Meanwhile the sentiment for Socialism is growing. W. NO MORE ARTIFICIAL FAMINES.

The "respectables" of New York are wondering why there were so many "plain drunks" in police courts Monday morning.

Coal by the bucket costing twelve to eighteen dollars a ton, the mercury twenty degrees below freezing, and thousands of men vainly begging for permission to work—a thought given to these three well known facts might have saved the good people their wonder.

The City Lodging House and Bellevue Hospital are not attractive places. But there were so many applicants at the former institution that the superintendent turned away all who seemed to have been drinking, however little. As a result, many feigned "the horrors" in order to gain admission to Bellevue's alcoholic ward.

It would not be possible to give a more terrible statement of the misery now prevailing than in this simple fact. The sad cries of "No coal" about the charity stations, the stories of working-class families burning their furniture, even the daily news of homeless men, women, and children dying in the street—one before the closed door of a church—only tell the same story.

And why is this so?

Is there any natural reason for a coal famine? No. There is and has been plenty of coal waiting to be mined. But between the coal on the one hand and, on the other, the strong-armed miners and the shivering people, stands THE CAPITALIST CLASS.

Workingmen's babies are dying. Workingmen's wives are suffering. Workingmen are being forced to accept the degrading help of "public charity." Why? Because Baer's class must have profits. Because workingmen, controlling the majority of the votes of the nation, have voted that Baer's idle and useless class shall own the mines and railroads and other means of production that the working class has created, shall make profit on them, shall have power to control the industries by which the people live.

The politicians in public office will, perhaps, vote money to give a few thousand tons of coal to "the poor."

Very well. Let them do it. They would be foolhardy men, indeed, did they dare refuse. But let them not dare to call it charity. Let them not dare to boast of it.

Nothing that they can give now will make up for what they failed to do last summer, when they had the power to secure a speedy victory for the strikers and so to avoid the coal famine.

And nothing that the capitalist class will give now will stop the working people from thinking.

We may accept their aid—rather than freeze. But we do not like to accept as a gift a tithe, a hundredth, an infinitesimal part of that which is ours by right and has been lawfully stolen from us. We shall have another chance next year and the year after, in local and national elections, to issue our edict—the edict of the class that makes all the world's food and fuel and clothes and houses—that we shall never again have an artificial famine for the profit of the drones.

INCORPORATION OF LABOR UNIONS.

In view of the attempt now being made by the capitalists, in this country as well as in England, to force incorporation upon the unions—an attempt which is being quietly pushed with more vigor than it is openly admitted—the following, from the London "Trades and Labor Gazette" will be of interest to our readers:

"A correspondence has taken place between Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., for Oldham, and Mr. J. R. Clynes, secretary of the local branch of the Gasworkers' Union. The correspondence is on the subject of legislation to free trade union funds from the liability imposed on them by the judgment in the Taff Vale and other cases, and is therefore of interest to all trade unionists. It arose out of a deputation to Mr. Winston Churchill from the Oldham Trade Union Law Committee.

"In his letter to the deputation Mr. Churchill takes refuge by pointing out that he considers it to be the duty of a member of Parliament to 'have regard to the interests of the constituency as a whole, and the right of men as citizens, rather than to their special interests as employers and employed.' He then goes on to minimize the effect of the recent legal decisions, quoting the Attorney-General, who stated in the House of Commons that the right to use peaceful 'persuasion' was in no way impaired. Mr. Churchill is of opinion that trade unions should be 'liable in their corporate capacity for the actions of their officials within their direct scope and authority.'

"It is astonishing how equality in the letter where it is absent in the spirit may be accepted as the true article. Mr. Churchill seems convinced that, by placing trade unions on a similar footing legally to that of great capitalist and financial companies, the former are really being benefited. He even goes as far as to say that 'in these days of great Trusts, when Capital is stronger than Labor, trade unionists in their own interests will be most unwise to seek to free commercial combinations from the restraints and protection of the law.'

"What trade unionist wants to 'free commercial combinations from the restraints and protection of the law'? As a matter of fact, such commercial companies are well able already to free themselves from obnoxious legal restraints; and, as for protection, they are quite powerful enough to protect themselves. The fallacy lies in imagining that, if the same legal decisions are applied to both capitalist and trade union organizations, there necessarily follows legal equality. Where would fairness on the sports ground be without the handicapper?

"Mr. J. R. Clynes's reply makes clear all the specious fallacies which underlie Mr. Churchill's position. He says: 'As the law now is, employers may lock men out to make them leave a union, or discharge them for joining one, but we cannot strike with the object of forcing men to join. Employers may request each other not to supply employment to certain men, but we cannot ask a person not to supply men or materials to certain employers. Employers may entice and procure persons to assist them during a dispute, but we cannot peacefully persuade persons not to take the employers' side and therefore injure us. Employers may use lists of workmen they object to, but we cannot publish lists of employers who are objectionable to us. Employers may use agents and money to induce men to assist them in disputes, but we cannot watch or quietly picket during a dispute without risk of prosecution.'

"In short, almost anything which trade unionists may do during a dispute is liable to be construed in conspiracy to injure the trade and business of the employers; it is impossible to so construe the actions of the employer, because our class has no trades or businesses in the commercial sense to injure!"

PROGRESS OF THE TRUSTS.

The defenders of capitalism divide their efforts between two mutually contradictory arguments: First, that there are no trusts; second, that Republican or Democratic anti-trust laws are amply sufficient to "restrain" the trusts.

To support the first so obviously false position (which President Roosevelt had the nerve tacitly to sanction in his message), they have, ever since the formation of the Steel Trust, been pointing to the continued existence of independent steel companies. In reply, we have predicted that these "independent companies, if now really independent and if they were big enough to be worth considering, would soon be absorbed by the trust. The Union Steel Company and the Sharon Steel Company were the concerns chiefly set forth as examples of successful independent competition with the United States Steel Corporation. A few weeks ago came the news that the Union Company had absorbed the Sharon. This week comes the news, expected by Socialists, that the consolidated Union-Sharon concern has been merged in the Steel Trust.

On the same day it is announced that the seventeen largest malleable iron companies in the United States have been consolidated.

Meanwhile, the Meat Trust, the Coal Trust, and the Railroad Trust are steadily developing their organization, not caring a rap for anti-trust laws or fake suits against mergers.

Socialists are satisfied. The faster the trusts are developed, the sooner will the people vote for Socialism and the better will industry be organized for a Socialist state to take over.

THE MOSELY COMMISSION.

In regard to the "Mosely Commission" which has been somewhat in evidence at the recent session of the Civic Federation, the "Trades and Labor Gazette" of London says:

"The object of the promoters of the Commission is clear. It is not to enable a number of well-known British trade unionists to enquire closely into the conditions of production in the United States. Mr. Mosely and his friends are far too sensible to believe that any such enquiry can be completed in the short time that the Commission will remain in America. Their object is to impress the members of the Commission with the immensity of things American, with the speed and 'hustle' with which the workers toil, and with the great wages-saving machinery in the manipulation of which America, being the latest economically developed of the capitalist nations, at present takes the premier place; and to induce them to recommend the same speeding, the same 'hustling,' the same 'gearing-up' process to their British fellow workers."

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

TAMMANY'S TRICK.

Tammany has played its card and played it with accustomed skill. Just enough Tammany aldermen have fallen in line for the Pennsylvania tunnel franchise, as presented without the eight-hour and prevailing-rate clauses, to let it go through. Thus the capitalists are satisfied. The rest of the Tammany men have "put themselves on record" against the franchise. Thus the workingmen are supposed to be satisfied.

Whether the workingmen of New York will be satisfied with such an old, old trick, we shall find out next November.

Had there been a delegation of Social Democrats in the Board of Aldermen it would not have been necessary for them even to hold a caucus on the question. Every man would have known that by the very fact of his accepting a nomination from the Social Democratic Party he had pledged himself to vote for the interests of the working class, first, last, and all the time, and that his political head would fall the moment he voted wrong or failed to vote right.

What thirty-eight Democrats have wilfully failed to do, eight Socialists would have forced the majority to concede—because we stand, not only for the mere immediate interests of the working class, but for their complete emancipation, because the capitalists fear Socialism as heartily as they trust the two old parties.

It is only by experience that the working class will learn. This bit of experience will have its effect. "Reform" will play no part in next year's campaign. The only choice before the workers will be between the double-dealing of Tammany and the straightforward policy of the Social Democratic Party. We face the battle with full confidence.

The Russian Tsar is evidently possessed of a sense of humor. He appoints a commission to investigate the complaints of the peasants, who have shown an unaccountable tendency to find fault with the Autocrat's benevolent rule; then, when the commissioners make their report, justifying the peasants' complaints, the Tsar rewards them by degrading them from office, putting them under police surveillance, or, in extreme cases, sending them to prison or to exile. After all, Nicholas is only following a practice common among American capitalists, who frequently invite their grumbling employees to send committees to speak for them, and then recognise their grievances by discharging and blacklisting the members of the committee. There is not so much difference between a political autocrat in Russia and an industrial autocrat in the United States as some innocent people may suppose.

THE SAD PLIGHT OF THE CONSCIENTIOUS CAPITALIST.

We are sincerely sorry for John C. Havemeyer, formerly Sugar Trust magnate and now preacher of the Gospel—not so sorry as we are for the Sugar Trust's wage-slaves, but yet sincerely sorry. He seems to be in earnest in trying to atone for his sins, the sins of his family, the sins of his class—and it is such a hopeless task.

Monday's papers brought this dispatch:

"MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 14.—John C. Havemeyer delivered an address in Westminster Presbyterian Church to-night, and referred to the reason which led him to abandon the sugar industry for the profession of preacher. In the course of his remarks he said:

"'When the sugar manufacturers combined together to form a trust, I could not see that my way was clear to live a Christian life and at the same time to rob the poor by raising the price of their coffee sweetening.'

"Mr. Havemeyer said he had no hope of becoming a pulpit orator. He merely aimed to speak to the laymen as a layman. He said there were great difficulties in the way of one of wealth who wished to serve God."

If the phrase "serving God" is understood to mean serving humanity, we heartily agree that there are great, almost insuperable, difficulties in the way of any modern man of wealth—that is, of any capitalist.

Tolstoy has said that the rich are willing to do anything for the poor except to get off their backs. The tragedy of it is that the capitalist, as an individual, cannot get off the backs of the workers; or, if he does himself dismount, it is only to seat another and probably a more merciless rider in his place.

We are not informed what John C. Havemeyer did with his Sugar Trust stocks and bonds when he decided to "flee the wrath to come." Perhaps he kept them and only gave up active participation in the management of the trust. Perhaps he sold them and put the money in the bank for himself or his heirs. In either case the workers must go on, toiling hard and living poorly, in order to create dividends or interest for him. Perhaps he gave the money to endow churches and libraries and colleges and hospitals. But still the workers must go on, toiling hard and living poorly, to pile up those dividends and interest—too poor to feel comfortable in the churches or to send their children to college, too much exhausted to read books from the library after their day's work, and the most they can hope is, when they are disabled or worn out by excessive labor, to enjoy charity beds in the hospitals.

In any case, the sugar refineries, created and operated by the social labor of the workers, continue to be the private property of capitalists, and the workers can use it only on condition that they create a profit for those capitalists. Whether or not this particular man, John C. Havemeyer, is one of the parasites makes no difference in the lot of the workers. All he can have done is to wash his hands, as he may think, of individual responsibility for the crime of capitalism; he has not stopped or even reduced the magnitude of that crime.

The position of the capitalists, in this respect, is peculiar, as compared with that of the ruling classes of other days. The king or feudal lord could abdicate and give his people a constitution or a charter, if he would. The slaveholder could emancipate his slaves and divide his land among them, if he would. The capitalist cannot free his wage-slaves, even though he should wish to do so. He cannot even ameliorate their servitude to any considerable extent, for the capitalist who, by paying higher wages or granting reduced hours, consents to take a smaller share of his employees' product than is taken by his competitors puts himself at the mercy of those competitors and is likely to be driven out of business. The relation of capitalist and proletarian is not a personal relation but a class relation, and the acts of individuals on either side count only in so far as they influence the action of the class. Hence it was that Karl Marx said: "The emancipation of the working class must be achieved by the working class itself."

Even by giving his wealth for charitable or public purposes, the capitalist who wishes to undo the harm done by capitalism accomplishes but little good, and that not an unmixed good. So long as capitalism continues, charity can, at the best, only alleviate a part of the suffering that capitalism breeds. On the other hand, it often reacts in such a way as to intensify the causes of the evil results with which it deals. Very often we see charitable institutions used as scab agencies for the breaking of strikes; in the endowed trade schools and technical departments of the colleges the students are systematically trained out of sympathy with the working class and into servility to capitalism; and, in general, if charity in any form reduces the workers' cost of living, the force of competition among the workers tends to bring about a corresponding reduction of wages. Even where charity does not positively lower the material condition of the working class, it weakens their class spirit and reduces their power of organized action.

It is not to the mercy or generosity or sense of justice of the capitalists that we must look for relief, but to our own determination to know the causes of our slavery and to make ourselves free. The only way in which a conscience-stricken capitalist can help the working class is by giving, not his money, but himself, and not by trying merely to withdraw from personal responsibility for capitalist robbery, but by actively aiding the resistance of the working class to the whole system of capitalism. We welcome the few who see this truth and follow it. We have no right to ask such aid or to expect it or to depend upon it, nor should we waste our energy in denunciation of the great body of capitalists who are against us. The emancipation of Labor is our task, not theirs, and it will be our fault if we fail in it.

The day after Mr. Reed's death there appeared in the most "respectable" New York papers an article, at first appearances a news article relating to him, which, on closer reading, turned out to be an advertisement for a certain kidney medicine. During the same week our attention was called to a great three-column advertisement of a certain mining company, headed with McKinley's portrait and a letter written to the promoters by "our martyr president." These things reminded us how, on the day of McKinley's funeral, Holy John Wannamaker turned the incident into a good advertisement for his stores. Combined, they strikingly illustrate the noble and delicate feelings fostered by capitalism and exhibited by capitalists, in glaring contrast to the "vulgarity" of the working people, of which the "upper classes" so strongly complain.

Our hearts bleed on account of the sufferings of poor Reggie Vanderbilt and his fiancée who had to drive four miles through the storm in an open sleigh last Sunday night. At the same time, ye do not forget that the thousands of railroad and street railway workers who make the Vanderbilts' fortunes had some light hardships of the same sort to endure in the performance of their duties; but perhaps they were able to distract their attention from personal discomfort by pondering over the question whether there was fuel at home to keep their wives and babies warm. That is, perhaps, one of the "blessings of poverty" of which we hear so much.

JUST AS WITH US.

Capitalism is essentially the same the world over. With some variations of detail, according to varying circumstances, it everywhere means overwork and poverty for the producers, idle luxury for the owners of the means of production, and, as a result, conflict between the two classes. Wherever capitalism is introduced, old institutions, old customs, and old social divisions gradually disappear and in their place appears, as the dominant factor of social life, the class struggle between capitalists and wage-workers, vague and weak at first, but growing in power and clearness with increased experience, until on the workers' side it takes the form of participation in the world-wide Socialist movement.

From an Indian paper of October 30 to which our attention has been called we take this comment on a recent conflict, and our first thought is, "How like our experience in free America!"

"We are glad to learn that the strike at the Buckingham Mills has come to an end. The authorities seem to have been inflexible throughout, and beyond causing some damages to the company by their behavior, the men have not been a whit better for the unfortunate struggle between them and the managers of the company. The weavers, we are told, have not succeeded in effecting any compromise and have returned to their work unconditionally. In regard to the damages, the company imposed a small fine per head on the weavers to cover damages and intimated that they would stop a week's pay as a punishment for their staying away en masse without leave during the three or four days following the riot. The men were also required to return to work by a certain day on pain of their losing their deposit and arrears of pay. But they were too obstinate to be easily induced to resume their work and the authorities consequently enforced the threat, which resulted in a continuance of the strike. The men have for the time been worsted. But it is a new weapon that they are learning the use of. So many as 7,000 workmen going on strike is no small matter, and at any time they may do so. It behooves the managers of the mills to treat the men with consideration, remembering that their labor is as essential as their own capital in the production of wealth."

But the British capitalists in India will not learn, any more than our patriotic native-born capitalists in the United States have learned. They will go on with their system of exploitation and oppression, and by so doing they will unconsciously teach their workers the way to freedom.

The Socialist movement has taken strong root in Japan. In the Philippines, in China, and in India not a few of the people are eagerly studying its principles; and the day is not far off when the religious and racial prejudices which have so long kept these peoples divided and powerless will disappear before the new world-thought, and the workers of Asia will take their place beside those of Europe and America in the great battle for the emancipation of Labor and the end of class-rule.

Chauncey Depew rightly said, criticizing Coler's "wobbly" position on Hill's coal-mine plank, "No party ever won on an 'if' or a 'but'." We may well bear that in mind, when confronted with "labor parties" or radicalism of the Hearst type. We are right. We know what we stand for. We have nothing to fear, nothing to apologize for, no room for equivocation, and no right to compromise. If we lack confidence in our principles, our party, and ourselves, we shall deserve to lose. If we stand our ground as Socialists against all comers, we shall not only lose nothing, but we shall postively gain by every partial forward movement that is made by others. As Socialists it can never be a question whether we can afford to antagonize half-way socialistic parties; the question is whether we can afford or have the right to desert our post in the advance guard.

In dealing with semi-socialistic political movements we have to remember that our party is more than a labor party and more than a public ownership party. It is both. It is the true party of Labor only because it offers the true solution of the labor problem, the social question, the class conflict—only because it is a Socialist party. A mere public ownership party is right in one of the two essentials; a mere labor party is right in the other; the Socialist Party is right in both. We may cheerfully welcome the rise of either of these movements, while recognizing its shortcomings, if—and only if—we go straight on toward the goal, showing the way and clearing the path for those who learn by experience the futility of other methods. We must take for our motto those words of Dante which Marx quotes in the preface to "Capital"—"Segui il tuo corso, e lascia dir le genti" (Hold to thy course, let men say what they will).

The fact that the election laws of New York make it impossible for us to use the name Socialist Party, as in other states, naturally produces a good deal of confusion and undoubtedly causes many votes intended for our party to be cast wrong. This is unfortunate, but for the present all that we can do is to make every effort to inform the people of the facts in the case. At every public meeting held in this state the chairman or the speaker should make it clear to the audience that the Social Democratic Party of New York is identical with the Socialist Party of other states and warn them against confusing it with the disruptionist S. L. P. Much of our literature, being intended for general circulation, bears the name Socialist Party. Where such literature is used in New York, the comrades should see to it that every piece, before being given out, is marked with a rubber stamp showing the official party name and the emblem.

THE WESTERN LABOR MOVEMENT.

Elsewhere in this paper we reprint an article by Comrade Debs, dealing with the American Labor Union, its relations with the American Federation of Labor, and the attitude of the Socialist Party thereto.

In connection with this article we may repeat the commeat we made (see The Worker, June 15) at the time when the Denver convention of the American Labor Union declared for Socialism. After congratulating the Western organization on its fearless declaration of progressive principles, we said:

"So much for the political side of the matter; the trade-union side is equally interesting and demands even more careful consideration.

"It is evident that the American Labor Union is now definitely at war with the American Federation of Labor, and that an aggressive fight will be carried on, at least within the present territory of the American Labor Union, until one side or the other acknowledges defeat.

"We could have wished that the question of the relations of the A. L. U. and the A. F. of L. had come to a different issue at the Denver convention. We regret every division in the trade union movement, as tending to weaken the working class in its battle with the capitalists. We advise every workingman to join the established union of his craft, and we advise all unions to unite in the closest possible relation with the organizations of other crafts. Observing the events from a distance and perhaps with an imperfect knowledge, we had hoped that the Western unions would decide to affiliate with the Federation, not to submit to its reactionary policy, but to join the growing band of progressive bodies in the East in working for a change of that policy.

"Such was our wish and hope. But we must now recognise the accomplished fact. We know that the organizations forming the American Labor Union had good cause of complaint against the Federation, and perhaps we must admit that they were best qualified to judge of the case and decide it. Moreover, we know that the A. L. U. represents a bona fide labor movement—the bona fide labor movement, in fact, of the Rocky Mountain region. As such we recognize it and waste no further time in regretting its separation from the Eastern unions. Its spirit and its principles are also ours, and since it cannot co-operate with us directly in advancing those principles within the A. F. of L., we wish it all power in advancing them in the West, in setting an inspiring example to the less progressive bodies of the East. Here we shall fight on, striving to bring our organizations up to the standard set at Denver, in the hope that not many years will elapse before all obstacles to union will be removed."

We further expressed the hope that the A. L. U. would refrain from taking retaliatory measures against the Federation by invading the East, great as might be the provocation, believing that such action would only complicate the question, give apparent justification to the reactionists of the Federation, and hinder the progress being made in the East toward bringing about such a change in the spirit of the Federation as will, if continued, soon result in the union of the two bodies on the higher ground that the Western one has already taken.

We hold to every word of this, believing it in perfect accord with the principles governing the relation of the party to the unions which we stated in last week's issue of The Worker. And the progress shown at the New Orleans convention of the Federation, within a month after Comrade Debs' article went to press, still further justifies our position. If the division between the A. F. of L. and the A. L. U. depends only upon the difference between the conservative policy of the one and the progressive attitude of the other, if prejudice and factional feeling are kept out of the question, assuredly the time for amicable union is not far off.

Comrade Debs speaks strongly in condemnation of the manifesto issued by the Local Quorum of the Socialist Party, late in July, in which the A. L. U. was censured for maintaining its separate organization and a parallel was drawn between it and ill-judged and ill-fated S. T. & L. A. We must agree with Comrade Debs on this point.

The manifesto in question was, in our opinion, unjust in its criticism of the A. L. U. It ignored at least one essential difference between that body and the S. T. & L. A.—the fact that the S. T. & L. A. was an abortion, while the A. L. U. is a live and apparently vigorous body.

We will go further. Even granting the Local Quorum full authority to speak for the party, it does not seem to us that the party was called upon to take sides in this trade-union conflict. It is our business to recognize the bona fide unions that exist; if they have disputes to settle, that is their business, not the business of the Socialist Party. Our members who are members of the unions are in duty bound to do all in their power to settle such conflicts, whether by conciliation or by vigorous fighting (sometimes peace can be secured only by a fight), but it is neither the duty nor the right of the party organization to interfere.

This mistake of the Local Quorum was quite in line with what we consinder its equally grave mistake in advising that the party should withhold its support from the Pennsylvania comrades during the coal strike, advising, in fact, that no campaign be carried on in the strike field, but all efforts concentrated on the strike alone. Events have abundantly proved the fallacy of that advise and the reasons given for it, and the same mistake will hardly be repeated.

Our purpose in citing these two cases together is to show that both errors arose from the same cause—a tendency to exaggerate the importance of the trade union movement and the subordinate or, at least, to postpone the interests of the Socialist Party to those of the unions. This is, perhaps, a natural enough reaction from the false position on the other extreme known as De Leonism; but the reaction has gone rather too far. It is time we were reminded that we are Socialists, first, last, and all the time; that we have a work to do far larger and more far-reaching than that of the unions; that, while the two movements ought to go on in harmony, yet, if their claims conflict, our duty to our class and to humanity demands that we put the claims of Socialism first.

In accordance with this belief, The Worker, taking Comrade Debs at his word and assuming that he speaks with authority for the A. L. U., rejoices to hear that the Western organization has no intention of invading Eastern fields; it calls upon all comrades concerned in the union movement to use their efforts to bring about the lasting unity that can come only from intelligent agreement on right principles; and it assures our Western brothers that tens of thousands of union men in the East are looking eargerly for the day, probably within another year, when the Federation will take such a stand that no reasonable obstacle to unity will be left.

We welcome the advent of a new Socialist weekly in California—the "California Socialist," published at 1312 Market street, San Francisco—of which the first number has just reached us. The paper is owned by D. E. Bohannon, a member of Local Alamada County, and edited by our well-known comrade, M. W. Wilkins. The subscription price is 50 cents a year. We welcome the paper for a double reason; first, as we welcome every sign of increased Socialist activity; second, because the older party papers in California have committed the grave error of refusing a hearing to those who opposed the fusion policy adopted there and the new paper will fight for strict Socialist Party tactics and, being on the field of battle, will be able to do it more effectively than a paper so far distant as New York, Chicago, or even Seattle.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST.

By Horace Traubel.

A writer of our time who was both distinguished and denounced wrote a brilliant play which he called "The Importance of Being Earnest. I always thought the best part of this best play was its title line. It is like a text from some living scripture.

I meet every day with people who do not admit the importance of being earnest. They are anything but earnest. They may be smart. They may be showy. They may dress well. They may talk well. But they are not earnest.

These people are cynics. They lack faith. They do not see that the universe can save itself. They do not believe that man can save himself. Things are bad as they are. And things that are bad cannot be made better. That is their philosophy.

When these people look labor in the face they tell labor that its appeal is hopeless. They declare that all men are selfish. They declare that superstition has ruled man and will rule man forever. They say your morals are all right. But morals are sentiment. And man is not controlled by sentiment. He is controlled by greed. Man is the child and parent of the main chance. God is abolished. But the main chance reads man the law.

These indifferent people are sometimes simply indifferent. They may be personally sweet. They may be cold and heartless. They may be driven to indifference by despair. But however it comes, their indifference is an eclipse.

We like to encounter belief. The belief may be unpleasant. It may traverse our dearest faith. It may use strong words and even call in the police. But we like it. For we know how to meet belief. But we do not know how to meet indifference.

The strong point of the industrial autocrats of to-day is their belief in themselves. Even Baer is more refreshing than a man who says nothing or who trains for the fence or who swears both sides are all right and all wrong. For Baer has plainly stated a theory. It is a theory whose eyes are turned back. But it is a theory. And he staunchly adheres to it. So we know how and where to meet Baer. We need not feel for him in the dark.

But when a fellow says that the problem is too big for him even to think or feel about. When he says he is willing to leave the case to evolution. When he says that human nature is human nature—which means that man is bound to one conclusion forever. When he says it makes no difference what you think or feel, or whether you rob or are honest, or whether some men are overfed or some men starve. When he says such things we find that we are trying to add ciphers or pick up wind.

The worst form of heartlessness is indifference. The man who thinks he is the whole of evolution is a funstoner. The man who thinks he is left out of evolution is chinless.

I would not claim for one instant that I could get up a corner in any historic current. I would not admit for one instant that any historic current could leave me out. I am as necessary to it as it is to me.

So I say to the social topsters: I am going to make such a fuss about your ears that the deafest of you may learn to know what I am about.

That fuss is evolution. That is the part I play in evolution. And if I play on the level you will know I am present.

I am not going to sit with my hands and tongue tied. I am going to talk out loud. I am going to do out loud.

I do not assert that I know everything. I do not ask you to concede that I am a man of power. I am willing not to have power. But I want love. I am going to work in love's name and by love's vehemence. And you will hear me. For love never goes unheard.

More than that. Love is never indifferent. Love believes in all the impossible things. And that is why love can do so much. Love does not believe that man can do nothing. Love believes that man can do anything. Love's miracle shames all the clumsy metaphysics of the castes. Love never says: It's of no use. Love always says: It's every use. Love sits down with its one vote and multiplies it to majorities.

What is it, then, that makes the men we call reformers? It is their capacity for love. And if you are indifferent look to yourself. You will find yourself some night forgetting yourself in your prayers. To you who are indifferent I say: I should think you would avoid crowds. Sometime in a crowd you might detect yourself picking your own pocket.

THE WAYS OF FINANCE.

How Money Gets "Tight" and Why the Treasury Department "Comes to the Relief of Wall Street."

From a recent issue of the "Pilgrim" we take the following popular exposition of the ramifications of the banking system and of the recurrent "money stringencies" of which we hear so much and to relieve which the Secretary of the Treasury, shortly before election, took such unusual and extra-legal measures. The "Pilgrim" says:

"Every little while we hear of some man of business, usually a speculator in a booming town, who owes so much money that the banks cannot afford to let him fail. It seems a paradox that the merchant who by misfortune becomes indebted to his banker for a little more than he can pay should be forced to the wall, while the daring plunger who systematically involves the bank so heavily in his operations that if he fails it must, is protected to the last extremity; but it is a paradox that is often observed. To be sure the banks that don't happen to be involved always virtuously reprobate the practice and describe it as bad banking—until their turn comes. And, after all, if the first false step is taken, the rest is inevitable and even justifiable. So delicate is the adjustment of business relations, so complicated the interdependence of parts in the business world that a serious injury to a bank, if made known, will inflict a vastly more serious injury upon hosts of innocent people. It is admittedly the part of wisdom for the bank to conceal its wound, bind up its hurt, let the guilty individual go unwhipped of justice, but be exceedingly careful not to get caught that way again.

"Now banks are not merely moneylenders, in which capacity they sometimes suffer in the way outlined, but they are borrowers as well. They borrow the money of their depositors and a great share of this money from all over the country finds its way into the coffers of the biggest borrowers of all—the New York banks. The farmer puts his savings into the local bank, which in turn deposits all it has no immediate need for in a bank in the nearest city. This bank, if it be in St. Louis, Detroit, Chicago or wherever, lends heavily of its depositor's money to some New York bank. The New York banks, therefore, become the heaviest debtors of the people as a whole. And they are doubly debtors if they happen to be national banks, because in that event, beside the tens of millions they have borrowed on deposit, they have issued their circulating notes which are in the hands of the people, payable on demand.

"In dealing with their borrowers, banks pursue a very rigid system of judging of their various qualities which go to make up that business asset called credit. They consider whether a man is a steady business man, shrewd, avoiding reckless speculation, and with a reputation for always meeting his obligations to the letter. If he hasn't the latter quality he gets scant consideration at the cashier's window. But under existing considerations the people have no such system of judging the credit of their banks. Of course you know that Banker David Harum, of your town, is level-headed and keen, but he has to keep his reserve in a Chicago bank, and that Chicago bank keeps its reserve in the Billionaires National of New York, and the president of that bank has a passion for underwriting the stocks and bonds of new trusts—a very profitable gamble when it wins. But if about the time you want to get your money from Harum people generally think they need money, and don't care for the stock of a new trust, the president of the Billionaire's National finds that his bank cannot pay its debts. If it were one of his borrowers who could not pay him, the law would be invoked to compel a payment. As the shoe is on the other foot, the officers of the law are called upon to help him evade the law, and the country hears that the Secretary of the Treasury has come to the relief of Wall Street.

"That is about what happened last month. Money suddenly became 'tight' in Wall Street. The bankers there said it was because of the enormous demand for money to move the crops. Some other people think it was because of the enormous sums tied up in Mr. Morgan's ventures for the Morganization of industry. At any rate the New York banks 'laid down' on the government, and adopted the tactics of the bank wrecker who says, 'If you enforce the law on me I'll drag the bank down, too.' Unless the treasury helps us, said they, we will precipitate a financial panic. In response to the appeal, or threat, Secretary Shaw first anticipated the payment of interest on government bonds; second, announced that he would buy bonds in the public market; third, informed the bankers that the section of the national banking law which compelled them to keep a reserve fund equal to 25 per cent. of their deposits, did not have in contemplation the protection of deposits of United States funds in this way; and fourth, agreed that they might deposit any good bonds, instead of United States bonds only, to secure deposits of public funds. The first two expedients employed money taken from the people by taxation to save speculative New York bankers from the legitimate fruit of their own folly; the others were a distinct and definite acquiescence in the violation of the law to accomplish the same end.

"Nevertheless we do not join in the hostile criticism of the Secretary of the Treasury for his action. The banks had 'got in' deep on the people, just as some plunger occasionally 'gets in' deep on a bank and must be carried. A panic in Wall Street would be a frightful disaster to the nation to-day. But we do ask what the government proposes to do in order to avert the regular semi-annual raid on the treasury by the New York banks? We ask how the situation has been improved other than merely temporarily? We recall that in 1893 every New York bank was bankrupt, openly violating the law by issuing clearing house certificates and refusing to pay their depositors. Since that time the Republican administration has steadily been kept in power by the belief that it was best fitted to cope with this grave question of banking and the currency, yet nothing was ever done to punish the national bankers for their violation of law then, nothing to discourage them from inviting a situation which would compel the violation of law again. So far as there has been any legislation enacted or proposed, it has been of a sort that will make it easier for the Wall Street banks to precipitate a crisis and to extort government favors for their extrication."

This exposition of the devious ways of finance, so far as it goes, is a good one. But it does not go far enough. The writer treats the subject as if the financial system were a thing to be considered apart from the general system of industry and trade and as if its instability were merely incidental or accidental and could be remedied by some form of financial legislation.

In fact, finance, is at once the apex and the base of the capitalist system—which has been aptly compared to a pyramid inverted and resting on its apex.

The banking system, the whole fabric of credit, is not the essential part of capitalism; it is only an important part of the machinery by which capitalist exploitation is carried on. As an adjunct to capitalism it partakes of its nature, particularly in its instability. It is not by means of the banks that value is created nor does the appropriation of profits depend upon them alone; to do away with them, if that were possible, would not do away with the exploitation of labor. But, on the other hand, as the banks form a part of the capitalist system which may be partly compared to the governor of an engine, moved by the engine and yet regulating its motion, even a purely financial disturbance may react and produce disorder in the whole industrial world.

The whole system of capitalism is unstable, because it is anarchy organized. Its constant tendency to cut off the purchasing power and so to cut off the profit-motive of industry and bring industry to a standstill merely reflects itself in money stringencies and financial panics, which are, accordingly, a normal feature of modern finance—especially at the crisis of periods of prosperity.

After all, while it is important that we understand the financial system, financial questions are of secondary importance to the working class. A financial panic, partly foreshadowing and partly causing an industrial depression, is a disaster chiefly to the middle class of small capitalists. For the workers, the difference between prosperity and depression is only the difference between being overworked and getting barely enough to eat and being unwillingly idle and getting a little less to eat. For the great capitalists, a financial panic and industrial depression is chiefly a means of absorbing another instalment of the wealth of the middle class and so hastening the concentration of capital.

So long as capitalism lasts—that is, so long as the means of production remain private property to be used for private profit—so long we shall have periodical panics and depressions. We cannot hope to avoid them. We should rather welcome them, as a physician welcomes the appearance of the successive symptoms which show that a fever is running its normal course. Each industrial crash—and we are evidently drawing near to one at present—draws the class lines clearer, helps to eliminate the confused and confusing middle class, helps to organize industry more completely in the trusts and so to prepare it for Socialist public ownership, and helps to arouse the workers from their apathy and compel them to think and act.

Let the Republicans and Democrats continue to tinker with financial reforms. Our work is to profit by their failures and prepare the way for the social revolution.

MAKING A MAN.

Hurry the baby as fast as you can,
Hurry him, worry him, make him a man,
Off with his baby clothes, get him in pants,
Feed him on brain foods and make him advance.
Hustle him, soon as he's able to walk,
Into a grammar school; cram him with talk.
Fill his poor head full of figures and facts,
Keep on a-jamming them in till it cracks.
Once boys grew up at a rational rate,
Now we delevop a man while you wait.
Rush him through college, compel him to grab
Of every known subject a dip or a dab.
Get him in business and after the cash,
All by the time he can grow a mustache.
Let him forget he was ever a boy,
Make gold his god and its jingle his joy.
Keep him a-hustling and clear out of breath,
Until he wins—nervous prostration and death.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

The New Year's Greeting of The Worker and "Volkszeitung" is now ready for sale. It is an effective allegorical picture, based on the heroic struggle through which the anthracite coal miners have passed, and pointing the way to the emancipation of the workers and the inauguration of a system under which such struggles will be unknown. This Greeting will be a fitting adornment to the walls of any workingman's home.

Price, single copy, 10 cents, postpaid. In quantities of ten or more, at the rate of 5 cents a copy, postpaid. Send orders with cash to The Worker, 184 William street, New York City.

—Cold weather and dear coal make people think, but it is our business as Socialists to help them to think right. Circulate Socialist literature.

PARTY NOTES.

The national headquarters of the Socialist Party have been removed from the Emilie Building to Room 18, Allen Building, 505 Market street, St. Louis, Mo.

A local charter has been granted to Pearl River, Louisianna.

James S. Roche has been elected a member of the Local Quorum of the National Committee to succeed L. E. Hildebrand, resigned.

Waltham is one of the Massachusetts cities which showed a surprising gain in the city election. In November the city gave 91 votes for Chase, our candidate for Governor. In December our aldermanic candidates, Talbot and Irish (there being no mayoralty candidate) received 620 and 643, respectively. Now it is up to the comrades to hustle and see that all these new voters are so thoroughly educated in Socialist principles that they will "stick" at the next election and bring more with them.

The Socialists all over Pennsylvania are preparing to go into the local elections to be held in the spring and go in to win. The Williamsport "Statesman" notes that there will be a full ticket in that city, which showed a fine gain in the state election, and that there will be a lively campaign.

The County Committee of the Socialist Party of Allegheny County, Pa., met at 860 Concord street, Allegheny, on Dec. 14 and perfected an organization, with Turi Delp of Duquesne as Secretary and Fred L. Schwartz of 860 Concord street, Allegheny, as Organizer. The Socialists of Tarentum sent a representative asking that they be organized, which will be done this week. The committee desires that all readers of this paper in Allegheny County who do not belong to the party send their names and addresses to the Secretary, Turi Delp, Box 212, Duquesne, or to the Organizer, as above.

Haverhill readers of The Worker should remember that Comrade Morrill, the Assistant Assessor of Ward 5, is at all times prepared to take renewals or new subscriptions for this or other Socialist papers. He can be seen at 121 Lafayette square.

The 63 per cent. increase in the vote of the Socialist Party in Connecticut has resulted in calling much attention to the principles of Socialism in that state in quarters where it never got a hearing before. The Waterbury "Herald" recently gave a page and a half to an account of the party and articles by well known Socialists, accompanied by portraits.

The Ohio State Secretary's report for November shows receipts of $111.51 and expenditures of $151.56. The agitation is being steadily pushed in the state and greater activity is expected in the near future. A new local was organized at Montpelier and several others are in process of formation. Secretary Critchlow says: "Looking at the general state movement, it can be said that the results of the election has created an unusual activity in the ranks of the Socialists. It is always to be expected that following an election of the character of the last one there will be a reaction, caused by the excessive work of the campaign, and which takes some time to rally from. From this report it will be seen at a glance that such a reaction has not occurred, at least not to the extent that it was expected. The comrades in the state seem to be taking hold of the work with the same display of energy as before the election. Increased activity is noticeable in many instances and as a whole the work undertaken since the election has been very gratifying to the state organization. Several of the cities are holding regular Sunday lyceum meetings with success, many places which have been slack in organization work have bestirred themselves and are getting to gather in good shape and little by little the Ohio movement is assuming a better aspect, both in clearness of the program and as to organization discipline."

On Saturday evening, Jan. 3, Max S. Hayes will lecture in Memorial Hall Annex, Toledo, under the auspices of the Socialist local of that city, his subject being, "Why Socialism Is Coming." Ten cents admission will be charged and it is expected that the hall will be filled to its fullest capacity, as has been the case with several other large meetings arranged by the Toledo comrades in the same place.

New clubs or locals of the Socialist Party have been organized in Westfield, Revere, Medford, and Braintree, Mass.

New York City.

Mrs. Mary E. Lease will be the speaker on Sunday evening, Dec. 21, at Colonial Hall, 101st street and Columbus avenue, her subject being, "The Religion of the Twentieth Century." This is one of a series of Sunday evening lectures held by the 21st A. D., S. D. P., at this hall. Admission is free and general discussion is always invited after the lecture. On Dec. 28 W. E. McNabb of Typographical Union No. 6 will speak on "The Duty of Organized Labor."

A well attended meeting of the 30th A. D. was held at the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 12, Comrade Brunhober presiding, at which much party business was discussed and disposed of. It was decided to hold a special meeting on Dec. 17, partly for party business, especially voting for National Committeemen, and partly for discussion of the coal question. The Thirtieth is wide awake.

The work of election district organization in the 30th A. D. is going on well. Last week a meeting was held for the Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Election Districts at 1054 Avenue A, Comrade Brunhober's cigar store. In spite of the intense cold, twenty-two Social Democrats were present and plans were made for systematic educational work. Other meetings will be held at the same place and any residents of these districts who wish information about the party are invited to call there at any time. It is intended to enlist in the educational work every man who supports our principles, whether he is now a party member or not.

The comrades of the upper part of the Thirtieth are keeping up the good work they did before election. On Wednesday, Dec. 10, a public meeting was held in Kroetner's Hall, addressed by Comrades Spargo and Lee, and on Monday there was another at Nicas' Hall, at which Comrades Sackin, Wood, and Lee spoke. At each meeting a number of strangers were present and showed deep interest in the subject of discussion. Other meetings of the same sort will be held after the holidays.

There has been formed in the 16th A. D. an organization known as the Progressive Social Democratic Association, whose object is to establish club rooms and a free reading room in the district and to educate the young men in the principles of Socialism, by means of lectures and literature on social, economic, and political subjects. Fifteen young men joined the club at its first meeting last week. On Wednesday evening, Dec. 24, the new organization will hold a mass meeting at 8-10 Avenue A, Lafayette Hall, to be addressed by good speakers in Jewish and English.

The entertainment at the opening of the new rooms of the New York Socialist Literary Society at 241 East Broadway on Wednesday of last week was a great success. Comrades and sympathizers are invited to call any evening or on Saturday and Sunday afternoons and make themselves acquainted at the new quarters. Delegates to the Globe Conference were elected at the last meeting of the society.

August Droste will address the Socialist Club at Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Brooklyn, Sunday evening, Dec. 21, on "The Development of Socialism."

At the West Side Socialist Club, Clark's Hall, northwest corner of Twenty-fifth street and Eight avenue, second floor, this Friday evening, Dec. 19, Algernon Lee will lecture on "The Tendencies of Capitalism." On the following Friday Leonard D. Abbott will speak on "The Socialist Ideal," and a number of interesting lectures have been arranged for the Friday evenings in January. Admission is free and strangers are especially welcome. All members of the club who live in the 7th, 9th, or 25th assembly districts should attend the meeting of the party organization to be held at the home of Comrade Wecklein, 508 West Twenty-sixth street, Saturday evening, Dec. 20.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn has to get a new meeting place, on account of Comrade Franz, whose hall the club has been using, going out of business. For the present the club meets at Comrade Jergsdorf's house, 357 Linden avenue.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

At the last meeting of the General Committee of Local New York Comrade Paultisch was chairman and Comrade Penzer vice-chairman. Twenty-five new members were elected. A letter from Comrade Lee from Wilkesbarre, Pa., conveying the thanks of the Luzerne County comrades to Local New York for the assistance rendered them during the campaign was read and ordered placed on file.

The request of the State Committee that Local New York elect seven members to represent it at the new City Executive Committee embracing all the boroughs of the greater city, was acted upon and Comrades Wood, Hillquit, Slobodin, Spargo, Stahl, Lee, Lemon, Ramm, Paultisch, Obrist, Clarke, Neppel, John Franklin Clark, Reich, and Meyers were placed in nomination.

The Organizer reported that he was endeavoring to have the contract for the Grand Central Palace, where the proposed entertainment is to be held, cancelled and was confident that he would be successful.

Comrades Boudin, Mayes, Hillquit, and Slobodin were nominated as a committee to investigate the case in which Comrade Carl Eisenschmidt was arrested for alleged illegal voting upon affidavits sworn out by H. I. Kraemer, a Tammany politician.

The recommendation of the Executive Committee that four meetings be held as a protest against the conditions brought about by the Coal Barons, resulting in the present coal famine, was concurred in. It was decided to hold one on the West Side, two on the lower East Side, and one in the Bronx. The recommendation that 100,000 leaflets on the subject of the coal famine be printed was also concurred in.

A motion was passed, that the agitation districts be immediately organized and the matter of visiting the trades unions be left in their hands.

KINGS COUNTY.

The meeting of the County Committee of Kings County at the Socialist Club on Dec. 13 was well attended, notwithstanding the inclement weather. Nine applicants for party membership were admitted. The Fair Committee reported the sale of $52 worth of literature. On the request of the Organizer, $25 was appropriated for the purchase of literature, $5 of which was to be expended for literature in the German language; the order of business for the borough meeting was decided upon, including the election of the five members from Kings County on the temporary City Committee. The Organizer urged the comrades to co-operate with him in his efforts to have our movement properly presented to the trade unions. He has sent blanks to the comrades asking those who are members of trades unions to give him the necessary particulars which will enable him to carry out the matter thoroughly and properly. The Secretary was ordered to instruct the assembly district branches to nominate candidates for County Organizer and District Organizer during December and to hold the election for such officers in January. A number of bills were received from the State Committee, some of which were ordered paid and others referred to the Financial Secretary for investigation. The Financial Secretary reported a balance on hand of $51.66. The Recording and Financial Secretaries were ordered to revise the by-laws to date and have them printed.

LABOR SECRETARIAT.

Report of Counsel for August, September, and October Shows It to Be a Valuable Adjunct to the Trade Union Movement.

The organizations affiliated with the New York Labor Secretariat have before them the report of the counsel for the Secretariat, Hillquit & Hillquit, on the work done during the months of August, September and October. Some portions of the report are of general interest. We quote in part:

"When we assumed the duties of counsel for the Labor Secretariat on August 1, 1902, we found 14 cases of various kinds pending. Of these 7 were actions for damages for personal injuries, 5 were claims for wages, and 2 were matters of different nature. During the three months covered by this report, 43 new cases were added to the list. Of the total number of 57 cases thus coming under our charge, 22 cases were disposed of finally, and 35 are still pending."

Then follows a detailed account of the various cases, which concerned nineteen different unions or members thereof—Bakers' Nos. 1, 25, 50, 93, and 164, Confectioners' and Cake Bakers' No. 7, Beer Drivers' Nos. 23 and 24, Brewers' No. 1, Butchers' Nos. 3 and 175, Cigar Makers' Nos. 90 and 149, Carpenters Nos. 375 and 513, Architectural Iron Workers' No. 50, Bricklayers' Nos. 11 and 35, and Machinists No. 335. Of sixteen wage claims, eleven were collected in full and the others settled for very nearly the full amount claimed. A large proportion of the cases dealt with were complaints of the violation of the factory and tenement-house laws, especially in regard to unsanitary conditions in bakeshops. It requires the unceasing vigilence of the unions to secure the enforcement of these laws, as most employers have no scruple about violating them and the inspectors appointed by Republican and Democratic administrations are not likely to take action except under pressure; the Labor Secretariat can be of great service in protecting the life and health of the working people if the unions will see that all violations of the law were promptly brought to its attention.

The Secretariat successfully defended a member of Bakers' Union No. 25, arrested for distributing boycott circulars.

The Secretariat also took action to prevent the unauthorized use of union labels.

A large proportion of the cases still pending are for damages on account of injuries sustained by employees at their work. These cases generally proceed slowly as, under a recent ruling of the Supreme Court, they no longer take precedence of other actions and, especially in the case of large corporations, every means is used to secure delay and wear out the patience of the plaintiffs.

It is further stated that "to the above cases must be added numerous consultations of which no record is kept. These consultations related to various matters arising from the relations of employer and employee, and also from the relations of landlord and tenant, and as it was not deemed expedient to adhere to the strict letter of the constitution in that respect, advices were also freely given to members of organizations affiliated with the Secretariat, upon any legal matter submitted to counsel. There were also a number of claims which the Labor Secretariat, upon a thorough investigation, refused to prosecute, on the ground that they presented no legal cause of action, and different letters and notices written in behalf of the members; the total number of such letters during the last three months amounted to 163."

The report concludes with some suggestions which members of the affiliated organizations, and workingmen in general, will do well to consider, as follows:

"As will be seen from the foregoing list, the most important cases that have so far come to the Secretariat are those involving claims for damages through personal injuries. Although the existence of the Labor Secretariat is yet of very recent date, and the members of the different unions affiliated with it are not yet quite familiar with its workings, the number of these cases increases rapidly. The actions of this nature now pending in the Secretariat involve no less than the sum of $70,000, and in a measure as the Secretariat is becoming more popular, and is gaining the confidence of its members, these claims are increasing in volume.

"Of these accidents some have resulted in the death of the employees, and others in serious bodily injuries.

"It is, therefore, of the utmost importance, that these cases be properly understood by the members, and a few suggestions in connection with the same will not be out of place.

"The popular conception is, that the employer is liable for all injuries sustained by the employee in the course of employment. As a matter of fact, however, this is by no means the case; under the present state of our law, the employer does not insure the safety of the employee, and is not liable for injuries sustained by the employee, unless the following facts have occurred:

"1. That the employee has not in any way contributed to the injury by his own negligence or carelessness.

"2. That his employer or his foreman or superintendent in charge of the work, has been negligent in failing to provide the employee with a safe place to work, in providing the employee with defective machinery, or in failing to repair machinery after discovering the defects.

"3. That the injuries were not caused through the negligence of a fellow employee in the same line of occupation as the claimant.

"The recent Act of April 15, 1902, adds another requirement, namely: That notice of the accident be given to the employer within 120 days after the accident. It will thus be seen that under the present state of law as to the liability of the employer, it is quite a difficult matter for the employee to obtain compensation for personal injuries. These difficulties are furthermore increased by another factor:

"The majority of the larger employers are insured against claims by employees in accident insurance companies. These companies, as a rule, maintain a staff of agents or examiners, whose duty it is to examine into every accident reported, and incidentally to work up a defense for the employer. A number of cases have come to the notice of the Secretariat where such agents of insurance companies, under the promise of settlement, have obtained statements from the injured and their friends, in many cases in writing, which are prejudicial to the claim of the injured. In some cases the parties in question had not even taken sufficient care to examine what they had signed, and when they were confronted by their own written statements, they disclaimed any knowledge of the contents of the same.

"Members of the Secretariat should be careful not to fall into similar snares.

"Whenever an accident occurs, the injured should not make any statements to representatives of the insurance company, or others, before having consulted counsel. The Secretariat should be notified of all accidents as soon as they occur, so that the notice required by law may be given in time, and the fellow workers of the injured, should in all cases make it their business to investigate into the cause of the accident immediately upon its occurrence, and report the results of their investigations to their respective organizations.

"Another matter which requires the attention of the members is in reference to claims for wages.

"By a recent act of the Legislature of this state, judgments for wages may be enforced by the imprisonment of the employer. This remedy is given, however, only in cases where the action is commenced within thirty days after the wages become due. In order, therefore, not to lose the benefit of the new law, members should be careful not to drag claims for wages too long. As soon as an employer refuses to pay wages, notice should be given to the Secretariat at once, and collection will be enforced in all cases.

"The Secretariat has recovered several judgments which could not be made good for the sole reason that the claimants had commenced their actions after the expiration of thirty days, and had, therefore, no right to enforce payment by imprisonment."

The report shows that, while as yet far from having developed to its full capacity, the Labor Secretariat has proven itself a very useful adjunct to the labor movement in the city. At a very small annual cost to the affiliated organizations, these organizations and their members are assured the free services of good counsel on all legal matters concerning their position as members of the working class, and many just claims (small in themselves, but large in the aggregate and large in proportion to the small resources of the workers interested) can be collected at a minimum cost, which could otherwise never be pressed except by retaining private counsel whose fees would absorb the greater part of what was recovered.

It is to be hoped that during the coming year many more unions will become affiliated with the Labor Secretariat and avail themselves of its services.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 25,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

THE WESTERN LABOR MOVEMENT.

Comrade Debs Gives His Views on the American Labor Union and Its Relations With the Federation.

[The following article by Eugene V. Debs is reprinted entire from the November issue of the "International Socialist Review." Some comment will be found in another column.]

There seems to be considerable misapprehension, especially among Socialists, in regard to the trades-union movement of the Western States, whose delegates, recently assembled in national convention, adopted the platform of the Socialist Party and pledged the support of their organizations to the International Socialist movement. This radical departure from the effete and reactionary non-political policy of the American Federation of Labor, so long and so earnestly striven for by the Western leaders, and so entirely compatible with the Socialist conception of class-conscious and progressive trades-unionism, should have been met with the prompt and hearty approbation of every unionist and every Socialist in the land. That such was not the case, the lukewarm comment and the half-approving, half-condemning tone of the Socialist Party press, with but one or two exceptions, bear convincing testimony, while the uncalled for, unwise and wholly unaccountable official pronunciamento of the St. Louis "Quorum," purporting to speak for the National Committee, capped the climax of unfairness and injustice to the Western movement.

Stripped of unnecessary verbiage and free from subterfuge, the Socialist Party has been placed in the attitude of turning its back upon the young, virile, class-conscious union movement of the West, and fawning at the feet of the "pure and simple" movement of the East, and this anomalous thing has been done by men who are supposed to stand sponsor to the party and whose utterance is credited with being ex cathedra upon party affairs.

They may congratulate themselves that upon this point at least they are in perfect accord with the capitalist press, and also with the "labor lieutenants," the henchmen and heelers, whose duty it is to warn the union against Socialism and guard its members against working-class political action.

The writer takes issue with these comrades upon this vital proposition; and first of all insists that they (including the members of the Quorum) speak for themselves alone, as they undoubtedly have the right to do, and that their declaration in reference to the American Labor Union is in no sense a party expression, nor is it in any matter binding upon the party, nor is the party to be held responsible for the same.

As a matter of fact the rank and file of the Socialist Party, at least so far as I have been able to observe, rejoice in the action of the Denver convention, hail it as a happy augury for the future and welcome with open arms the Western comrades to fellowship in the party.

"Why didn't they stay in the Federation of Labor and carry on their agitation there? Why split the labor movement?" This is made the burden of the opposition to the Western unionists who refused to be assimilated by Mark Hanna's "Civic Federation"—the pretext for the scant, half-hearted recognition of their stalwart working-class organization and their ringing declaration in favor of Socialism and in support of the Socialist Party.

And this objection may be dismissed with a single sentence. Why did not those who urge it remain in the Socialist Labor Party and carry on their agitation there? Why split the Socialist movement?

It is not true that the Western unionists set up a rival organization from geographical or sectional considerations, or to antagonize the Federation; and they who aver the contrary know little or nothing about the Western movement, nor about the causes that brought it into existence. A brief review of these may throw some light upon the subject.

In 1896 the annual convention of the Federation of Labor was held in Cincinnati. The Western Federation of Miners, at that time an affiliated organization, was represented by President Edward Boyce and Patrick Clifford, of Colorado. The strike of the Leadville miners, more than 3,000 in number, one of the bloodiest and costliest labor battles ever fought, was then in progress and had been for several months. The drain and strain on the resources of the Western Federation had been enormous. They needed help and they needed it sorely. They had always poured out their treasure liberally when help was needed by other organizations, East as well as West, and now that they had reached their limit, they naturally expected prompt and substantial aid from affiliated organizations. Boyce and Clifford appealed to the delegates. To use their own language they were "turned down," receiving but vague promises which, little as they meant, were never fulfilled. At the close of the convention they left for home, disappointed and disgusted. They stopped off at Terre Haute to urge me to go to Leadville to lend a helping hand to the striking miners, which I proceeded to do as soon as I could get ready for the journey. It was here that they told me that the convention was a sore surprise to them, that three or four men had votes enough to practically control the whole affair and that the dilatory and reactionary proceedings had destroyed their confidence in the Federation.

Afterward I was told by the officers in charge of the strike that no aid of the least value, or even encouragement, had been rendered by the Federation of Labor and that the financial contributions were scarcely sufficient to cover the expense of the canvass for same.

It was not long after this that the Western miners withdrew from the Federation and a couple of years later, conceiving the necessity of organizing all classes of labor in the Western States, which as yet had received but scant attention, the American Labor Union was organized, the Western Federation of Miners being the first organization in affiliation with the new central body.

But notwithstanding the withdrawal of the Western Miners from the American Federation they continued loyally to support the Eastern boycotts levied by the Federation; and it is a fact not to be gainsaid that while some of those boycotts were so feebly supported in the East, where they had been levied, as to be practically impotent, the union men of the West recognized them as scrupulously as if imposed by their own organization, and in Montana and other States drove the boycotted Eastern products out of the Western markets.

So far as I am able to inform myself there is no instance on record where the American Federation of Labor, or any organization affiliated with it, ever sanctioned or supported a boycott levied by the Western unions.

On the contrary, cases can be cited where the Eastern organizations bluntly refused to recognize boycotts declared by the Western organization.

Not only this, but the Western unions have always contributed promptly and liberally to the financial support of all labor unions, East and West, North and South, affiliated and otherwise, Butte leading with thousands of dollars in support of all kinds of strikes, in all sections of the country, the liberality and loyalty of the Western Federation of Miners in such cases being proverbial—and yet I have never heard of an instance where the Western unions received a dollar from any Eastern organization since the withdrawal of the Miners' Federation.

At this very time, while the miners of the East are making a desperate struggle against starvation, the miners of the far West, affiliated with the fabooed American Labor Union, are contributing from their hard earnings to the support of the Pennsylvania strikers, though they never expect to receive a penny from the East; and President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners is sending messages to President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers. Still more—notwithstanding the bituminous miners of the Middle States, members of the same organization as the anthracite strikers, decided not to strike in support of their anthracite brethren, President Moyer and Secretary Haywood of the Western Federation wired President Mitchell that in their judgment all the miners in the country should stand by the Pennsylvania strikers and that the coal miners of the Western Union were ready to a man to lay down their tools until the anthracite strike was won.

This is the militant, progressive, liberal spirit of Western unionism—now re-enforced with a class-conscious political program—that could not brook the ultra-conservative policy of the Eastern movement, and seceded from it with motives as loyal to labor as ever prompted men to action.

The opponents of the Western Labor Union may search the annals of organized labor in vain, all the circumstances considered, for as noble an example of fidelity to the principles of union labor, as that of President Moyer and Secretary Haywood of the Western Federation, speaking for the coal miners of the Western States, having no grievance of their own and belonging to another organization, to which the East, if not hostile, was at least not friendly, voluntarily agreeing to lay down their tools, and give up their jobs to help their fellowmen more than two thousand miles distant whom they had never seen and never expect to see.

Had the situation been reversed and the miners of Montana had gone on strike, would the Eastern miners have sent any money out there, or would the Eastern miners have volunteered to strike in sympathy with their Western brethren?

The conventions of the Western Labor Unions, the Western Federation of Miners and the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, held simultaneously at Denver in May last, attracted wide attention chiefly because of their declaration in favor of Socialism and their adoption of an independent political program. Prior to this these organizations were rarely mentioned; in fact almost unknown in the Eastern and Middle States and no reference to them was ever made by the capitalist press outside their own immediate jurisdiction. But the very moment they declared in favor of Socialism, the capitalist press, the "pure and simple" union element and, strange to say, some Socialists, "Cry Havoc, and let slip the dogs of war." As for the Socialists who joined in the outcry, or "damned with faint praise," they were perhaps persuaded, after a survey of the East and then the West, that it was wiser policy to curry favor with numbers than to stand by principles.

The impression prevails in some quarters that the American Labor Union was first instituted at the convention in Denver last May. This is erroneous, as the organization has been in existence several years, and at the late convention simply changed its name from the Western Labor Union to the American Labor Union to more properly describe its expanding jurisdiction.

Fault has been found because of the rival disposition shown by the convention to the American Federation and the purpose to invade other sections and organize rival unions, thereby dividing the movement and precipitating a factional labor war.

The delegates to the Denver convention considered this phase of the question in all its bearings: they did not propose to antagonize the American Federation, nor to invade its jurisdiction, nor set up rival unions, they simply proposed to protect their own movement in the Western States and they did not propose to allow attacks to be made upon it without resenting them; and when they finally took action, even in the matter of changing their name, it was in self-defense, for from every quarter, even some of their own disgruntled element who sought to defeat the proposed adoption of Socialism, came the threat that if the Western Union did not return to the American Federation, the latter would send a corps of organizers into the Western States to institute rival unions and "wipe the Western movement off the earth."

The "pure and simple" element in Denver and vicinity, affiliated with the American Federation, and not a few of the local politicians, who saw their doom in the Socialist tendency of the convention, were loud and persistent in the threat of "annihilation" if the delegates refused to vote for affiliation with the American Federation. While there I heard it frequently upon the street and elsewhere and in fact Secretary Morrison, who, with Thomas I. Kidd, of the Executive Council, represented the American Federation at the convention with the purpose of inducing the Western Labor Union to dissolve, and its affiliated organizations to join the American Federation, gave it out that if the delegates declined their overtures, the American Federation would proceed to organize in all the Western States, as it acknowledged no boundary line to its jurisdiction in the United States.

The charge, therefore, of "invasion" and "rival unions" against the Western movement, falls to the ground. It can be proven beyond doubt that the Western movement acted upon the defensive in this matter and that only when the threat to "wipe them out of existence" in their own territory was made, did they conclude to extend their jurisdiction to such sections as desired to embrace their organization.

If it is held that the American Federation had prior jurisdiction, it may be answered that George the Third and Great Britain had prior jurisdiction over the colonies, and that the jurisdiction of the Knights of Labor antedated that of the American Federation, and the National Labor Union that of the Knights of Labor and so on back without end.

Whatever difference may have prompted the separation several years ago—and whether it was wise or otherwise, I shall not now consider, having no share in the praise or blame, as the action was taken by the Western miners upon their own motion and they are entirely willing to accept the responsibility—it is certain that there is to-day a radical fundamental difference between the Eastern and Western wings of the American Labor movement and that in their present state and with their present conflicting policies and tendencies, they can not be united and even if they could be, factional and sectional strife would be at once engendered and disruption would be inevitable.

The Western movement could only have consented to go back and backward to the American Federation by stultifying itself and betraying and humiliating its thousands of progressive members who are far enough advanced to recognize the futility of labor organizations without class-conscious political action and who will never retrace their steps to the fens and bogs of "pure and simple" unionism.

The Western men want unity and they want harmony, but they will not go backward, they will not sacrifice progress to reaction to secure it.

They have declared their class-consciousness and they can not and will not snuff out that beacon light to emancipation.

They have committed their organization to the Socialist Party and they can not unite with an organization that is hostile to independent political action by the working class.

There is one way and one only to unite the American trades-union movement. The American Federation of Labor must go forward to the American Labor Union; the American Labor Union will never go back to the American Federation of Labor. Numbers count for nothing; principle and progress for everything.

When the American Federation of Labor sheds its outgrown "pure and simple" policy, when it declares against the capitalist system and for union, class-conscious action at the ballot box, as the supreme test of union principles, as the American Labor Union has done; when it relegates "leaders" to the rear who secure fat offices for themselves in reward for keeping the rank and file in political ignorance and industrial slavery, when it shall cease to rely upon cringing lobbying committees, begging, like Lazarus at the gate of Dives, for a bone from a capitalist legislature and Congress it helped to elect, and marshals its members in class-array against their exploiters on election day to vote their own class into power, then unity will come and the Western men will hail with joy that day. And it is coming. It is simply bound to come.

In the meantime there need be no quarrel between the East and West and there will be none unless the threatened attempt to "snuff out" the West should materialize, in which case the "snuffers" will be entitled to the credit of having inspired a refreshing exhibition of the "staying" qualities of the class-conscious trades-union movement of the Western State.

The speaking tour of the national officers and executive council of the American Federation, in the mountain States, following the Denver convention, and widely heralded by the capitalist press as an "uprising of the conservative element of organized labor to squelch the Western radicals" can claim anything but a victory if that was the program of President Gompers and his colleagues. Some of their meetings, with all the advertising they received, scarcely amounted to a "corporal's guard," and where they had hundreds, the meetings held under the auspices of the Western Union had thousands in attendance without the aid of capitalist newspapers and in spite of the opposition of capitalist politicians.

As to whether the Western movement is growing or declining since the Denver convention, it is sufficient to say that the reports show that during the month of September the organizations affiliated with the American Labor Union added more than four thousand new names to their rolls of membership.

Passing through Denver recently I noticed by the papers of that city in scare-head articles, that the organizer of the American Federation, who had just been interviewed upon the subject, declared in emphatic terms that he had been instructed from headquarters at Washington to organize rival unions at every available point and where there was even one applicant, to admit him, totally regardless of the American Labor Union. If this is to be the policy of the Eastern Federation it will have to be that of the Western Union and as a result we shall have an era of unprecedented activity in the work of organizing the trades-union movement of the country.

One thing is noticeable in this connection and that is that the American Federation has evinced a greater interest in the Western States, spent more money and worked harder to organize them in the comparatively short time since the Western Union is in the field than in all previous years.

The rise of class-conscious trades-unionism in the West was not the result of mere chance or personal design, but obedient to the rising tide of the revolutionary spirit of the proletariat of the rugged and sparsely settled mountain States, a composite population composed of pioneers, the most adventurous, brave and freedom-loving men from all States of the American continent, and it is impossible that they, with their keen instinct and revolutionary tendency could be long content to creep along in the creaking chariot of conservatism, even though it still bear traces of the union label.

The class-conscious union movement of the West is historic in origin and development and every Socialist should recognize its mission and encourage its growth. It is here that the tide of social revolution will reach its flood and thence roll into other sections, giving impetus where needed and hastening the glorious day of triumph.

I am the friend, not the enemy of the American Federation of Labor. I would conserve, not destroy it. I am opposed, not to the organization or its members, many of whom are personal friends, but to those who are restraining its evolution and preventing it from fulfilling its true mission.

I would not convert it into a political organization, but simply bring it up to date and have it, as it must become if it is to survive, a class-conscious industrial union, its members recognizing the Socialist ballot as the weapon of their class and using it accordingly, thus escaping the incongruities and self-contradictions of the present "pure and simple" union, whose members strike against and boycott the effects of the capitalist system while voting industriously to perpetuate the system.

It is true that there are elements of progress at work within the organization. Let them continue their efforts. Such men as Max S. Hayes, J. W. Slayton, J. Mahlon Barnes and many others who have done and are doing excellent work on the inside have all help and no hinderance to expect from the Western movement.

In time the two progressive forces will meet and the work of redemption will have been accomplished.

Until then, as in the past, I shall support every boycott and every strike of the American Federation of Labor, and every organization affiliated with it, to the best of my ability, and when they lose in any of these struggles, no disheartening word from my lips shall darken their counsels or add to the bitterness of their defeat.

I have been plain and unreserved in my criticism as I have a right to be. For many years I have been an unofficial organizer for the Federation of Labor, and for all the trades unions connected with it, and in my travels, especially the past seven years in which I have been almost continuously traversing the country, I have organized and been the means of organizing hundreds of unions of all kinds. In the Southern States I held the first great labor meetings when there was little or no trace of organization, in many places not even a single member, and I at once set to work organizing each point with the result that when I covered the same territory shortly after, there were unions everywhere and the movement spread rapidly over that section of the country. In view of these facts I think I can consistently assert the right of candid criticism.

The attitude of the Socialist Party toward the trades-union movement, broadly endorsing and commending it, but stopping there, and allowing it to manage its own internal affairs is, without doubt, the correct one, as any intermeddling must result in harm with no possible hope of good. The party, as such, must continue to occupy this friendly yet non-interfering position, but the members may, of course, and in my judgment should join the trades-unions East and West and North and South and put forth their best efforts to bring the American labor movement to its rightful position in the struggle for emancipation.

CAPITALIST MORALITY.

If certain of these public brothels in our large towns could betray their secrets, we should find that their inmates, mostly of low birth, with neither breeding nor education, often scarcely able to write their own names, but possessed of personal charms, stand in a relationship of the greatest intimacy to the leaders of society, men of high intelligence and scholarship. We should there see cabinet ministers, officers of rank, privy councilors, members of Parliament, judges, etc., entering side by side with representatives of the aristocracies of birth, finance, trade and industry. These men appear by day and in society with the grave and dignified air of guardians of morality, order, marriage and the family; they are at the head of Christian charities and of societies for the suppression of prostitution. Our social organization resembles a great carnival festival, in which every one seeks to dupe and deceive every one else, in which every one wears his official disguise with decorum, and indulges his inclinations and passions all the more unrestrainedly in private. And meanwhile public life is running over with propriety, religion and morality.—Bebel, in Woman, Past, Present and Future.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. By Frederick Engels. Translated by Ernest Untermann. Cloth, 217 pp., price, fifty cents. Charles H. Kerr and Company, 56 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Like "Capital," the "Communist Manifesto," and "Socialism Utopian and Scientific," this book is one of the great classics of Socialist literature. It had already been translated into every other civilized language, and the translation into English is as necessary and valuable as it is belated.

This work of Engels is based on the discoveries set forth in the "Ancient Society" of the American, Lewis H. Morgan, which was published in 1877. Morgan had, to a certain extent, discovered for himself the materialistic conception of history originated by Marx and Engels. Marx had planned to write such a work as this one which his friend Engels completed after his death.

Up to 1861 the patriarchal form of the family was supposed to be the most ancient. Bachofen then discovered the ancient practice of maternal law and rule based upon the fact that descent could originally be traced only by the female line as the only certain means of determining parentage. Bachofen was unable to get any farther than this great discovery carried him because of his idea that the change in family relations was accomplished through the evolution of religious ideas. After Bachofen, McLennan discovered that in certain groups among primitive peoples intermarrying inside the group was prohibited, and that in other cases marrying outside the group was prohibited. Mistaking these groups for tribes, he called the first exogamous tribes and the second endogamous tribes, and built a shaky superstructure upon this mistaken contrast of exogamous and endogamous "tribes." Morgan showed that a tribe was subdivided into a number of groups or gentes and that while the gens was exogamous, the tribe, comprising a number of gentes, was endogamous.

Morgan spent the greater part of his life among the Iroquois Indians, being adopted into one of their tribes; he also prevailed upon the federal government to collect information on the systems of kinship of other nations by means of question blanks and tables drawn up by himself, and his discoveries as to the origin of the family were the result of forty years study of what Engels so aptly calls "these social fossils, backward savages," and barbarians. He found that the system of kinship in vogue among American Indians, Asiatic tribes and many others, was in direct contradiction to the actual degrees of relation arising from their marriage system; and, moreover, that in Hawaii there existed a family form producing just such relationships as actually existed among the Indians. "But how remarkable. The Hawaiian system of kinship again did not agree with the family forms actually prevailing there * * * While thus the American system of kinship pre-supposes an obsolete primitive form of the family, which is still actually existing in Hawaii, the Hawaiian system on the other hand points to a still more primitive form of the family, the actual existence of which cannot be proved any more, but which must have existed, because otherwise such a system of kinship could not have arisen." In these remarkable comparative studies was found the key to the origin and evolution of the family.

Morgan divided primeval society into two stages, savagery and barbarism, and subdivided each of these into a lower, middle and higher stage according to the progress in the production of the means of sustenance. In the lower stage of savagery, men lived at least part of the time in trees and fed on fruits and nuts; the middle stage commenced with the utilization of fish and mollusks as food and the use of fire, which enabled man to travel by following the course of rivers; the higher stage of savagery came with the invention of bow and arrow and the consequent increase in food supply by hunting. The lower stage of barbarism began with the introduction of the art of pottery; the middle stage was characterized by agriculture and the domestication of animals; and the higher stage of barbarism begins with the melting of iron ore and use of iron tools and merges into civilization by the invention of writing. Engels summarizes Morgan's arrangement as follows: "Savagery—time of predominating appropriation of finished natural products; human ingenuity invents mainly tools useful in assisting this appropriation. Barbarism—time of acquiring the knowledge of cattle raising, of agriculture and of new methods for increasing the productivity of nature by human agency."

The first step out of unrestricted sexual intercourse was the attempt to limit in-breeding by the exclusion of ancestors and descendants and in this early stage, known as the consanguine family, all those of the same generation were mutually married; the evolution of the family proceeded by the proscription of sexual intercourse first between near and then more and more remote relatives until finally, through the punaluan group marriage by the extension of the prohibited degrees of relationship it arrived at the maternal law gens, "a definite circle of consanguineous relatives of female lineage who were not permitted to marry one another." Along with the group marriage and especially in its more restricted stages there developed the pairing family, the mating of one couple for a considerable time. Monogamy did not develop from this until the coming of slavery and the rise of private property. As soon as it became possible for one man to produce more than was needed to sustain himself, and agriculture and cattle-raising developed, captives were made slaves and private property arose. Under maternal law, the tracing of descent only by female lineage, and the gentile organization, property was inherited by the mother's children, and the male desire for children of assured paternity that could be his off-spring alone and thus inherit his wealth gave rise to monogamy. In Engels' work this long evolution which we have barely suggested here is described in detail, as is the way in which the coming of private property led to class divisions and antagonisms and the consequent rise of the state.

The work is one which will be of absorbing interest to all students of social science who have not read it in the original and the depth and keenness of the reasoning of Morgan, Engels and Marx combine to provide an intellectual feast for the student. The chapters on the origin and nature of the state are of especial value to Socialists.

Engels has the following to say as to what may be anticipated about the re-adjustment of sexual relations after the downfall of capitalism:

"We are now approaching a social revolution, in which the old economic foundations of monogamy will disappear just as surely as those of its complement, prostitution. Monogamy arose through the concentration of considerable wealth in one hand—a man's hand—and from the endeavor to bequeath this wealth to the children of this man to the exclusion of all others. This necessitated monogamy on the woman's, but not on the man's part. Hence this monogamy of women in no way hindered open or secret polygamy of men. Now the impending social revolution will reduce this whole care of inheritance to a minimum by changing at least the overwhelming part of permanent and inheritable wealth—the means of production—into social property. Since monogamy was caused by economic conditions, will it disappear when these causes are abolished?

"One might reply, not without reason: not only will it not disappear, but it will rather be perfectly realized. For with the transformation of the means of production into collective property, wage labor will also disappear, and with it the proletariat and the necessity for a certain, statistically ascertainable number of women to surrender for money. Prostitution disappears and monogamy, instead of going out of existence, at last becomes a reality—for men also.

"At all events, the situation will be very much changed for men. But also that of women, and of all women, will be considerably altered. With the transformation of the means of production into collective property the monogamous family ceases to be the economic unit of society. The private household changes to a social industry. The care and education of children becomes a public matter. Society cares equally well for all children, legal or illegal. This removes the care about the 'consequences' which now forms the essential social factor—moral and economic—hindering a girl to surrender unconditionally to the beloved man. Will not this be sufficient cause for a gradual rise of a more unconventional intercourse of the sexes and a more lenient public opinion regarding virgin honor and female shame? And, finally, did we not see that in the modern word monogamy and prostitution, though antitheses, are inseparable and poles of the same social condition? Can prostitution disappear without engulfing at the same time monogamy?

"Here a new element becomes active, an element which at best existed only in the germ at the time when monogamy developed: individual sexlove.

"Before the middle ages we cannot speak of individual sexlove. It goes without saying that personal beauty, intimate intercourse, harmony of inclinations, etc., awakened a longing for sexual intercourse in persons of different sex, and that it was not absolutely immaterial to men and women, with whom they entered into such most intimate intercourse. But from such a relation to our sexlove there is a long way yet. All through antiquity marriages were arranged for the participants by the parents, and the former quietly submitted. What little matrimonial love was known to antiquity was not subjective inclination, but objective duty; not cause, but corollary of marriage. Love affairs in a modern sense occurred in classical times only outside of official society. The shepherds whose happiness and woe is sung by Theocritos and Moschus, such as Daphnis and Chloe of Longos, all these were slaves who had no share in the state and in the daily sphere of the free citizen. Outside of slave circles we find love affairs only as products of disintegration of the sinking old world. Their objects are women who also are standing outside of official society, hetaerae that are either foreigners or liberated slaves: in Athens since the beginning of its decline, in Rome at the time of the emperors. If love affairs really occurred between free male and female citizens, it was only in the form of adultery. And to the classical love poet of antiquity, the old Anakreon, sexlove in our sense was so immaterial, that he did not even care a fig for the sex of the beloved being.

"Our sexlove is essentially different from the simple sexual craving, the Eros, of the ancients. In the first place it presupposes mutual love. In this respect woman is the equal of man, while in the antique Eros her permission is by no means always asked. In the second place our sexlove has such a degree of intensity and duration that in the eyes of both parties lack of possession and separation appear as a great, if not the greatest, calamity. In order to possess one another they play for high stakes, even to the point of risking their lives, a thing heard of only in adultery during the classical age. And finally a new moral standard is introduced for judging sexual intercourse. We not only ask: 'Was it legal or illegal?' but also: 'Was it caused by mutual love or not?' Of course, this new standard meets with no better fate in feudal or bourgeois practice than all other moral standards—it is simply ignored. But neither does it fare worse. It is recognized just as much as the others—in theory, on paper. And that is all we can expect at present. * * *

"Hence the full freedom of marriage can become general only after all minor economic considerations, that still exert such a powerful influence on the choice of a mate for life, have been removed by the abolition of capitalistic production and of the property relations caused by it. Then no other motive will remain but mutual fondness.

"Since sexlove is exclusive by its very nature—although this exclusiveness is at present realized for women alone—marriage founded on sexlove must be monogamous. We have seen that Bachofen was perfectly right in regarding the progress from group marriage to monogamy mainly as the work of women. Only the advance from the pairing family to monogamy must be charged to the account of men. This advance implied, historically, a deterioration in the position of women and a greater opportunity for men to be faithless. Remove the economic considerations that now force women to submit to the customary disloyalty of men, and you will place women on an equal footing with men. All present experiences prove that this will tend much more strongly to make men truly monogamous, than to make women polyandrous.

"However, those peculiarities that were stamped on the face of monogamy by its rise through property relations, will decidedly vanish, namely, the supremacy of men and the indissolubility of marriage. The supremacy of man in marriage is simply the consequence of his economic superiority and will fall with the abolition of the latter.

"The indissolubility of marriage is partly the consequence of economic conditions, under which monogamy arose, partly tradition from the time when the connection between this economic situation and monogamy, not yet clearly understood, was carried to extremes by religion. To-day, it has been perforated a thousand times. If marriage founded on love is alone moral, then it follows that marriage is moral only as long as love lasts. The duration of an attack of individual sexlove varies considerably according to individual disposition, especially in men. A positive cessation of fondness or its replacement by a new passionate love makes a separation a blessing for both parties and for society. But humanity will be spared the useless wading through the mire of a divorce case.

"What we may anticipate about the adjustment of sexual relations after the impending downfall of capitalist production is mainly of a negative nature and mostly confined to elements that will disappear. But what will be added? That will be decided after a new generation has come to maturity; a race of men who never in their lives have had any occasion for buying with money or other economic means of power the surrender of a woman; a race of women who have never had any occasion for surrendering to any man for any other reason but love, or for refusing to surrender to their lover from fear of economic consequences. Once such people are in the world, they will not give a moment's thought to what we to-day believe should be their course. They will follow their own practice and fashion their own public opinion about the individual practice of every person—only this and nothing more."

The following illuminative passages on the origin and nature of the state are particularly valuable, and many Socialists will doubtless be more interested in the part of the book which deals with the rise of the state in consequence of class conflicts following the growth of private property:

"In the Grecian constitution of heroic times, then, we still find the old gentilism fully alive, but we also perceive the beginnings of the elements that undermine it: paternal law and inheritance of property by the father's children, favoring accumulation of wealth in the family and giving to the latter a power apart from the gens; influence of the difference of wealth on the constitution by the formation of the first rudiments of hereditary nobility and monarchy; slavery, first limited to prisoners of war, but already paving the way to the enslavement of tribal and gentile associates; degeneration of the old feuds between tribes, a regular mode of existing by systematic plundering on land and sea for the purpose of acquiring cattle, slaves and treasures. In short, wealth is praised and respected as the highest treasure, and the old gentile institutions are abused in order to justify the forcible robbery of wealth. Only one thing was missing: an institution that not only secured the newly acquired property of private individuals against the communistic traditions of the gens; that not only declared as sacred the formerly so despised private property and represented the protection of this sacred property as the highest purpose of human society, but that also stamped the gradually developing new forms of acquiring property, of constantly increasing wealth, with the universal sanction of society. An institution that lent the character of perpetuity, not only to the newly rising division into classes, but also to the right of the possessing classes to exploit and rule the non-possessing classes. And this institution was found. The state arose. * * *

"The state, then, is by no means a power forced on society from outside; neither is it the 'realization of the ethical idea,' 'the image and realization of reason' as Hegel maintains. It is simply a product of society at a certain stage of evolution. It is the confession that this society has become hopelessly divided against itself, has entangled itself in irreconcilable contradictions which it is powerless to banish. In order that these contradictions, these classes with conflicting economic interests, may not annihilate themselves and society in a useless struggle, a power becomes necessary that stands apparently above society and has the functions of keeping down the conflicts and maintaining 'order.' And this power, the outgrowth of society, but assuming supremacy over it and becoming more and more divorced from it, is the state. * * *

The state is the result of the desire to keep down class conflicts. But having arisen amid these conflicts, it is as a rule the state of the most powerful economic class that by force of its economic supremacy becomes also the ruling political class and thus acquires new means of subduing and exploiting the oppressed masses. The antique state was, therefore, the state of the slave owners for the purpose of holding the slaves in check. The feudal state was the organ of the nobility for the oppression of the serfs and dependent farmers. The modern representative state is the tool of the capitalist exploiters of wage labor. At certain periods it occurs exceptionally that the struggling classes balance each other so nearly that the public power gains a certain degree of independence by posing as the mediator between them. The absolute monarchy of the seventeenth and eighteenth century was in such a position, balancing the nobles and the burghers against one another. So was the Bonapartism of the first, and still more of the second, Empire, playing the proletariat against the bourgeoisie and vice versa. The latest performance of this kind, in which ruler and ruled appear equally ridiculous, is the new German Empire of Bismarckian make, in which capitalists and laborers are balanced against one another and equally cheated for the benefit of the degenerate Prussian cabbage junkers.

"In most of the historical states, the rights of the citizens are differentiated according to their wealth. This is a direct confirmation of the fact that the state is organized for the protection of the possessing against the non-possessing classes. The Athenian and Roman classification by incomes shows this. It is also seen in the mediaeval state of feudalism in which the political power depended on the quantity of real estate. It is again seen in the electoral qualifications of the modern representative state. The political recognition of the differences in wealth is by no means essential. On the contrary, it marks a low stage of state development. The highest form of the state, the democratic republic, knows officially nothing of property distinctions. It is that form of the state which under modern conditions of society becomes more and more an unavoidable necessity. The last decisive struggle between proletariat and bourgeoisie can only be fought out under this state form. In such a state, wealth exerts its power indirectly, but all the more safely. This is done partly in the form of direct corruption of officials, after the classical type of the United States, or in the form of an alliance between government and bankers which is established all the more easily when the public debt increases and when corporations concentrate in their hands not only the means of transportation, but also production itself, using the stock exchange as a centre. The United States and the latest French republic are striking examples, and good old Switzerland has contributed its share to illustrate this point. That a democratic republic is not necessary for this fraternal bond between stock exchange and government is proved by England and last, not least, Germany, where it is doubtful whether Bismarck or Bleichroeder was more favored by the introduction of universal suffrage. The possessing class rules directly through universal suffrage. For as long as the oppressed class, in this case the proletariat, is not ripe for its economic emancipation, just so long will its majority regard the existing order of society as the only one possible, and form the tail, the extreme left wing, of the capitalist class. But the more the proletariat matures toward its self-emancipation, the more does it constitute itself as a separate class and elect its own representatives in place of the capitalists. Universal suffrage is the gauge of the maturity of the working class. It can and will never be anything else but that in the modern state. But that is sufficient. On the day when the thermometer of universal suffrage reaches its boiling point among the laborers, they as well as the capitalists will know what to do.

"The state, then, did not exist from all eternity. There have been societies without it, that had no idea of any state or public power. At a certain stage of economic development, which was of necessity accompanied by a division of society into classes, the state became the inevitable result of this division. We are now rapidly approaching a stage of evolution in production, in which the existence of classes has not only ceased to be a necessity, but becomes a positive fetter on production. Hence these classes must fall, as inevitably as they once arose. The state must irrevocably fall with them. The society that is to reorganize production on the basis of a free and equal association of the producers will transfer the machinery of state where it will then belong; into the Museum of Antiquities by the side of the spinning wheel and the bronze ax."

Charles H. Kerr & Co. of Chicago will soon bring out a translation, by A. M. Simons and May Wood Simons, of Karl Kautsky's valuable work, "The Social Revolution." This is an addition to our translated Socialist literature as welcome as was Engels' "Origin of the Family," which the same enterprising house has recently issued in Untermann's translation.

"Zola the Socialist," by Jean Longuet, is the leading article in the December issue of "The Comrade." It is illustrated with two portraits of the great novelist. R. A. Jedrzejowski writes on the Polish Socialist movement and Ernest Untermann tells how he became a Socialist. Extended notice is given to Hutchins Hapgood's "Spirit of the Ghetto," and a number of Jacob Epstein's illustrations are reproduced. Other features are a sketch of Belfort Bax and a tribute to Elizabeth Cady Stanton; poems by Ernest Crosby, Paul Shivell, Edwin Brenholtz and Lucien V. Rule; portraits, cartoons, etc., besides the editorial comment on the vote and the California affair, and reviews of current literature.

—Don't be afraid to let people know you are a Socialist. They will find it out anyhow, sooner or later, and most people respect a man who shows that he has the courage of his convictions.

VOL. XII.—NO. 39. NEW YORK, DECEMBER 28, 1902. PRICE 2 CENTS.

AS THE CAPITALISTS SEE US.

At the time when the coal strike was suspended and the questions involved were submitted to arbitration, the New York "Times" published an extended statement, alleged to have been given by the president of one of the Coal Trust railroads. The statement was given out, said the "Times," on condition that the author's name be withheld.

There is no reason to doubt the genuineness of the statement and it so excellently expresses the capitalists' view of the labor movement that we give it in full. It is worthy of careful reading by all workingmen—both for the truth and for the error it contains. The statement is as follows:

"The operators, in consenting to submit to a commission the questions growing out of the present miners' strike, were influenced to do this, not alone by the scarcity and high prices of all kinds of fuel, coupled with the great alarm of the public over the gravity of the situation—they were not in doubt either as to the final outcome of the present struggle if prosecuted to a conclusion; but they, in common with all large employers of other classes of workmen, are deeply interested and concerned over the evident spirit of agitation and unrest which pervades the labor element of our people. They are impressed particularly with some features of the present movement as being more serious and menacing than any previous one in the history of our country.

"A labor union propaganda has been inaugurated and is being actively promoted which embraces every class of labor in every field of industrial activity throughout the country. The cardinal principle on which this movement is founded is that none but union workingmen shall be allowed to work in this country, and a workman who is not a union man with his family shall not be allowed to live here.

"A significant feature of this movement is that each class of labor is organized within itself, and each organization is federated with many, if not all, the others, with the same well defined purposes in view. These ostensibly are to increase wages, decrease the hours of work, and improve the general condition of the worker.

"In reality the following objects are sought for and being accomplished, the entire power and influence of unionism being exerted to this end: To reduce the output and impair the efficiency of the good workman; to stifle his ambition and destroy his individuality and independence; to raise the wages of the poor, indifferent, slothful workman to the same basis as that of the good one, regardless of whether his skill and ability entitle him thereto or not; the results being that the energy and efficiency of both classes are reduced to a lower level and wages advanced to a higher one.

"The apostles of this movement, following the example of those of the Church some centuries ago, have apparently adopted as their motto 'The union can do no wrong,' or 'Anything done in the name of labor is right.'

"The well-known occurrences in the anthracite region since the present strike began prove conclusively the foregoing to be the creed of this modern faith, and the practice and preaching of its leaders and of all those who actively sympathize or who are federated with it are in exact accord therewith.

"Some men in high position and of great influence, others of unquestioned intelligence and undoubted integrity, and still others of marked shrewdness, but politically ambitious, have been from one motive or another, and still are, giving the leaders of this movement great encouragement and a standing generally before our people that has seriously misled some of our best and wisest men.

"Realizing the grave and threatening features of this movement and its evident tendency and with the earnest desire and hope that not only should a settlement of the pending coal strike be accomplished thereby, but of infinitely greater and wider importance, that some rulings be made and principles evolved and established that shall govern the organization and administration of trades unions throughout our country, the representatives of the anthracite coal companies, after much careful thought, prepared the address that was submitted to President Roosevelt, embodied in which were certain suggestions as to the type and calibre of men who, in their opinion, should constitute the commission to pass upon the merits of the present controversy, and also the much more momentous questions referred to above, the proper solution of which is of the supremest importance to the future best interests of this entire country.

"That they, or any of them, in framing this address, or that Mr. Morgan, acting for them in presenting it to the President, sought to take advantage of the poor miners by trying to pack the commission or dictate who the members of it should be, as has been intimated by certain parties and newspapers, is too utterly absurd to be dignified by a denial.

"Their sole desire and purpose was and is to have this whole controversy and everything leading up to and growing out of it submitted to and passed upon by a body of the ablest, brainiest, best-informed men that could be selected from our people by the President of the United States, to the end and with the express object of having it raised above politics, personal ambition, or greed, prejudice, or malice of any kind, and placed on the highest possible plane.

"The gentlemen representing the anthracite coal mining interests earnestly hope that the commission appointed will handle the whole subject and all the questions collateral to it on the broad, patriotic lines indicated above, and in doing so will reaffirm the great enduring principle of our laws and institutions as respects the rights of persons and property and the duties of citizenship as being those which shall in future govern the trades union organizations of our country in the administration of their affairs, as they must and will govern the action of all good citizens of these United States."

When the substance of this statement was communicated to one of the bankers who had been active in settling the strike, says the "Times," he said:

"HOWEVER ONE MAY AGREE WITH THESE SENTIMENTS, I CONSIDER A STATEMENT OF THEM FROM SUCH A SOURCE UNWISE AT THE PRESENT TIME."

The last paragraph is certainly good. The workers are fortunate in that it is historically impossible for the capitalists (or for any other ruling class) to avoid being "unwise" at times—either too arrogant or too timid or too ready to talk, as in this instance.

This operator's declaration that the real object of the labor movement is to impair the efficiency of the workman and to stifle his individuality and ambition is, of course, too ridiculous to need comment. But two points in the statement are worthy of attention and emphasis.

First, it is good to see it clearly recognized by the capitalists that a general "spirit of agitation and unrest" pervades the whole working class, that this movement is now "more serious and menacing" (to the capitalist class) than ever before, and that it is aggressively working toward a well defined end.

The other point worthy of especial notice is the frank avowal that the nine owners consented to arbitration only in order that they might enlist the authority of the President of the United States in support of "some rulings and principles that shall govern the organization and administration of the trade unions"—to the satisfaction of the employers.

It was evident to thoughtful and experienced men from the first and is becoming daily more evident that the miners will gain little in the matter of their immediate demands by this arbitration, unless—and the "unless" is important—unless it can be made a stepping stone to imposing such conditions upon the labor movement as shall, in the opinion of the great capitalists, render it harmless to them and useless to the workers.

In a word, it is evident that there are stormy times before the trade unions, and that they will stand in greater need than ever before of an aggressive spirit and a clearness of vision that will enable them to defy, rather than to seek to conciliate, the possessing class.

It is the Socialist tendency in the unions that the capitalists fear and hate. It is the growing Socialist spirit in these organizations that gives them what strength they have and will render them still more powerful in the future.

"We must dare, and again dare, and always dare, and we are saved."

WHO MAY DEAL WITH THE LABOR QUESTION?

Dr. Jacob H. Hollander, ex-Treasurer of the Insular Government of Porto Rico, and now Professor of Economics in Johns Hopkins University, recently delivered the first of a series of lectures under the auspices of the Typographical Union of Baltimore. The tenor of his remarks can be judged from this extract: "I hope you will believe that I speak in all respect and candor when I say the workingman himself is often least qualified to give wise counsel with respect to those matters that concern him closest. The mere fact that he is performing those very things, that he is actually working, is no endowment of knowledge. Even more, when things are out of joint and an industrial conflict is threatened or has occurred, the workingman is by no means the most competent to suggest the remedy, any more than a person who is sick or has suffered injury or is merely seeking physical betterment can prescribe his own best treatment." The lecturer said that such questions could be wisely treated only by political economists (like himself)—that is, by the well paid proteges of the great college-endowing trust magnates. We suggest that the Baltimore Typographical Union invite a Socialist to speak on the other side, to urge self-respect and self-reliance for the workers.

"VICTORY FOR FREE LABOR."

Far-Reaching Decision in the Taff Vale Case.

British Courts Decide that Union's Funds Can Be Levied on for Damages Inflicted on Employers Through Strike or Boycott—Precedent Likely Soon to Be Followed Here.

Under the headline, "Victory for Free Labor," the New York "Sun" announces the final decision in the famous Taff Vale case, involving the question of the responsibility of a trade union for damages inflicted on an employer through a strike or boycott. The decision makes it possible, where such damages are awarded, to levy on the union funds, and establishes the rule that the union is responsible for damage inflicted even by peaceful actions if committed in pursuance of the orders of the union or by violent acts of individuals, even though such violence is not countenanced by the organization. There is reason to believe that American courts will soon follow the precedent thus established in Great Britain.

We quote in part from the "Sun" special, which is characteristically savage in its tone of rejoicing:

"London, Dec. 20.—Yesterday's verdict against the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants for conspiracy in ordering a strike against the Taff Vale Railway Company in August, 1900, is welcomed by everybody except trade union demagogues as the most important victory for free labor and industrial progress in many years. It has changed the whole industrial situation of Great Britain. The defendant society, with its war chest of $1,250,000 invested in bonds, is deprived of its power of inducing workmen to break their contracts and coercing non-union men by its iniquitous ticket system.

Heavy Damages Awarded.

"The Taff Vale railway strike began suddenly at midnight on Aug. 19, 1900, when more than 1,200 men quit work. More than 800 had not received notice to end their contracts. The company asserted that the railway men's union maintained the strike by intimidation and picketing, and that the union officials induced the workmen to break their contracts. The jury yesterday, without leaving the box, returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, who will collect $140,000 from the railway men's union.

"In the earlier stages of this important labor litigation the argument centred on the question whether a union could sue or be sued. The legal members of the House of Lords, sitting as a final court of appeal, decided: 'A labor union can sue for wrongs committed, for or against it,' as if it were a corporate body.

"The railway company then proceeded to try the facts of their case against the officials of the union in an action in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice before a jury. * * *

"The facts which the jury found to be proved as to the conspiracy to molest and injure the plaintiffs in their business included picketing and arrangements for paying money to induce men who had been hired by the company to withdraw without performing their contracts. There were several cases of assault on non-strikers. * * *

"The union officials contended that they were not liable for acts of violence which they had not ordered. The jury refused to take that view of the case, and, keeping in mind the natural consequences of the conduct of the officials, held that they had assisted in carrying out the strike by unlawful means."

A Precedent for Us?

Our statement that the precedent thus set in England will probably soon be followed in the United States is not a mere random guess. A beginning in this direction was made in Connecticut, in connection with the machinists' strike of 1901; but the matter was not pressed, it being the apparent intention to wait for the British decision.

The New York "Evening Post," which is as distinctly a capitalist organ as the "Sun," though generally less violent in its expressions against the labor movement, comments on the present decision as follows:

"A British jury's award of damages to the Taff Vale Railway Company for injuries inflicted by a strike and boycott had been foreshadowed by a previous judicial decision asserting the liability of labor unions; but it is a great advantage to have so substantial a verdict as to show that the ordinary sense of Englishmen finds the use of the boycott, or other violent methods in a strike, to be criminal conspiracy. Hereafter there can be no doubt that the English unions are in the fullest sense responsible for their action. * * * The moral of the Taff Vale award plainly is that fearless judges and clear-headed juries can MAKE OLD LAW MEET NEW EMERGENCIES. The English are far better off under this extension of the law of conspiracy than they would be with elaborate anti-strike or anti-boycott legislation. Our own relief from the present irresponsibility of labor unions may well come about in this manner. The simple requirement of incorporation would make the unions answerable financially. Probably no further legislation would be necessary."

The New York "Times" also, though more guardedly, expresses its satisfaction at the outcome of the case.

LABOR IN THE SENATE.

Eight Hour Bill Effectively Disposed Of.

Senate Committee Amends It Past Recognition and Then Goes Through the Farce of Recommending Its Passage.

The prediction made by The Worker last week that the Senate would effectually dispose of the Eight-Hour Bill, whose passage by the House was so loudly heralded as a victory for the lobbying policy by conservative trade unionists, has, so far, been strikingly fulfilled.

On Saturday the Senate Committee on Labor reported the bill favorably, but with so many amendments that it is almost unrecognizable to its authors. Little more than the name remains of the original measure.

Loopholes in New Bill.

One of the amendments entirely exempts from the provisions of the bill manufacturers from whom the government or the contractors on government work get "articles, supplies, or materials." Thus, for a large part of the work let by contract, a contracting company, in order completely to evade the law, will merely have to organize under two different names—as many such companies already are—one as a contracting company, the other as a manufacturing company selling "articles, supplies, and materials" to the contractors.

The Senate Committee also, being very scrupulous about "interfering with the personal liberty" of employees, modifies the provision which would prevent any man employed on government contract work from working more than eight hours in a day, by inserting the words, "upon such work." This is an old trick, and allows contractors to require their men to work nine, ten, or more hours a day, simply transferring them to other work for a part of each day.

Other amendments exempt contractors and subcontractors from responsibility for violations of the law by their agents.

May Not Pass Even So.

It is by no means certain that the bill, even in this form, will pass the Senate. If it does so, it must go back to the House and will stand but little chance of coming up for action, as there remain but a few weeks before the expiration of this Congress. And even if finally enacted into law in its amended form, the measure will be worth as much for the protection of employees as so much waste-paper.

It would seem that the trade unions and the American Federation of Labor should, by this time, have had enough experience to convince them that it is idle to expect to get any labor legislation worth mentioning by begging for it from politicians chosen for nomination by the capitalists and elected through their efforts. Indeed, they are fast learning, and experience is the great teacher. At the present rate, we may expect to see in the Fifty-ninth Congress at least a few spokesmen of the working class, nominated and elected by workingmen on the working-class platform of the Socialist Party. Half a dozen such members, by their aggressive attitude, would accomplish more in a session than all the lobbyists in a decade.

THE SOCIALIST VOTE.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 16.—The official returns of the election in North Dakota shows that Comrade Grant, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, received 1,245 votes in the state. Two years ago, the first time that we were in the field in this state, we had 518. So far as we now know, we have votes in every county and most of them are straight. We had no organizer in the field, and the good showing made is due to the individual efforts of the comrades. A. B.

This brings up our total in twenty-seven states and one territory from 87,063 in the election of 1900 to 221,552 in that of 1902.

ANOTHER ALDERMAN.

It will be remembered that at the city election in Battle Creek, Mich., last spring, the Socialist Party elected two members of the Board of Aldermen—F. A. Kulp and Charles A. Jackson. A third Socialist member has been gained under somewhat peculiar circumstances.

A vacancy recently occurred, which had to be filled by vote of the remaining members. The two Socialists, of course, cast their votes for a member of the Socialist Party—Victor C. Bailey. The six Republicans divided their votes evenly between two factional candidates—Hall and Evans by name, the latter a colored man. The vote continued through eleven ballots without change—three for Hall, three for Evans, and two for Bailey. The Evans men finally decided to vote for Bailey, electing him by five votes out of eight.

It is now up to the Battle Creek comrades to see that this accidental gain is held and, if possible, a fourth man added, at the next election.

—Comrade W. C. Green of Orlando, Fla., writes: "I regard The Worker as essential to keep one posted as to news of the movement."

TRULY "IMPARTIAL."

Capitalists Organize League to Fight Socialism by "Educational" Methods.

Quite as significant as the National Manufacturers' Association, mentioned elsewhere in this paper, and other bodies of the same sort, is the newly formed National Economic League, with offices at 13 Astor Place, New York City. This body has sent out a circular stating its purpose, which is "to render its services in an impartial educational movement to oppose Socialism and class hatred; to instruct the people that if we are to continue to lead the world's industries and keep American labor and capital remuneratively employed, it must be through the organization of industry into large units, directed by the best talent; also to investigate, study and discuss the fundamental issues which divide capital and labor, so as to be helpful in establishing rightful relations between employers and workmen."

Among the names of members of the Executive Committee and of "contributors and endorsers" attached to the circular we find those of such capitalists and capitalist politicians as Ex-Mayor Schieren, who is also Treasurer of the National Manufacturers' Association (a very impartial sort of a man); Lyman J. Gage, banker and former Secretary of the Treasury; Bishop Potter, who has exercised his impartial judgment on Mr. Morgan's wine at $23 a bottle; Henry Clews and O. H. Kuhn, Wall Street bankers; John D. Long, lately Secretary of the Navy; Levi P. Morton, financial trust magnate and politician; J. L. Greatsinger, President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, which impartially fleeces all its employees and freezes all its passengers; and many others of the same sort. Not one workingman is there in the whole impartial list.

LABOR MOVEMENT IN THE SOUTH.

Though Long Delayed, It Is Now Rapidly Becoming Aggressive—Militiamen Refuse to Shoot Strikers.

Until within recent years, the South has been regarded as a sort of paradise by the capitalists, because of its freedom from labor agitation, strikes, and boycotts. Of course, this meant that wages and conditions of labor were wretchedly low and the workers compelled to submit to all sorts of outrages. And the explanation of the condition is not far to seek—the undeveloped condition of manufacturing industry, the tradition of slavery, and the lack of education among the poorer people. These conditions are steadily changing. The servile tradition dies slowly, but it is dying; education is gradually becoming more general; within recent years great manufacturing and transportation industries have started up; and under these changing conditions the workers are awakening to a sense of their wrongs, their common interests, and the need of united action.

Two dispatches from New Orleans this week illustrate this awakening.

One relates that the First Regiment of the Louisiana National Guard has been disbanded because, in the recent street-railway strike, many of the men refused to serve against the strikers, one whole company resigning in a body.

The other dispatch shows that the capitalist authorities of New Orleans are, like class rulers in all times and places, only adding fuel to the flame by their drastic measures of suppression. It is announced that, as a result of the recent telephone strike, nine members of trade unions have been sentenced to long terms of imprisonment for contempt of court and three others are to be tried on a charge of perjury; the conviction of the latter is, of course, a forgone conclusion, as the "better elements" are all against them.

It may be noted that during the session of the Federation convention at New Orleans last month, large public meetings were addressed by Socialist delegates—Hayes, Barnes, Slayton, and others—and a lively local of the Socialist Party was organized. John C. Chase of Massachusetts will soon make a speaking tour of the South for the party, and New Orleans will be one of the places visited.

PERSECUTION IN BLOOMFIELD.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—Ever since the Socialists in the Northwestern part of Essex County established headquarters in Bloomfield last July they have been subjected to all manners of persecution by the corrupt politicians and officials of the old parties.

The agitation of the Socialist Party among the working class of Bloomfield resulted in the doubling of our vote at the last election and this success brought the culmination of persecution in the arrest of Comrade Neben and other comrades through the agency of spies who joined the organization in order to aid in the arrest of Comrade Neben on the charge of selling liquor without a license. When the club was organized our comrades were informed by the Town Clerk that no liquor license was needed, but nevertheless a fine of $20 was imposed and paid.

There will be a city election in Bloomfield in February. The Socialist Party will have a full ticket in the field and the workingmen of Bloomfield will have an opportunity to answer the persecution of capitalist hirelings at the ballot box.

COST OF COAL.

Not in Money, but in Miners' Lives.

Facts and Testimony Showing Dangers to Life and Health Involved in Labor in Coal Mines—What Would Socialism Do?

At a recent meeting in the Thirtieth Assembly District, Henry Stahl, General Financial Secretary of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society, cited figures from the books of that organization to show at what a danger of the coal miners' health and lives the mine owners' profits are made.

The Society, he said, has and for some years has had eleven branches in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania. During the five months of May, June, July, August, and September of 1901, when the miners were at work, the Society paid out in sick benefits through these branches the sum of $2,350.

During the corresponding months of the present year, the period of the strike, the same branches called for only $968 to cover all benefit claims for sickness and accidents.

The men being on strike and "hard up," they would naturally be more inclined to claim benefits this year than last. The difference was solely due to the fact that they were not exposed to the danger of injury in mine accidents and that they were spending their days in the open air and sunshine, instead of in the bowels of the earth. The ratio of 968 to 2,350, the speaker claimed, represented the difference between the health of men enjoying leisure, fresh air, and sunshine, even with insufficient food, and their health when compelled to work in the mines.

The sick benefits normally paid out through these branches, he added, were chiefly for injuries by explosions or falls of rock and for asthma and rheumatism resulting from the dampness of the mines, the impregnation of the air with dust and poisonous gases, and the lack of sunlight.

Miners' Lives Shortened.

The case could hardly be more strongly stated, but we add a part of the report of one day's hearing of the Arbitration Commission:

"Three physicians who have practiced in Scranton or Wilkes Barre took the stand for the miners and in substance testified that the occupation of a mine worker was 'very unhealthful' and shortened his life. One physician, Dr. Frank P. Lennahan of Wilkes Barre, who says he has had a long experience among mine workers, testified that fully 99 per cent. of the men who work in the mines are anaemic. Their blood is impoverished and their general condition is below par. The principal illnesses suffered by the miners, the physicians said, were miners' asthma, rheumatism, lumbago, and sciatica. The miners' asthma comes from coal dust, powder smoke, and vitiated air. Dr. John O'Malley of Scranton said that at post-mortems he had seen miners' lungs as black as anthracite itself, and Dr. Lennahan testified that he had personal knowledge of a man coughing up coal dust nine years after he had left the mines. He said he had information that a man had coughed up coal dust fifteen years after he had left the mines. It was also asserted that 90 per cent. of miners who reach the age of fifty years are afflicted with some form of rheumatism. * * *

"On Mr. Wolverton (counsel for the Reading Company) attempting to show that carelessness of the miner contributes to the danger of his occupation, Chairman Gray interposed with the remark that a margin of carelessness incident to human nature must be taken into account when estimating the dangerousness of any hazardous occupation.

"Dr. Roberts said that a comparison of fatalities on all railroads in the United States with those in the anthracite fields show that 2.5 per 1,000 railroad employees are killed annually, while 3.5 per 1,000 employees were killed in the anthracite industry. The fatalities—switchmen, flagmen, and watchmen—in 1900, he said, were 5.3 per 1,000 as against 5.5 per 1,000 among miners and their laborers working inside the mines."

What Would Socialism Do?

It may be said: But we must have coal. Someone must dig it. It is sad, indeed, that men's lives should be sacrificed in this fashion, but it is inevitable. What could Socialism do to remove this evil?

The question is a natural one and deserves a reply.

In the first place, so-called "accidents" could be almost wholly eliminated by proper ventilation.

Andrew Roy, the first mine inspector of Ohio, has said: "Explosions in mines are never caused by the fault of the miners; for if the laws of the several states" (regarding ventilation) "were enforced, THERE COULD NOT BE AN EXPLOSION."

Lionel Brough, the great British mine inspector, said in one of his reports: "After great explosions sudden outbursts of gas are too often suggested as the cause of the calamity; again, doors left open, tobacco-smoking, lamps tampered with—anything, in fact, except the true cause, INSUFFICIENT VENTILATION. It matters but little which may be the prevailing danger—firedamp or blackdamp—thorough, searching ventilation will sweep both or either thoroughly and speedily away."

J. K. Blackwell, another inspector, has pointed out that thorough ventilation would not only prevent explosions, but would remove the chief cause of the worst diseases peculiar to miners—bronchial and lung troubles—and adds: "THE ULTIMATE LOSS OF LIFE IS GREATER FROM THIS CAUSE THAN EVEN FROM EXPLOSIONS."

Life Versus Profits.

The only reason why there is not adequate ventilation in the mines now—machinery for the purpose having been devised and power being available—is that the mines are held as private property and run for profit, and it is cheaper for the owners to take the chances of some occasional money loss to themselves and frequent loss of life and constant injury to health among the miners than to incur the expense of thorough ventilation.

Under Socialism, with the mines held as public property and operated for the public good, with no profit for anyone, the motive to this murderous negligence would be done away with and thus the dangers of the miners' life would be greatly reduced. In a word, capitalist profits now count for more than workmen's lives; under Socialism, there would be no profits and the workers' welfare would be the sole consideration.

But this is not all. It has been shown (see The Worker of Oct. 12) that the miners, even according to figures given by capitalist authorities, do not get back in wages more than about one-third of the value their labor creates (to say nothing of the waste of labor involved in the capitalist system). It follows that, under Socialism, with profits eliminated and the workers getting the full value of their product, the remuneration of the miners could be raised 50 per cent. and their hours of labor reduced to exactly half the present hours, without increasing the cost of coal to the rest of the people.

That would mean that every miner would have more and better food and clothing and, more important still, would have from four to five hours a day more leisure, to spend in the fresh air and sunshine above ground, than he has now.

Thus the cause of the universal ill-health and the shortening of the average life of the coal miners is traced directly to the necessity, under the capitalist system, of his making profits for the owner, and it is shown that Socialism, by removing this burden, would enable us to sit by our fires without having to reflect that we are burning up miners' lives.

TRUST STILL GROWS.

While the bi-partizan politicians at Washington and the various state capitols are busily preparing fake anti-trust bills and the national and state administrations are languidly carrying out their bluff of prosecuting trusts, the trusts are "doing business at the old stand"—very good business—and steadily extending and solidifying their organization.

Last week it was announced that the Steel Trust had absorbed the Union Steel Company(which, a short time before, had absorbed the Sharon Company), thus gaining, not only valuable furnaces and mills, but also large tracts of coal and iron lands.

Now comes the rumor—denied, of course, but almost certain to be confirmed in a short time—that the Steel Trust will take in the Jones & McLaughlin Steel Company and the Cambria Steel Company of Pittsburg.

It is explained that the railway merger—which the Administration pretends to be attacking through the courts, but which shows no concern as to the outcome—gives the Morgan interests power to force these "independent" concerns into the Trust whenever they are wanted.

The Steel Trust has also absorbed the Troy Steel Company, and as a result the repair work on the Brooker Island plant has been stopped and that plant will be kept idle.

THE "WAR" ON THE TOBACCO TRUST.

The attempt of the small retail cigar and tobacco dealers to meet the aggressions of the Tobacco Trust and its affiliated companies is hardly likely to accomplish anything more than to confirm by renewed experience the Socialist theory that concentration of capital is an inevitable outcome of the competitive system and that resistance to it is futile. The retail dealers are obviously afraid to take drastic measures. They will agree not to push the trust products; but they dare not positively boycott those goods. They want the aid of the trade unions; but they will not pledge themselves to handle union-made goods exclusively. As usual with middle-class organizations, they are principally concerned in avoiding manifest and overwhelming dangers, and are unable to follow any consistent line of aggressive action.

CLERKS' PAY REDUCED.

Several Western railway companies, among them the Santa Fe, have advanced the wages of employees in the mechanical departments and then reimbursed themselves by reducing the pay of clerks and office employees. The latter are unorganized. Maybe this will help the office workers to realize that there is no difference between "wages" and "salary," that they are members of the working class and ought to join in its efforts, instead of considering themselves as "gentlemen engaged in business" and embryo capitalists.

PARRY IS SCARED.

New Circular of Manufacturers' Association.

Calls Attention of Employing Class to Rapid Growth of Socialist Tendencies and Increasing Aggressiveness of the Trade Unions.

The National Manufacturers' Association, one of whose circulars was reprinted in part in The Worker last week, is evidently alarmed at the strong tendency toward Socialism shown by the trade unions.

The latest circular sent out by Mr. Parry, the President of the Association, calls attention to the resolutions of the American Federation of Labor against government by injunction, child labor, and Asiatic immigration, and in favor of the eight-hour law. He calls upon manufacturers to unite in opposition to "a program which means the turning over of the United States to trade-union domination."

The "Red Spectre."

Mr. Parry is still more deeply alarmed, however, at the fact that at the New Orleans convention of the American Federation of Labor Max Hayes' resolution to pledge the Federation to the overthrow of the wage system and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth received 45 per cent. of the total vote cast. He explains that Hayes is a very dangerous sort of fellow and continues:

"John Mitchell's United Mine Workers' organization cast 1,804 votes solidly for this resolution. This is the organization that evoked so much maudlin sentiment and brought the whole country to its knees in the anthracite strike. It is confidently prophesied that the Socialists will be in full control of the trade union movement in the United States by the time of the next A. F. of L. convention."

The circular goes on to explain that the Socialists want to "divide up" the wealth of the country and very naively adds:

"Greed and Envy."

"It has been estimated that if all the productive wealth of this country were to be distributed up equally among the inhabitants of the United States, there would be $200 for each person. Yet Hayes and his followers are determined to seize this $200 if they can get the backing. The basis of this movement is human greed and envy. Unless this movement is checked it will lead to enormous industrial damages to the United States, for nothing but chaos and anarchy can come from a proposition to seize the private property of individuals."

(Of course, such base motives as "human greed and envy" have no place in the hearts of the men who control the industries of the land and make increased profits by simultaneously reducing wages and raising prices.)

"These are the people who are demanding that the political and commercial destinies of the United States be intrusted to their hands. You may be at peace with your workmen now, but the organizer is like a thief in the night. You may go to bed in fancied security; you may say boastingly, 'I never had any trouble in getting along with my men. Please let me run my own business. I have been doing it for twenty-five years and I guess I am able to continue.'

"This kind of talk makes the union labor organizer laugh. You wake up out of your dream and you have a strike on your hands. The organizer has been at work while you are at sleep.

"Your Turn Is Sure to Come."

"Your turn is sure to come, for resolution after resolution was passed at the recent meeting, that the work of organization is never to cease until every worker in the land, including day laborers, has been organized in order that the political industrial destinies of the United States are to be in the control of organized labor."

A part of the report of the special committee that considered President Gompers' advocacy of the passage of an anti-injunction bill is quoted with the following comment:

"Thus it will be seen that organized labor never intends to stop until it can secure class legislation by which the boycott and the picket are to be legalized and every employer in this country be placed at the mercy of the agitators who hold for the employing class nothing but envy and hatred. This program of terrorization and despoliation can only be met with an organization which will embrace every manufacturer in the United States."

ASSIMILATING MEXICO.

The American Smelter and Refining Company, commonly referred to as the Smelter Trust, is rapidly absorbing the most valuable mining properties of Mexico. It is reported that during the last three months the trust has acquired Mexican silver mines valued at $30,000,000. If this continues, we shall probably soon find that "manifest destiny" calls for another Mexican war.

RAILWAY MEN'S DEMAND.

Over a hundred thousand railway men on Western roads—engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, switchmen, and others—have joined in a demand for increased wages. The answer of the companies will not be given for about a fortnight. The work of railway men has become much heavier in recent years and, although the profits of the companies have been enormously increased, wages have not been generally advanced.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

In another column we quote part of the latest circular of the National Manufacturers' Association against the trade unions and particularly against their Socialist tendencies. We are not sure just what this association amounts to. Mr. Parry may be only a vulgar "fakir," trying, as the Bowery boys would put it, to "throw a scare into" the manufacturers and so touch their pockets. But however it be with this particular body, it is a well known fact that the capitalists are rapidly organizing to fight the labor movement, and it must be admitted—or, rather, it may be proudly claimed—that, aside from Mr. Parry's repetition of the time-worn humbug about "dividing up" and the like, his appeal to the manufacturers is well grounded. Their profits are in danger and they have good reason to be scared. Their deep alarm is one of the most pleasing signs of the times, from our point of view.

The National Economic League is another good sign of the times. The idea of an "IMPARTIAL educational movement to OPPOSE" certain ideas and to propogate certain other ideas could only have occurred to an intellect twisted awry by the educational processes of our subsidized universities. The League will unquestionably prove "helpful in establishing right relations," not between employers and workmen—between them there can be no right relations—but among the workers, by exhibiting the intellectual poverty and moral obliquity of the capitalist class, and so hastening on the triumph of Socialism.

"The Chicago business men have formed a union," say the daily papers. Frederick W. Job has resigned his office as chairman of the State Board of Arbitration to become secretary of the Employers' Association of Chicago. This body was recently organized by the leading employers of the city. Secretary Job is quoted as saying: "The association will deal as a unit with labor troubles affecting its members. Chicago's greatest captains of industry are members." We may welcome every such piece of news as this. The more thorough and solid the fighting organization on both sides, the sooner will the conflict between Labor and Capital be fought to a finish—and we know on which side the victory will be.

"FIGHT OR FUSION?"

The Worker has no liking for the principle of individual authority in the Socialist movement. It would be as unwilling to assume a dictatorship in the party, were that possible, as to bow to the dictation of others. We believe that the rank and file of the party are amply competent to decide matters of party policy and our sole desire is to serve as the faithful exponent of party opinion and, in open questions, as an organ for eliciting and formulating opinion. On the other hand—or, rather, in emphasis of this position—The Worker is distinctly partisan. We believe that the party is something more than a mere accidental aggregation of individuals. To the decision of the party we cheerfully give our allegiance; and we expect others to do the same; for those who refuse such allegiance we see no room in the party, however great their personal sincerity or ability may be. It is because we have such supreme faith in the party and so little in party leaders that we welcome free discussion of party matters and often give space in the columns of The Worker to the statement of opinions that seem to us utterly false and utterly at variance with the fundamental principles accepted by the party. So long as these discussions are kept to questions of principle, not of personality, the cause of truth may well be served by giving latitude to the expression of error; and if it should turn out that we are in error and our critics right—well, we have learned in the past and not been ashamed to acknowledge it, and we hope to do as well in the future.

These remarks are, of course, a propos of the discussion of the California question and particularly of the publication in this issue of The Worker of Comrade Putnam's article, "Fight or Fusion?" in defense of the course pursued in the late campaign by some of the California comrades. We believe that Comrade Putnam is entirely in the wrong; and we are glad to have such a clear and concise statement (even though it adds nothing to Comrade Harriman's statement in our issue of Nov. 9) of the wrong position to put before our readers and to take as a basis for discussion.

It may be said here that the phrase, "the California question," will probably soon be an anachronism, that we should speak rather of "the independent labor party question." There is abundant evidence that a large part of the California comrades never approved of the policy of fusion with the Union Labor party (which, be it remembered, was carried into effect only in some localities), that they were partly overborne by the impetuosity of leaders and partly taken by surprise and hurried into temporary acquiescence in a policy upon which they had not sufficiently deliberated; further, there is abundant evidence that many of those who actively approved of the policy for a time are now changing their minds, that even so brief an experience has been enough for them, and that this year's experiment will not soon be repeated in their state. The conditions which raised the question in California this year are still at work and either have already raised it in other states or may do so in the near future. It is well, therefore, for us to consider carefully the principles involved, that we may be the surer of acting wisely when brought face to face with the problem.

It is a characteristic sign of weakness in the fusionist argument, as presented by Comrade Putnam, that he cannot refrain from an attempt (unconscious, no doubt) to becloud the issue at the very outset by raising a bogey to alarm the timid. He calmly assumes that all party members who disapprove of fusion are actuated solely by reverence for tradition, that they are paralyzed by the habit of party discipline, that they are entirely blind to the signs of the times, that they are incapable of free thought and fair discussion, and that they are accordingly trying to stifle the expression of any new thought. He says that we raise the cry of "Treason!" against the fusionists as a substitute for argument. This is unfortunate for Comrade Putnam's cause, for the readers of The Worker know that we have done nothing of the sort. When we think there is treason in the party—that is, a covert and malign attack upon the party from within, we shall not hesitate to use the word; we shall save the word for that occasion; and we have not yet used it. It will be well if the advocates of fusion will meet us with argument, not with vague and hysterical appeals against a non-existent dictatorship. Bogeys serve to scare children; among men they are dangerous only to those who try to use them.

So much for the unjustifiable (even if unconscious) attempt to forestall the decision or bias the discussion. Now for the real matter at issue.

We might take up Comrade Putnam's article in detail and urge many objections; we might deny that "an avowedly working-class party" is necessarily a genuine one—an assertion which marks the extreme of naïve innocence; we might deny that an "independent labor party," if given a clear field, will necessarily develop into a Socialist party—an assertion which experience does not confirm; we might ask what Comrade Putnam means by his vague references to "the middle-class members of our party"—and point out, incidentally, that the trade unionists in our party generally oppose fusion; we might object to his citation of a single sentence from the "Manifesto," written fifty-five years ago, as if it were the whole of the law and the gospel, and his utter disregard of the conduct of its authors for forty or fifty years afterward; but it is perhaps hardly worth while to take up these matters at such length.

Yet we have a few things to say in reply to the article as a whole.

Comrade Putnam speaks of the Socialists as the teachers of the working class. He warns them not to "absent themselves from the mass of the proletariat." The phrase is an important one, for those Socialists who most vigorously oppose fusion are certainly not closet theorists, but men from the ranks of the proletariat, daily engaged in helping to fight its battles. What Comrade Putnam means by the phrase is to be learned from the alternative he offers. The way for the "teachers" to avoid "absenting themselves" is for them to refrain from fighting error or confusion, to acquiesce in an undeveloped policy and an inadequate statement of principles—in a word, to abandon their function of teaching and become mere expediency politicians.

We know of no way in which Socialists can better teach their fellow workingmen than by advocating on all occasions and defending against all comers the whole of the truth as they see it—not only the part of the truth that may to-day be acceptable to the majority—and by giving an example of straightforward, aggressive, and fearless political action.

This the Socialist Party has been doing; and the results attest the wisdom of the plan.

The advocates of fusion, in general, are in the position of being afraid of something—afraid that, if we fail to fuse with labor parties as they arise, we shall somehow be left out of the current of the labor movement, with nothing to do but sit and admire our past.

This would, indeed, be a sad fate, but we have no reason to fear it. We have no business to be afraid of anything. There is plenty of work for us to do. We do not any longer have to seek opportunities to teach Socialism; the opportunities are seeking us, crying for us. We do not any longer have to try to conciliate any other element; our work in the past has won us a position of respect and others are seeking rather to conciliate us. Our one concern is to do our work and do it rightly and thoroughly; if we do that, the result is assured.

Fear is no part of the equipment of a man or a party that is to succeed. We have been told since time immemorial that if we did this or failed to do that, our party would be "wiped out" or "put back ten years." We were not alarmed. We went about our business and we were not wiped out nor put back. We shall continue on that line.

As for those numerous workers who are as yet only half Socialists, we shall not fuse with them. We shall encourage them where they are right and criticize them where they are wrong and fight them when, with whatever good intentions, they play into the hands of the enemies of the working class. And we are sure they will learn by experience.

Whatever may be the attitude of "the middle-class members of our party," of whom Comrade Putnam speaks, this, The Worker is confident, is the attitude of our proletarian rank and file. Until something better than negative arguments and counsels of timidity are advanced on the other side The Worker is content to march with that rank and file.

From the columns of San Francisco "Advance" we take the following:

"The 'Examiner'" [Hearst's San Francisco paper] "of December 5, in commenting on a Delaware appointment of Roosevelt, says that it is not to be wondered at that Roosevelt associates with the notorious and infamous Addicks and grants him political favors, since he does the same with the equally corrupt Platt of New York and Quay of Pennsylvania. We have no desire to exculpate Mr. Roosevelt, but certainly Hearst should be the last to cast aspersions on our strenuous President. Hearst, the supporter of Croker, and who during the campaign just closed accepted a nomination for Congress from the rottenest of corrupt Tammany politicians, ex-Chief Devery, whose methods of wholesale corruption of voters were so impossible of concealment and so thoroughly disgraceful that even the New York Democratic convention was obliged to refuse him a seat. Hearst and Devery is a combination that has no right to criticize the public morals or political alliances of Roosevelt."

Our California comrades should bear in mind, further, that Hearst claims the credit for the existence of the so-called Union Labor party in California and that "Labor" Mayor Schmitz came all the way to New York to help Devery elect him.

The Cincinnati "Commercial Tribune" is mightily disturbed about the wicked Socialists. The editorial columns of a recent issue which has come to our desk contain two violent paragraphs to explain why the "C. T." throws all communications from Socialists into the wastebasket—because, as it alleges, the Socialists have nothing to say in their letters. On the same page is an editorial more than a column in length in which the editor painfully tries to answer the "nothings" which the Socialists utter. The Cincinnati comrades, by increasing their vote from 1,100 two years ago to 4,500 this fall, have caused the dear old "C. T." much sorrow. Doubtless they enjoy the sport and will have still more cause of mirth in 1904.

The spectacle of a Republican Ex-Governor of the State of New York and a Democratic Ex-Justice of its Supreme Court acting as counsel for a ring of notorious aristocratic gamblers is one which should not be overlooked. To borrow Mark Twain's phrase, the two old parties are "Kin in sin."

The news that the Cudahy Packing Company—one of the "Big Four" that dominate the meat industry—has acquired a large tract of oil and natural-gas land in the Indian Territory only illustrates the interlinking of capitalist interests that makes it necessary for us to regard the capitalist class as a united and inseparable body, however nominally organized in separate corporations. The meat lords are also oil kings; oil kings are also mine barons; mine barons are also steel magnates; and all alike are interested in, and their powers linked together by, the railroads, the banks, and the great capitalist press. When you strike Baer or Armour, you strike also Carnegie and Havemeyer; and to attack Morgan and Rockefeller is to attack also Vanderbilt and Gould, Clark and Hearst and Whitney, Hanna and Addicks and Quay. It is not a question between certain workingmen and certain capitalists, but between the working class and the capitalist class.

Mr. Moseley says "his" delegates are greatly impressed with the superiority of American over British workmen and are going to advise the Britishers to work harder and faster and make more profit for their bosses. We imagine the British workmen will know what to say to such advice. Unfortunately, however, there are too many American workmen who can be caught with just such "taffy" as this.

It is noted, as one of the pathetic incidents of the coal famine, that in some places at the retail agencies "well-to-do persons touch elbows with the most abject poor in the quest of fuel." This is hopeful news. It reminds one of Carlyle's account of how the poor old beggar woman proved her human sisterhood to the learned judge and counsel and gentlemen of the jury who tried her—by unconsciously infecting all with the malignant fever she had contracted in their jail. Sometimes capitalism itself brings into close and unwilling contact the hostile classes it creates. The result—whatever it may be—can hardly be otherwise than good.

Some weeks ago we took occasion to criticize the "Undercurrent" of San Bernardino for printing in its advertising columns, the cards of certain old-party candidates. It should be stated, in justice to Comrades York and Underwood, formerly editor and manager of the paper, that they refused these advertisements, which were inserted only after these comrades had resigned their positions.

BEAUTIFUL HARMONY.

Capital and Labor are just as harmonious as roast beef and an empty stomach. There is the most beautiful harmony, the most natural partnership between the two—when they are possessed by the same person. But when one man has the beef and the other has the appetite, the beef proprietor may consider it "natural, wise and useful," to take advantage of the hungry man's extremity to extort as much labor from him as the beef will enable him to perform. Under these conditions discords are apt to arise.—The Toiler.

FIGHT OR FUSION?

Comrade Putnam of St. Louis Argues in Defense of the Policy of Fusion with Union Labor Parties as Against Position Supported by The Worker.

It is my humble opinion that the situation resulting from the attitude of our California comrades toward the Union Labor party is a grave one—not because their action was wrong, but because strict adherence to the party ritual has been so drilled into our members that many of them will fail to see that the California comrades are right.

Our party machinery, tactics, etc., are but means to the end. We have developed the disposition (through a conviction that the means are infallible and eternal), to place the MEANS above the END, and to cry "treason" at the infidel who has the temerity to suggest a flaw in the methods we were wont to consider inspired. However, even this obstinate disposition, prevalent in human nature (and so strong as to manifest itself even in Socialists), of looking upon THAT WHICH IS as right, is compelled to yield to the pressure of changing circumstances.

It is not a question of what we desire; not a question of whether we want a new labor party or not. The Labor party is here; it must be met. Friend or foe? There is no middle ground; it is either unite to fight the common enemy or fight one another. Fight or fusion, which shall it be?

If there be one so dead to signs of the times as to believe the heralded approach of Labor parties in all industrial centres is a false alarm, let him sleep on until he awakes too late for anything but the soothing reflection that "hindsight is better than foresight." Meanwhile those of us who have felt the pulse of the proletarian mass and learned that they have (quite naturally) understood and adopted our suggestion of independent political action on class lines before arriving at the point where they can assimilate our theory of surplus value, will do well to put our heads together and shape our course as Socialists intelligently with regard to the class movements of the wage workers.

An understanding of what we mean by "Labor party" being necessary to this discussion, I will say that I would consider any party a genuine labor party which has for its working and voting strength the organized wage workers and which is an avowedly working class party. The character of its leaders and the particular wording of its platform would have little more weight with me in determining our attitude towards it than the character of the officers of a union or the preamble to its constitution would have in determining whether I should join that union. The only test would be: "Have the working class, or any considerable number of them, moved politically on class lines?"

Now let us consider for a moment the part the working class is to play in establishing the Co-operative Commonwealth.

We Socialists claim it is the historic mission of the working class to emancipate itself—to bring about Socialism. Why?

Because every class of men is moved, as a class, by its material interests. The material interests of the wage workers include the abolition of capitalism. Therefore, inevitably, the wage workers will, when the class line becomes drawn with sufficient sharpness, and consequent pain to the workers, seize the political power and establish the Co-operative Commonwealth. It is merely a matter of evolution, the logical culmination of a great class struggle. We do not profess to believe that the working class will take the road to Socialism because a few men rise in their midst and tell them it is a good thing; but rather that the same conditions which move the working class toward Socialism produce the men who point the way.

The leaders (those who teach Socialism) are the result of the class struggle—not the class struggle the result of the leaders' efforts. Brush away the leaders, or let them in fancied intellectual superiority absent themselves from the mass of the proletariat (without whom the class struggle cannot be fought, any more than a battle without an army), and that proletarian mass will select, or develop, other leaders who will teach Socialism.

A question then arising: "Shall the teachers go to the mass or shall the mass go to the teachers?" we come to the irresistible conclusion that the teachers must condescend to go to the mass, otherwise their services will be dispensed with and the mass will suffer only the inconvenience and loss of time necessary to develop new teachers. That they WILL develop them is not to be gainsaid without a reconstruction of standard works on scientific Socialism.

This is the situation with which we are confronted to-day. The organized portion of the working class are beginning to move politically. Why they do not accept our organization, name and party machinery is a question that can only be answered by reviewing the history of our movement in this country and by a careful consideration of the economic conditions peculiar to America. Perhaps not a little of the blame can be traced to mistakes of Socialists themselves in their past attitude toward the trade unions. But whatever the causes, the condition is here; the working class have seen fit to move politically without accepting our party as the medium.

Shall we then move with them, or attempt to hold them back until such time as they are willing to accept our party as the medium?

As well might we attempt to dam up the Mississippi until its muddy waters become clear.

A notion prevails among fallacious reasoners within our ranks that the working class cannot move on to the Co-operative Commonwealth unless it knows (each and every member of it) its exact destination before it starts and has its baggage properly checked, and its ticket signed and sealed by the Socialist Party. With equally good logic it might be asserted that a man cannot follow a road and reach the end of it unless before he takes the first step he deliberately fixes his mind upon the end of the road as his destination.

When the working class moves politically as a class it moves towards the Co-operative Commonwealth under the operation of a law as certain as the law of gravity. It will get there, with or without our aid—the giving or withholding of the latter only serving to hasten or postpone the happy day.

If the Socialist Party refuses to meet the new party on friendly ground the new party will develop within itself the Socialist statesmen of the future.

It is an absurdity born of conceit that inclines us to believe that a labor party cannot exist for any great length of time because it lacks the honesty, sincerity of purpose, knowledge of economics, and other virtues of which we claim to have a monopoly.

Trade union leaders do not sell out their unions, do they? If they do, how comes it there are so many unions still unsold?

Have not more men died for their unions than for Socialism? Is not that sincerity?

Are class movements directed by a knowledge of economics or by the operation of the law (under the force of changing conditions) that classes of men follow their material interests?

I am tired of our own cant. Give me a class movement. To see the working class move, to see it exhibit a feeling of class-consciousness is worth more than any number of middle-class votes. Think you Socialism is to come by the "foolishness of preaching"?

The Socialist movement is not a movement founded upon an IDEA but one founded upon a CLASS. Consequently, when another party arises founded upon the same class we find common ground with it. It is those who join the Socialist movement because they love the IDEA of Socialism rather than its class nature, who object most bitterly to fusion with the Labor party. Note, the ground of their objection is that fusion will weaken its class character. This is especially true of the middle-class members of our party. Well has Comrade Harriman said that fusion with the Labor party is the only hope of preventing the control of our party by the middle class. Strange, too, is it not, that the very safeguards that were framed, all for the express purpose of keeping our party from becoming middle class, are now used by that very class to prevent the party becoming proletarian.

I find the following quotations from the "Communist Manifesto" of Marx and Engels very interesting just now:

"The Communists do not form a separate party opposed to other working class parties."

"They have no interests separate and apart from those of the proletariat as a whole."

"They do not set up any sectarian principles of their own by which to shape and mould the proletarian movement."

There is not much doubt as to where Marx and Engels would stand on this question were they alive to-day. With them the Socialist movement was a class movement, not a cult.

I am heartily in favor of the Socialist Party reaching a friendly understanding with a genuine Labor Party whenever it may arise in any locality, the local comrades to determine the genuineness of the labor party.

I favor this course, not because I am impatient and want to see a big vote, but because the situation is here and must be met and the above is the only course consistent with the teachings of scientific Socialism. Let those who have rushed into print to denounce the action of the California comrades think again. I have not yet read of their arguments that went to the root of the question.

Is Socialism an IDEA or a CLASS MOVEMENT? Upon your answer to that depends your position in this controversy.

E. VAL. PUTNAM.

CALIFORNIA'S VOTE.

Election Figures Indicate that Nothing Was Gained by Fusion with Union Labor Party.

The official canvass for the state of California shows that George S. Brower, candidate of the Socialist Party for Governor, polled 9,592 votes, the other candidates on our state ticket ranging from 10,541 to 11,439—with the exception of one of the candidates for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, who polled only 8,193; the exceptionally low vote for this candidate being explained by a misleading arrangement on the official ballot, which gave many voters the idea that only one man, instead of two, was to be voted for; the corresponding candidates of other parties ran even more heavily behind their tickets. Our average vote on the state ticket is 10,720—that is, 1,485 more than was needed to give the party official standing.

In 1900 California gave 7,572 votes for our national ticket. Our gain for the head of the ticket is 27 per cent.; the average vote shows a gain of 43 per cent.

It is to be noted that in San Francisco County, where the policy of fusion with the Union Labor party on local offices was adopted, the vote for the state ticket was slightly less than that cast for our national ticket two years ago. In Alameda County, on the contrary, where we had a local ticket in opposition to the Union Labor party, which there fused with the Democrats, we made a good gain.

The figures indicate that, even judged from the standpoint of immediate expediency, the policy of fusion is a mistake. No other state in which we had a considerable movement, has made so small a gain as California. Of the states in the Far West, Oregon gained 350 per cent.; Washington, 300 per cent.; Montana, over 500 per cent.; Colorado, 900 per cent.; Utah, 200 per cent. The Montana comrades had the same difficulty of a "labor party" to contend with. And if we come across the continent to Connecticut we find that the Socialist Party there had the same problem before them, that they solved it on the line of "no compromise," and that our vote in that state was increased by over 60 per cent.

These facts only bear out the contention of The Worker that there is no short cut to success for Socialists; that we cannot get votes without making the voters Socialists, even if we should wish to do so; and that we cannot make the voters Socialists by trading endorsements with them.

LOS ANGELES CITY ELECTION.

The result of the city election in Los Angeles, Cal., on Dec. 1, is characterized by the "Advance" of San Francisco, heretofore an advocate of the fusion policy, as being "a decided setback to the movement for a state or national Union Labor party."

The Socialist Party in Los Angeles put no city ticket in the field, but endorsed and actively supported the local candidates of the Union Labor party. Los Angeles was described by "Advance" as the one point in the state where this course was entirely justifiable, on the ground that, in Los Angeles, the Union Labor party made no deals whatever with the capitalist parties and declared for the abolition of the wage system. In qualification of this statement it must be noted that some well-known Democratic politicians were called on to aid in the campaign there and that this campaign was made chiefly on the "immediate demands," and not on the issue of the abolition of the wage system.

Although it had been confidently predicted that the Union Labor ticket, with Socialist support, would sweep the city, yet, when the votes were counted, it was found that this ticket had received only 3,120 out of a total of over 18,000, and that the Democratic candidate for Mayor was elected by a plurality of over 2,000.

Commenting on this result, "Advance" says:

"It is an indication that the working people of Los Angeles are not yet ready to break away from the old parties. The necessity for it was not clubbed into their heads, as was done in San Francisco in 1901. It is good proof that the Union Labor movement will not absorb the Socialist movement in California. On the contrary, the activity of our Los Angeles comrades has welded together the two parties in that city and since immediate victory, the sole excuse for a merely Union Labor party, is shown to be impossible of attainment, those workingmen who have decided on independence of the old parties will now decide to work with the Socialist Party, which, though it grows more slowly, yet builds more solidly and is sure of what strength it may at any time attain."

And again, in the following issue:

"The Union Labor Party movement has received a set-back and its impotency to install the working class in political power immediately leaves us free to proceed with our slower, but completer and more thorough-going propaganda. We have two years ahead of us and every comrade should work toward the end of establishing new locals and building up the old locals."

DISTRIBUTION OF THE NATION'S WEALTH.

Mr. Charles B. Spahr, of Columbia University, has recently examined the records of the Surrogates of thirty-five counties in this state and has published the results in the "Outlook." The examination covered the last three months of 1898 and included the counties of New York and Kings, the richest in the state. The results are remarkable as showing, first, how few people, comparatively speaking, leave any estates at all; and second, the low average value of estates. The following is a summary of the facts shown:

1. Out of 10,000 persons over twenty-five years of age, dying during the quarter, only 3,351, or just about one-third, left any estates whatever. Even of those who were heads of families only one-half left any estate, even a savings bank account.

2. Of the 3,351 estates administered on, only 884—about twenty-seven per cent. of all estates, and nine per cent. of all those dying—were worth over $5,000.

3. Sixty-six per cent. of all left no estates; twenty-five per cent. of all left estates valued at under $5,000, the average value of those below this amount being $1,202. Less than nine per cent. of all left estates valued at over $5,000.

The Census Bureau tells us that the wealth of the United States amounts to an average of $1,200 per capita or about $6,000 per family. When it is considered, in connection with this fact, that two-thirds of all who live to maturity die virtually propertiless, that another quarter leave an average of less than $1,300 per family, and that only nine out of a hundred accumulate as much as $5,000, the boasted "equality" of the American people appears rather mythical.

WHO STANDS FOR FREEDOM?

The Greeks, it is said, were the only ancients that encouraged free inquiry. Who among the moderns are encouraging it? Not the United States. None of the colleges under capitalistic control dare institute free inquiry into economic science. The churches are jealous and prescriptive. So are the doctors. The lawyers will thwart justice and make a lie appear as a truth for pay. The judges lean to the rich, as the issuance of injunctions will prove. Social life is dwarfed and hypocritical. The only absolutely free propaganda to-day is that of the Socialists, who challenge investigation at every turn.—L. T. Fisher.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Williamsport Statesmen.

The coal strike arbitration commission is beginning to prove a farce. The miners are doomed to get the little end of the string. The result will be ten hours labor, ten per cent. increase in wages, recognition of their union if it incorporates with restrictions that will enslave rather than elevate, and its findings held back till after next presidential election in order to help the capitalist Republican party.

Advance.

Are you reading the account of the proceedings of the Coal Strike Arbitration Commission? It shows up the terrible conditions of the miners in a powerful and convincing way. One boy works and the more he works the deeper in debt he goes to the company. Another man is killed. From the collection his fellow workers take up for his widow and children the company extracts their rent and for thirteen years widow and boys slave to pay off back rent. Men evicted from their houses because they have gone on strike, though the eviction threatens the life of dearly-loved members of their families. A blacklist in full operation and unscrupulous overcharging and cheating added to brutal tyranny, these are some of the unrefuted charges divulged by the investigation thus far. Keep your eyes on it, workingmen! The harmony of labor and capital, identity of interests, etc., is getting some hard knocks. The divine right of Baer, the blasphemer, seems to be a commission from the Devil to turn Pennsylvania into an annex to Hell.

California Socialist.

Someone has said that it is the duty of the Democratic party in the next Congress "to convince the American people that it is fit to be trusted with the lawmaking power." That reminds us of the plank in the Illinois Populist platform, which said: "The Republican party raises hell and does something and the Democratic party raises hell and does nothing." The Democrats will doubtless make a record consistent with their reputation.

San Francisco Call.

If it be proven that the Socialist gains in New England have been made mainly from Republican ranks there would be nothing surprising in the fact, for there is such an overwhelming majority of Republicans over Democrats in most parts of that section of the Union that almost any new movement would draw more Republicans than Democrats to its standards. A more significant feature of the vote is that where Populism was strongest in the past Socialism was weakest this year. It thus appears that the Populists are not turning to Socialism, but have united themselves with either the Republican or the Democratic party. It is therefore evident that Socialism is working its way to power at the polls on its own merits, and is not in any way a dying effort on the part of the old free silver or Populistic agitations.

Milwaukee Journal.

The discussion of Democratic effort during the late campaign throughout the country is bringing to light some expressions of opinion as to what the Democratic party must do to succeed which would have been startling a few years ago. The Springfield (Mass.) Republican, once a strong supporter of Mr. Cleveland, says that his recent utterances are inadequate to the needs of the party. It cites the disintegration of the Whig party and the rise of the Republican party on a more pronounced and radical platform as a possible suggestion of the fate awaiting Democracy. The Republican says that the Democratic party must step into the place that radical public sentiment is making for a socialistic political development or it will go out of existence, as the Whig party did. There is no doubt of this danger. It is one that conservative Democrats and corporation Republicans are both inviting. There will be ere long two parties that recognize existing sociological, economical, and political facts. There is none to-day. Whether the Democratic party shall represent the conservative or the radical element of this coming contest rests, apparently, with such Democratic leaders as Bryan and with such Republican leaders as La Follette. Whichever of these leaders, or whenever the thought they represent first controls a national party, the opportunity will be made for the other party to be conservative. Up to within ten years, when Bryanism became rampant, the Democratic party was the party of traditional conservatism. Since that time it has lost its bearings and it never better illustrated its lack of purpose than in the campaign this fall. The one encouraging sign seemed to be the weakening of Mr. Bryan's influence. On the other hand, the tide of Socialism seems to be rising in the Republican party. It is there that it has been nurtured, on paternal doctrine. It would benefit the ends of an inexorable justice if the Republican party should perish thus, by its own hand. In any event, Socialism is a very present peril to it. The political cauldron is seething and it is a time when the mass may be precipitated at any moment in the most unexpected manner and with results that may confound the wisest forecasts. The overwhelming Republican majorities are in themselves a signal of political danger. No party can long maintain such power. In the nature of things it represents public protest, rather than unity of political purpose among the masses.

Its greatest hope of perpetuity lies in the dangers of Socialistic radicalism that beset the Democracy.

——Socialism has the same effect upon the character of a man or woman that sunshine and air and moisture and rich soil have upon a plant. The result is healthy growth and good fruit.—L. T. Fisher.

A large attendance is desired, as business of importance is to be transacted. The Socialists of Luzerne County have decided to take upon themselves the publication of a weekly paper, to be known as "The Socialist," to be published in the interests of the Socialist Party of the anthracite region and Northeastern Pennsylvania. J. G. Roth has been elected Manager, and C. F. Quinn will be the Editor, while F. Schade, Sr., as Treasurer, will handle the financial side of the proposed enterprise. As soon as one thousand paid subscribers are secured at fifty cents per year, the first number will be issued. Subscriptions to this fund are solicited.

The Clarion Club of Cincinnati has arranged an excellent series of lectures for this season, to be held on Sundays, at 2.45 p. m., in the Auditorium. The admission charge is 25 cents for each lecture or $2 for the course of ten. Speakers and subjects are as follows: Jan., 11, Eugene V. Debs on "Socialism and Civilization"; Jan. 18, Wm. Herron, "The Ethics of the Class Struggle."

Comrade Mills is holding very large and successful meetings every Sunday afternoon at the Academy of Music, 1221 McGee street, Kansas City.

Comrades Latimer and Fowler of Washington will start a paper in Portland, Oregon.

"The field in Washington is ripe for Socialism," writes Comrade Curtis of Seattle. "Our agents and organizers are now greeted as friends where, a short time ago, they would be shown the door. A most encouraging feature is the energy with which the next campaign is already begun." Indeed, that is the tenor of reports from nearly every state.

New York City.

A series of lectures on literature and the drama, to be given on Friday evenings, has been arranged by the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, in addition to the lectures which are held every Sunday on economic and political questions. The first of the series will be given on Friday evening, Dec. 26, when J. Enteen will lecture on "Maxim Gorky and His Influence on Present-day Literature." On Jan. 2, M. Winchevsky will lecture on "Emile Zola and Socialism," and on Jan. 9 L. Boudin will lecture on "Gerhart Hauptmann and 'The Weavers'."

Comrade P. J. Cooney, formerly of Montana, will speak at the Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Brooklyn, on Sunda, evening, Dec. 28.

Comrade Fred. Schlueter will lecture on "The Principles of Scientific Socialism" on Sunday evening, Dec. 28, at the Socialist Propaganda Club, Wurzler's Hall, 315 Washington street, Brooklyn.

The General Committee of Local New York meets Saturday evening, Dec. 27, at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street.

The Socialist Literary Society will give a course of lectures and organize a class in social economy at its headquarters, 241 East Broadway. On Sunday evening, Dec. 28, Mrs. Mary E. Lease will lecture on "The Religion of the Twentieth Century."

W. E. McNabb, of Typographical Union No. 6, will speak on "The Duty of Organized Labor" at Colonial Hall, 101st street and Columbus avenue, on Sunday evening, Dec. 28. The attendance at Mrs. Lease's lecture last Sunday, which was held in the large hall, numbered over 500.

At the last meeting of the 6th and 10th A. D. Otto Sattler and Anton Eberle were elected delegates to the "Volkszeitung" Conference. A literary program or debate will be arranged for each meeting to begin at 8.30 p. m., after having disposed of all district business during the half-hour preceding. The meetings are held on the second and fourth Friday evenings of every month at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, and all Socialists living in the 6th or 10th Assembly districts should attend these meetings and join the party organization. Comrade Julius Valteich addressed the last meeting on the subject of "Party Fusion." At the next meeting on Friday, Dec. 26, a debate and discussion will be held, the subject bein: "Resolved, That we should enlist the immigrant in the Social Democratic Party through a system of international Social Democratic Information Bureaus." Comrade Sattler will open the debate for the affirmative along the lines of his articles in the "Volkszeitung" and the committee invites any member of the party to take the negative side of the debate, which will be followed by open discussion. Every member is urgently requested to attend this meeting promptly at 8 p. m., as the election of officers and delegates to various committees is on the order of business.

The comrades of the 18th and 20th A. D. are displaying considerable activity. They are making a special effort to secure a suitable clubroom, believing that their propaganda can be greatly aided by this move. At the meeting held Wednesday evening, Dec. 17, the committee reported that they had as yet been unable to secure suitable rooms, but will continue their search. If hard work and enthusiasm count for anything, the festival the comrades will give Dec. 31 at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, will be worth a great deal more than the ten cents charged for admission. Refreshments will be served and a considerable sum has been expended for musical and other talent. All are welcome.

Last week's special meeting of the 30th A. D. was fairly well attended. After the business had been disposed of, Comrade Lee spoke on the coal question and a most interesting general discussion followed. The next meeting of the district, for business only, will be on Wednesday evening, Jan. 7. The next discussion meeting will be on Jan. 14, the subject being "Individual Rights and Social Rights," and Comrade Lichtschein leading the discussion.

The Bronx Borough Agitation Committee is arranging for a series of propaganda meetings in its territory, as well as to supply speakers to trade unions meeting in the Bronx, and has other plans under way. It is desired that a larger number of comrades should actively interest themselves in the work, as the burden now falls on comparatively few members. A number of subscription lists are still outstanding and should be returned at once, so that a complete report can be made to the general meeting on Jan. 5. Returns on lists and other official communications should be sent to S. Elges, Secretary, at the Clubhouse, 3209 Third avenue.

At the last regular meeting of Branch 2, 35th A. D., it was decided to hold a special meeting on Dec. 30 for the purpose of electing officers, and all comrades are requested to be present. It was also decided to hold a course of lectures during the winter, a committee being elected to find a suitable place, and to start a class of the Mills School.

WEST SIDE SOCIALIST CLUB.

The West Side Socialist Club is in a flourishing condition. The hall is filled at every meeting and much interest is manifested. The club meets every Friday evening, at 8 p. m., in Clark's Hall, northwest corner of Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, second floor. The lecture of the evening is always followed by the answering of questions and discussion in which all are invited to participate. Strangers are cordially welcomed. The schedule of lectures for the next month is as follows:

Dec. 26.—Leonard D. Abbott: "The Socialist Ideal."

Jan. 2.—John Spargo, Editor of The Comrade: "The Meaning and Message of Socialism."

Jan. 9.—Mrs. Alex. Fraser: "The Joy of Work."

Jan. 16.—Frederick Krafft: "Is Our Country a Republic."

Jan. 23.—Courtenay Lemon, Associate Editor of The Worker: "The Socialist View of the State, State Interference, and State Capitalism."

Jan. 30.—Geo. D. Herron: "Socialism and Patriotism."

BROOKLYN BOROUGH.

The borough meeting which was held in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum last week was very successful, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. Dr. Furman occupied the chair.

The first matter to receive attention was the "Daily Globe." Comrade Butscher was given the floor and reviewed in detail the work accomplished in laying plans for carrying the paper to a successful issue and what share in the work the Brooklyn comrades were expected to take. The Organizer was instructed to call upon the party subdivisions of Brooklyn to each elect two delegates to a Daily Globe Conference to be held in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. He was also instructed to send a circular to the labor organizations requesting them to send delegates to this conference. The conference is intended to do the work for Brooklyn which is being done by the present Globe Conference in New York and will obviate the necessity of sending the Brooklyn party and trade union delegates to New York. Those of the comrades who were not present at the meeting are now called upon to recognize their responsibility in connection with the "Daily Globe" and to do their share in the work of carrying the undertaking safely beyond the point where there will be any doubt as to its stability.

Comrade Atkinson submitted his report on the work done in the matter of indoor and outdoor meetings and in the effort to get our speakers before the trade unions since Kings County became a separate local.

Comrades Atkinson, Furman, Fraser, Cavanaugh, and Gerber were elected as delegates to represent Kings County on the City Committee.

It was decided to leave the May Day demonstration in the hands of the County Committee and that they be instructed to arrange accordingly.

The following resolution was adopted without dissent:

"That Local Kings County emphatically disapproves of the action of the Socialist Party of California in fusing with the Union Labor party. We believe that the Socialist Party of the United States must proceed along strictly revolutionary lines, without compromise of principles or fusion with other parties."

The Kings County Committee was instructed to hold indignation meetings in Brooklyn in connection with the coal question whenever deemed advisable and the Organizer was empowered to call such public meetings, get out pamphlets, etc.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Party Work Is Going On Well and Preparations Making for Spring Elections.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—The State Committee of the Socialist Party held a regular meeting to-night. Since the last report charters have been granted to locals at Rush Valley and Pottsville in Schuylkill County, Lenni in Delaware County, and Cork Lane, Warrior Run, Rhone, and Georgetown in Luzerne County. There is a general satisfactory condition of Socialist activity in the state.

The Philadelphia comrades have moved their headquarters to Logan Building, 1305 Arch street, which will also be the future address of the State Committee.

A city convention was held by the Philadelphia comrades on Dec. 17. H. H. Caldwell and M. Gill were nominated for Mayor and Magistrate, respectively. Philadelphia intends to make a vigorous campaign. It has been decided to employ an organizer and Comrade Simon Knebel has been chosen for the position.

At a special meeting to be held on Jan. 7 a new State Committee will be elected.

The Allegheny County locals formed a County Committee on Dec. 14. Turl Delp of Duquesne is Secretary-Treasurer. A few new locals are in process of formation, and Comrade Collins will visit that county about Jan. 15, to help in the work.

Lancaster Local has employed an organizer and ward branches and a city committee are being established.

Wilkes Barre comrades will hold a city convention on Jan. 1 in the C. L. U. Hall and nominate a full ticket. A great effort is being made to establish a Socialist weekly paper at this place, to circulate particularly in the mining region, where 12,000 Socialist votes were cast in November. In Luzerne County, Socialist tickets for the spring election are thus far named in Duryea, Luzerne, Edwardsdale, Nanticoke, Hazleton, and Georgetown.

Local Reading is publishing a weekly paper, the "Union Sentinel." The comrades are making a systematic canvass of the city to locate the 1,200 Socialist voters and get them into the party organization.

Shamokin comrades have nominated a full ticket and are very active, and thinking of starting a local paper.

A boy sells fifty copies of The Worker each week on the streets of York. Spring Forge, in York County, has a full ticket in the field.

The Democratic politicians in Shenandoah have prosecuted several of our comrades on false charges of interfering with the election, and they were adjudged guilty in spite of all the evidence showing that they were interested in having a fair count and they were right in anticipating and taking precautions against fraud. The comrades in Shenandoah expect to answer these persecutions by electing a number of members of the election boards. A vote equal to that cast in November will accomplish this purpose.

In answer to numerous inquiries from our comrades as to their right to make nominations for city, borough, or township offices by convention and certificate, basing the same upon the fact of their having polled 2 per cent. or more of the vote cast for Governor at the last election, the State Committee would state that the ballot law specifically provides that the party thus making nominations shall have polled at least 2 per cent. of the largest entire vote cast in the electoral district or division (city, borough, ward, township, etc.) for which such nominations are made, at the last preceding election. Consequently the right (or requirement) to make nominations by certificate cannot be acquired by or based upon the vote, however large, cast in any political division or district (city, town, etc.) when that district or division was simply part of a larger district or division. The vote for Governor gives us no certificate privileges, rights, or duties except as to the state as a political division—that is, to make nominations for state officers. Therefore nomination papers must be used unless at the last election local candidates polled 2 per cent. of the entire vote cast for the office for which they ran. In some counties and assembly districts this occurred, but we know of no city or borough or lesser division in which this could have happened. The percentage must be computed on the vote of an entire political division, however large or small it may be.

Comrades should also remember that only the blanks supplied by the Secretary of State fulfill the requirements of the law. They can usually be procured from the County Commissioners.

The only result of the vote of the Socialist Party at the November election is that at the election in November, 1903, it can file nominations by certificates and will not be required to obtain signatures to nomination papers. The vote of November, 1902, cannot be taken as a basis of computation for the election of February, 1903; but in each county, borough, or city where the party did not at the election of February, 1902, cast 2 per cent. of the largest entire vote cast for offices at that election the party must make nominations by filing nomination papers signed by the requisite number of voters.

HOW TO HELP YOUR LOCAL.

TO OFFICERS:

Always be ten minutes late at business meetings—nine might answer the purpose just as well.

Sometimes leave your reports and books at home. They will be safe there.

Wait for the State Secretary to write for reports and dues. That's all he has to do and he is paid a big salary to do so.

Don't plan any line of action for your local. You're only ornaments.

Let every officer look after the work of the other officers. You will get your own work well done. The other fellow always can do it better than you can.

And there are other things for officers to do and not to do. Look them up yourself.

TO MEMBERS:

When your first officers are elected, that ends all your obligation to the local. Turn it over to them.

On meeting nights wait for a carriage. The officers will send one. It's constitutional.

Never pay your dues unless the Secretary or Treasurer asks you. He might have heart failure if you did.

Be sure to criticize an officer, however he does his work. It isn't really necessary, but then if you didn't he might get his head swelled and imagine he is the whole thing.—U. G. Moore, in the Seattle "Socialist."

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,000 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

DETAILS OF McGRADY CASE.

Interesting Story of Attempted Suppression.

Bishop Tried to Forbid Priest to Advocate Socialism, but Dared Not Directly Condemn His Statement of Its Principles.

We are able this week to present somewhat fuller details of the events which led up to the resignation of our comrade, Rev. Thomas McGrady, from his parish in Bellevue, Ky.

As has been stated, some of the higher authorities of the church had, for a long time, been bringing some pressure to bear upon Father McGrady in the effort to compel him to abandon his advocacy of Socialism. The matter was at last brought to a crisis by a letter which Bishop Maes wrote to the priest on Nov. 8. The date is, perhaps, significant—four days after election, when the news had just come of the enormous increase of the Socialist vote, even in strongly Catholic quarters, in spite of the opposition of such prelates as Archbishop Corrigan and Bishops Quigley, Hoban, Maes, and Messmer.

Bishop's Original Demands.

Bishop Maes' letter contained four demands. The first demand was that Father McGrady make the Bishop a certain "free gift" of money—which the former declined to do. The other three bore more directly on the real question at issue and were in the following words:

"Second—To bring unto us a letter recalling such praises of Darwin, Zola, and Renan, and some other writers whose names are mentioned in your letter published in 'Wilshire's Magazine,' July number, which shall be given the same public notice that your fulsome praises, to the detriment of the church and the scandal of the faithful, gave. That scandal must be repaired and an earnest promise given by you that you will obey the directions and conform to the teachings set forth in the encyclicals of our Holy Father, the Pope.

"Third—We admonish you not to allow the sale of any books written by you for which the imprimatur" (that is a license to publish, granted by higher church authorities) "has been refused for cause, or for which the imprimatur should be in accordance with the rules of the Holy See.

"Fourth—We admonish you not to be absent from your parish so frequently without permission, and to refrain from emitting views on Socialism, either by speech or by letter, which are at variance with the teachings of our Supreme Pontiff or of the church."

McGrady States His Position.

On Nov. 12 Father McGrady replied by a letter defining his Socialist opinions in eight propositions and asking the Bishop to inform him whether any or all and, if any, which of them were condemned, on the receipt of which information he would be able to understand the Bishop's demands and would promptly reply to them.

The Bishop ignored this letter and replied only by reiterating, in new phrases, the first and second of his demands of Nov. 8.

Father McGrady's statement of his position as a Socialist was in these words:

"1. Labor produces all values.

"2. Every man has a right to the wealth he produces.

"3. In expending his labor power, every man has the right to adopt the methods that will produce the best results.

"4. Every man has the right to produce for himself, instead of selling his labor power at the cost of production, or at a price less than its value.

"5. If one man enjoys the right of producing for himself, the nation collectively possesses the right to produce for itself, for the nation is an aggregation of the units.

"6. The dominant law of biology is the co-operation of the units for the preservation of the organism, and this law, applied to sociology, is the co-operation of the individuals for the preservation of the species.

"7. Whenever any institution becomes detrimental to social progress, it will perish in obedience to the dominant law of biology, which casts aside organs that fail to promote the growth of the organism.

"8. This law is emphasized in social evolution, as we readily discover when we follow the progress of the race, from the earliest times to the age of stone, which gave way to the age of bronze, which was succeeded by the age of iron, and on to the age of steam and steel; and we observe in modern industry the individual giving place to the partnership, which is absorbed by the corporation, and the corporation eventuates in the trust. The trust will culminate in the combination of all trusts, and the formation of a national trust, owned and controlled by society."

Father McGrady declares that the Bishop's failure to answer his letter submitting these propositions was due to the fact that he could not condemn them without condemning essential teachings of the church during the first four centuries and could not accept them without condemning his own previous action.

Would Not Retract the Truth.

The retraction of his published praise of Darwin, Zola, and Renan, he says, would have been a violation of his conscience to which he could not consent. "If it be a crime to say that an infidel can be a genius," he says, "it is also a crime to say that a Protestant can be a genius, for both statements rest on the same principle—that no man can be an intellectual light if his opinions are not in conformity with the teachings of the Holy See. Therefore I presume the Bishop intends to maintain that learning has gone into a trust and that the Catholic Church holds an exclusive monopoly in this line."

Father McGrady decided that it would be idle to waste his time in interminable church trials and appeals. He resigned his parish, to the great regret, it is reported, of his people, who are much attached to him. He is still a member and a priest of the Catholic Church, and it remains to be seen whether the would-be suppressors will pursue him farther. Bishop Maes and other high authorities refuse to make any statement on the matter.

McGRADY SPEAKS IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 19.—The meeting at Music Hall Wednesday night, addressed by Father McGrady, was most successful. The audience numbered nearly three thousand, and the enthusiastic demonstration of approval for the speaker's position was even more significant than the number of the hearers. E. H. V.

NEW JERSEY STATE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The New Jersey State Committee met at headquarters in Newark, Dec. 14, with Comrade Cole, representing Camden County, in the chair. Bergen, Camden, Essex, Hudson, Mercer, Passaic, and Union counties were represented. Bills aggregating $60 were ordered paid. Differences existing between branches in Passaic and Union counties could not be acted upon because of non-conformity with the rule requiring grievances to be submitted in writing with all the facts set forth. It was the judgment of the Committee that the trouble could and doubtless would be amicably adjusted if presented in proper form to the constituted county authorities. The Committee suggested that Union call a county convention and invite the State Organization Committee to be present to set forth the need of organization and the duty of the membership loyally to support its branch, county and state organization. The Secretary was directed to answer the twelve questions submitted by the National Committee relative to membership, expenses, propaganda, and comparative growth of party. Reports showed general activity throughout the organized counties. The Organization Committee gave a report on Organizer Smith's work in Morris and Sussex counties. The Secretary reported the submission of thirty-one candidates on referendum for state party officers, twenty-seven branches participating in nominations. Blank ballots for election of party officers and referendum on time and place of state convention are being sent out. A resolution offered by Comrade Cole was adopted repealing any and all rules and resolutions heretofore adopted tending to discriminate against Socialists who may not have the allied label; the only condition to be imposed hereafter is that the comrade doing the work is to belong to the union of his craft if a union exists where he resides or performs the work; the resolution has for its object the elimination of jobs to capitalistic concerns in preference to Socialists because of the former having the allied label. The Secretary was instructed to have five thousand application cards printed and to secure from the National Secretary a supply of local and branch charters, to meet existing demand. The question of ways and means with a view to securing the service of a permanent organizer came up at so late an hour that it was voted that the matter be laid over until next meeting, when it will be taken up as a special order and the session be devoted to its settlement.

TO LABOR.

[This poem by Charlotte Perkins Stetson, now Mrs. Gilman, has already been published in The Worker; but we have gained many new subscribers since that time, several readers have asked that it be reprinted, and we believe that so good a thing will bear a great deal of repetition.]

Shall you complain who feed the world,
Who clothe the world,
Who house the world—
Shall you complain who are the world,
Of what the world may do?
As from this hour
You use your power,
The world must follow you.

The world's life hangs on your right hand,
Your strong right hand.
Your skilled right hand,
You hold the whole world in your hand;
See to it what you do!
Or dark or light,
Or wrong or right,
The world was made for you!

Then rise as you ne'er rose before,
Nor hoped before,
Nor dared before,
And show as ne'er was shown before,
The power that lies in you!
Stand all as one
Till right is done!
Believe and dare and do!

FOR THE DAILY.

Plenty of Work for All Who Are Willing.

Arrangements for the Fair Are Now Well Under Way and Many Volunteers Are Needed—The Fund Is Growing.

The fund for the "Daily Globe" is gradually rising toward the amount needed for establishing it, as can be seen by the list of contributions and new pledges given below.

The time has come when every Socialist who wishes to see a daily paper representing the cause should make his pledge or contribution and send it to Secretary Wm. Butscher, at 64 East Fourth street. Do not delay any longer, but make up your minds as to how much you can spare for the publication of a Socialist daily and inform Comrade Butscher accordingly.

There is nothing so important for the growth of Socialism as the advocating of its principles through a daily, and it will have a wonderful effect upon the workingmen and be the means of strengthening the party organizations in all the Eastern states.

For the Fair.

The plans for the fair at Grand Central Palace are now complete and all that is needed is the active co-operation of all comrades and sympathizers. The Fair Committee needs at once at least fifty comrades who will visit the trade unions with tickets. This fair will be the best entertainment ever produced by the workingmen of this city and therefore every workingman should be induced to buy a ticket and attend. There will be all sorts of performances and every patron of the fair will get his money's worth several times over.

Comrades who have not yet received tickets should call on the secretaries of their respective districts and get a supply at once.

Delegates to the Daily Globe Conference who have not yet secured tickets for their organizations are requested to call on the Secretary.

Almost twenty thousand tickets are in the hands of the different organizations and as we have eighty thousand more, we need the help of every Socialist in this work. Any comrade who can help is requested to call on Secretary Butscher and get instructions.

One comrade sold one hundred tickets in the shop where he is employed in one afternoon. Go thou and do likewise.

Comrades and friends of the Socialist movement are also again reminded that the Fair Committee is now ready to receive presents, which may be sent or delivered at 64 East Fourth street. Do not delay, comrades, for the sooner we can get these presents, the quicker will that part of the work be accomplished, which will allow the committee more time to carry out its many other plans without being too much overworked the last few weeks prior to the opening of the fair.

Cooper Union Meeting.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association held on Monday, Dec. 22, it was decided to hold a mass meeting at Cooper Union on Thursday, Jan. 15, for the benefit of the "Daily Globe," at which Comrades Geo. D. Herron, Ben Hanford, and James F. Carey are expected to speak. Comrades all over Greater New York and vicinity are urged to advertise this meeting. Let the meeting be the greatest on record. Every party member or sympathizer should be present.

FISHERS FOR SEATS.

Three workmen ran breathless to catch a street car—
To catch a street car as the sun went down.
Each thought of the woman who waited afar
And the Beef Trust steak that was cooking brown.
For men must eat and women must cook,
And there's little to balance the grocery book,
Though the motor car be moaning.

Three women got in at a down-town street,
At a down-town street when the car was ajam;
They had bundles and boxes and wanted a seat—
And the workmen together said:
"My seat, Ma'am!"
For men must stand and women must sit,
Though the labor be hard and the body unfit,
And the motor car be moaning.

WASTE UNDER CAPITALISM.

Wilful Destruction of Food for Sake of Profit.

While the Workers in the Cities Suffer for Lack of Fruit and Vegetables, Workers in the Fields Are Robbed of Their Year's Labor.

In a recent number of "Advance" Scott Anderson has an interesting article on one of the most remarkable minor features of capitalism—a feature which, revolting as it is to common sense and to humane feeling, is a perfectly normal outgrowth of the profit system. We quote Comrade Anderson's article entire:

"In 'Answers' of November 22 there is an account of the wicked and wanton destruction of food in England that is positively appalling and shows to what lengths Capital will go to get gain. Common sense would say that these miscreants should be in a felon's cell. But no, they will be found as deacons in the church, city councilors or members of parliament, making laws to protect themselves in their hellish work of plunder. 'Answers' says: 'There is often enough fresh fish purposely burned or chemically destroyed in Britain in a day to feed twenty or thirty thousand people, and that is the chief reason why you never get really cheap fish. London, Liverpool, and the big fish markets often get such a glut of fish through a number of big vessels arriving together that if it were put on the market whiting would be sold at fifteen for five cents and plaice and soles at two cents a pound, whereas they are kept at five and ten times that price.'

"This is what happens. When a surplus arrives that would lower prices, the big dealers get together, form a ring and decide to destroy as much fish as will raise the price of what is left to the exact figure they require. The mass to be destroyed is then sent (in London) down the river to some big works on the left bank of the Thames, where it is unloaded and chemically destroyed or turned into fish manure, which sells for a dollar or two a ton.

Burn Food to Save Profit.

"'Answers' says: 'Sometimes when passing through the great vegetable growing districts of Kent and the Thames valley, you will find the land for a quarter of a mile enveloped in a thick smoke, which you can trace to a mighty heap of apparent rubbish smouldering slowly. The reason of this is to prevent a drop in the price of greens and vegetables, for when it is known that very large consignments are going to the towns, the big growers combine to save such a calamity as cabbages selling for five a penny and sprouts at twopence a basket, for that would mean very little profit, in the pockets of the producers and merchants—a fall of twenty-five per cent. in green stuffs and roots causes as much anguish in the mind of a big merchant as it brings joy to the thrifty housekeeper.

"'The crops have to be cut when they are ready, and the land freed from them, so when the evil is done and six times as much as usual is ready for market, the 'operators' combine, and cartload after cartload of good vegetables is dumped in a fallow-field to dry, and after a couple of days set light to.'

"In a week this mass of good food, worth thousands of dollars, is reduced to a burnt mass and used for manure.

"Then the silly fools of workmen and their wives wonder why vegetables are dear.

"The price of oranges is kept at three and four cents per orange, when they could be sold at a cent apiece. Sometimes there are over one thousand cases too many (?). An agreement is quickly made among the chief buyers to destroy all the surplus. This is done by thrusting copper or steel rods through all parts of the cases. This damages the fruit and causes it to rot. It is then removed by the scavenging authorities, or sometimes sold to the makers of cheap essences. This costs something, and so ships coming into port with oranges are signalled to throw overboard the greater part of their cargo.

"The price of eggs is kept up by a systematic destruction amounting to over half a million a week—and so on for nearly every article of food.

"When will the people awake and demand that these crimes cease?

"To-day if a poor man or woman steals an egg or a cabbage or a fish, they are sent to jail for months, while these monsters wear fine linen and fare sumptuously every day. Nay, the very people they are robbing are expected to doff their hats to them as they pass by."

It may be added that this practice is by no means confined to England. The same thing is systematically done in New York and all the great centres of population in the United States.

The Indirect Method.

On a still larger scale, in this country, the same purpose is effected indirectly. Here a considerable proportion of the fruit and vegetables are still raised by small "independent" farmers—we put the adjective in quotation marks because the boasted independence of the farmer is only a matter of words. Although this produce is raised by small farmers, the marketing of it is controlled by a few great commercial houses in each large city, these houses being generally in close combination with each other and with the railway and steamboat companies. It follows from this that a large crop is often a positive calamity for the producers who have spent a season's labor on it and is of little or no benefit to the would-be consumers. A large crop, if brought into the market, would mean low prices; but the wholesale or commission houses join in refusing to purchase more than a small part of the crop—and that at the lowest prices; the transportation agencies, in league with them, charge exorbitant rates to producers who seek to ship their crop direct to the market, or, if they dare not do this, they declare that they have not enough cars and engines to meet the demand; fruit and vegetables shipped by the producers direct are held in the freight stations or the trains carrying them are sidetracked until the produce is spoiled, and the small producer who sought to get ahead of the great capitalists finds his insubordination punished by a net loss on his crop.

Everyone who has traveled through the orchard and garden regions of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Michigan, and the Pacific Coast at the crop-gathering season has seen the evidence of this shameful practice in the shape of millions of bushels of fruit and vegetables left rotting on the ground. The unsophisticated observer may attribute the waste to the farmers' supposed carelessness and lack of enterprise. This is the explanation the subsidized press always gives. But the men who do the work in the fields know better and it is time that the workers who dwell in the cities and whose wives and babies suffer for the lack of this wasted food should also understand the situation.

How to Put an End to It.

It is evident that so long as the means of transportation and distribution remain in the hands of capitalists to be operated for their profit, this, along with other infamies of the capitalist system will continue. Laws regulating freight rates, while leaving the railroads to be held as private property, have been tried for years and have proven absolutely ineffective. It would be most ridiculous to propose laws compelling produce merchants to buy crops they do not choose to buy. The one solution is in striking at the root—as the Socialist or Social Democratic Party proposes—in removing the incentive to such crime (private profit) and the opportunity (private control), by establishing public ownership of the means of production and transportation and making the satisfaction of the people's needs the sole motive of industry.

HOW TO ORGANIZE.

Instructions for Forming Locals of the Socialist Party.

1. Five or more persons may organize a local branch, provided they subscribe to the platform and constitution of the Socialist Party, and sever their relations with other political parties:
2. The officers to be elected are:
   a. A Chairman at each meeting.
   b. Recording Secretary.
   c. Financial Secretary.
   d. Organizer.
   e. Literature Agent.
2. Order of business—
   a. Reading of the minutes.
   b. Admission of new members.
   c. Communications and bills.
   d. Report of Organizer.
   e. Reports of Committees.
   f. Unfinished business.
   g. New business.
4. A monthly payment, computed on a basis of five cents for each member, for the maintenance of the National organization, shall be paid to the National Secretary. Local branches may levy dues if they so choose, or may raise funds altogether through voluntary contributions and pay National dues out of their general funds.
5. A full report of the meeting in which organization was decided on, the names of persons participating, together with five cents for each member, should be sent with application for charter; after receipt of which, upon approval of National Committee, charter will be granted.
6. Each local branch should hold a meeting at least once a week, for the transaction of business or the discussion of political and economic questions.
7. Semi-annual reports of the membership and the financial condition of each local branch, as well as upon the progress made by the Party and its prospects in the locality, shall be sent regularly to the National Secretary.
8. Any person living in a city or locality, where no local branch exists, may apply directly to the National Secretary for admission to the Party, inclosing one month's dues, and will be enrolled as a member-at-large.
9. For further information not contained herein, address Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary, Room 427, Emilie Building, St. Louis, Mo.

—Now is the time when men are open to reason in political matters. Even a small meeting now, with good speakers, may do more for the education of the workers than a large meeting in the heat of the campaign; and where it is not possible to hold meetings, Socialist literature and party papers should be thoroughly distributed.

—On March 28 begins the great nine-days fair at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, to raise funds for starting a Socialist daily newspaper. Many thousands of articles should be donated to be sold or given as prizes at the fair. Each reader of The Worker, whether in New York or elsewhere, should at least contribute something for this purpose—a book, a picture, an attractive souvenir or curio, a vase, a piece of glassware or embroidery or lace, anything useful or ornamental. Send all such articles, prepaid, to the Secretary, William Butschler, 64 East Fourth street, New York City.

—If you wish to give a dollar, or five dollars, or ten dollars to the Socialist Daily Fund, the man who will take it is William Butscher, Secretary, Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, New York city.

—Send $3 for new yearly or half-yearly subscriptions to The Worker and 14 cents extra for postage and ask for a watch as a premium. Send $5 for new subscriptions and you will get a better watch.

—If you will make it a point to get at least one new subscriber for The Worker every month, you will make a dozen new Socialists in a year.

Keep an eye on your wrapper. See when your subscription expires. Renew in time. It will prevent interruption in the mailing of the paper and facilitate work at the office.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.
2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.
3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.
4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.
5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.
6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.
7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

Every Reader of The Worker should decorate his home with the

It is an effective allegorical picture, based on the heroic struggle through which the anthracite coal miners have passed, and pointing the way to the emancipation of the workers and the inauguration of a system under which such struggles will be unknown.
